"Yes, a ghost that can move in daylight." Chang Gu forced Wenyu into a corner. "Did it tell you, I'm a thief, a liar, and a madman?"

Wenyu thought that Chang Gu was being very creepy, but she still nodded.

"Did it invite you into the hospital?" Wenyu thought about it. The doctor had indeed offered to bring her into the filing room.

"Thankfully, you didn't follow. If you had, you probably wouldn't have been able to escape with life." Chang Gu passed a medical record to Wenyu. On it was the middle-aged doctor's black and white picture.

Chang Gu told Wenyu a very scary story. The doctor earlier technically had not lied to Wenyu, but he had omitted two very important details.

First, the hospital had shut down a few weeks prior, and no one knew the exact reason. Confusingly, even after the hospital was closed down, the neighboring citizens could still see the hospital working like usually with people walking about day and night.

Second, the doctor itself was questionable. He was different from the conventional ghosts; he could move in daylight and did not seem to fear sunlight. Chang Gu did not go into detail on what kind of existence the doctor was—he merely told Wenyu that the thing or people that would cause her left eye pain mostly came from Jiujiang Private University.

The delineation between the normal and night school campus described by the doctor was true, but the way to enter the abandoned campus was not through the trek deep into Yong Ling Mountain.

Chang Gu seemed to be a man on the run. When he reached this part of the story, he turned to leave. He left Wenyu a phone number and told her that, if she wanted to find Jiujiang Private University, she could call that number at night.

That was where the scene ended. The image lagged slightly, and when it resumed, the sky in the screen already darkened.

Did someone cut out part of the plot, or did the people in the movie not want me to see what happened in the middle?

In the darkness, Wenyu held her phone and backpack, looking down the alley. She had stopped at the hospital from earlier in the morning. She made a call and whispered two words before ending it hurriedly. "I'm here."

Ten minutes later, a window on the left side of the hospital was pushed open from inside, and a tall, thin doctor in a white coat waved at Wenyu. After Wenyu sneaked into the hospital, the doctor had her change into a nurse outfit and then led her out of the room. The scene that followed was very strange, and it had Chang Gu's directing style all over it.

Inside the hospital, people milled about. Some were waiting for doctors, others waiting at the pharmacy. There were patients with plaster on their legs shuffling slowly about, and everything looked like a normal hospital. The only difference was that none of the lights were switched on. All the patients and doctors moved in the dark. The darkness did not appear to affect them that much. They did not seem to be a part of the living world; the shadows moving in the dark appeared more like a projection of a different world.

"Come here." The doctor led Wenyu into the surgery room and then locked the door.

"Now, can you tell me the real method to get into the school?" Wenyu removed the mask and took a deep breath. The male doctor removed his mask as well, and he was none other than Chang Gu. He grabbed Wenyu's arm and led her to the surgical table.

The surgical table looked different from a normal surgical table; one could not help but wonder what kind of surgery was completed on it.

"The only way to solve the problem is from its roof, and that is..." Chang Gu picked up the sharp surgical knife from the pan. "To cut out Wenyu's left eye and find it a new host."

Chang Gu's voice was creepy, and it caused Wenyu to stagger back until she knocked into the table behind her. "You want to gouge out my eye?"

"It was Wenyu's eye. You are not Wenyu; you are a victim trapped inside her body. I will return your freedom, but I need your full cooperation."

"The doctor was right; you are a madman!" Wenyu grabbed her bag and made a beeline for the door. "Let go, I'm leaving now!"

"Even though you have seen the shadows outside, you still refuse to believe me, huh? Those shadows carrying on with their lives like normal, I believe that you can see them clearer than I can, so you should have been..."

Wenyu made for the door but was blocked by Chang Gu. “I am not you, but I am familiar with your body’s real owner! I am Wenyu’s big brother!”

Hearing that proclamation, Wenyu stopped moving. She studied Chang Gu for a very long time before saying, “But I haven’t heard Wenyu mention her having a big brother at all.”

Her answer was indirectly confirming that she was not Wenyu.

“You can see dead people from your left eye, and I believe you saw all the dead people in that house already. Before Wenyu collapsed under madness, I made my escape.” Chang Gu was fidgeting with emotion. Just as he was about to explain the whole truth, the movie was cut off.

Having a horror movie cut off inside a darkened movie theater at 3 am was supposed to be something scary, but none of the audience felt afraid.

“What’s going on? Did the line get cut off? Boss!”

“So, what happens next?”

The employees were in a deep discussion. There was only one person that acted funnily, and that was the blind man next to Chen Ge. Shrieks echoed around theater, and a cold wind picked up, but the blind man maintained his pose, with his head lowered, appearing like he had fallen asleep.

They waited for a full three minutes before the movie resumed. However, the scene had swapped yet again, and the quality became clearer. It gave the impression that the movie had been switched to a different one.

“There is no one in the broadcast room, but the movie we’re watching is changing on its own. The one hiding in this theater probably felt threatened and is purposely trying to hide something.” The more they wished to hide, the deeper Chen Ge wanted to dig. From his perspective, only by knowing everything could he find the source of the problem and help them solve it.

The movie turned to focus on a villa. Wenyu was laid out flat on the dining table. Her head was bandaged, and it wrapped tightly around her left eye. A man with a slight hump sat next to the dining table. Her face was wrapped in bandages as well, and similarly, it covered up his left eye.

The man studied Wenyu quietly. Several seconds later, the bandage around Wenyu's left eye started to soak with blood. The blood bloomed on the white bandage like a blood flower opening on her eye.

"This is the second week after the swap. Why is it still not working? We are biological siblings and share the blood type—why is there such a drastic body rejection?" The man became agitated, and whenever blood leaked out from Wenyu's eye socket, the bandage around his face would be wetted by blood as well like his eye corresponded to some kind of signal given by Wenyu.

There were plenty of nerves around the eye, and it caused the man immense pain.

The man's body was shaking, and his hands gripped the edge of the table tightly. "The pain is even more intense than yesterday. The wounds show no sign of recovering at all! What is the problem?"

He opened the shelf in the living room, which was filled with various medical implements. While the man bustled about, Wenyu remained immobile on the table like she had lost her soul

Chapter 723 - Are You Coming Out or Not?

The man ransacked through the cupboards. He could only see from one eye. The pain shot through his brain, and his actions became more rugged and rough. His arm was cut on something, forming a long, disgusting-looking wound.

Blood slid down his arm before dropping on the bright, clean tiles. The image of a woman in red appeared in the pool of blood. The blood started to change like someone was writing a blood letter.

“You are not going to find the way to the school with your method. You’ve failed. You lied to me. You are not able to give me freedom, and now your life is counting down because of it.”

Pain bent the man over. The stuff in the cupboard clattered to the floor. He closed his eyes, and the world fell into darkness. His body knocked into the furniture, and his arms flailed helplessly around. He looked like he was drowning. Medicine and various medical implements littered the ground. The bookshelf was tipped over, and several professional books related to the eye fell next to the man’s feet.

“The liquid in the eye is leaking, the wound at the edge is festering, the nerves are dying, and sensitivity to light is decreasing. It affects even my original eye. It feels like something is squeezing against it, and it’s getting harder and harder to open the eye!” The man’s eyes were screwed shut. He was the only one in the room, but he yelled at the top of his lungs like he was talking to someone else. “But don’t you worry, as long as I’m alive, there is a chance for improvement!”

Eyes were windows to the soul. When one’s eyes could not open, the world inside would become dark. The man was like a beast, venting the pain that ravaged his body until he collapsed from fatigue and fainted next to the dining table.

The lights in the room flickered and dimmed. The room seemed to be changing. The blood stains on the ground turned dark brown, looking like drying scabs. In the extreme silence, a woman in a red jacket materialized in the room.

She looked completely different to Wenyu but shared some similarities to Qiumei from Deskmate. The woman shuffled silently to stand between the man and Wenyu. She picked up a diary that had fallen from the bookshelf. The cover was stained by blood, and flipping over the cover, the first page had a name written in red—Qiumei.

The front half of the diary was written using black pen, but the later parts were all in red. The woman flipped it to the last few pages.

30th November: The woman in red kept disturbing the surgery, as if by changing the eye, she will disappear forever. Looks like Chang Gu hasn't lied to me—I can finally escape this ghost's torture.

1st December: The woman in red appeared again. A few years ago, it was she who dragged me into Wenyu's body to have me become the next Wenyu. She is not my friend, even though she lives around me.

2nd December: The surgery is too risky, and that is not counting the supernatural disturbance. Like a mad woman, she kept trying to stop the surgery. It appears that Chang Gu's method really can end all the pain.

3rd December: As long as the ghost is still there, the surgery cannot be conducted normally, so we can only trap her. I've not spoken to her for years already, so this time, I guess I'll play a little game with her.

4th December: The surgery was successful. The evil red ghost that has been following me has disappeared, but I never expected it would be by this kind of method. After the surgery, I became the new red ghost.

5th December: The first time I trusted anyone other than granny, I lost my freedom and became a scapegoat; the second time I trusted another person, I lost even the husk where I could hide. What can I do now? Trust him the third time? Or...

The diary ended there. The woman in red put the book back. She leaned to the side and studied Chang Gu. His black hair lifted as if there was a breeze. The woman's right eye was completely red, but the left eye was just a black hollow. Even if she became a real Red Specter, she would not have recovered her left eye.

The lights in the room dimmed further, and the sound of marbles bouncing came from the ceiling. The sound of water came from the bathroom, and the pen rolled on the ground. The fruit knife on the coffee table moved on its own. A pale hand reached out from underneath the red shirt, and the woman held the handle of the blade with two fingers.

She stood before the fainted man and dangled the blade above his head, aiming right at the man's right eye, which was not protected by the bandage. Just as the woman was about to release her fingers, she suddenly stopped as if sensing something else in the room.

Her neck turned, and her hair parted away. The hollowness where her eye should be looked straight at the camera, like she was looking at the audience beyond the screen. A strange movie started in theater—there was a sound of approaching footsteps underlying the music.

Strange noises filled up the house on screen. It came from the deep end of the cupboard, under the bed, and behind the door. It was so incessant and constant that it created the impression that the same thing was happening in real life!

One's ears could no longer discern whether the sound came from the screen or from behind oneself.

The lights flickered suddenly, and the woman neared the screen. She was not moving slowly. She looked as if she was standing still, but one minute later, as Chen Ge focused his eyes again, the distance between her and the screen closed further!

The strangeness inside the screen and outside the screen slowly overlapped, and it created a strange feeling among the audience. It felt like they were being drawn into the movie, becoming a part of it, or the scene in the movie was slowly becoming a part of real life and the ghost inside it was really coming out.

The music grew louder, and it felt like someone was blowing air into their ears.

The woman arrived at the edge of the screen, and the lights in the theater were the dimmest that they had ever been. The vacant eye socket stuck to the screen, and the emptiness stared straight at the audience beyond the screen.

The fruit knife that dripped with blood aimed outward, and a scent of blood dispersed through the enclosed theater. First, it was the overlapping of sound, then came the scent of blood. When the audience was confused by all those developments, the Red Specter stuck herself onto the screen.

Viscous blood slid down the screen and leaked out onto the stage beyond the screen. When the audience recovered, the scary face was already poking out of the screen!

The background music reached its climax, like an arrow being pulled taut. The scent of blood thickened, and the scariest scene in that theater finally arrived.

The ghost from the movie crawled out from the screen! The ghost story turned into reality!

His breathing turned heavier, and Chen Ge pressed on the armrest. The eye that was filled with blood vessels turned red almost instantly!

“The Red Specter from the movie is coming out!” He jumped, and at the same moment the Specter appeared, he screamed, “Get her! Don’t let her run back into the movie!”

Chapter 724: A Person as Gentle as You

The appearance of a Red Specter at a two-star mission was something that Chen Ge did not anticipate. Regardless, he was given no choice—all the employees that he could rely on were with him. Bai Qiulin and the water ghost were both Half Red Specters, and with the aid from the other employees, holding back the Red Specter from the movie should present no problem.

Chen Ge merely needed to hold the Red Specter off for a while. His body leaned toward the blind man next to him, and he already had a plan in his heart.

The employees were highly excited to encounter something like this—this kind of excitement was not something that a normal 3D movie could replicate. The scent of blood spread within the enclosed private screening theater, and the low murmuring soon turned into wails and shrieks.

Blood slid down the screen, and the woman in red walked out. The sound of blood dripping did not stop. She turned the head, which was losing one eye, and the remaining eye zeroed in on the young woman sitting on the front row who was slowly lifting up her head. Water and blood stains surfaced on her clothes, and her wet hair stuck to her pale skin. Through the hair, one could catch a glimpse of the eyes that were bloated from being soaked in water for too long!

The seat was drenched, and the pool of water on the ground was expanding. One of them was on stage, the other off stage.

For one, this was her first time at the movies, and her simple mind was trying to process what kind of artistic style this was; the other was confused because this was her first time encountering an audience member like this. She looked back with a lost expression, as if suspecting that she was actually still inside the movie.

The woman in red's eyes finally moved away from the water ghost, but when she saw the rest of the audience in theater, her confusion only grew. Behind the water ghost was a row of doctors. Their white coats fluttered underneath the seats, and other than aloofness, there was no other discernible expression on their faces.

Next to the doctors was a man wearing an old pair of jeans. One of his hands was stuck inside his pocket while the other shielded Chen Ge. Yet, confusingly enough, there was another hand laid leisurely on the man's shoulder.

Most of the wailing came from the students in the room. They made a huge commotion, but that was merely for show. As loud as they were being, they also scurried away from the screen.

The last row of the audience stood up, and they looked even stranger. In the left-hand corner, there appeared to be a couple. The man's face was white, and the female looked like she could collapse at any moment. On the other end, a two-meter-tall fatty was squeezed in the corner, and he was trying his best to hold his stench in. Next to the fatty was a lanky man, and there was a rope around his neck. This time, the audience members were so different that the woman in red was briefly stunned after exiting the screen.

Of 'everyone' there, Chen Ge was the most collected. Ever since the woman appeared, he had been following her with his Yin Yang Vision. His focus paid off. He soon discovered that once the woman exited the screen, the red on her outfit lightened quite a bit. This was most obvious at the spot around the heart—the blood there was almost dry and non-existent.

This Red Specter seems like she can only unleash her full power inside the movie. Once she is out of it, her power drastically decreases.

With that understanding, Chen Ge became more confident. After all, this was merely a two-star Trial Mission.

The water ghost and Bai Qiulin faced the woman directly while the other ghosts helped to protect the movie screen. As the battle was about to erupt, Chen Ge lifted the hammer with one hand and turned to the blind man who was seated next to him.

“Chang Gu, the old movies relating to the Eye Oculus are still here. Looks like you and Qiumei have failed to find the real Wenyu.” Chen Ge's every word landed on Chang Gu's heart like sharp nails. His eyelids twitched, and he stooped even further.

“We can talk this out like friends. Honestly, I am also looking for that phantom school, and I have a lead.” Chen Ge was an open person. With the situation still undecided, he shared information pertinent to the School of Afterlife and showed that he was willing to cooperate.

“Chang Gu, after watching the movies you’ve directed, I know you are a clever and very talented person, but just take a look at yourself now.

“Have you already given up? Are you willing to hide for the rest of your life in this abandoned holiday villa? Until you die, you won’t find Wenyu? Have you given up on your promise to Qiumei?

“You poured your life into works, and the movies are an extension of your life. I am affected by your movies, and I feel sorry for what happened to you. I understand your pain, and I can see why you are wasting your life away now.

“I understand you, and because of that, I wish to collaborate with you. Now is still not the time to give up!”

Through watching the movies, Chen Ge gained a brief understanding of the whole process. He aimed for the gap in Chang Gu’s heart and tried to weave through the man’s cold exterior.

“Wenyu’s soul has still not been found. Perhaps she is still trapped inside the abandoned school. I’m sure her physical body is worsening by the day. What is a person without her soul? I don’t know what happened to both of you later, but there is one thing that I am certain about, it is never too late. Everything can still be saved!”

Chang Gu’s emotions were fraying. Chen Ge saw this opportunity and added, “Do you know why I am looking for that school?”

He bent over to look Chang Gu in the eye. “I am the boss for the Haunted House at Western Jiujiang New Century Park. About six months ago, my parents disappeared, and many signs point to the fact that they have been to that school!”

Chang Gu’s eyelids twitched even harder. His chest rose unevenly, and he finally returned with a question. “Have your parents really been to that school?”

“Yes, and to find them, I’ve been to Mu Yang High School, Western Jiujiang Private Academy, Jiujiang Medical University, and so on. I have already gathered some clues.” Chen Ge shared his experience. If Chang Gu’s experience was a tale, then Chen Ge’s experience was the stuff of legends.

Without a single lie, Chen Ge shared everything like an honest child with Chang Gu. After hearing Chen Ge's story, Chang Gu had the impression that all the things that had happened to him were not even worth mentioning, and there was no reason for him to have given up.

"We can cooperate, and that is a win-win solution. Think about it."

Standing up, Chen Ge dragged the hammer and walked out from the seat to the stage. Before the woman, he tossed the hammer aside, raised his arms, and uttered with gentleness in his eyes, "All the souls that have hosted the Left Eye have lost themselves and turned into monsters, but you are the only exception. For all these years, you have suffered silently.

"You are a victim, but you are also a hero.

"When bad luck befalls a person, those with darkness in their heart will curse this world. What they need is not pity but partners.

"However, for those with kindness, they will choose to suffer everything silently, to help cover up the wounds of this imperfect world and repay its bad fortune with kindness and warmth."

Chen Ge walked up to the stage and stopped not far away from the woman.

"Whether you admit it or not, you are one such gentle person, Qiumei."

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Be it in life or death, this was the first time that Qiumei had received such a compliment. Her parents had imprisoned when she was young, and it had been her grandmother who took care of her. Due to the lack of attention and love from immediate parents since she was young, Qiumei's personality had always been different from others. She was straight-forward, and some might even call her tomboyish.

As she grew older, Qiumei matured into her personality. When she decided to bid her past self goodbye and tried to work hard for once in her life, she ran into Wenyu. Before the flower had the chance to bloom, it was cut off. But due to her harsh childhood, Qiumei was not defeated by the sudden accident. She retained her personality, and that was why Chen Ge admired her.

After watching Chang Gu's movies, Chen Ge still had no exact idea why Wenyu would enroll at the School of Afterlife and had even less of an idea why the Left Oculus would appear. He had no idea what the relationship between Wenyu and her older brother was, but he knew very well that in this whole incident, Qiumei was the most innocent party.

A strange audience appeared in theater, and stranger than this group of audience was this living man who came onstage. Qiumei's functioning right eye slowly opened. The bloodshot eye spoke of confusion. She was comforted by the man's words, but something just did not sit well with her.

As she turned her neck around, Qiumei stared at Chang Gu, who sat in the middle of the seat. As if sensing something, Chang Gu lifted his head, which he had kept lowered until then. Like he had come to a decision, he sighed lightly. His eyelids fluttered, and Chang Gu finally opened his eyes.

"Who are you?" Chang Gu's left eye was as big as a normal person's eye, but there was a ring of redness around the eyeball. His right eye, which should have been normal, looked scarier. The pupil appeared to have dissolved, and the only thing that remained was an eye that was run through with cracks.

When Chang Gu spoke, he stared right at Qiumei in front of the screen. After the botched operation, only a part of the left eye’s power remained. “My right eye is already completely blind, and I can’t even give you the exact reason why. Perhaps it’s the curse of the Left Oculus.” Chang Gu coughed violently before closing his eyes again, but after only opening his eye for a few seconds, his left eye was already crying tears of blood.

“Looks like my prediction is all correct.” Chen Ge was still standing on stage. There were only several steps between him and Qiumei.

“Whether you’re right or not doesn’t matter anymore.” It took a long time before Chang Gu stopped coughing. “I can cooperate with you, but how do you expect me to believe what you said?”

Chen Ge was afraid that Chang Gu refused communication. As long as there was a chance, he had the means to befriend the guy. Taking out his phone, Chen Ge looked at the local news at Jiujiang. “I have no need to lie to you. These news articles are all proof of my statement. If you still don’t believe me, you can go online yourself to search for information on my Haunted House.”

Chen Ge showcased sincerity, but Chang Gu did not buy his story so easily. A person who relied on local crime news to prove his worth was not going to be someone simple. Working with the man might be similar to befriending a tiger—he could be eaten the next moment.

“If you are willing to cooperate, you can come back with me to the Haunted House today. Every single sentence that I’ve said is real.” The countdown for the School of Afterlife was almost up, and Chen Ge was antsy about missing it. “This will only benefit two of us. I will give you a whole morning to think about it. I will come back tomorrow night.

“Wenyu’s condition is probably not that positive, I am worried about my parents as well. Technically, we share the same goal. However, I never force others into things that they are not willing to do. If you agree, then I will come back tonight to share everything I know with you.”

Standing on the stage, there was an indescribable loneliness in Chen Ge’s eyes. “We are the same type of person. No one will help us in this world other than ourselves.”

Seeing the loneliness in Chen Ge’s eyes, Chang Gu held his bleeding eye. Looking at the roomful of ghosts, he felt a certain kinship to Chen Ge. “Let me think about it...”

“No problem, it is my sincere wish to help you because I know that helping you is helping myself.” Chen Ge was a big-picture thinker, and that was reflected in his way of thinking. “Wenyu and the school are the thing that you care about the most. I know my visit is rather sudden, and I can understand your suspicion and caution toward me. To dissolve the gap between us, I am willing to allow this Red Specter to follow me home. Ghosts are best at reading people’s hearts; you can have her observe me closely and see whether I am lying to you or not.”

“You are willing to let a ghost follow you home?” This was the first time that Chang Gu had encountered a request like that in his life.

“If you are worried about Qiumei’s safety, I can ask my friends to stay behind to act as hostages.” Chen Ge thought that he was not being unreasonable. For all parties involved, it was the fairest action.

“Letting your friends stay behind as hostage?” Chang Gu shivered. If they really stayed, it was hard to say who the hostage would be. “There’s no need for that, I believe in you.”

Chang Gu wanted to say something else, but Chen Ge had already turned to Qiumei.

“The first time you trusted others, you lost your freedom; the second time you trusted other, you lost your life; today, you are given a third choice.” Chen Ge was just a normal person, but standing before Qiumei, he showed no trace of fear. His voice was powerful and warm.

“Come, I’ll help you see a different side of the world.” Chen Ge opened the comic. When the girl was hesitating, before she even understood the scope of the situation, she was already pulled into the book. Qiumei did not resist. As Chen Ge closed the comic, the black phone vibrated.

Taking it out, Chen Ge glanced at the new message.

“Congratulations Specter’s Favored for discovering a rare Red Specter —Qiumei!

“Qiumei (Red Specter): She turned into a Red Specter due to a unique reason and doesn’t possess much resentment. She possesses a Red Specter’s power only in the movies. After leaving the movies, her power drastically decreases, and she cannot activate her special power.

“Qiumei’s Special Power: ??? (Will be unlocked after becoming an official Haunted House employee)”

After reading the message, Chen Ge was surprised. Qiumei was indeed a very special Red Specter.

Isn’t this kind of unique worker the exact thing that I’m looking for? Chen Ge put his phone away and waved at Chang Gu, appearing very happy.

Chang Gu, who sat in the middle of theater, held the bleeding left eye in his hand, and at that moment, he felt like he had lost something.

Chang Gu agreed to cooperate with Chen Ge, and they had formed a basic consensus. After promising to meet up again the following night, Chen Ge pushed open the door of the private showing theater. The sky outside was brightening. The moment Chen Ge stepped out of theater, the black phone vibrated again.

“For the third part of the mission, travel to Jiujiang Mental Asylum to see the color of Wenyu’s dream for yourself!

“Warning! This mission contains many uncertain factors. After completing it, you will greatly improve Wenyu, Qiumei, and Chang Gu’s affection toward you! It will unlock the two-star scenario The Dead’s Theater and equipment related to movie-making!”

Seeing the message on the black phone, Chen Ge’s desire to complete this two-star mission only grew. Other than giving him a new two-star mission, he was going to get plenty of valuable equipment. Previously, he had promised the suicide line operator to help him finish shooting a movie. Currently, he had the director and the actors, and after the mission was completed, he would have the equipment needed as well.

“Even though this Trial Mission is quite complicated, the reward is correspondingly lucrative. I wonder, what does the uncertain factor the black phone warned about mean?” Chen Ge had already discerned the rules to the mission given by the black phone—the reward was often proportional to the level of danger.

“Discern the color of Wenyu’s dream? One’s dream has a color?” The mission description was rather vague. Chen Ge could not even tell whether the Wenyu in question was the Wenyu in real life or Wenyu’s soul.

“Oh well, I’m sure it’ll all pan out in the end. There’s no point thinking about it. Tomorrow night, I’ll get Chang Gu to come with me to go visit Wenyu.” Chen Ge would never go back on his word. Be it Qiumei or Wenyu, Chen Ge valued them both.

With further insistence from Chang Gu, Chen Ge grabbed all of his employees and left Yong Ling Mountain Holiday Villa. He walked for a long stretch before he located a taxi that would pick him up.

Taking not even one second of sleep, Chen Ge did not feel tired. The appearance of Left Oculus brought a change to the four-star School of the Afterlife mission, and a brave idea appeared in his mind. Based on current situation, Zhang Ya would not have woken up before the time limit for the School of Afterlife ended. Without her, the mission’s difficulty would rise to an impossible level.

Chen Ge had been hesitating whether he should take this risk or not. The futuristic theme park was about to open. Without a new and exciting scenario, the popularity that New Century Park had gathered might be overtaken by the new theme park. He had worked so hard for the sake of this day, and now it was the last leg.

“If I can find valuable information related to the School of Afterlife during the mission for Left Oculus, then I will go scout around the phantom school before the time limit ends.” Giving up without even paying the place a visit was something that Chen Ge could not do.

Leaning against the seat, Chen Ge stared at his shadow and sunk into deep thought. He returned to New Century Park at 8 am. He had only entered the gate when he saw two figures walking around the entrance to his Haunted House.

“Uncle Xu? Jingjiu? You two sure are early today.” Chen Ge placed his backpack on the wooden bench, and the bench creaked noisily from the pressure.

“You wandered out alone last night?” Uncle Xu looked at the bench, which might collapse at any moment.

"I merely went for a morning jog." Chen Ge gave a casual excuse.

"Jogging with such a loaded bag?" Uncle Xu sighed helplessly. "You are not young anymore. Stop wasting your life on those nightly activities. Better go and find yourself a wife to get your life back together."

"Uncle Xu, did you come so early in the morning to introduce me to a prospective partner?" Chen Ge glanced at his shadow and wiped the beads of sweat that travelled down his face.

"I'm not that free." Uncle Xu sighed. "Just now, I accepted the call from Director Luo. Last night, the people from Xin Hai's Nightmare Academy opened several threads on the largest online forum about your Haunted House. They question the safety of your Haunted House, and the threads are fast gathering popularity. Director Luo believes that it is the people at the futuristic theme park who is behind this."

"Nightmare Academy? Them again? I haven't even gone to them to demand an explanation, and they're coming after us already?" Chen Ge's voice was laced with danger.

"What are you planning to do? Calm down! Don't act recklessly!" Uncle Xu quickly stopped Chen Ge.

"Director Luo had me come early to remind you, to tell you to keep a low profile. Do not let them have any advantage on you. After we survive the opening of the futuristic theme park, everything will be fine."

"We've always been open with our activities. What kind of advantage can they possibly have on us?"

"You are not wrong, but we cannot guarantee that they will not go below the belt and come up with false accusations." Uncle Xu wanted Chen Ge to be more careful.

"You said it yourself, Uncle Xu, they will stoop to the lowest level to make trouble for us. In that case, I think we should adopt a different solution to deal with this problem." Chen Ge picked up the heavy backpack and looked inside it.

"What are you planning to do?" Uncle Xu had a bad feeling.

"Since they will find flaws with us even if there are none, then if I can take them all down, there won't be anyone who will find faults with us, right?" Chen Ge answered matter-of-factly.

"Take, take them down?" Uncle Xu took one step forward, like he could not hear Chen Ge clearly and wanted a clarification.

"It's going to be easy. I'll go to Xin Hai today." Chen Ge patted Uncle Xu's shoulders. "Don't worry, now that there is an intercity train, the travel back and forth will only take two hours. I'll be back before the night falls."

"Do you really think I'm worried about that?" Uncle Xu pushed Chen Ge's arm aside. "This is just a business problem. Please don't elevate it into a..."

"Don't worry, leave it to me, I won't leave any evidence."

"What evidence? Please don't go creating trouble!"

After pacifying Uncle Xu, Chen Ge turned to Zhang Jingjiu. "Jingjiu, why are you so early today?"

"Boss, I wish to ask you for a day off." Zhang Jingjiu took out his phone. There was a short message on it. "My father has been hospitalized, so I wish to visit him."

"No problem." Chen Ge agreed easily. "If I remember correctly, you said your father lives in Xin Hai City."

"Yes."

"Then, this is perfect. I will go with you to Xin Hai. We'll see this as a field trip." Chen Ge's eyes moved away from the two and gazed down the horizon. "After we survive the opening of the futuristic theme park and have nothing else to worry about, we can consider opening a branch in Xin Hai. The people there will be overjoyed to know that they can finally experience the true meaning of horror."

Chapter 727: He Has Arrived

“Chen Ge, are you sure you want to go to Xin Hai?” Uncle Xu was still worried.

“Director Luo once told me that we need to look at the big picture. This trip to Xin Hai has two purposes—give Nightmare Academy a warning and get a better understanding of the market,” Chen Ge said seriously. “It’ll be fine, don’t worry.”

Opening the gate, Chen Ge and Zhang Jingjiu entered the Haunted House.

“Wait for me here. I need to go to the underground scenario to grab something.” Chen Ge placed most of the employees back into their places and only held onto a few that he still could not control fully like the red high heels, the headless woman, and Qiumei. He was not doing that to take revenge on Nightmare Academy—he was merely worried that these Red Specters might cause trouble at his Haunted House once he left.

For the sake of balance, Chen Ge brought along Yan Danian’s group and Xu Yin.

“The hammer is definitely not going through the security check, so I’ll leave it here.” After removing the hammer, the backpack felt so light that Chen Ge needed some time to get used to it. Returning to the surface, Chen Ge and Zhang Jingjiu waited for the other workers to arrive, and Chen Ge helped them with their make-up before leaving.

At 11 am, Chen Ge and Zhang Jingjiu took the train heading to Xin Hai City. The two cities were adjacent to each other, but the temperature had a drastic change. Xin Hai’s average temperature was higher than that of Jiujiang for reasons that eluded Chen Ge.

“Jingjiu, you have to go visit your father.” Chen Ge shoved a red packet to Zhang Jingjiu. “Use this to buy some things for him. I won’t accompany you any further. Call me if you need anything.”

Before Zhang Jingjiu could reject him, Chen Ge grabbed his backpack and ran out of the train station. Chen Ge hailed a taxi and gave the driver the address for Nightmare Academy that he had found online.

Unlike Chen Ge’s Haunted House, Nightmare Academy was situated on Xin Hai’s busiest merchant street. As the oldest and most famous Haunted House in Xin Hai, they rented an entire building.

Coincidentally enough, when the contractor was designing the merchant street, there was a small oversight. One of the smaller buildings was surrounded by other skyscrapers, creating this situation where it would never receive any sunlight no matter the time of day. Many people refused to rent this building, which always ‘faced away from the sun’. In the end, it had been selected by the founder of Nightmare Academy. He had used a very low price to rent the side of the building that could not receive any sunlight and transformed it into the biggest Haunted House in Xin Hai.

The side of the building that occasionally received some sunlight had many restaurants and shops, whereas the other side had windows that were always closed. One Yin and one Yang, this eventually became a landmark for Xin Hai City and had great popularity online.

But that was several years ago. The popularity of physical Haunted Houses was dropping, and fewer and fewer people came to visit Nightmare Academy. They tried to come up with new updates, but it did nothing to stop the popularity from slipping.

After paying the fare, Chen Ge stood at the entrance of the merchant street. There were many vehicles, and the buildings rose into the sky. Even though it was a working day, the place was packed.

“Do these people not need to work?” Carrying his tattered backpack, Chen Ge, who could not have looked more normal, stood out conspicuously on the largest merchant street in the big city. However, Chen Ge did not mind that. Compared to appearance, he paid more attention to a being’s soul.

Following the map on his phone, Chen Ge soon found Nightmare Academy. Situated at a secluded corner of the merchant street, the size of the crowd there diminished tremendously.

Before he got near, Chen Ge saw a worker standing at the entrance, yelling loudly on the speaker.

“A 4D Haunted House experience! Experience the greatest horror in your life! A world-standard Haunted House—Nightmare Academy—starting a new semester with screams!

“The experience at Nightmare Academy combines the element of Haunted Houses, escape rooms, exploration, and real life interaction! It is a new indoor theme park! Only by sharpening your intelligence, courage, and physical ability will you be able to survive!

“Be it in terms of design, props, scenarios, and make-up, we are much better than all other Haunted Houses on the market!”

The worker yelled at the top of his lungs, but there were few visitors who were interested. Even if an occasional person stopped, it was due to curiosity, and they would leave seconds later.

“Sir, would you like to come and challenge our Haunted House?” The worker had noticed Chen Ge a long time ago. He saw Chen Ge standing there for a long time, but seeing the old-fashioned way that Chen Ge was dressed, he did not rush forward to welcome him. He did not think that Chen Ge would be a potential customer.

“Is your Haunted House really scary?” Chen Ge was curious. Even though their morality left much to be desired, Nightmare Academy had to have something going for them, or else they would not have ended up as the biggest Haunted House in Xin Hai City.

“You won’t believe me even if I say it is scary—the best way is for you to find out yourself.” The worker tried his sales pitch, but probably afraid that Chen Ge might just leave, he quickly added, “I will only say that a world-standard Haunted House is not for jokes. Our Haunted House has maintained a thirty-three percent surrender rate and ten percent completion rate. There is a record of a visitor lining up for three hours but giving up in less than three minutes.”

“Indeed, I’m not lying to you. The horror inside our Nightmare Academy is not simple scares but an exploration of the unknown inside the human heart,” the worker said haughtily. “So, what do you think? Would you like to come and experience it? Since it’s a working day, there’s a promotion. Normally, the ticket costs two hundred RMB, but now it will only cost you one hundred and eighty.”

“That expensive?” Chen Ge could not help but draw a comparison. For his Haunted House, the visitors had to buy the ticket to enter theme park first, but Nightmare Academy was only the visit to a Haunted House. In the future, when I expand to Xin Hai, I should raise the ticket price, following the local custom.

Chen Ge was still thinking, but the worker was getting impatient. “The value is equivalent to the price. Our Haunted House will definitely provide you with the best experience.”

“Alright then, give me one ticket.” Chen Ge entered the Haunted House. The interior design was atmospheric. The ticket selling lobby was decorated as a place for new students to register, and the elevator that led into the scenario was decorated as a school gate. There were various pictures and posters related to ghost stories pasted on the wall.

Before entering the actual scenario, the atmosphere was already there—this Nightmare Academy was not simple.

When Chen Ge entered the place, there were two other visitors inside the room, and they appeared to have been waiting for a long time.

“I’m sorry, the minimum number for a single visit is five people. Would you please wait a little while longer?” The female employee inside the ticket booth waved at Chen Ge. “Why don’t you register your name first? When we have enough people, we will start the tour immediately.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge took out his ID and walked to the ticket booth.

The employee inside the booth had her head lowered, but when she saw Chen Ge’s ID, she suddenly looked up.

“Chen Ge?”

“Is there a problem?” Chen Ge took out two hundred RMB and placed it on the counter. The ticket seller quickly recovered from a shock and said, “Sorry, I just thought your name was very familiar. It sounds the same as one of my friends’.”

“Is it?” Chen Ge smiled lightly and did not push for more details. The worker moved conspicuously faster and only took several seconds to finish the registration. The ticket for Nightmare Academy was quite interesting—it was an offer letter, and Chen Ge’s name was written on it.

“Hold onto your offer letter and document, and please wait in line. When the visitor number reaches five, we can start the tour.” After helping Chen Ge with his registration, the worker did not appear too well. With her hands over her stomach, she left the ticket booth in a hurry. Chen Ge carried his bag and lined up behind the other two visitors; he looked very much at ease like he had returned to his own home.

“Brother, did you come alone?” Standing before him was a couple. Their hands were laced together, and they appeared rather nervous.

“Yes, I was rather bored, so I came in for a stroll.”

“You sure are brave to have come here alone. This place is very scary. I was just discussing with my girlfriend that if there were not enough people, then we would surrender directly.” The man was about 1.7 meters tall and wore a black outfit with wide-rimmed glasses. He looked rather kind and friendly.

“But doesn’t that mean you’re going to waste your ticket money?” Chen Ge did not quite understand it.

“That is better compared to running out in tears after being scared!”

The man thought that Chen Ge's question was rather strange. "My colleague visited this Haunted House before, and it is very scary. Later, we'd better stick together."

"Okay." Chen Ge operated a Haunted House himself, so he would not underestimate his enemy. There had to be a reason for Nightmare Academy's past success. The man appeared to be quite a coward; he kept telling his girlfriend how scary this Haunted House was. His girlfriend cooperated fully—just from his description, her face was already white.

They waited for another minute before a woman about twenty years old and three students walked in. They did not appear to know each other. The three students kept chatting among themselves and sounded quite excited. One of them said that he had attempted this Haunted House before but had given up halfway because it was too scary.

The female visitor looked normal, and there was nothing particularly unique about her—she was the kind who would easily disappear in a crowd. She did not speak much and stood in the corner alone.

"There are enough visitors now. Everyone, please come with me." The worker who needed to use the toilet earlier came out from the staff passage. She carried an old red school bag and several blue storage boxes. "Please do not use your phones when you are inside the Haunted House. We will provide you with the necessary lighting equipment. Do not run or try to instigate a fight inside the Haunted House. Do not touch the actors, and of course, the actors will not touch you."

The worker rattled off the rules of the Haunted House before reaching her hand into the bag and taking out a small flashlight. "Now, please line up and retrieve your flashlight from me."

When the couple in front walked through, the worker handed them the flashlight immediately, but when it was Chen Ge's turn, the worker raised her hand to stop him. "Sir, do you mind leaving your backpack here with us? We will return it to you after the tour is completed."

Chen Ge shook his head. There were four Red Specters inside his backpack. He was worried the whole building would suffer if some kind of accident happened.

"I'm sorry, but those are the rules. I hope you can cooperate with us."

The worker stood her ground.

“You are worried that I might carry illegal items with me? That’s fine, I can open my backpack for you to check.” Compared to the worker of Nightmare Academy, Chen Ge appeared to be more reasonable. He opened his backpack before the crowd. “I’ve read through your rules. I am not allowed to bring any flammable objects, sharp blades, and video recording devices into your Haunted House. As you can see, there are no such things.”

Everyone looked into Chen Ge’s backpack, and their expressions slowly turned curious.

“What are all these?” Bright red high heels and cute cartoon doll could be understood as the man’s strange hobby, but what about the recorder? To study English? But he was visiting a Haunted House, why would he take such things with him?

The way that the other visitors looked at Chen Ge became weird, and the mind of the worker was filled with question marks.

“Indeed, there are no dangerous objects in here, but...” The worker picked up the recorder. She suspected there might be a small camera installed inside this thing. The worker pressed the play button. The tape turned, and it elicited a static sound. It really did appear to be a normal recorder.

“What do you mean? I can’t even bring a recorder when I visit your Haunted House? There were no such rules when I visited other Haunted House!” Chen Ge argued firmly.

“But the point is that no one would have considered carrying such things when visiting a Haunted House.” After a moment’s hesitation, the worker placed the recorder back into the bag and looked through the other items. In an inside slit of the bag, the worker found a hand-drawn horror comic and a ballpoint pen wrapped in cellophane tape.

“Do I not look like one?” Chen Ge did not deny it or admit it; he just looked at the worker silently.

The worker did not know how to answer. She put everything back into the backpack and returned it to Chen Ge. “Take your offer letter and flashlight. Go in.”

She searched inside the schoolbag for a long time before she found a red flashlight and handed it to Chen Ge. This flashlight looked similar to the other flashlights, but the casing for Chen Ge's was red in color while the others were all green.

After walking through the security door, the few visitors filed into the elevator.

"In ten seconds, your journey of nightmares will become. If you cannot carry on and wish to surrender, you just need to scream at the camera." The worker watched the visitors walk into the elevator and then pointed at the offer letters that every member of the group was holding. With a strange smile on her face, she said, "This time, the visiting number is quite small. To balance out the difficulty, I shall give you an additional hint—think about it, what exactly is the definition of a nightmare?"

The worker pressed the elevator button. The doors closed, and the elevator started to move up.

"Chui Ming, you've been here before, do you know what other secret might be hidden in the offer letter?" one of the students asked the boy next to him.

"Don't read it. Just keep your eyes on your feet after the tour starts." Chui Ming looked just shy of eighteen, and he was very timid.

"Is it that scary?" The other student had a hard time believing it. He tried to open the offer letter, but he was only halfway through when the lights in the elevator went off!

The darkness arrived suddenly, and the elevator was instantly filled with screams. Then, an eerie green light appeared from the four walls of the elevator.

There was no screen in the elevator to show which floor they were on. Under the glow of the green light, the visitors' panicked faces looked quite scary. They looked like ghosts who had returned on the seventh day of their death.

"Since there is no worker accompanying us, who can explain whether this means that the visit has officially started or not?" the man who walked at the front asked. He had come with his girlfriend, so he decided he would not give up so easily.

"Ol' Chui has been here once. If you have any questions, you can ask him." The shortest of the three students pulled on Chui Ming's arm. The former appeared to be unfazed by the scare, but his body was more honest. The elevator continued to move up, and the few visitors all turned to Chui Ming.

The boy was taller than his peers. His skin was very white, and he blushed from being the center of attention. "We haven't officially entered the scenario yet. The elevator will open to send us into the scenario. Nightmare Academy has six floors in total, and each floor has its own unique story. It is totally random which floor the elevator will stop at."

"Which floor did you get the last time you came here?" the man in black asked.

"I can't say for sure. The number of the floor is written in the corridor, but that day, I surrendered before even walking into the corridor." Chui Ming looked like an honest child. He would answer all the questions that people asked.

"Didn't dare enter the corridor? Is it because there are actors hidden inside the corridor?" Once Chen Ge spoke, he exuded an air of professionalism.

Chui Ming nodded. “There are a lot of actors working here, and they are very good at their job. The corridor is one of the places where they focus. Unless it is absolutely necessary, we’d better avoid that place.”

“Understood.” Chen Ge turned to look at the three students. As time moved forward, the atmosphere in the elevator became suffocating. The three students were squeezed together, and it was the timid Chui Ming who appeared the most collected.

“Based on my understanding, the entire tour of Nightmare Academy can last for two hours. Later, there will be plenty of parts where we’re required to work together.” Chen Ge looked at his teammates. “My name is Chen Ge. How shall I refer to the rest of you?”

“We are classmates. His name is Chui Ming, this is Lee Bo, and my surname is Gou, so you can call me Xiao Gou.” Of the three students, Chui Ming was the tallest and the shyest; Lee Bo was on the larger side, and he looked quite cute; Xiao Gou was very thin and was the shortest of them all. He was quite a chatterbox even though he was about as timid as Chui Ming.

“I am Lee Yuan, and this is my girlfriend, Xue Li.” After the couple gave their introduction, everyone turned to the silent woman who stood in the corner. The woman appeared like she had just survived a break-up, and she was still caught in its aftermath. Her eyes were red and puffy, and she was probably there to vent.

She is emotionally unstable. Hopefully, she won’t collapse inside the Haunted House.

Chen Ge studied the woman with his Yin Yang Vision. When he gave the worker his ID, he had already been recognized by Nightmare Academy’s workers. When the worker was handing out the items, he had purposely been singled out. Chen Ge obviously noticed that, but he was too kind-hearted to take issue with such things.

Now that there was such a strange person within their ranks, Chen Ge’s first thought was to suspect that she was actually a Nightmare Academy employee.

He studied her for a long time but could not find any residue of special make-up on her face. Assuming that she was really a worker there, it meant that she was an actor who would not rely on special make-up.

After jotting down this detail in his mind, Chen Ge stopped paying her any attention.

Hong!

The elevator shuddered, and the visitors all went to grab the railings on the walls. Several seconds later, the doors slowly opened, and a strange stench drifted into the cramped space. Compared to the natural presence at Chen Ge's Haunted House, the smell was chemically enhanced, and it stung the visitors' nostrils. The elevator doors opened to a world of darkness.

"Should we go out?"

"Brother Chui, is it this floor that you visited last time?"

"It doesn't look like it. When the door opened last time, it led to a large hall with a new student welcoming ceremony."

"What the... why is it so dark in here?"

"Is someone there?" Xiao Gou grabbed Chui Ming's arm as he slowly nudged to the elevator doors. He switched open the flashlight and was about to aim the light outward when a head suddenly poked out from one side of the door.

Screams echoed in the elevator immediately. The three students knocked into each other, and Lee Yuan and Xue Li hugged each other tightly. The silent woman staggered one step backward, and her back knocked into the elevator wall. Of the whole group, only Chen Ge was unaffected as if he already predicted that this would happen.

After the screams petered out, the owner of the head switched on the lights in the corridor. The green light in the elevator went out, and the old-fashioned ceiling lamp in the corridor came on. The lamp flickered on and off. The wire was exposed, and the light pulled the shadows of the visitors long.

"Are you the new students?" The worker outside the elevator stood under the light. He was wearing an ill-fitting school uniform. "May I take a look at your offer letters?"

After checking the tickets, the worker made a vague gesture. "We haven't had new students for a very long time. There are rumors saying that this place is not safe, that it's haunted, but those are merely malicious rumors created by our competitors. This is just a normal school."

Lee Yuan and Xue Li were the first to enter the elevator, so when they left the elevator, they were also at the front. Just as the couple were about to step out, a voice suddenly appeared next to their ears. "Don't leave! Run! Do not go there!"

Xue Li was given the fright of her life, and she rushed out of the elevator while screaming. The other visitors followed suit. When everyone was out of the elevator, someone finally turned back to look. The innermost wall of the elevator had a pale green face that was screaming. Unfortunately, the visitors had already left the elevator. The blood red elevator doors that were decorated with strange electrical wires slowly closed. The sound of the man's screams echoed in the empty elevator.

"3D projection?" Chen Ge had been staring at that face. It looked very real, but the eyes were rather empty as they stared fixatedly at a certain spot. This should be some sort of set program. If someone was standing there, it would be very scary, but unfortunately, since there was no one there, it was rather awkward.

"Look, there are always people who are trying to smear our name, but we are actually a very normal school." The senior in the school uniform led the new students deeper into the corridor. "The school organized a welcoming ceremony for all of you. You should go take some pictures and hand in your physical check report. If there's no problem, please come to the third floor for the welcoming ceremony."

After walking a few steps, the senior stopped. He pushed open the door of an adjacent room. "Come and take some pictures."

The words 'photography club' were written on the wooden door. The space inside was bigger than anticipated. A bunch of photography equipment was left in the corner, and the projector in the middle of the room was showing some kind of movie.

Chapter 730: Consecutive Scares

“Come, stand before the background.” The senior in the ill-fitting uniform picked up the polaroid camera from the table and urged the visitors to stand on the left side of the projector. “On the count of three, say cheese.”

The senior pressed on the snap button. His finger did not move away from the flash, so the flashes kept coming. Inside the dark room, the flashes were blinding, and the visitors all raised their hands to shield their eyes.

“Alright, the pictures are ready. I will go check and see whether the doctor has arrived or not. You should spread these pictures among yourselves. One last piece of advice, do not touch anything in this room.”

When the senior spoke, the camera kept ‘vomiting’ pictures. He picked up a random one, shoved it inside his pocket, and left after placing the camera back on the table.

The temperature of the air-conditioning in the room was low. The wind caressed the visitors’ exposed skin. The boys by the name of Chui Ming and Lee Bo assisted each other, and they edged toward the table. They picked up the pictures from the ground. “We’d better follow their instructions. There are many puzzle-solving missions inside the abandoned school, and the clues are normally hidden inside these small props.”

Chui Ming had his previous experience to attest to. The previous time, he had skipped over the job of collecting and analyzing these props, so in the end, he could only give up. Picking up the pictures, Chui Ming handed them out to the other teammates when he suddenly stopped. “Why is there an extra one?”

Chui Ming stood next to Chen Ge, who was at the back of the group. Chen Ge had not gotten his picture yet, but there were three pictures in Chui Ming's grasp. Not counting his own and Chen Ge's, there was an extra one.

"There must be some problem with that picture! What the f*ck! Take a look at this!" Lee Yuan screamed as he pointed at the picture that he was holding, "There is one extra person in the group picture!"

When the visitors heard that, they all looked down to check their own pictures, and they were shocked to find that an extra person had been standing next to Xue Li when they took the picture. She was wearing Nightmare Academy's uniform, her face was pale, and she stared right at the camera with her head leaning softly on Xue Li's shoulder.

"What the! But I didn't notice anything at all!" Xue Li kept brushing her shoulder. She was normally an educated woman who would never allow herself to curse.

Chen Ge stared at the picture. "This hasn't been tampered with. In other words, the actor, who had already hidden herself in the room earlier, sneaked out when the pictures were taken."

It was the senior who chose where they should stand when taking the picture. The color of the wall behind them had a slightly different hue from the rest. Upon closer inspection, one could discern a spot where it was slightly bulging.

"I don't want to stay here anymore. Let's go." Xue Li hugged Lee Yuan like a bullied marsupial.

"Don't wander off alone. It's safest to listen to the worker's instructions," Chui Ming warned. "No matter how scary the scenario is, you will not run into anything too creepy, but if you stray from the designated plot, you might run into the other ghosts and monsters hidden in the different scenarios, and then you'll know the real meaning of despair."

"Okay." Xue Li leaned on Lee Yuan's shoulder. She quickly tossed the picture aside. She was too scared to hold onto it. Her pretty eyes scanned the projected image on the screen. Xue Li had not seen this movie before. The main actors were mainly students; they had photography club's nametags on, and the movie was shot right in that room. "Wait, come and look at this movie. This is rather strange."

Everyone turned to the movie. The students in the movie were cleaning the room when one of the students found a dusty video tape at the back of the one of the cupboards. The students gathered together. They were confused and decided to see what was on the tape.

The movie did not have any sound—it felt like they were watching a silent movie. Thankfully, the actors had good acting skill, and they managed to explain the plot through expressions and actions. In the movie, the students placed the tape inside the player, and a strange scene followed. The visitors in the Haunted House stood inside the room for photography club and watched a movie about photography club's students watching a movie inside the very same room.

The location overlapped, and even the angle of the movie was similar, only the viewers had changed. This kind of similarity could easily lead to some sort of psychological illusion. After adjusting the player, the movie started to play. It seemed to record an official activity carried out by the school.

The recording was very short, only one minute long. After the movie ended, the students repeated it several times, and they got into an argument. Since the movie was silent, the visitors could not tell what the subject of their argument was. After the argument settled down somewhat, they replayed the movie again.

When the movie ran to the forty-fourth second, one of the students pressed the pause button. His finger was pointing at the corridor at the corner of the screen and said something with a fear-stricken face.

The still of the movie zoomed in, and the visitors got a clearer view of what was happening. When the school was organizing some kind of activity, a shadow flashed across the corridor.

The students got into another argument, probably because some of them voiced their disagreement, thinking that it was merely a recording mistake. Their argument went nowhere, and the students gradually filed out of the room, leaving behind the student who was the first to discover the shadow.

The student repeated the movie several times like he was trying to prove something. Weirdly enough, whenever he repeated the movie, the human shadow in the corridor would get clearer until a human face could eventually be seen.

It felt as if the person in the corridor was moving closer. When he played it for the third time, one could see it was a pale-faced woman covered in blood standing in the corridor.

The visitors' attention was increasingly drawn to the movie. The focus of the movie shifted constantly between the student in the movie and the projection on the screen. Finally, on the fifth replay, the face in the corridor became the clearest!

The twisted expression caused the student much discomfort, and it caused the visitors' hearts to squeeze with trepidation. The student in the movie started to shake. With shaking hand, he tried to play the movie for the sixth time.

Once again, the movie stopped at forty-fourth second but this time, the shadow in the corridor disappeared. The student scratched his head and leaned closer to the screen. He studied the corridor at the corner of the screen closely. Right then, the screen hanging from the wall slid off, and a creepy face materialized on the wall behind the screen!

Bang!

Before the visitors had the chance to scream, the door to the photography club was pushed open, and the senior screamed at the top of his lungs. "Quick! Run! Didn't I tell you not to touch anything inside the room?"

Before the visitors understood what was happening, Xue Li felt a tug on the back of her head. She turned back to look, and the face that should have belonged inside the movie had appeared behind her!

"AH!" Her mind was broken. Xue Li dragged Lee Yuan and ran out of the room as fast as she could manage. This caused chaos to spread through the rest of the group. Only Chen Ge remained where he was, holding his backpack, studying the projector and the wall at the back of the photography club.

"One of them pulled open the door to attract the visitors' attention while the other sneaked out from the worker's passageway. The timing is flawless. This can only be achieved through multiple rehearsals. Nightmare Academy shouldn't be underestimated."

When the visitors left the room, the senior immediately closed the door to the photography club and kept mumbling. “How can this be? She has returned!”

Incessant banging came from behind the door. The whole door shook like it could be knocked down at any moment. The senior was quite a good actor. Under his influence, the already panicking visitors became even more flustered.

“There’s a problem here. Please go on ahead to the physical check-up for the new students. It’s inside the room at the front there. The doctor has already arrived.” The senior forced a smile. The door shook violently. In the dark corridor, the visitors would not have been so afraid when there was a guide leading them, but exploring the scenario on their own was quite a tall task.

“What are you all doing here? Go!” The senior’s voice turned urgent. He leaned his back against the door of the photography club. Even so, the door was still shaking very greatly.

“We should listen to him, let’s go.” Chui Ming and Lee Yuan led the group away. Before they got too far, the senior holding back the door suddenly added, “Right, I’ll give you another piece of advice! There is a problem with the elevator, and it is temporarily out of order. Try not to wander off to another floor because in the staircase...”

He was halfway through when a pale arm reached out from the middle of the door and pulled the hapless man into the room.

“Save me! Save me!” The senior’s blood-curdling scream echoed down the hall. His pale face squeezed between the door. His cheeks were filled with blood, and he waved his arms madly around for help. “Save me! Pull me out!”

Blood red paint squirted out from behind his head, and it landed everywhere. Under such circumstances, people were not going to get any closer. The visitors stood there and watched the senior being dragged slowly into the door, and the blood trickled along the floor.

“Save me!” The senior screamed loudly. Right then, Chen Ge, who was at the back of the group, moved forward. His shoes stepped on the red paint. The ‘blood’ was not as sticky as actual blood; it was red paint diluted with water. Without much hesitation, Chen Ge reached the door and grabbed the senior’s hand.

“Save...” Before the senior could finish, Chen Ge pushed him behind the door and locked it. The corridor became quiet immediately. Even the ghost inside the room was at a loss.

The visitors looked at Chen Ge with widened eyes. The latter only said with some embarrassment, “Sorry, I guess my hands slipped.”

After Chen Ge walked for three meters away from the room, the door started to shake again, and the senior’s scream and a female ghost’s wicked cackle came from inside the photograph club’s room.

“These workers at least know how to adapt to a situation.” Chen Ge returned to the back of the group, and he noticed the other visitors were still looking at him. “Don’t just stand there—we need to hurry to find the doctor. Just now, the student said that it’s not safe to use the staircase, and we are too close to the stairs now. Perhaps there might be things that crawl out from there later. After all, you saw the movie earlier; the ghost first appeared at the staircase.”

With a calm tone and sharp analysis, after pushing the senior to his death, Chen Ge’s ability to remain so collected left a deep impression on the other visitors.

“You are right; we are too close to the staircase now.” Lee Yuan was slightly afraid. He looked at the stairs behind him and the dark corridor ahead of him. He did not dare move forward—no one knew what kind of monster they would run into. He nudged forward a few steps before stopping. He turned back to ask Chen Ge for help. “Big brother, how about you lead the way for us?”

“Would you like to take up the rear? Actually, that is more dangerous than walking ahead. The end of the group is closest to the stairs, and who knows, you might just find an extra person walking behind you?”

“That’s enough! I’ll lead at the front then!” Lee Yuan grabbed Lee

Xue's hand, and Lee Xue hugged Lee Yuan's waist tightly. This couple appeared like they had entered a mine zone and walked very slowly. Seeing this, Chen Ge shook his head slightly.

These visitors were all normal visitors. If they were visiting his Haunted House, they would not have survived a one-star scenario, so it was normal for them to be afraid of everything.

Lights were installed on the wall at every interval of ten meters. The lights flickered, but there did not seem to be a rhythm behind it, which added to the creepy atmosphere. Nightmare Academy created a good atmosphere, but it was still leagues behind Chen Ge's Haunted House. Removing his backpack, Chen Ge glanced at the time and decided not to waste time anymore. "If I wrap this up early, I might be able to catch the afternoon train back."

Taking out the ballpoint pen wrapped in cellophane tape, Chen Ge placed it inside his shirt pocket. For this kind of small scenario, the Pen Spirit was more than enough.

"Come, I will lead the way." Turning on the red flashlight, Chen Ge walked alone at the front. The visitors at the back needed to start running to keep up with him.

"There are two cameras installed on either side of the corridor. In the middle of the corridor, there is a camera that can turn a hundred and eighty degrees. These are the only three that I've discovered so far. If there are no other cameras, the blind spot should be these few places," Chen Ge mumbled to himself as he walked down the corridor. The visitors did not understand his action at all. They could not figure why someone would pay attention to security cameras' locations inside a Haunted House. Perhaps this was how a true expert attempt a Haunted House.

Chen Ge walked for a long time but did not come across any rooms that resembled a clinic or health center. He could only turn around and knocked on the doors one by one.

"Is anyone in? We're here for a physical examination." When he knocked on the third door, footsteps came, and once the wooden door was open, a thick stench of disinfectant leaked out. A doctor in a white coat stood at the door. He looked at the visitors and asked with surprise, "Why are there so few of you? Where is the senior that is supposed to be leading you?"

The visitors all turned to look at Chen Ge, but none of them dared to say that it was this person who had pushed the senior into the haunted room.

“The senior was captured by ghost, and he told us to find you on our own,” Chen Ge explained calmly.

“Is that so?” The doctor was confused. “Why don’t you all come in first. For the sake of privacy, please occupy one cubicle each. You can come out after filling out the form provided.”

The door opened, and the visitors were given the view of a bed inside the clinic. It was covered up with a blanket, but a slender arm dangled from one end of the bed. The cupboard at the back of the room had a saw, a syringe about ten times its normal size, a black awl, and a scary-looking hammer that was only slightly smaller than Doctor Skull-cracker’s hammer.

“Doctor, what are these things for?” Chen Ge walked toward the cupboard but was quickly held back by the doctor. “Those are for the physical examination.”

The doctor chuckled darkly and turned to study the few visitors with dark intentions. “Please enter the cubicles to fill up the form first. After the examination is done, you’ll officially start your student life here.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge studied the hammer inside the cupboard and involuntarily rubbed his hands together. He was the first to enter the cubicle.

The cubicle was very small, with a form and a pen hanging from a wall. Chen Ge picked up the form to study it. "Please select the one that you are not afraid of."

The first row offered the choice between darkness and claustrophobia. "Is this some kind of psychological test to see if the participants suffer from any kind of psychological illnesses?"

Chen Ge was not afraid of darkness or being trapped inside a small space. He was about to randomly select an option when a thought flashed through his mind. Does Nightmare Academy design a specific route based on the answers given here to scare the visitors at the maximum level?

After giving it some thought, Chen Ge circled the word darkness. With Yin Yang Vision, darkness did not affect him at all. The second row was two pictures, one of a spider and the other of a snake.

The third row was a choice between mad murderer and wronged spirit. The fourth row had two pictures of carcass mannequins; one was headless, and the other was covered in blood.

Chen Ge answered all the questions quickly. He opened the door of the cubicle and walked out holding the form. Chen Ge used less than half a minute. The doctor was just sending in the last visitor, so he had not even had time to turn around.

"Do you have any other tests that I need to take?" Chen Ge placed the form on the table and stared at the hammer and saw inside the cupboard. Probably out of safety concerns, all these things were tied down with ropes and could not be taken down easily.

"You're done already?" The doctor appeared to be thinking, and Chen Ge's sudden appearance gave him quite a fright.

“Is that so surprising?” Chen Ge saw something bulging in the doctor’s pocket—it seemed to be in the shape of a remote control. There should be some kind of unique trap inside the cubicles, but since Chen Ge had come out so soon, the doctor had not had chance to trigger it.

“I advise you to read through the form carefully. Each question has its own unique meaning. Your choices will help me determine your personality, and with that, we can draft the best system to help you,” the doctor said in a kind and worried tone. When the two conversed, the other visitors left the cubicles one after another until only the second cubicle to the last remained closed.

“It has been three minutes already. What is taking her so long?” Lee Yuan hugged Xue Li’s arm—this couple stuck together like glue.

The doctor was getting impatient as well. He knocked on the door lightly. “Miss, are you done yet?”

There was no answer. The doctor knocked again before the door creaked open. The woman with few words walked out from the cubicle and handed the form to the doctor. The form was rather wet. The doctor looked down involuntarily and realized that the form was wet from tears.

The woman had answered the first few questions honestly, but starting from the fourth question, some kind of trauma seemed to have overwhelmed the woman, and she had scribbled ‘Death’ many times on the picture. With Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge saw that all the words were written on the picture with the headless mannequin. He wondered if this was a plot inside the Haunted House or an accident.

The doctor hesitated before he folded the form and placed it inside his pocket. “Thank you for the forms. Now, please follow the senior who led you here to join the welcoming ceremony.”

“That senior has already been captured by a ghost. He is still trapped at the photography club,” Chen Ge reminded him. He realized that the doctor was being rather absent-minded; he had forgotten the fact that the senior had already been captured.

“Oh, right. In that case, I’ll lead you there.” The doctor walked to the door and held the doorknob. “I’ve scanned all of your expressions, and no one has any problems physically or mentally. Once you walk out of this door, you will have officially become the students of Nightmare Academy. As the school’s counsellor, I will give you one last piece of advice. Do not open any random door at the school, and do not trust everything a stranger tells you.”

The door opened. The doctor switched on his flashlight and walked ahead with his head lowered. The visitors followed behind him closely. They took a few steps when the visitors heard the sound of nails scratching the door coming from behind them.

Turning back to look, there was a girl wearing a school costume standing at the corner leading to the stairs. Her face was as pale as paper, and she had a creepy smile on her face. Her arm waved mechanically at the group of visitors.

The dim lights at the corner flickered. The girl appeared and disappeared in the darkness. Her lips were open, but no voice came out. It seemed like she was saying something.

“There’s a ghost behind us!” The fatty, Lee Bo, screamed as he squeezed through the group and huddled behind the doctor. When the others saw the girl, they all moved subconsciously faster, and Chen Ge was left at the back of the group again. He turned around to stare at the girl. When other people were scared by the girl’s scary make-up, Chen Ge was studying the girl’s lips.

“Run.”

The girl seemed to be giving the visitors hints, but other than Chen Ge, no one saw it.

“Why should we be careful of adults?” Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of a detail. The senior that showed up earlier had been wearing a uniform that was conspicuously too small for his size. “Is the senior not a student but an adult?”

Stopping, Chen Ge stared at the girl at the corner, calculating the distance between himself and the girl. “If I rush ahead, I can cover this distance in under five seconds. Before the doctor can even react, I will have joined the girl and become a part of the ghosts.”

Compared to the black phone’s mission, visiting another Haunted House was a holiday, and Chen Ge gradually found the joy. “I’ve already paid for the ticket, so as long as it is within an acceptable range, I can attempt this any way that I want. To expand the visitor's creativity and to help them unwind, that is the purpose of a Haunted House."

The plot that originally only had one path was forcibly made into an open ending by Chen Ge. He became more excited. "I've been too busy dealing with the black phone lately. Today, I should try to relax and unwind."

His pupils narrowed, and Chen Ge stared straightly at the girl at the corner as a warm smile appeared on his face.

Some powder dropped from the pale face. The girl suddenly shivered when she saw the smile on Chen Ge's face. She staggered involuntarily backward and then disappeared into the darkness.

"She's so shy. A real ghost wouldn't act that way." Carrying the backpack, his hands inside his pocket, Chen Ge walked down the dim corridor, but he had never found things so bright.

"The doctor represents the darkness in the adults' heart, working to hide the secret in the school; the girl at the corner represents the ghosts, not liking to be seen and disappearing once I make any move. Since neither party represents the force of good, how about I turn myself into the third party at this phantom school?"

Chapter 733 - Don't Play Games in the Classroom

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Most plot-heavy Haunted Houses would arrange roles for the visitors to play. That way, they could immerse themselves into the plot more easily, like at Nightmare Academy. In this Haunted House, all the visitors were treated as new students enrolling at the school, and they would adopt the new student identity to slowly unravel the ghost stories at the school.

Theoretically speaking, Chen Ge's identity was also a new student, but he did not have the understanding or preparation to be a new student. Other visitors focused on solving the puzzles and clearing the scenario, but he was focusing on how to become a new nightmare.

Actually, Chen Ge did not wish to go so far to Xin Hai to do something like that, but Nightmare Academy had forced his hand. Walking down the dark and eerie corridor, Chen Ge was very satisfied with the building. Situated on Xin Hai's busiest merchant street, and due to its special geographical situation, it ensured that the place would not be hit by sunlight no matter the time of day, which meant that it would have little to no influence on his employees. The interior was very spacious as well. There were six floors in total, and that was more than enough to fit in many Haunted House scenarios.

"If I'm going to open a branch in Xin Hai, this place is the most suitable." Of course, Nightmare Academy would not hand the location to Chen Ge freely, so he was merely daydreaming and planning ahead.

"Hey, you at the back! Try not to get left behind!" The visitors had walked quite a distance away when they realized that Chen Ge was lagging behind, and one of them called to urge him along. With the doctor leading the way, the group arrived at a large classroom.

"Go in now. The new student welcoming ceremony will be held inside this classroom. If you're lucky, you might even get to meet the headmaster.” The doctor left. The visitors stood outside the door, watching him walk away.

“He’s leaving just like that?” Xue Li hugged Lee Yuan and grumbled under her breath. “Isn’t he going to give us some hints?”

The few visitors stood in the corridor, and no one dared to be the first to enter. Without planning it, their eyes gradually moved to fall on Chen Ge.

Other than Lee Yuan, Chen Ge was the only adult male there.

“The way I visit a Haunted House is different from what you’d imagine. If you wish to rely me, then you’d better be prepared to run,” Chen Ge warned them kindly. He had a natural affection toward those who dared to attempt Haunted Houses. Perhaps it was a kind of an occupational habit.

Pushing the door open, a thick stench of blood hit them. The welcoming ceremony for the new students was also the start of nightmare!

Old tables were arranged in the classroom, and many mannequins were positioned in the seats. There was a working projector placed on the podium, and a dead person’s model hung from the blackboard.

The closed windows, strange lights, and the eerie background music created a perfect atmosphere of terror.

“The scent coming from this model is ninety percent similar to a real body. How did they manage to do this? Did they splash animal blood on the model?” It was two different worlds inside and outside the door. After Chen Ge entered the classroom, his tone changed. “No wonder this place managed to become the biggest Haunted House at Xin Hai.”

After Chen Ge got into the classroom, Xue Li planned to follow, but she only took the first step when she was suddenly pulled back by Lee Yuan.

“What are you doing? You gave me such a fright!” Xue Li placed her palm over her chest and glared at Lee Yuan. Lee Yuan winked multiple times, and after pulling Xue Li aside, he whispered into her ear. “Didn’t you hear what he said earlier? The man said that the smell coming from this model is ninety percent similar to the real one.”

“And? What does that have to do with anything?” Xue Li still had not caught onto what her boyfriend was trying to express.

“My dear, that can only mean that he has interacted with a real dead body before!” Lee Yuan was shaking in his boots. Taking on the largest Haunted House at Xin Hai was already a big challenge, and now he realized there were a few strange people in his group. What was he to do?

“You have a point.” Xue Li was a more innocent person and did not jump to the worst possible scenario immediately. “Perhaps he’s a doctor. I hear some surgeons come to Haunted Houses to relax after completing difficult surgeries. We’re lucky this time to have grouped up with a professional.”

“I hope you’re right.” Lee Yuan and Xue Li found themselves lagging behind since the rest had moved on without them; they were the only ones left in the corridor. The lamps down the corridor suddenly turned on. Lee Yuan did not mind it that much. He was still deliberating over whether to follow Chen Ge or not. At that moment, the lamps nearer to them switched on, and a shadow flashed across their eyes.

A cold draft moved through their hair, and Lee Yuan suddenly sneezed. He lifted his head subconsciously and saw strands of hair dangling from the ceiling. In a corner where the ceiling was poked through, there was the face of a child. With pale skin and half-open lips, the girl seemed to have something to say to Lee Yuan. Through the hole in the ceiling, she tossed a ball of paper toward Lee Yuan.

“Help! There’s someone there!” Lee Yuan screamed, and his legs started to carry him away. He was about to pull Xue Li into the classroom when the lamp closest to them came on. Just three meters away from them stood a monster about two meters tall!

The skull was pierced through by nails, and the clothes were wet with blood. The exposed skin was covered in scary-looking wounds. His fingers were decaying, and he was holding a black and red rope in his palm.

“What the f*ck! When did such a large monster appear?” Lee Yuan and Xue Li charged into the classroom without hesitating. Then they slammed the classroom door shut. “Come and help! There’s a monster outside the door! Help block the door!”

The visitors inside the classroom were already nervous. They were carefully investigating the room. The sudden loud commotion coming from outside spooked them. They were not scared by the props inside the Haunted House but by their own allies.

Bang!

Something outside the classroom rammed heavily into the door. Lee Yuan used all his might to hold the door back, and veins pulsed on his forehead. "Come and help me!"

Chen Ge reacted the fastest. He ran over to push the door shut. "Did you guys trigger some kind of trap?"

"No, I swear, nothing like that happened! We were just standing outside the door! We have no idea when this thing appeared!" Lee Yuan's face was red.

"I understand it now. The appearance of this monster is to ensure that the visitors will follow the designated plot. If you stay in one place too long, the monster will appear." Chen Ge helped to close the door, and he grabbed the broom to lock the door in place.

"Now that the monster has blocked the door, how are we supposed to leave?" Even though the door was temporarily closed, the monster did not leave, and he kept knocking against the door like a crazy.

"The clues should be inside this room. It could be a talisman to chase the monster away, or it could be a secret path or even a weapon." Chen Ge looked at the door that might break down at any moment. He was so calm that even his teammates felt afraid. "The terror level is rising now. This is more like it."

"Hey! Come take a look at this!" When Chen Ge and Lee Yuan were closing the door, Chui Ming discovered something. He pointed at the projector; the screen next to the blackboard was showing a short video.

Four male students entered a dark classroom. Each of them occupied a corner of the room, and as they counted down the numbers, they moved along the walls. They walked around and around when suddenly a fifth person appeared on screen.

Since all five of them were wearing the same uniform, Chui Ming had a hard time telling who the extra person was.

Chapter 734: This Is Different from the Script!

Chen Ge glanced at the five children on screen, and he instantly recognized this rather famous supernatural game.

“This is called the four corners game. At midnight, four people are tasked with standing in the four corners of a dark, closed room and then walk along the walls in a clockwise fashion.

“When the first person reaches the first corner, they have to pat the shoulder of the next person lightly. Since there are four corners in the room and four people playing the game, when the people in the classroom start to move, there will be a corner that is left empty.

“When you pass the empty corner, cough once, and then you can continue on down toward the next corner.”

“How do you know this so well?” Chui Ming was surprised. He was holding a diary that he had found next to the projector, and the game’s rules were written on the first page.

“The version that I gave is the standard mode. If you wish to make it more interesting, you can cover your eyes and call out your name, then ask the name of the person standing there when you reach the corner. This way, it’ll be far easier for a fifth person to appear.” Chen Ge extended his hand to grab the diary, and Chui Ming subconsciously darted away. “What? Don’t you trust me? This Haunted House is so scary. Only by working together will we be able to survive.”

“It’s not that I don’t trust you. I just think it’s not that normal for a visitor to know the rules of such a scary game to its exact details.” Chui Ming seemed to have been left with some scars when he last visited Nightmare Academy, so he had a deep caution toward anyone.

“How is that not normal?” Reaching into his pocket, Chen Ge pressed on the black phone. “This kind of famous supernatural game is not that scary because many people have attempted it before. Actually, I have some rare games in mind, would you like to give it a try? This place could not be more suitable.”

Chui Ming gulped as he looked around. The classroom door was jostled by the monster that awaited outside, the model before the blackboard swayed back and forth, and the mannequins at the seats carried scary expressions; was it really suitable to play any kind of game in that kind of environment?

“Fine, I’m not going to joke with you anymore. If I’m not mistaken, Nightmare Academy’s welcoming ceremony involves playing this game, and we should be able to move on after playing it.” Chen Ge was familiar with the tricks because he was in the same business.

“The ghost is about to come in, and you still have the time to joke, huh? Let’s get a move on.” Lee Yuan and Xue Li walked over. They made sure to stay away from the door.

“First, there is one thing that I need to correct. The entity that is knocking against the door now is a monster, not a ghost; they are completely different things.” Chen Ge took the diary from Chui Ming. He opened it and placed it on the podium. He stood before the blackboard, and the model with the horrible smell swayed behind him like a pendulum.

“This diary is unnamed, but from the handwriting, it seems to belong to a student. It is worth noting that the handwriting in this diary is uniform, meaning that there were probably multiple owners,” Chen Ge analyzed easily. “My observation is that the handwriting changes after completing each game. Does this mean that the people who participated in the game died after writing in this diary?”

Chen Ge spoke very fast. With the training from the black phone, the man was calmer the scarier the environment was. “Combining the video on screen and the diary, let me reconstruct the situation for you. The four new students didn’t listen to their teacher and entered this school at night to play the four corners game. During the game, an extra person appeared, and then all four of them disappeared. So, we would need to finish what they started and experience this game ourselves.”

Two hours per visit... Chen Ge planned to narrow that down to less than half an hour. He nudged the model away. “Excuse me.”

While the other visitors were still reading through the diary, Chen Ge moved to the corner of the classroom and discovered a ring attached to the wall. He pulled on it, and the blackboard shifted silently.

“There’s some kind of mechanism installed here. I get it now.” Chen Ge turned to yell at the other visitors. “There should be four rings in this classroom, one in each corner. Four of us need to stand in the four corners and then pull on them at the same time. After that, we should be able to escape.”

Chen Ge, who had been through a lot, had far greater thinking and reaction speeds than a normal visitor. Plus, he had his wealth of experience to rely on. Basically, with a little clue, he could reconstruct the whole story.

Before the visitors understood what was happening, Chen Ge already came out with the solution to the problem. The few visitors moved to the corners of the classroom with some suspicion. After they pulled on the rings together, the blackboard gradually rose to show the hidden path behind it. The monster outside the door heard this and knocked on the door even harder.

“Quick, let’s go!” Lee Yuan and Xue Li stood at the corner closest to the hidden path. Neither of them wanted to stay there any longer, so once the hidden path appeared, they let go of the ring and ran toward the blackboard. However, once they did so, the blackboard started to slide back into place.

“Four of us have to pull on the rings at the same time to keep the blackboard lifted.” Chen Ge understood it then. The reason that Nightmare Academy designed this was not to scare the visitors but to split them up. After all, visiting a Haunted House alone would be far scarier than visiting it with nine other people.

“I believe that we will have to split up. Four of us have to stay back to pull on the rings, and the rest will go in.” After Chen Ge said that, the others looked at each other, and it was clear that none of them wanted to stay.

“How about the three of us stay behind?” The little fatty, Lee Bo, said, “Ladies first, after all.”

Lee Yuan and Xue Li were a couple, so naturally, they would not split up. Thus, the final candidates to stay back were Chen Ge and the three students. The four stood in the four corners, and the mechanism was activated. Once Lee Yuan and the rest got into the hidden path, something did happen.

The blackboard came down suddenly, creating a loud crash as it hit the floor.

Someone has let go of their rings?

Narrowing his eyes, with his Yin Yang Vision, darkness did not affect Chen Ge that much. He looked around the other corners and saw that all three students had let go of the rings. They stood facing the wall with their heads lowered and their fingers knocking on the wall lightly.

So, these three students are the Haunted House's actors.

The truth dawned on Chen Ge; he had been isolated.

The four visitors that came at the end are probably all their workers.

He was not angry or afraid. After all, Chen Ge had done much worse to his own visitors.

After giving it some thought, Chen Ge opened his mouth to say, "What happened? Why did the blackboard fall? Which of you let go? Are you guys still there?"

There was a trace of surprise and fear in his voice, giving the impression that he was trying hard to keep calm.

"This is Lee Bo, I'm here! Now what should we do? It is so dark in here; I don't dare move!"

From the corner closest to the blackboard came Lee Bo's voice. His lips were wide open, and he screamed with a voice that was almost breaking. When he spoke, Lee Bo looked in Chen Ge's direction, and the joy of revenge was shining in his eyes.

"Don't be afraid! Stand where you are, I'm coming to get you!" Chen Ge's voice was full of concern and warmth like he was worried for the boys' safety. "Please don't panic, I am trying to figure out a solution! Who is still here? Please speak up, let me know your exact location!"

"I'm standing next to the diary. When I was looking through it earlier, there was an extra notice at the bottom of the rules. If you fail to find the exit, we can play this second game to locate the new exit." Chui Ming's voice came from opposite Lee Bo. The two of them stood in the corners closest to the blackboard.

“Looks like we need to play this second game to escape. Later, I need you to follow my orders. No matter what happens, remember to stay calm!” Repaying their vengeance with kindness, Chen Ge reminded them, “When the real game starts, there might be an extra participant. That should be the Haunted House’s actor, so whatever you do, do not panic.”

Chapter 735 - Why Are You Behind Me?

Chapter 735: Why Are You Behind Me?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The four visitors occupied the four corners of the classroom. The surroundings were dark, and there was no light at all. Background music that came from an unknown corner drifted into their ears and would have caused any visitors present to break out in a cold sweat.

“If you’re all ready, we will start playing this game.” Chen Ge had attempted many supernatural games before, but this was his first time playing it with strangers.

Out of safety concerns, Chen Ge reminded the other participants again, “This Haunted House never ever sees the sun, so it gathers a very heavy Yin energy, and that attracts the presence of many strange things.

“Playing a game like this in a Haunted House is actually a very dangerous activity. When I arrived at this place, I noticed that Nightmare Academy is located at the Yin corner of the merchant street, and it is also located at the back end of the whole building. This is Yin on top of Yin. To make matters worse, there is a taller skyscraper built next to this building blocking the only source of sunlight to Nightmare Academy. This kind of geographical location is incredibly scary.”

“We are just students. Can you please not make thing sound so scary?” Lee Bo pulled down the zipper of his top and exposed the school uniform underneath. It was identical to the uniform that the senior wore.

“What I’m saying is very simple. Playing a supernatural game in a Haunted House might cause us to really run into those things. If you’re afraid, you’d better leave this room as fast as you can, because certain things might not be a trap arranged by the Haunted House but something else completely...”

“I know, but can we please start the game already? This place is too creepy. I don't want to stay here any longer." Xiao Gou was in the corner opposite from Chen Ge. When he said that, there was a strange smile on his face.

"Okay, then I'll start first." Chen Ge walked toward Chui Ming while touching the wall. Based on the rules, he needed to reach Chui Ming's location. Slowly moving forward, to make it appear more real, he even closed his eyes.

His fingers touched the corner of the wall. Chen Ge opened his eyes, and a pale face was floating in the dark. Chen Ge reached out to touch the shoulder of the man before him. Chen Ge was moving in a clockwise motion; he was supposed to move to Chui Ming, Chui Ming was supposed to move to Lee Bo, and Lee Bo was supposed to move to Xiao Gou.

Chui Ming did not speak. He followed the blackboard and moved to Lee Bo's corner. When he reached Lee Bo, he patted Lee Bo's left shoulder and then right shoulder. This appeared to be their signal.

Chen Ge realized that once Chui Ming did that, Lee Bo's tensed shoulders conspicuously relaxed. The game progressed with ease, but when they did the second round, something changed.

Xiao Gou patted Chen Ge's shoulder. He occupied the corner when Chen Ge had originally been. According to the rules, Chen Ge should have been moving to Chui Ming's corner while the rest stood where they were. However, Chen Ge was only halfway through the motion when Xiao Guo suddenly moved to follow behind Chen Ge!

Not only him, both Chui Ming and Lee Bo also started to move at the same time. The three of worked well together. Their movement was light and did not make any sound. When Chen Ge arrived at Chui Ming's corner, Chui Ming had already left, so the corner was unoccupied.

If Chen Ge was a normal person, they would have been overwhelmed by anxiety because, theoretically speaking, there should have been someone waiting in this corner. Xiao Gou maintained his distance from Chen Ge. In his mind, he could already see how panicked Chen Ge was. This new student welcoming ceremony was specially designed for Chen Ge—a normal visitor would not have been blessed with such an experience.

Darkness was human's primal fear. Without the ability to see and hear, with the change in the rules, no one would be able to maintain their calmness. Xiao Gou looked at the shadow in front of him with anticipation. He repeated the script in his mind as he arranged his expression and prepared to jump forward. However, at that moment, something that he did not expect occurred.

Chen Ge fished out a ballpoint pen from his shirt pocket and stopped where he was for a second.

“What is he doing it?” After a moment, Chen Ge straightened himself and stood in the corner. Then Xiao Gou saw a blurry figure leave Chen Ge’s corner and move toward the next corner.

“There was someone in that corner?” Xiao Gou stopped moving instantly. His first reaction was that the two other actors had made a mistake—they had strayed from the script. “So, what should I do now?”

Chen Ge stopped at Chui Ming’s original corner. Chui Ming and Lee Bo did not know what had happened. Following the plan, they had already moved to the next corner. Chui Ming and Lee Bo were waiting for Chen Ge’s scream. They had disliked Chen Ge for a long time. Now that the man had volunteered to walk into their trap, of course, they would not let him go so easily.

At least that was their plan, but they waited for a long time and did not hear Chen Ge’s scream. Chui Ming turned back to look. He still had not understood where the problem was when someone patted him on his shoulders. His hair stood on end, and Chui Ming instantly leaned against the wall.

“What’s going on? Has Chen Ge moved along without staying in the corner?” Looking at the shadow behind him, Chui Ming could only discern a rough outline. This person’s size was completely different from Chen Ge’s. He was too short and too thin.

Of all of them, only Xiao Gou matched this size.

“Brother Gou?” Chui Ming called after the shadow softly, but there was no answer. Chui Ming had no idea what the problem was. With confusion, he continued to move forward to where Lee Bo was.

When Lee Bo saw the tittering shadow moving toward him, he was given quite a shock as well. With no other option, he moved toward Xiao Gou’s corner.

Chen Ge was not scared. His teammates had made some mistake, so Xiao Gou was stunned. After giving it some thought, he decided to move back to his original location and pretended like nothing had happened.

After all, there were night-cams in the classroom. If there was a problem, the technicians would have informed them through messages already. Before joining the group, they had been given Bluetooth earphones. If needed, they could put it to use—this thing was one of the necessary items for a Haunted House worker.

Xiao Gou moved backward, and Lee Bo moved toward his corner. The two of them moved at almost the same speed. In the dark, to prevent himself from being exposed, Xiao Gou moved very lightly. He was being very careful, walking backward with his hand on the wall. When he was about to reach his corner, his finger suddenly touched another person's hand!

His arm shrunk back as if electrified. He did not expect there to be an extra person coming from behind him!

“Brother Gou?”

Lee Bo was quite shocked as well. He had just assumed the spot when someone touched his hand.

“Why are you behind me?” Xiao Gou was surprised. This was not the first time that they had cooperated, but this was the first time that something like that had happened.

“But I’m supposed to be behind you!” After hearing Xiao Gou’s voice, Lee Bo calmed down quite a bit. After all, this proved that he was dealing with a human being and not something else.

“That’s not wrong, but...” Xiao Gou looked at the corner before him and lowered his voice to a whisper. “This is not how the script is supposed to go, right?”

“I know, but you have to ask Chui Ming about that. I only walked toward you because he came to me.” Lee Bo was confused, having no idea what was happening.

“Looks like the problem lies with Chui Ming. Chen Ge is just ahead; he hasn’t moved on, and he has no reason to move on his own.” Xiao Gou fished the Bluetooth earpiece out from his pocket. He was going to put it in but was afraid of being discovered by Chen Ge. After giving it some thought, he signaled for Lee Bo to calm down as he headed toward the corner where Chen Ge was. With his hands on the wall, Xiao Gou sought his way through the darkness. When he reached Chen Ge’s corner, he became more cautious as he reached out to touch Chen Ge on his shoulder.

The height hasn’t changed. This person should be Chen Ge, but how come his body temperature is so low? This is so strange.

“Xiao Gou?” Before Xiao Gou could come to a decision, Chen Ge suddenly called his name.

“What... what’s wrong?” Pulling his hand back, Xiao Gou stumbled through a reply.

“Something’s not right. When I walked over here earlier, someone was standing in the corner. She was smaller than Chui Ming, but I don’t think it was Lee Bo. I suspect the Haunted House’s workers have snuck into our ranks.” Chen Ge sucked in a cold breath. His voice felt like it was squeezed through his teeth, and it sounded very scary.

“One extra person? The Haunted House workers might have joined us?” Xiao Gou stared at Chen Ge’s blurry face, and his mind was blank. Are you telling three Haunted House workers that we might have been infiltrated by the Haunted House’s workers? Is this some kind of joke?

“I’m not lying to you, be careful,” Chen Ge said seriously, and this flustered Xiao Gou. Even he started to wonder if the leader had sent in reinforcements to help them.

“Okay.” Xiao Gou nodded. When Chen Ge moved to the next corner, he silently took out the earpiece from his pocket and put it in.

“Can you hear me?” With his face against the wall, Xiao Gou used his clothes to shield the light from the phone screen, and he whispered to ask his colleagues at the surveillance room.

“Yes.” A middle-aged man’s voice came back through the device. “I was about to call you. Why didn’t you follow the script? Do you know how much trouble I went through to come up with this system? It’ll be able to enhance the horror factor of the game to its maximum. Stop playing around and get back to your stations and follow the script this time.”

“Boss, there appears to be some problem here. Have you sent in other people to help us?”

“I don’t think so.” The middle-aged man was confused and was baffled by Xiao Gou’s words. “Stop talking lest you get exposed. If there’s some accident, I’ll be first to inform you.”

Xiao Gou was still worried, so he added, “Boss, I’m not sure where everyone is now. Can you see where everyone is through the camera?”

“How can you not remember something so simple after so many rehearsals?” The man was getting impatient. “You are now on the right side of the blackboard, the one nearest to the door. Lee Bo is on the left side of the blackboard, and Chui Ming is in the furthest corner of the classroom. Chen Ge is moving. Oh, he’s now stopped in the corner closest to the backdoor. Also, how did you all screw this up? You’ve finished a round, and there are still people in all four corners.”

“Boss, don’t worry, now that I know everyone’s location, we’ll follow the script again.” Just as Xiao Gou said that, footsteps came from the last row of the classroom. The person did not attempt to hide the sound of his footsteps at all.

“Is someone moving?” To add to the atmosphere, there was no light in the classroom. Xiao Gou could only see a shadow moving at the back of the classroom.

“No one is moving. All four of you are standing in the corners; no one is moving.” The middle-aged man looked at the surveillance and told Xiao Gou what he saw. He was doing that out of kindness, but he had no idea the depth of horror his little update had brought to Xiao Gou.

Footsteps were very audible inside the quiet classroom—there was indeed someone moving in the class!

“Boss, I’m confirming with you again, are you sure that you haven’t sent another person here?”

“No, how many times do I need to tell you that all four of you are standing in the four corners? No one has moved. How come you sound so weird today? Are you not feeling well? Is it because your mother has been lecturing you again?” The middle-aged was getting impatient.

In the camera, all four people were occupying their individual corners, but there came footsteps in the classroom!

It could only mean that there was a fifth person in the classroom! Who could it be? When did they get in?

Xiao Gou’s mind was fraying. He could not help but be reminded by what Chen Ge had said at the start of the game. Playing this sort of game inside a Haunted House was dangerous, because you might just summon the real thing.

“We’ve attempted this many times before, and there haven’t been any problems, but this time...”

If one walked along the riverbank often, one’s feet were eventually going to get wet. Xiao Gou was about to update the situation to the man in the security room when the man spoke ahead of him.

“Eh? What’s going on with Chui Ming?” the middle-aged man said with surprise. “Chen Ge is still standing at his corner. He hasn’t moved to Chui Ming yet, so why has he started to move ahead?”

When the middle-aged man said that, it was around the same time that the previous footsteps stopped, and the new shuffling footsteps began.

The three of us have cooperated many times. Chui Ming wouldn't have moved ahead unless someone patted him on his shoulders!

When that thought entered his mind, Xiao Gou's forehead broke out in cold sweat. It was true that he worked at a Haunted House, but it did not mean that he was fearless.

"Boss, who is occupying the corner Chui Ming had earlier?" Xiao Gou rubbed his palms, which were slick with sweat, on his shirt.

"What is wrong with your head today? I can see clearly from the surveillance that the corner is currently unoccupied."

"You can't see it on the camera?" Xiao Gou was really panicking. He was young in real life, which was why he had been given the role of a high schooler. "In other words, a ghost is standing in that corner."

"What ghost? Are you trying to pull my leg? Aren't three of you ghosts, or have you lost your mind after playing a visitor for too long?" The middle-aged man had no idea what Xiao Gou was talking about. "Quick, go back and follow the script. I'm going to have the recording of Chen Ge being scared, and I'm going to edit it into mini clips and spread them on all major websites. That'll teach him a lesson!"

"Yes, boss, I'll try my best." Xiao Gou forced himself to agree. He looked at Chui Ming, who was still moving in the dark. After a moment's hesitation, he took out his phone to send Chui Ming a message.

Chui Ming was on his way to find Lee Bo, and suddenly, his phone vibrated. He took out his phone and glanced at it while using his clothes to shield the light. It was a message from Xiao Gou, and it read, "The ghost is behind you!"

It was a simple question, but there were endless ways to interpret it. Chui Ming looked behind him, and there was a person standing in the corner that he had just vacated. It looked rather thin and lanky, reminding him of Xiao Gou.

Have Chen Ge and Xiao Gou swapped locations? I'm an actor, and in the Haunted House, actors are ghosts. So, this message means that Xiao Gou is now behind me, doesn't it?

Confused, Chui Ming stopped moving. From his perspective, it was Xiao Gou who strayed from the script first, and there was nothing that he could do but continue with the mistake.

What is he trying to tell me?

For the sake of safety, Chui Ming reached into his pocket to find his earpiece. Before he could do anything, footsteps came from behind him. He held the phone in his hand and watched the figure come close. Very soon, Xiao Gou's second message came.

“Don't stop! We've attracted a real ghost this time!” After reading the message, with the weak light from the phone screen, Chui Ming lifted his head. He still could not see the face of the person behind him, but he managed to discern that the person was wearing a different school uniform form from the students of Nightmare Academy, and four words were emblazoned around the chest area.

“Mu Yang High School?”

Why is this person wearing the uniform of another school? Chui Ming was stunned. Mu Yang High School? Haven't heard of that before. Is it some other visitor who wandered in here? But how come I never heard the leader say anything about this?

When Chui Ming stood there thinking about it, the footsteps echoed in the dark again, and the blurry shadow slowly approached him. The temperature around him seemed to drop lower. The cold draft from the air-conditioner crawled into his collar and caused the hair on Chui Ming's back to stand.

"Brother Gou, is that you?" No one answered Chui Ming. He took in a deep breath. A kind of indescribable pressure grew on the young man's shoulders, and his body felt like turning and running.

What is going on?

He was inside the Haunted House, and he was one of the employed workers, but at that moment, he felt like he was one of the visitors.

His eyes bulged widely. The more he assessed the situation, the more flustered he felt. The person that was following behind him was definitely not Xiao Gou. After all, she was wearing the school uniform of a different school!

The unknown was the scariest, and that was exactly the situation that Chui Ming found himself in. He knew that someone was following behind him, but he had absolutely no idea who that someone was. He was playing out a familiar scene, but due to the stranger behind him, everything turned that much creepier.

Darkness swallowed Chui Ming like a wave. His chest rose and fell unevenly, and his breathing came up short. It felt like he was the only one left inside the classroom. The other visitors and colleagues fell away, and all he could see and sense around him was an endless stretch of darkness.

After a person had gotten used to a colorful world, when they were placed back into complete darkness, there would be a temporarily panic like they had been forcibly yanked away from their original world. Chui Ming, who had scared many other visitors in this scenario, was given the bitter taste of his own medicine.

The phone in his palm vibrated again, a sign that someone had sent Chui Ming another message. Suppressing the fear in his heart, Chui Ming used his body to block the light from the screen, and he sneaked a glance at the message. "Put on the earpiece!"

It was still Xiao Gou who had sent the message, and the message was very short, only four words long.

If you have something to tell me, why don't you just come out and say it? This is only making me even more panicked! Chui Ming grumbled internally. As he held his phone in one hand, his other hand reached into his pocket to search for his earpiece. Just as his fingers closed over the device and were about to place it inside his ear, there came a cold draft blowing on his neck.

He whipped his body around and the light from the phone screen lit up the space behind him. Chui Ming did not lower his head. At his eye level, Chui Ming did not see any person behind him. What he saw was instead a pair of old female shoes, and the thing that touched his neck earlier was one of the shoelaces.

Why is this pair of shoes floating behind me?

With his eyes following the shoes, Chui Ming's neck slowly lifted to find the shoes' owner. He saw a black shadow almost standing on his shoulders! When he lifted his head to look at the person, said person was also looking back at him!

His heart appeared to have skipped a beat, and his entire person petrified. He held the wall, and his brain tried to use the last of its rationality to explain the whole situation. However, even as his brain turned and turned, he failed to come up with any valid explanation.

The abandoned classroom, darkness so thick that he could not see his fingers, a person standing on his shoulders, any two of those could scare a person witless, and Chui Ming was lucky enough to experience all three of them at once.

His neck that was tilted upward was frozen. Chui Ming opened his mouth to scream for help, but due to extreme fear, the words that came out from his lips sounded jumbled and mangled. No one around him understood what he was trying to express, and they were about to ask him to clarify when they saw Chui Ming blast forward like a rocket.

The script, the actor, the Haunted House—everything was tossed out of Chui Ming’s mind. There was only thought in his brain then. I need to get out as soon as possible!

There was no destination, no route in mind. As long as it was not inside that classroom, it would have to do.

“Chui Ming!” Xiao Gou screamed the young man’s name. He wanted to get Chui Ming to calm down, and all he got in return was the sound of the tables and chairs being knocked out of place. There was no light in the classroom, so Chui Ming could not see his way, but that did not stop the young man from tearing the place apart as he tried to make his escape through the classroom’s front door.

Xiao Gou knew that it was a ghost who was following Chui Ming. Seeing Chui Ming’s reaction then, he immediately realized how scary that ‘thing’ was.

“Where are you going? Chui Ming!” Xiao Gou asked in a loud voice, but Chui Ming disappeared in a trail of dust without once looking back.

“What happened to him? Why did he suddenly start to run outside? Will something bad occur to him?” There was a heavy hint of concern in Chen Ge’s voice. He asked three consecutive questions, and the others still in the room could hear how worried he was on Chui Ming’s behalf.

“I don’t know, but I don’t think that we should continue this game anymore. I need to go and find Chui Ming.” Xiao Gou started to get afraid himself. The environment around him was too dark for him to tell for sure whether the ghost had left with Chui Ming or not.

“No way!” This reply came from the last row of the classroom and Xiao Gou’s earpiece at the same time. Both Chen Ge and the boss of Nightmare Academy had the same reaction. “What are you guys doing? Follow the damn script that I gave you! Don’t you dare mess this up and make me a joke in front of this guy!”

Xiao Gou's boss breathed angrily into the earpiece. Before Xiao Gou could reply to his own boss, he heard Chen Ge say from the last row of the classroom, "You are never supposed to stop a supernatural game halfway, or the spirit that you've summoned will follow you for the rest of your life! Whether this is a plot by the Haunted House or the real thing, if you do not want to be woken up by ghosts in the middle of the night, we'd better finish this game!"

Hearing Chen Ge and his boss yelling in his ears at the same time was about to push Xiao Gou over the edge of sanity. What kind of people had he run into this time?

How is there a visitor who is actively requesting that we finish a supernatural game inside a Haunted House? This has never ever happened before.

Chen Ge was the visitor, and the person in his earpiece was the boss. Since both of them insisted on continuing this game that had strayed very far from the designed script, Xiao Gou could only force himself to continue.

"Okay, then... we will continue." He gritted his teeth and prayed that the ghost had already left with Chui Ming.

"Now that we are down a participant and a corner is empty, we will need to change up the game rules." Chen Ge was probably the first person who would go to another person's Haunted House and edit their rules. He did not think that he was being particularly bullish about it. "The basic rules of the game shall remain unchanged. We will continue to move in a clockwise circle. When you reach an unoccupied corner, cough audibly, and then we will leave the corner empty and move on to the next corner."

"Sure, we will do it your way." Xiao Gou was no longer that focused on the game, and he handed the decision-making part all over to Chen Ge.

"Then I think we should start with me as well." Chen Ge counted down to three and took out the comic from his backpack. Then, he touched the wall and moved toward the corner in front of him. He did not try to hide his footsteps, and in the darkness, one could see a figure walking alongside the wall.

Xiao Gou kept his eyes on Chen Ge. The corner that Chen Ge was heading toward was very close to the place where Chui Ming encountered the 'accident'. His nerves were pulled taut, and his focus was sharp. Soon, Chen Ge reached the next corner. He did not cough and stopped where he was.

He didn't cough at all! This can only mean that there is still someone occupying that corner! Xiao Gou's body was shaking lightly, and he was incredibly anxious. Chen Ge stopped at the corner, but the sound of footsteps did not stop. A figure swayed gracefully as it moved from the last row of the classroom toward Lee Bo.

Of everyone there, only the little fatty—Lee Bo, who still had not caught up to the truth—played the role he had been assigned honestly. Feeling a light pat on his shoulder, Lee Bo touched the wall as he moved toward Xiao Gou. That was a code between the Haunted House's workers. When Lee Bo reached Xiao Gou's corner, he patted the latter on his left shoulder once and then on his right shoulder once.

"Brother Gou, what happened to Chui Ming?" Lee Bo asked in a whisper.

Xiao Gou did not want to scare Lee Bo, so he did not reveal the whole truth. "Just ignore him. Remember, if there's anything that doesn't feel right, leave this classroom as fast as you can."

After saying that, Xiao Gou started to move toward the next corner.

Perhaps he was imagining it, but Xiao Gou felt like the darkness around him had thickened. It felt like there was a black hole in front of him, and it would suck everything that wandered too close into it. With his hands on the wall, Xiao Gou slowly nudged himself toward the corner that Chen Ge had occupied earlier, and there was the shadow in the shape of a person standing before him.

He walked closer and reached out his hand, but just as his finger was about to fall on the person's shoulder, Xiao Gou was suddenly reminded of a small detail. Chen Ge was the person who had started this round, so technically speaking, the corner that Chen Ge had originally occupied should have been empty!

Chen Ge had already moved onto the next corner, so who was the person standing in that corner?

The feeling of fear rushed at him from all corners. Xiao Gou's hand dangled weakly in midair, and he was suddenly reminded of something even scarier. The game had already finished one whole round, but so far, no one had coughed. In other words, it could only mean that there was more than one ghost inside this classroom!

The arm that was raised could not be lowered anymore. Xiao Gou had exhausted all the courage he could summon. After a moment's hesitation, he came to a decision. He touched the shoulder of the person before him lightly and then immediately jumped back a few meters.

It was not until the person wandered away that Xiao Gou sighed in relief. He did not stay in the corner for too long. Instead, he stealthily moved to the hidden pathway that was only known to the Haunted House workers and then decided to hide inside it.

I can't stay here any longer!

Xiao Gou took out his phone and wanted to send a message to Lee Bo to inform him of the bad news when his boss' voice came from the earpiece. "Gou Jun, what the hell are you doing? The visitor is still inside the classroom. I want you to go and scare him, so what are you doing running out like that?"

"Boss, listen to me, something is really different today!" Xiao Gou tried his best to explain to his boss, but the game was still continuing inside the classroom.

The footsteps echoed constantly in the classroom, and very soon, Lee Bo felt someone pat his shoulder. This honest little fatty did not think too much of it and continued to move ahead. When he reached the corner where Xiao Gou was supposed to be, he discovered that the corner was empty.

"Brother Gou?" Lee Bo stood at the corner alone. He paused and looked around for a few seconds. Then he followed the new rules set by Chen Ge and coughed once before moving to the next corner. In the dark classroom, Lee Bo felt increasingly worried. He slowly but surely reached Chen Ge's corner. However, when he reached that corner, he realized that the corner was also empty!

Where is he? Where is the visitor?

Completely blinded by this development, there was nothing else Lee Bo could have done but continue with the game. Lee Bo coughed again and made his way to the next corner. The classroom was so quiet that he could only hear his own heartbeat and his own footsteps.

When he reached the third corner, Lee Bo finally realized that something was not right because this corner was empty as well.

“Where is everyone?” Lee Bo did not dare to move recklessly. He tried to contact Xiao Gou, but the person did not give him any reply. He thought about giving up, but whenever he felt like doing so, the warning that Chen Ge had given earlier would appear in his mind. If he stopped the supernatural game halfway, he would be pursued by the spirits for the rest of his life.

Just the thought of that caused Lee Bo to shiver. Devoid of options, he could only force himself to continue. How come it feels like I'm the only one left in the classroom?

Near the backdoor, Xiao Gou had just finished explaining the situation to his boss and was about to reply to Lee Bo's message when he saw Lee Bo walking toward him through the window on the backdoor.

No matter what, this game cannot be continued anymore. When Lee Bo comes closer, I'll drag him out with him. And the visitor... I'm sure he'll have fun with the game on his own. After all, this is exactly what the boss wishes to happen to him.

With his hand on the doorknob, Xiao Gou observed Lee Bo through the window. He opened the door a fraction and was about to open his lips to call out Lee Bo's name when a chill rushed right up to the top of his head!

Xiao Gou could very clearly see that there were three swaying figures following behind Lee Bo!

They stuck to Lee Bo closely, and their footsteps were eerily similar to Lee Bo's, but Lee Bo did not seem to notice this at all!

There are three of them?

His butt fell against the ground. Xiao Gou's legs kicked on the ground as he staggered backward, and he screamed at the top of his lungs, “Lee Bo! Run!”

The sudden scream gave Lee Bo quite a fright. When he noticed that the classroom's backdoor was open and Xiao Gou pointing crazily behind him, his natural reaction was to turn his neck around.

Three figures stuck close to him, and three different faces reflected in his eyes.

“Who summoned us to play this game? How come we haven’t seen you before?”

The reply was an ear-splitting scream. This was the first time that Chen Ge had heard such a shrill scream escape from a male’s mouth.

He watched the big body knock into the backdoor and then shoot out like a cannon. Chen Ge did not move to chase after the boy. He pulled back the Pen Spirit and Ol’ Zhou. He turned back to pick up the diary that had fallen on the ground and turned it to the third page.

On the last page of the first diary entry, the following was recorded. “Four kids played the four corners game inside an abandoned classroom. The three older kids purposely ganged up to bully the youngest child, and in their carelessness, they caused the youngest child to perish in an accident.

“Later, all three of the older children disappeared, and on the seventh day of the youngest child’s death, his family found three dolls made from paddy stalks under his bed. On the back of each of the three dolls was a different name— Chui Ming ¹ , Gou Hun ² , and Li Po ³ .

This first entry is describing the first scary scenario, which is the four corners game inside the abandoned classroom. In that case, the second diary entry should correspond to the second scenario.

Sitting inside the creepy Haunted House set, Chen Ge flipped to the second entry with curiosity. There was a pretty girl by the name of Die. She had fallen in love with a boy, and to prevent her confession from being rejected, she decided to ask the Pen Spirit for an opinion.

The Pen Spirit game? Chen Ge stopped reading then. He had an unreadable expression on his face. Even with the same theme, I hope that they can bring me a different feeling.

Without going ahead to read the other diary entries, Chen Ge walked out from the classroom’s backdoor.

Should I head directly to the Pen Spirit’s scenario, or should I go borrow some tools from the doctor first?

He looked down the dark corridor and shook his head.

Oh well, I’ll guess I’ll carry on. No matter what, I’m going to clear this Haunted House today.

Chapter 738: Come, Repeat After Me [2 in 1]

The diary that was placed on the podium to scare the visitors became the guidebook for Chen Ge to explore the Haunted House. He placed the diary inside his backpack and rushed toward the second set described in the diary.

As the most famous Haunted House in Xin Hai, the size of Nightmare Academy was larger than Chen Ge had anticipated. The theme of a haunted school was maintained from beginning to end, and it covered almost all the school-themed ghost stories. “There are six floors in total. It’s going to be fun today.”

The large location, no matter from which angle, was a good thing for Chen Ge. He could explore to his heart’s content, and if there was a chance in the future, he could assimilate the whole building into his own Haunted House.

The Pen Spirit scenario was not far from the classroom where the new student welcoming ceremony was held. Looking at the paint on the wall, which was peeling, Chen Ge walked down the corridor until he came to an old, battered door. There was a sign above the door that read ‘Storage Room’.

“In the diary, the girl by the name of Die is said to play the Pen Spirit game inside the storage room.”

Pushing open the door, before Chen Ge even stepped in, he could hear the sound of a girl crying. The crying came and went quickly—it was too fast for Chen Ge to discern where it came from.

“Is anyone in here?” There was a big difference between Chen Ge’s Haunted House and Nightmare Academy. Chen Ge’s Haunted House allowed its visitors to explore it freely. There was no guide or help along the way while most of the Haunted Houses on the market had a set route that one had to follow during visitation.

Now that he had wandered onto the set for the Pen Spirit without warning, he was very worried that the actors were not ready yet, and it might influence his overall experience. After he spoke out loud, the sound of crying weakened, and Chen Ge stopped to observe his surroundings.

The walls in the storage room were purposely made to look older than they were. The racks in the room were filled with a layer of dust, and the corner was piled high with various items. The lights inside the room were dim, and occasionally, one could hear the sound of mice scurrying about.

“The diary only said that Die played the Pen Spirit game here, but it did not mention a single detail about the storage room itself. So, assuming there was some kind of accident when Die was playing the Pen Spirit game, I could run into one of the two ghosts here; one is Die, and the other will be the Pen Spirit.”

When Chen Ge walked past the first row of shelves, the squeak of a mouse came from a spot around his left leg, and he felt something running past his left ankle. When something like this happened to a normal person, they would jump or yelp in shock, but Chen Ge was unaffected. Instead, like a little boy who was curious about everything, he squatted down to take a better look.

“There is a rope placed between these two rows of racks. Once the visitor’s legs step on it, the fake mouse trap attached to the knot will slither out.” Chen Ge scratched his chin. “Indeed, some might be scared by things like this. This is quite interesting. A Haunted House might not need to rely on ghosts and monsters completely. Anything can be made into something that can bring fear and terror. This is able to fulfill the various needs of the visitors, and it matches my goal of designing a multi-faceted Haunted House.”

Chen Ge memorized these little tricks. He planned to research them in more detail when he returned and use them as the basis to come up with something exciting and fun. Standing up, Chen Ge continued to move forward, proceeding to the space between the first row and the second row.

The corridor was very narrow. Chen Ge saw that there was a glass jar on the second row that was almost falling. He extended his hand to push the jar slightly deeper to prevent an accident. When he was pushing it, he saw a pale face hiding behind the glass jar.

“Is he on the other side of the rack? No, it should be squeezed between the racks.” Chen Ge stared at the face for a while before grabbing the glass jar and placing it on the ground. He reached over. His finger poked the face’s cheeks, and he squeezed for a while. “Synthetic rubber? A mask?”

Chen Ge moved all the stuff on that row away and finally saw what it was. It was a human mask that was stuck to a basketball. “It’s a fake skull? If there was a real person hiding here, it would be that much scarier, but I can see the problem; the place is too small for a living person to squeeze inside.”

Skipping the second row, Chen Ge headed to the third row. This time, he was greeted by a falling glass jar again, but this time, instead of one, there were five of them.

“Aren’t they afraid of shattering the glass and accidentally harming the visitors? Or are they using reinforced glass, which does not break that easily?”

When Chen Ge walked past the jars, he noticed that each of them was filled with something different. The liquid inside was dark, and the objects reminded him of human organs. “Do the five jars correspond to five human organs?”

Chen Ge picked up the jars one by one to study before replacing them. When he reached the fourth one, a slender arm suddenly shot out from behind the rack and wrapped itself around his wrist!

This happened so suddenly and without warning that Chen Ge was stunned for zero point something seconds before he snapped into being. He tightened his fingers and twisted his wrist around to grab the arm instead. He pulled on the arm and refused to let it go as he leaned over to look behind the rack. A girl in Nightmare Academy’s school uniform was stuck to the rack. She was gritting her teeth in pain.

“Let—let go!” That was most likely not what the girl was supposed to say.

“I’m so sorry. I was too scared. I didn’t mean to hurt you.” Chen Ge slowly let the girl go. When he looked behind the rack again, the girl had already disappeared. “Where did she go?”

The sound of crying returned. Chen Ge walked around the shelf and came to the deepest part of the storage room. Amid a mess of unused items, a slender girl was heaving with tears, collapsed on the table.

“I apologize for what happened earlier. I accidentally pulled too hard because I was too afraid.” Chen Ge squatted down next to the table. He was afraid that the girl was crying because he had injured her.

“I don’t feel good. My heart has been cut into pieces by a sharp knife.”

“I only touched your wrist a bit harder than usual. You’re not going to use that against me, are you?” Chen Ge grumbled under his breath.

The girl looked at the reddening fingerprints around her wrist. Even though this visitor’s reaction was slightly different from what she had expected, at the end of the day, she was a professional Haunted House actor, and she got back into her role easily. “I was deeply in love with a person, but after consulting the Pen Spirit, I found out that he did not care for me at all. I used the method taught to me by the Pen Spirit to make him change his mind, but I accidentally caused his death. I regret it deeply, so I came back here to consult the Pen Spirit again and see if there is a way to turn things around.”

“How are you going to turn things around when the person is already dead?”

“The Pen Spirit will definitely know a way!” The girl suddenly exclaimed loudly, and her eyes were red with tears.

“Sure, sure, but let’s be real. Among all the Specters, the Pen Spirit is definitely not the most powerful, so I suggest you don’t hold too much hope.”

“In any case, we have to give it a try.” The girl lifted her head, and the make-up on her face was thick and gaudy. It looked rather strange inside this abandoned storage room. “Can you lend me a hand? You need at least two people to complete the Pen Spirit game. Normally, people don’t come to this storage room. I need another person’s help to begin the game.”

“No problem.” After a moment’s hesitation, Chen Ge opened his lips to ask, “You said you need two people to start the Pen Spirit game, then who was the second person that you played with the first time you consulted the Pen Spirit?”

The girl chose to ignore the question, and her voice turned shriller. “Sit across from me, and the two of us will hold the body of the pen like this. Then you can leave the rest to me.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge saw himself as a gentleman, so he did not press and followed the girl’s instructions. He moved to the other side of the table and picked up the pen. It was a silvery white fountain pen. It was about twice the size of a normal ballpoint pen, and there were some decorative swirls on the casing.

Chen Ge’s action was so standardized that he did not need the guidance from the girl at all. At this point, a strange feeling surfaced in the girl’s heart. This person before her seemed to play the Pen Spirit game often, but would a normal person play the Pen Spirit game at home alone every day?

The girl nodded and took the seat across from Chen Ge. “After the game starts, you do not need to say or do anything, just sit there quietly.”

“Understood.”

“Once the game starts, the game mustn’t be stopped halfway. If you summon the Pen Spirit but don’t send her away, the consequences will be horrible,” the girl warned seriously.

“I understand all that, you can start now.” Chen Ge looked around. Playing the Pen Spirit game inside the abandoned storage room was an interesting experience. The Nightmare Academy had a very good handle over the atmosphere, combining the lighting effect and the background music. His heart was already pumping even though he was just sitting there.

After the girl sat down and reached out to grab the pen, her brows instinctively creased slightly. This is strange, how come this person’s hand is colder than mine?

“Can we start now?”

“Oh, okay.” The girl took a deep breath. She held the pen with one hand and stuck the other underneath the table. She started to recite, “Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, can you please tell me how I can see my love again?”

After that, her eyes were glued to the pen on the table, and her bloodshot eyes looked rather scary in the dark. They waited for a long time, but the pen that they were holding did not move, standing upright above the paper.

“Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, please tell me the answer! I have already followed all of your instructions! I did everything that you told me to do, but why did he still die? I love his person not this lifeless body!”

The girl’s mastery of her emotions gradually unraveled, and her pupils started to burn red. There was only a small table between the girl and Chen Ge. Due to their close distance, the feeling of abandonment and madness could be felt very clearly.

“Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, I do not wish for him to die! Please answer me! Pen Spirit, answer me!” The girl started to scream like she had gone insane. Her screams echoed around the storage room. “Tell me what I need to do—I can give you everything I have in exchange! I know you’re here! Pen Spirit, I know you are still here!”

When the girl screamed the last sentence, the pen in her hand twitched slightly.

“Pen Spirit, is that you? Please tell me, how can I make him hear my voice again?” The girl screamed like she was asking for someone to save her life. Both of her eyes turned red like they were about to drip blood.

Under her relentless shouting, the pen dangling over the paper finally moved. Chen Ge could feel the body of the pen moving on its own, and this surprised him. He and the girl were both holding the pen, and he knew for sure that neither party was nudging the pen. The pen was indeed moving on its own.

The Pen Spirit has arrived? No, this fountain pen is unreasonably heavy, so there must be some kind of mechanism installed inside. The table is covered with this tattered tablecloth, and it hides everything underneath from view. However, from the sense of touch, the table is made from metal. Is it possible that she is using some kind magnet?

The girl’s voice grew louder, probably because she saw the shock on Chen Ge’s face. Under her continuous questioning, the pen wrote on the piece of white paper. “To gain something, you have to lose something. What have you prepared for me this time?”

Seeing the sentence on the paper, the girl became strangely excited. “What is it that you want? I will give it to you!”

“The same as before.”

The pen that they held suddenly stopped moving. The girl seemed to enter some kind of trance as she silently stared at the sentence on the piece of paper. “Same as before?”

The girl’s tone was rather seriously. It sounded like she was talking to herself, and it made her look like she was possessed. To an outsider, she appeared to be conversing with something that only existed in her mind.

She repeated this question again and again. Then she slowly lifted her head to look at Chen Ge. At that point, the pen that they were both holding started to move again. “Right, just like before. You sacrificed five organs of your best friend, and in exchange, I gave you the undying loyalty of your lover. Now, if you want your lover to return, give me another life in exchange!”

The make-up on her face was already ruined. The girl’s expression turned wicked. The hand that she had kept hidden under the table shot forward, and she was holding a sharp dagger in her palm!

“Wait a minute!” Chen Ge sat where he was and did not even shift in his posture. He studied the few sentences written on the paper, and his creased brows slowly smoothed out. He turned to the girl and said, “Don’t act so recklessly. The Pen Spirit is lying to you. Even if you kill me, she is not going to help you fulfill your wish.”

The girl maintained her pose, but her face was slightly twitching. Do you not see the dagger? Why are you telling me this now?

“The Pen Spirit’s main power is telling the future; the so-called fulfilling your wish is just a trap. I mean, think about your previous transaction.

“You gave her a human life, but she was playing word games with you. She made use of the chance to kill your lover and lied to you, saying that it was because she was helping you gain your lover’s undying loyalty.

“I believe I understand your story now. You might have encountered a fake Pen Spirit. Of course, there might be a different possibility where there is no Pen Spirit in the beginning at all and the so-called Pen Spirit is yourself.

“You were jealous of the fact that your best friend and your crush got together, and you borrowed the Pen Spirit's name to kill both of them in cold blood!"

Chen Ge analyzed the situation calmly, and it baffled the girl. Why is this visitor expanding the story on his own?

"Girl, put down the dagger in your hand; that is not how you play the Pen Spirit game. The thing that you summoned was not the Pen Spirit but the demon living inside your heart." Chen Ge held the girl's wrist carefully but firmly. He took the dagger away from her and placed it next to him before taking out a ballpoint pen covered in cellophane tape from his shirt pocket.

"The real Pen Spirit will not harm the innocent. The only thing that will ask you to do that is the human heart." Chen Ge's voice seemed to possess a type of magical power. He held the girl's hand and curled it around the ballpoint pen together. "Don't be afraid. I will introduce you to the real Pen Spirit."

Both of them moved back to opposite sides of the table. Chen Ge and the girl held the broken pen together.

"Empty your mind and voice the question that resides in the depths of your heart." Chen Ge's eyes were gentle, his voice soft. "Come, repeat after me. Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. Can you please tell me who the person that loves me the most is?"

Led by Chen Ge, the girl recited the incantation. They held the pen together, and the girl grumbled internally, Why am I doing this?

However, there was something about the man before her that made it difficult for her to go against his wishes.

The tattered ballpoint pen was held above the paper. After the two finished the incantation, they stopped and looked at the paper quietly. It was very quiet inside the storage room, and no one spoke; they could only hear the sound of their hearts beating.

What is the man doing? He doesn't really think that he can summon the Pen Spirit, right?

The girl's eyes darted about as she glanced at Chen Ge. For some reason, the dagger that she had pulled out from underneath the table was sitting next to the man. "Er..."

The girl wanted to tell the man that the game was up, but Chen Ge stopped her by shushing her. "Quiet, she has arrived."

After Chen Ge said that, the pen between them started to move slightly, and it proceeded to draw a circle on the white paper. The girl could feel the power from the pen. She did not apply any force, but the paper started to move on its own.

He has to be behind this! The girl looked at Chen Ge, trying to see some clues from his expression. To her disappointment, Chen Ge was focused fully on the pen that they were holding, and she could not see anything unusual from his face.

The pen at Nightmare Academy could move on its own because the pen and table were both custom-made. They could be controlled. In a way, they were a magic trick. As long as they knew theory behind it, anyone could do it. Subconsciously, the girl believed that Chen Ge was doing the same thing. She wanted to expose Chen Ge, but even after studying him for a long time, she could not find any flaws.

The pen on the paper continued to move, the strokes becoming firmer and stronger. Finally, it wrote a name on the white paper—Qu Changlin.

“Qu Changlin? So, that is the name of your lover.” Chen Ge lifted his head to look at the girl. “It is not easy to find love in this world. Treat him well, and try not to disappoint an honest man.”

When she saw the name on the paper, the girl’s face slowly changed. First, it was shock; then, it turned into terror!

She knew Qu Changlin. The man was a worker at Nightmare Academy as well, and he often looked after her! He had even confessed his feelings to her once, but he had been rejected by her then. This should have been a secret between her and Qu Changlin, so how did this man know about it?

Waves roared within her heart, and the girl’s arms were shaking. Her fingers touched Chen Ge’s, and that unreasonable frigidness caused her panic to amplify. The man before her was smiling so warmly, but how come she felt like the temperature in the room had been steadily dropping?

Her body shook uncontrollably, and the girl tried her best to console herself. Boss said that this visitor is very unique. He is adept at psychological games and is purposely here to create trouble for Nightmare Academy. He probably investigated all the workers here before arriving, and through my micro expressions, he managed to tell that Qu Changlin has a thing for me.

The girl knew that the chance of that was not high, but that was all she could do to convince herself. That was the only way she could maintain her sanity. She bit on her lips. The girl was not going to surrender so easily. She decided to use her own method to expose the man.

This man can guess the name of the person who likes me, so what? He will never guess the name of the person whom I wish to spend the rest of my life with!

The girl had a secret buried in her heart—the name of her real crush. She had not told anyone about it before.

After a short pause, the girl asked lightly, “Can I ask the Pen Spirit another question?”

“The Pen Spirit can only predict once per day. If you force it, the result might not be that accurate.”

“Just this one last time, okay?” Before Chen Ge could say anything, the girl gripped the pen and asked her question. “Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, can you tell me the name of my future partner?”

This question sounded very familiar to Chen Ge. He could feel the pen shuddering, and the tape on it appeared like it could tear at any moment. The whole pen felt like it was about to burst.

“I didn’t intend to lead you to this question. You wished to ask it yourself.” After saying that, Chen Ge quickly let his hands go. The pen was originally held by two people. The girl had not been applying any force, so she had assumed that it was Chen Ge who had been moving the pen around.

But now that Chen Ge had pulled his hands away, the pen was still standing above the paper. The girl’s eyes slowly widened, and then something scarier happened!

The pen started to move. The girl could tell for sure that she was not doing anything! It was not her who moved it!

What is going on? Is something wrong with the magnet under the table? But this is a plastic ballpoint pen—it isn’t made from metal!

The pen continued to move, and it initially wrote one sentence for the girl on the piece of paper—YOU WILL DIE!

It was a simple sentence, but it looked scary. The girl wanted to pull her hands away, but she realized that her hands seemed to be glued to the pen, and her arms were pulled along whether she liked it or not. The pen moved faster and faster until the whole paper was filled with YOU WILL DIE!

“Wait, help! What is happening?” The fear in her heart materialized, and the remnant of rationality was submerged—the girl was swallowed by endless darkness. She searched frantically for Chen Ge in the dark. However, once she lifted her head, she saw something that she would never forget in her life.

Just above her shoulder was someone standing!

She was wearing a dirtied school uniform, and at that moment, she was scrawling madly with the ballpoint pen like she was venting a horrifying emotion.

A piercing scream came out of the storage room, and it was followed by something heavy landing on the ground. Chen Ge replaced the glass jars and walked out from the second rack. He looked at the girl lying on the ground. By then, her red-colored contacts had fallen out of her eyes. He shook his head lightly. "Why did you need to go and anger her?"

Picking up the pen that was almost breaking, Chen Ge then glanced at the fountain pen on the table. The Pen Spirit did not seem interested in the fountain pen at all.

"Chill out, she didn't mean it." Chen Ge consoled the Pen Spirit and walked out of the storage room.

"That's one more scenario completed. Where shall I go next?" Chen Ge took out the diary and turned to the third entry. This time, the incident happened inside the bathroom—there was an angry spirit living inside the fourth cubicle, and it would appear at midnight.

"It's related to the toilet, huh? Abandoned toilets can be quite scary. After all, the Yin energy there is the heaviest." Chen Ge studied the map. He was not far away from the bathroom, just around the corner.

"Since I'm already here, might as well. Hopefully, I will be pleasantly surprised this time," Chen Ge said and walked toward his next destination.

Inside the bathroom at the end of the third floor, a black shadow was hiding inside the fourth cubicle. He was scrolling through his phone with a bored expression on his face when he received a call.

"Boss, are you looking for me?"

"Qu Changlin, in a moment, a special visitor will enter your scenario. You have to find a way to help me scare the hell out of him!"

“Don’t worry, Boss, I promise to complete the mission!” Qu Changlin patted his chest and promised. He did not mind even if his boss was not there personally to see it, and he gave his promise first.

“I like your attitude, Changlin. That’s why you are one of our Haunted House’s best employees. That is why I’ve assigned you an important location like the bathroom. I hope you won’t disappointment me.”

“As long as he enters this scenario, I guarantee you that he will walk in but crawl out.”

“The man is attention-detailed and very dangerous. I will disconnect my communication with you later to prevent your location from being exposed, but I will follow your movement through the cameras.”

“Boss, I will not disappoint you.” After Qu Changlin gave another promise, he was reminded of something. He lowered his voice to ask, “Boss, the closest scenario to mine is the Pen Spirit. Did something happen to Xiao Die?”

“Xiao Die is fine. Don’t worry about other people, focus on your job! He is coming. I will wait for the good news in the surveillance room.” The middle-aged man hung up soon. At the same time, the door of the bathroom creaked open.

“Why didn’t the bathroom in the Haunted House get separated according to gender? This is too unprofessional.” Chen Ge pushed open the door to Nightmare Academy’s bathroom. A pungent smell immediately assaulted him. “Such a thick stench of disinfectant. What happened here that required so much disinfectant?”

Taking out the diary from his backpack, Chen Ge tried to find the answer from it, but to his disappointment, there was nothing useful from the entry about the bathroom. It only mentioned vaguely that something was hiding inside the fourth cubicle.

“According to the diary, the worker should be hiding inside the fourth cubicle. When the visitor walks past it, the worker suddenly jumps out, but won’t that lower the scare factor?”

When Chen Ge first read the diary, he easily came up with a solution. If the worker was hiding inside the fourth cubicle, he would stand inside the third cubicle and observe the situation inside the fourth cubicle before making a decision. But once he walked into the bathroom at the end of the corridor, Chen Ge changed his mind. The smell of disinfectant there was really too heavy.

There had to be a reason that the bathroom had been arranged like that. Could it be to hide something? To use the smell of the disinfectant to hide the smell of something else...

“What kind of thing is both scary and smelly?” Chen Ge tried to come up with an answer as he walked into the bathroom. There were many cracks on the floor, and many creepy sentences were written unevenly on the wall. Occasionally, lizards crawled along the walls and ceiling, causing a rustling sound.

There was no window, and an old table lamp that gave off a red light was placed in the corner. Underneath the lamp was a small black box.

Normally, such things would not be found inside a toilet. Chen Ge walked past the first cubicle and stopped next to the lamp. He reached out to open the little black box, and inside it was a note that read—Do you like our prank?

Underneath the note was a group picture. A bunch of children were looking at the camera nervously, and only the kid at the most edge was grinning like crazy. On the back of the picture, Chen Ge found another sentence—It was just a prank, bro.

“A prank, is it?” The diary gave little clues. Chen Ge did not know what theme of this scenario was. He picked up the strange box and placed it inside his backpack—he had a feeling that he would have a use for it later.

Chen Ge’s action was being silently observed by a pair of eyes in the dark. The person could not understand the reasoning behind it. Inside the bathroom that was stinking and set up like a crime scene, why would anyone stuff a random object inside one's bag?

Holding the backpack with one arm, Chen Ge examined the table lamp again. He switched it on and off several times and left after ensuring that there was nothing wrong with it.

"The bathroom comprises of the sink and six cubicles. There are no other items in here, and there is nothing obviously wrong with the lamp. So, the person should still be hiding inside the cubicle." Chen Ge had experienced something similar at Mu Yang High School before. He did not feel fear, but his heart was surfeited by this feeling of déjà vu.

He opened the door of the first cubicle. It was thick with the smell of disinfectant. Chen Ge pinched his nose and examined the cubicle patiently.

He found complaints written on the walls of the cubicle.

"He made my clothes wet again today. I hate Xiao Lin!"

"Xiao Lin pulled the chair back when I tried to sit down, and it caused me to fall to the ground."

"Xiao Lin planted a frog inside my drawer! I'm going to puke!"

They were as mentioned earlier, pranks, but all of them mentioned Xiao Lin. The boy seemed to be the class prankster, and many classmates had fallen victim.

"There doesn't seem to be anything truly scary." Chen Ge scanned the words. The messages inside the cubicle appeared so innocent compared to the messages left at the Third Sick Hall.

He opened the door of the second cubicle. There were still many complaints, but unlike the ones inside the first cubicle, the children appeared to be more angered, and a small portion of them bordered on dangerous.

Then, Chen Ge opened the door of the third cubicle. Some of the messages had come up with a prank to revenge on Xiao Lin. They came up with this horror story about the fourth cubicle inside the toilet and 'accidentally' revealed it to Xiao Lin. Then everyone came up with various ideas to set up the bathroom, trying to get Xiao Lin back once and for all.

Through the snippets of messages on the wall, Chen Ge had a grasp of the whole situation. The messages alone would not be too scary, but combined with the third entry of the diary, it did sound quite spooky.

“Did Xiao Lin manage to leave the fourth cubicle in the end?” Chen Ge stopped before the fourth cubicle. This cubicle had been specially mentioned in the diary, so the scariest thing should be inside there. Perhaps when he opened the door, the students’ prank would happen, or perhaps when the door opened, Xiao Lin would return.

However, none of that happened. When Chen Ge opened the door of the fourth cubicle, and to his surprise, there was a mirror placed inside the cubicle.

“These kids are quite creative.” Chen Ge looked at the mirror stuck behind the toilet. The more he studied it, the more he realized that something was wrong. His reflection was not shown in the mirror. “Interesting, they have pasted a picture on the surface of the mirror?”

Chen Ge reached out to touch the mirror. When his fingertip was about to touch the surface, he suddenly heard a soft voice coming from above him, and then the back of his neck felt itchy. He lowered his head to study the mirror—there was nothing on the surface. The itch on the back of his neck grew more pronounced like a bug had fallen and was crawling there.

The strange feeling from the back of his neck grew stronger. Chen Ge's eyes moved away from the mirror and slowly turned around to look behind him. Hair skidded across the tip of his nose. Chen Ge was greeted by a scarred face and a pair of eyes filled with venom.

An upside-down man was standing behind Chen Ge, staring at Chen Ge with his inverted facial features!

...

Inside the 'haunted' toilet, a man was attracted by the strange mirror before him, then he felt something strange on the back of his neck. He turned around and saw this inverted face staring at him. No matter who it was, they would definitely be spooked by this experience.

Qu Changlin, who was hiding inside the toilet, had his ears perked up, ready to feast on the visitor's scream, but he waited for a long time, but all he heard was an eerie silence.

A gap broke open next to the edge of the mirror. Using the lamp in the corner of the toilet, Qu Changlin could roughly make out a figure in the dark. He was tall with one hand stuck inside his pocket and the other holding an old backpack.

Time seemed to have frozen. After who knew how long, Qu Changlin saw the man slowly raised his hand. Just as he thought that the man was about to clamp his hand over his lips to stop himself from screaming, the man's palm reached toward the face hanging behind him.

"It's just a mannequin? This is strange. How could a mannequin possess such a despairing gaze?" the man mumbled to himself. He seemed to be deeply attracted by something. He put down his backpack and used both of his hands to carefully examine the skull that was hanging upside down.

The finger caressed the mannequin's cheeks almost lovingly before travelling to its eyes and lashes. Seeing this, Qu Changlin, who was hiding behind the mirror, felt a chill run through his body. Various scary thoughts filled his mind, and the hand that was holding the remote was already drenched with sweat.

Chen Ge examined the mannequin's eyelashes. When he first laid eyes on the mannequin, he had already been mightily impressed. It was completely different from the mannequins available on the market, and it was even different from the mannequins at his own Haunted House. This mannequin was mixed with the creator's emotions, and each detail was perfect.

With the skill of Mortician's Make-up and Dollmaker's Talent, the mannequins created by Chen Ge's hands had the most realistic appearance, but even so, the mannequins could only be seen as the perfect vessel. Without the control of his employees, they would appear rather lifeless.

As for this mannequin that fell from the ceiling, even though due to material restrictions, the realism was not comparable to Chen Ge's mannequins, the eyes were so lively!

"He uses very common materials, so how did manage to create such a lively pair of eyes? Just how many pairs of eyes has the creator observed to be able to come up with something like this?" Chen Ge held the mannequin's head carefully. He did not think that it was that scary. If anything, there was an admiration rolling in his eyes. "I'll need to create a lot of mannequins, and that is such a big workload for one person. In the future, as the number of scenarios increases, the number of mannequins needed will shoot up as well. I will need to find an assistant. This person's talent is not bad. With some training, I'm sure they'll be a valuable addition to the Haunted House."

Chen Ge's brain turned very fast. Even when he was standing alone in the toilet, holding a mannequin's head, he was still thinking about his own Haunted House. "To have talent like this stay inside the toilet to scare others is such a waste."

Chen Ge let go of the mannequin, and the latter swung lazily before the cubicle. Chen Ge walked to the fifth cubicle.

"Is someone inside?" He did not know what kind of impression he would have given the worker hiding in the dark. In any case, Chen Ge did not care; he merely wanted to find the mannequin's creator.

"Where are you? Are you playing hide and seek with me?" Chen Ge sounded weirdly excited, like a child discovering a new toy.

In this strange environment, hearing Chen Ge's voice, the hiding Qu Changlin felt his heart quivering. He even suspected that the shock had been too much, and the visitor had gone insane. The sound of knocking came from the fifth cubicle. Hearing that, Qu Changlin's heart started to race.

For some weird reason, in that moment, it felt like the role of the hunter and the hunted had swapped. The person hiding in the secret room was the victim, and the man wandering outside stubbornly was the real culprit.

"If you're not going to open the door, then I'm coming in, okay?" Even though it was phrased like a question, Qu Changlin did not hear any hesitation from the speaker.

BANG!

The door of the fifth cubicle was pushed open, and Chen Ge looked in with some disappointment. "Then everything should be inside the last cubicle."

He walked to the door of the last cubicle, but Chen Ge did not stride in directly. He leaned against the door to listen for any sound coming from inside the cubicle. Timing was crucial to activate traps inside the Haunted House, so there had to be at least one employee handling one scenario because not everything could be controlled remotely.

Chen Ge looked around. "This place is only so big. Where could he be hiding? The last cubicle should contain some scares as well, but if I was the employee, I wouldn't pick to hide there."

Adopting the worker's perspective to view this problem, Chen Ge suddenly lifted his head to look at the crack in the ceiling where the mannequin dangled from.

Is the worker hiding in the ceiling?

A brave idea popped up in Chen Ge's mind. He walked to stand beside the mannequin and looked at the hole above him.

Someone has to be controlling the mannequin. I wonder, where will the lines connected to the mannequin lead me?

The monsters and ghosts that other people avoided were openings for Chen Ge. He stood beside the mannequin and thought for a while. Qu Changlin, who was behind the mirror, had his heart gripped by a vise. He had no idea what the man was going to do next.

Chen Ge walked back to the cubicle and summoned Ol' Zhou after taking out the comic from his backpack. He pointed at the hole in the ceiling, and Ol' Zhou nodded.

Chen Ge kept knocking on the door of the last cubicle, and while the employee's attention was thus distracted, Ol' Zhou sneaked into the hole in the ceiling.

For Qu Changlin, this was incredibly strange. The sound of knocking kept coming, but he could not see anyone.

What is he doing?

Qu Changlin held the remote with both hands. Sweat slid down his face, and the constant knocking annoyed him. The torture lasted for a minute before it got the better of Qu Changlin.

Either you come in here or you get out. Who are you trying to scare by wasting your time here?

He pushed the door open a gap, wishing to confirm Chen Ge's location. But at that moment, he felt something brush against the back of his neck like a centipede crawling over it.

He scratched behind it, and his fingertip touched something that felt like a ball of watergrass. Subconsciously, Qu Changlin turned to look behind him.

A pale face with an upside-down smile was hanging behind him. "Found you."

Chapter 742 - When You Try to Mix with Others, It Only Makes You Look More Alone

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Qu Changlin had worked at Nightmare Academy for three years, and he had never expected such a day to ever come. The face was only a few centimeters away from him, and he could see every detail on it clearly, including the corner of the lips that was curved upward, the stubbles that needed a quick shave, and the eyes that were radiating iciness no matter where they looked.

“My boss wants to meet you.” The man’s lips opened and closed. It looked like he was speaking, but Qu Changlin did not think that he could hear anything. Perhaps the nerves responsible for auditory stimuli had stopped working, or perhaps his whole brain had gone into shut down.

This was no longer that important. It did not even cross Qu Changlin’s mind to understand why there was someone hanging behind him. His heart returned to normal after two seconds. Blood rushed to his brain instantly, and as he regained control of his body, Qu Changlin reacted the way most normal people would.

“Who’s there?” His voice shook. Qu Changlin rammed into the door before him, and the thin mirror was pushed open. He wished to run out, but the door of the fourth cubicle was locked by someone.

Trapped inside the cramped space, Qu Changlin leaned against the door of the cubicle. His eyes were glued to the secret room where he had been hiding earlier. There was nothing inside the narrow space. Qu Changlin had his hands on his chest, certain that he had seen someone there earlier. His head had been dangling downward, and he had been hanging behind him!

“Where did he go?” The scene from earlier had become an emotional scar in Qu Changlin’s heart. If he did not get to the bottom of this, he believed that he would never have the courage to stay inside any dark, small spaces again.

The air-conditioning in the Haunted House blew. The temperature was very low, but sweat kept pouring down Qu Changlin's forehead.

The cubicle door is closed, so the visitor should still be here.

Misery loved company. Just as Qu Changlin was contemplating this serious question, there suddenly came a knock from the cubicle door behind him.

The banging on the door was like a note from hell. It held a unique rhythm, and the constant knocking felt like it landed on Qu Changlin's heart. He wanted to move, but his legs refused to listen to his orders. They turned into noodles and failed to support his body anymore. The man slid down the wall.

An extra person somehow appeared in the secret room. He wished to run out, but the cubicle door would not open. Qu Changlin realized that he was trapped in a corner. He stomped on the ground as he struggled to stand up.

If it is the visitor who is knocking on the cubicle door, then who was the person that I encountered inside the secret room?

Qu Changlin leaned heavily against the cubicle door. He reached into his pocket, attempting to find his phone and report the situation to his boss. However, just as he started to dial the number, before he even had the chance to say anything, he heard a completely unfamiliar voice. "It's useless even if you try to hide. He will follow you home, hiding inside your shadow, leaning in from your window, lying in wait underneath your bed."

The voice came from outside the cubicle, from the person who had been knocking constantly on the door. The man did not purposely use a scary voice to scare Qu Changlin. Rather, the man's voice was level, like he was merely describing the truth.

Qu Changlin clamped his hands over his lips. The call was already connected, but he did not dare to speak. He could see a cold gaze looking at him, but he did not dare turn back, did not dare move a muscle; it was as if his whole body was frozen.

What should I do now?

Chen Ge was leaning over the wall of the fifth cubicle. He looked down at Qu Changlin, who was curled into a ball on the ground, and his eyes were burning with admiration.

He can stay inside this toilet with a horrible stench for so long even without wearing a mask. Professional etiquette aside, his professional skill is at least eighty marks.

With one hand on the wall, Chen Ge's other hand was holding the mannequin that dangled from the ceiling, and he shook it constantly. The knocking sound that Qu Changlin had heard was actually the sound of the mannequin's head banging against the door.

The sound of a head banging against the door was naturally different from when one used one's hands. Without the man knowing about it, Chen Ge was conducting a simple test on Qu Changlin.

Good ability, very professional. The only thing left is his personality and morality.

When Chen Ge was contemplating that question, Ol' Zhou silently materialized behind him. He was holding a thick notebook about human anatomy.

"What's this?" As Chen Ge flipped through the notebook, he found that it was filled with pages of hand-drawn mannequin blueprints. They ranged from various styles and models.

"According to the clues, there is a spare red table lamp in the haunted house. I found this notebook underneath that lamp. It doesn't seem like he wants people to see this." Ol' Zhou had spent quite a bit of time with Chen Ge, so he knew his boss very well and would sometimes prove to be quite astute and caring.

Hearing Ol' Zhou's words, the image of Qu Changlin in a ghost outfit hiding inside the toilet where visitors would rarely enter appeared in Chen Ge's mind. Out of boredom, he used the light from the table lamp and studied the profession of mannequin making.

The front part of the notebook was mostly hand drawn designs by Qu Changlin himself, but the latter part felt more like his diary.

"1st September, the number of visitors coming to the Haunted House continues to drop. I can hear people walk past the door, but no one comes in. Sad.

“3rd September, I’ve updated the mannequin in the toilet. I only need to spend an extra fifty RMB on each mannequin, and they will bring a realistic feeling to the visitors! I’m sure everyone will be impressed!

“4th September, the cold drizzle washed out my face. Boss didn’t agree with my update idea. Oh well, the Haunted House is not doing so well—this is not his fault.

“15th September, a visitor finally wandered into the toilet today! Let me think, how shall I scare him? Ha ha ha ha!

“30th September, Xiao Die said that she wishes to focus on her career at the moment and has no time for a relationship. I will need to work harder so that I can support her in the future.

“15th October, why do they always say that I’m a boring person? I’ve done so many things that I didn’t like so that I won’t stand out anymore, but how come they still see me as a strange guy?

“30th October, so Xiao Die already has a crush.

“1st November, a new month has begun. I swear to become a more interesting person that can get well with others. Yes, you can do it!”

There were many other similar short entries. Each one of them sounded optimistic, but Chen Ge could sense the melancholy behind it. He put down the notebook, and his eyes wandered to the words on the walls of the fifth cubicle.

Unlike the Third Sick Hall, the scenario was decorated by their corresponding workers. Qu Changlin was responsible for the toilet, so the words on the walls should have been handwritten by the man.

The ghost story in the toilet was about a boy by the name of Xiao Lin. He was hated by everyone due to his prankster nature. In the end, everyone decided to gang up against him.

It was a simple story, but it reflected Qu Changlin’s life. The Xiao Lin in the story should be talking about him.

“Not all fish stay in the same ocean, so why push for things against nature?” Chen Ge thought about it and decided to stop messing with Qu Changlin. He called Ol’ Zhou to return to the comic, and he pulled open the door of the fourth cubicle.

After forcing the cubicle door open, Chen Ge immediately squatted down when he saw Qu Changlin collapsed on the ground. “Are you alright?”

Seeing the man enter, Qu Changlin’s first reaction was not to ask for help but to try and retreat as fast as he could. He held both of his hands over his face, like if he could not see anything, the monster outside the door would not exist.

Chen Ge’s voice was laced with concern. In Qu Changlin’s memory, ghosts would not ask questions like that. The fingers that shielded his face opened a slight gap, and Qu Changlin peered at Chen Ge through it.

It was a common, honest face with concern in the eyes. How could someone like that be a bad guy? Qu Changlin gradually put down his hands. He was about to ask Chen Ge for help when he was suddenly reminded of something. After he was scared by the hanging man inside the secret room, there came a constant knocking from the door of the fourth cubicle, which meant that there should be a second ghost prowling the scenario!

Suppressing the anxiety in his heart, Qu Changlin tried his best to calm down, but when he spoke, his voice was still shaking. “Did you hear some kind of weird knocking earlier? It had a constant rhythm and sounded completely different from a normal knocking sound!”

“A knocking sound?” Chen Ge scrunched up his brows before relaxing them. “I think I know. You probably heard this.”

Taking one step back, Chen Ge grabbed the mannequin that was dangling in midair. He nudged it slightly, and the mannequin’s head bounced into the door again and again. “When I came in, I saw this mannequin swinging back and forth. Its head was bouncing against the door, which is probably what you heard.”

After hearing Chen Ge’s explanation, Qu Changlin fell into deep contemplation. The knocking definitely did come from the mannequin, but now, there was another question in his mind. He found Chen Ge’s voice suspiciously familiar. When the ghost threatened him earlier, it was this voice that had spoken to him!

“Let’s get out of here first, this place smells.” Chen Ge reached out to grab Qu Changlin’s arm, trying to help him get up.

“Don’t come near me!” He swung Chen Ge’s hand away and sat between the cubicle and the secret room.

“Why? What are you so afraid of, or are you still acting? Then, what shall I do to cooperate?” To ease the pressure on Qu Changlin, Chen Ge moved out of the way and allowed the former a free route toward the exit.

“Acting?” Qu Changlin lay on the ground for almost a full minute before he calmed down. After confirming that Chen Ge did not mean him harm, he slowly let his guard down. “Are you one of the visitors?”

“What do you think? Could I be one of the workers here and you’re the visitor?” Chen Ge attempted a joke, but the way he looked at Qu Changlin was like how one would appreciate a piece of moving art. Qu Changlin tried to stand up by pushing both hands against the ground, but he failed. He was about to try it again, but he suddenly realized how preposterous that would have appeared to the visitor.

To preserve his own pride as the Haunted House’s worker, Qu Changlin coughed drily and said in an unnatural tone, “That’s right, you’re lucky enough to have found the hidden plot inside this scenario! I am the key character at this scenario. Unfortunately, I’m currently injured by a spirit, and I need you to help move me to the headmaster’s office.”

“You’re the key character here? But according to the entry I read in the diary and the words written on the walls, shouldn’t the main character that this scenario is based on be called Xiao Lin?” Chen Ge was not purposely trying to make Qu Changlin look bad; he was merely curious about everything.

“Ha ha, actually, I am that Xiao Lin,” Qu Changlin admitted shyly.

“But the Xiao Lin in the story is only a child, whereas you look almost thirty already. At least the hair on your head points toward that.”

“You...” Qu Changlin had just experienced the scare of his life, and he was still recovering. That, combined with his natural reticence, meant that he did not know how to respond to Chen Ge.

“In any case, you need to rest. The headmaster’s office, is it? Okay, I’ll take you there.” Chen Ge gripped Qu Changlin’s arm. “Can you stand up?”

Qu Changlin held the wall as he stood up. His legs were weak, and he tittered like a toddler learning how to walk for the first time.

“Aren’t you a bit too in character?” Chen Ge then proceeded to do something that surprised even Qu Changlin. He picked Qu Changlin up on his back. “Lead the way then.”

“Okay...” Qu Changlin did not know how to feel. Just minutes earlier, he had received a message from his boss telling him to scare this visitor, but several minutes later, he was being rescued by the same visitor. The phone in his pocket vibrated several times. Qu Changlin silently took it out. His call to the boss had already disconnected. The phone was filled with messages from his boss.

“What are you doing? I told you to go scare him, not to reform him!”

“Where is the modified mannequin that you often boast about? Didn’t you tell me you’ve placed multiple traps inside the toilet and could scare even the boldest of individuals?”

“Why are you climbing on his back now?”

Reading the messages on his phone, the bitterness in Qu Changlin’s heart grew. He did not like to speak and was not good at maintaining interpersonal relationship. He really did not know how to answer his own boss now. His boss continued to message him, but Qu Changlin stopped looking at them. Helplessness and worry overwhelmed him. He felt like a failure, and his head sunk even lower.

“This Haunted House is quite scary. When I entered the toilet earlier, I was given quite a fright by the mannequin that dropped down from the ceiling. Especially the mannequin’s pair of eyes, they look so real. The creator must be a genius.” Chen Ge made it sound like this observation was made casually.

“I’ve been to many Haunted Houses, and this was the first time that I’ve been scared by a mannequin. The creator must be a genius, and he must have spent a great load of time studying this. The design of the toilet is quite amazing as well. The visitor knows that there will be a scare inside the fourth cubicle, so when they open the door, their attention is attracted to the mirror. So, when the mannequin suddenly drops down from the ceiling then, it creates such a scary effect. This is an ingenious design.” Chen Ge was sincere with his praise.

Hearing the compliment, color returned to Qu Changlin’s eyes.

“Actually, there are seven traps in total hidden inside the toilet. This time, there was an accident, and only one was triggered.”

“That’s impressive. Even with just one trap triggered, this is already one of the scariest experiences that I’ve had inside a Haunted House, but the story behind it annoys me somewhat.” Like he was talking to a friend, Chen Ge’s tone was friendly and natural.

“The story? I think it’s fine...”

“I got the gist after reading the diary entries and the words on the walls. Xiao Lin is a child that no one pays much attention to. No one wants to be his friend, so he tries to get other people’s attention by playing pranks, but in the end, everyone in the class ganged up on him.”

“Is there a problem with that story?”

“No, the story is fine, but I personally feel like Xiao Lin’s tragedy could have been easily avoided.” On the surface, Chen Ge was discussing Xiao Lin’s story with Qu Changlin, but he was actually sharing some of his personal thoughts. “When a person tries to mix in with the rest, he will only make his life that much more tiring. To give up on one’s hobbies and habits just to pander to others is truly a sad life.”

Qu Changlin nodded slightly but did not respond.

Chen Ge did not mind it and continued talking. “I’m sorry, I’m afraid I’ve wandered too far from the topic. Actually, it’s because I see my past self in Xiao Lin. Like him, I used to be alone and afraid; my goal in life was to make friends with everyone. Eventually, I confessed my feeling to a girl whom I had a crush on, but she rejected me.”

Qu Changlin listened to Chen Ge's experience and found resonance without even realizing it. "It must have felt awful to be rejected."

"Naturally, the pain stuck with me for a long time. During that period, I tried my best to stand tall again, but only those who have experienced this will be able to understand how difficult that really is!"

Chen Ge practically took the words out of Qu Changlin's mind, and the latter found himself nodding along.

"Relationships are something that is very hard to explain. One day, I overheard a conversation between my friends. The girl that I had a crush on actually hated how I always try to pander to others. At that moment, I understood, I needed to rediscover my true self."

A melancholy not reflected by his age coursed through Chen Ge's voice.

"I moved to a new company and started a new life. I stopped trying to live my life for other people's sake. I gave my new life and new job my best, trying to become my best self. Now, I am successful both career-wise and relationship-wise. I am even my own boss, and I don't need to care about pandering to others anymore."

Just hearing Chen Ge say that, Qu Changlin felt rather jealous, and he breathed out sincerely, "You are an amazing person."

"It's not me that's amazing. If one is willing to change, anyone can be that amazing, including the Xiao Lin in the story." Chen Ge stressed on the word change. "Everyone is their own main character. What we need to do is to spend time and effort on things that can make us truer to our real self."

Chen Ge's words left such an impression on Qu Changlin that his eyes were glistening. "Brother, actually, I have a similar experience to yours. I did have a crush on a girl, but now, I'm a bit lost..."

"There's no need to be lost, just remember this." Without raising his head, Chen Ge moved past the door of the storage room where Xiao Die ¹ should be. "Be your best self. When you bloom, the butterfly will come."

Chapter 744 - Stairs

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's words hit the softest part of Qu Changlin's heart, and a seed started to germinate there. The encouragement from this stranger formed a stark contrast to the messages from his boss, and the bitterness that had been hidden inside his heart for years finally exploded.

It's about time for a change.

This thought expanded in his mind at an uncontrollable speed. He clenched his fists tightly, but after a while, he slowly calmed down. Life was not a fairy tale; the premise of living one's dream was to first stay alive.

Qu Changlin was isolated by the workers at Nightmare Academy, which was why he had been arranged to monitor the toilet with its repulsive stench. He was bad at interpersonal relationships and lacked confidence in himself.

Being reminded of those facts, he sighed softly. "I wish to change, but change needs courage and ability, and I have neither of those..."

"You underestimate yourself too much. Even though we don't know each other, I can already see several positive points about you. Perhaps you simply haven't met someone who knows how to appreciate your talent. The scenario you're responsible for is so scary, and the mannequin inside it is horrifying, but you can stand the horrible stench and monitor everything in the dark. From how I see it, you have the talent to become one of the best Haunted House workers." Chen Ge slowed down his steps. "I hear there is a Haunted House in Western Jiujiang that is currently thriving, and it has a very good review online. If you really want to initiate a change, you can try your luck over there. After all, if you want to change, might as well start at the best location. Regardless of the result, at least you've given it your all."

Qu Changlin remembered Chen Ge's words and slowly nodded. Actually, his suspicion had not been vanquished, but he tried to ignore it. After all, this was his first time running into such a helpful visitor inside a Haunted House, and it was natural for him to be weirded out.

With the guidance from Qu Changlin, Chen Ge carried him to the headmaster's office. "We've arrived. Now what?"

"Just put me here." Qu Changlin shielded his phone with his hand. Reading the messages sent by his boss, he felt rather guilty toward Chen Ge. The man had lent him an ear and even helped to organize his life, but he was supposed to scare him with malicious intent. That did sound rather immoral.

"You need to be careful on your own. Right, how about you give me your phone number? If you run into any trouble, feel free to call me." Chen Ge was being very friendly, and that only made Qu Changlin feel much worse.

"Okay." Just outside the headmaster's office, while the camera was watching, the two exchanged numbers.

"I've explored the toilet, so I think I shall move onto another scenario, see you later." Chen Ge smiled and took out the diary from his backpack to see where he should head next.

Seeing Chen Ge walk away, Qu Changlin did not know what to say. He sensed a unique power from the man, one that could give people around him hope and warmth.

The phone in his palm kept vibrating. Qu Changlin lowered his head to look—it was his boss calling him. The latter probably saw Chen Ge leave on the surveillance footage, and he quickly called to demand an explanation. After he accepted the call, before Qu Changlin could say anything, he heard the yelling from his boss.

"What the hell are you doing? How many times did I stress for you to scare him and not show weakness? What have you done? Look at yourself!" Qu Changlin held the phone, leaned against the door, and did not say anything.

"Why aren't you speaking? Remember the promise you gave me? Didn't you swear that you would let him walk in but crawl out? What happened in the end?" The boss was angry. After all, his best employees went to visit another Haunted House, and all three of them came back unconscious. Now, the competition had come to visit his own haunted house, and four of his employees had already been scared! No one would be able to suffer something like that quietly.

“I said that I would let him walk in, but I didn’t promise that it would be him who crawled out. Now, he walked in, but I crawled out; I didn’t go back on my promise, did I?” Qu Changlin put his phone to the side. He was in no mood to listen to his boss’ scolding, but he thought that hanging up would be too rude.

“Say that again? Qu Changlin! If you dare, say that again!” On the other end, the boss was so angry that his voice was shaking. Hearing no answer from Qu Changlin, he did not even end the call but took out the walkie-talkie to give orders to the remaining actors at his Haunted House. “I don’t care what kind of method you use, I need you to scare that visitor by the name of Chen Ge! I will not allow him to ruin the name of Nightmare Academy!”

“Boss, he has cleared all the previous scenarios already. I think it will be very difficult to scare him.”

“I don’t care what you think! For now, I need all of you to gather!”

After the call ended, Qu Changlin could not hear his boss’ voice anymore. He leaned against the door, and it was hard to tell what he was thinking.

The classroom, storeroom, toilet... Let’s see, where should I go next?

Chen Ge flipped through the diary and started to read the fourth entry.

This entry was related to the stairs, and it recorded a classic ghost story known as the thirteenth step.

Every stairs at Nightmare Academy had twelve steps, but at certain moment, a thirteenth step would appear, and those who stepped on it would see some strange things.

When I first entered the Haunted House, the worker reminded the visitors to pay attention to the stairs. This can only mean that some of them have been trapped. This is perfect. I should go take a look. Perhaps I can run into another valuable employee like Qu Changlin.

The toilet was adjacent to the stairs. Chen Ge walked back the corridor and reached the mouth of the stairs.

There was no light inside the staircase. The weak light filtered in from the corridor, and the deeper one went, the darker it was. The corner landing between the two floors was particularly dark.

The stairs are made from cement, how are they going to make an extra step appear out of thin air?

With the desire to master this ‘technique’, Chen Ge placed the diary inside his backpack and walked into the staircase without turning back. The background music changed, and cold air came from all corners. As Chen Ge headed up, he counted the steps in his mind.

One, two... eleven, twelve. Everything’s normal, there’s no problem.

Chen Ge was quite disappointed. He walked up two floors at one go, but he could not find anything wrong with the steps.

Perhaps I’ve done something wrong.

He ignored the other ‘people’ and took out the diary and started to read while standing on the stairs.

Without any hints, how am I supposed to trigger this scenario?

When Chen Ge was figuring out that answer, footsteps suddenly came from downstairs. He looked through the gap in the middle but saw no one coming up.

Is it the background music?

Chen Ge could not see any visible speakers. Suddenly, he heard a child’s voice. It was very soft, and it repeated the same word again and again. “Daddy.”

Where is this voice coming from?

Chen Ge had more sensitive hearing than normal people, but even he could not tell where the voice came from. The person seemed to be broadcasting the audio from different speakers in unison.

“Stop pretending and hiding. I’ve already seen you!”

Chen Ge placed a ballpoint pen in his shirt pocket, carried his backpack with one hand, and headed downstairs.

The light in the staircase seemed to dim, and cold wind blew from above his head; the operator of Nightmare Academy seemed to have switched the air-conditioning to its lowest setting. When Chen Ge returned to the previous floor, he realized with a shock that the safety door that led from the staircase to the corridor had been locked, and a new seal had been taped across it.

“It’s locked? They plan to trap me inside the stairwell?” Chen Ge stood at the door and looked out through the glass panel on the door. Shadows flitted across the dim corridor. They were of various sizes and appeared to be armed with various tools. When his attention was distracted by the shadows out in the corridor, the footsteps echoing down the stairwell returned.

“Someone is following behind me, huh?” Chen Ge was not worried. He listened carefully and realized that it was a child’s voice underlying the sound of footsteps. The boy seemed to have been separated from his father and was crying for help.

Closing his eyes, Chen Ge tried to pinpoint the boy’s location. “The sound of the boy is mixed with a very weak sound of static, so it should be coming from a speaker. Even though the sound that came from downstairs is equally scary, it sounds much clearer, so the child should be located at the lower part of the building.”

As he went down the stairs, the light became dimmer and the walls dirtier. There were more conspicuous stains on the walls, and they made one feel uncomfortable. Other than that, Chen Ge discovered something interesting. At every landing between each floor, there was a black joss stick urn where three joss sticks sat. There had to be a purpose behind them, but for the time being, Chen Ge had no idea what they were for.

“The joss sticks are too damp to be lit, and some of them are even snapped...” Chen Ge squatted down next to the urn and picked it up in his palm to study. To his surprise, there was a picture placed under the urn. He picked up the picture. It was that of a man in his thirties, wearing a mask and keeping his head lowered like he was very afraid of being seen.

Chen Ge noticed that the man’s left hand was holding someone’s arm, but that part of the picture had been torn off.

“Are you calling me?” Chen Ge turned back to look, but there was nothing there. Narrowing his eyes, Chen Ge walked in the direction that the voice had come from, and he spotted a mini speaker hidden inside the stained wall.

“No wonder there are so many dirty stains on the walls—it makes it more convenient to hide these mechanisms.” Chen Ge’s finger swiped the front end of the speaker. “Something like this must be very expensive. If there’s a chance, perhaps I should install some in my own Haunted House. One of the reasons Nightmare Academy has grown so big is because it has mixed technology and ghost story, and that seems like the way to go.”

Chen Ge was not a prideful man. His willingness to learn was how he had managed to survive thus far.

“I haven’t checked my account for so long. I suppose there should be quite a healthy sum inside it. After unlocking the four-star mission, I should approach Director Luo to ask for a loan to purchase a set of the latest equipment for the Haunted House. Having my people control the latest equipment, hiding a scarier horror behind the darkness, that should be able to give the visitors quite an experience.”

Holding the picture in his hand, Chen Ge carried his bag and headed further down the stairs. The sound of footsteps and the boy’s crying came nearer and nearer. Nightmare Academy wished to create this impression that the ghost was catching up to Chen Ge. Using the various mini speakers installed in the stairwell and the manipulation backstage, that was exactly what they managed to do.

For a normal person, after they entered the stairwell and realized that the strange sounds were moving closer and closer, their confidence would slowly crumble, but unfortunately, that day, Nightmare Academy met their match.

After noticing the sounds getting closer, Chen Ge not only did not panic; he headed directly toward the source of the sound like he could not wait to meet the ghost in person, and that proved such a headache for the person manipulating the system in the background. He communicated nonstop with the actors to stop Chen Ge from entering the next scenario before the preparation was done.

“Using the sounds to discern the source is pointless. Each floor has been installed with those speakers, and the sounds could have come from any of the speakers.” Chen Ge stood inside the stairwell patiently. He focused. He attempted to pinpoint the third source of the sound amid the disturbance of the footsteps and the crying to triangulate the worker’s location.

Seeing this, the person thought that Chen Ge had given up. He quickly barked orders at his workers, telling them to get to work.

Chen Ge did not know about the things happening backstage. He utilized his superhuman senses and picked up two sets of footsteps coming from the lower floor, one heavier than the other.

“One of them comes from the speaker, and the other probably means that the actor is on the move.”

Without any warning, Chen Ge charged forward. The moment that he grabbed the doorknob of the safety door, there was another pale hand that grabbed the same doorknob from the other side. Two hands fell on the doorknob at once, and they lifted up their heads at the same time to look at each other through the glass.

In the corridor, there stood a girl wearing Nightmare Academy’s uniform. She wore very thick make-up, and her cheeks were pale. A purplish strangle mark was visible across her neck. The scariest thing was her eyes. A finger was stuck through her pupil, and both sides of her lips were painted with red dye.

Inside the stairwell, Chen Ge tightened his grip on the doorknob, and his eyes were glowing coldly. The image of a woman was reflected in his eyes, and a unique presence radiated off him. It was hard to describe, but in any case, he did not look like a living person.

The girl did not expect that someone would suddenly grab the door and appear behind it. Her face twitched, but she maintained her professionalism. To prevent the finger that stuck in her eye from sliding down, the girl tilted her chin upward and looked at Chen Ge in this strange posture.

“Are you the spirit inside the stairwell? The evil spirit that I will meet once the thirteenth step appears?” Through the door, Chen Ge studied the girl carefully. Hearing Chen Ge’s words, the girl was confused. It felt like Chen Ge was more in character than she was, but soon, a difficult conundrum was placed before her.

As a Specter born out of resentment and despair, how was she supposed to respond to Chen Ge?

If she said yes, then it would appear like she was more easily persuaded than required. Why should a Specter answer his question simply because he asked it?

But if she said no, then how was she going to explain the way that she was dressed?

The girl turned her neck to glance at the camera at the side. The script had not provided her the necessary lines should this situation arise.

“If you won’t answer, I’ll take it as a silent admission. However, I have a small complaint—where is the thirteenth step that you promised me?” Chen Ge pulled on the safety door, and it swung open just like that. However, at that moment, something strange happened.

The girl seemed to have received a new order from the backstage through her earpiece. She looked behind Chen Ge, and her expression was fearful like she saw something very scary behind Chen Ge. “He has returned!”

After saying that, the girl turned and ran away; she did not even stop to pick up the prop finger that had fallen to the ground.

“He has returned?” Chen Ge turned back to look. He assumed that it was Ol’ Zhou or the Pen Spirit who had appeared.

He glanced at the girl that soon disappeared, and he was confused. “Is this some kind of a story within a story, or has a real Specter appeared? Then again, this place is built at the spot where Yin energy gathers, so the possibility of that is not zero.”

Chen Ge was still thinking when the sound of footsteps and the boy’s crying came from the staircase again. After hearing them for so long, it started to annoy him.

“Are you done? Fine, you want to find your father? After I find you, I’ll let you experience once and for all the weight of a father’s love!”

For Chen Ge, whether he ran into a fake ghost or a real ghost, he was not afraid. If anything, he wished that his visitation would not be smooth sailing. If there was a talented living employee, he would slowly persuade them to join him; if there was a real ghost, things would be even easier. He would capture them and take them with him to be educated.

Looking down the empty corridor, Chen Ge was about to head downstairs when one of the doors down the corridor was pushed open. It was unclear whether it was pure coincidence or another set up.

“Found the exit! F*ck! It’s been behind us all along!” A man’s voice trailed down the corridor. It sounded rather familiar to Chen Ge. Soon after that, a couple raced out of the room. They were the visitors that had entered the Haunted House with Chen Ge.

The man’s name was Lee Yuan, and his girlfriend was Xue Li. There was another quiet woman with them; she was reserved and passive. Chen Ge did not know her name.

“Huh? Why are you here alone?” Lee Yuan spotted Chen Ge. He noticed the unnaturalness on Chen Ge’s face, standing alone in the stairwell. He waved and yelled, “Brother, there’s a ghost inside the stairwell! You need to come out! Don’t stay there for too long!”

“You can’t never tell with something like that. By the way, where are the three students that should have escaped with you?” Lee Yuan and Xue Li stuck close together. From their unkempt appearance, it felt like they had been through a lot.

“The four of us got separated after being chased by a ghost.” Chen Ge came up with a random excuse.

“We heard the screams even though we were far away. I’m so sorry for abandoning you guys in the classroom earlier.” Lee Yuan was quite embarrassed. From his perspective, he was partially responsible for what had happened to the three students. “In any case, we should move together from now on. We have already explored the art studio and music classroom. We’re planning to go to the abandoned storeroom next. What about you?”

“I’ve already been to the abandoned storeroom; the actor there is not feeling well, so I plan to head to the bottom of the staircase next.” Chen Ge took out the picture that he had found hidden under the black urn. “I plan to complete this mission of the thirteenth step.”

“Thirteenth step?” Lee Yuan glanced at the picture. “Brother, listen to me. I suggest you stay away from the stairwell. I’ve joined a WhatsApp group for those who have visited Nightmare Academy, and according to them, the stairwell might really be haunted.”

“According to the rumors, before the building was completed, there was a boy that came here to play, but he accidentally trapped himself somewhere and was never found. A small group of visitors swore that they saw a child inside the stairwell. They said that the urn in the stairwell wasn’t placed there to scare the visitors but to hold the boy back so that he wouldn’t wander off from the stairwell.”

“Do you have more details on this boy? Like his life experience, deficiency in his personality, or his family background?” Chen Ge listed off a series of questions that Lee Yuan had not considered before.

“What is the number for that WhatsApp group? Can I join?” Chen Ge sounded very excited. “I wish to share stories with them as well.”

“Sure.” Lee Yuan added Chen Ge to the group. “Those three students are so young, and they are separated from the rest of us; they must be very afraid now. Should we go look for them?”

“You can go and find them. I shall follow my own plan.” Chen Ge took the picture back and turned to leave.

“Are you really not afraid of ghosts?” The voice was coarse like grinding sand. The one who spoke was the woman who had been really quiet so far.

“Are you talking to me?” Chen Ge stopped moving. He was rather surprised because he noticed that the woman had been staring fixatedly at him, or rather, at the middle-aged man in the picture that he was holding.

“Yes.”

“If you’re afraid, then I advise you stay away from the stairwell. Nightmare Academy used to have both day and night tours, but the night tours were cancelled because people kept reporting the appearance of a boy inside the stairwell.” The woman’s gaze moved away from the picture to Chen Ge’s face. “This is not a joke. I know it sounds hard to believe, but he really exists. Didn’t you realize that even during daytime, the workers here rarely enter the stairwell or use the stairs to move between floors?”

“He’s my father. It was he who brought my little brother here to play ten years ago.” The woman revealed some startling information. Not only Chen Ge, both Lee Yuan and Xue Li were stunned.

“In other words, the boy who went missing was your little brother...” Lee Yuan held Xue Li’s hand and took a step backward. He felt his scalp going numb. The teammate who had been following them was the big sister of the little boy in the ghost story. This kind of mixing of ghost story and real life was a feeling that was hard to describe.

It was like the event from a fairytale suddenly happening to them. Lee Yuan and Xue Li subconsciously edged toward Chen Ge.

“So, why are you at this Haunted House? Just to visit? Aren’t you afraid of being reminded of the tragedy from the past?” Chen Ge did not expect the woman to possess this identity. She did not answer Chen Ge’s question verbally. Instead, she smiled.

“This Haunted House is already scary enough, and now you’re only making it scarier. Can we not stay here anymore? Let’s move onto the next scenario.” Lee Yuan came forth to smooth over the tension. He patted Chen Ge’s shoulder. “Let’s move together, we shouldn’t get separated anymore.”

After discovering the woman’s identity, neither Lee Yuan nor Xue Li wished to continue the tour with her. Just the thought made their skin crawl.

“That’s fine with me, but I’m going to the stairwell next. Are you sure you want to come with me?” Chen Ge put the picture away. He did not care about the woman’s warning and headed into the stairwell again.

“Why are you so stubborn?” Xue Li and Lee Yuan did not know what to say. Chen Ge was purposely heading into danger, and the man refused to listen to any persuasion. In the end, neither of them dared to follow Chen Ge into the stairwell, and they split up again.

Darkness slowly swallowed Chen Ge, and this time, he headed down the stairs to the lowest floor.

If someone had been around then, they would have witnessed a strange scene. A young man walking down the stairs with his head lowered, counting the steps on his lips like he was conversing with someone.

A glint of excitement burned in his eyes. Occasionally, he glanced at the camera, as if he was trying to memorize all the cameras’ location.

After hearing the woman's story, Chen Ge's interest in the boy in the stairwell only grew.

"He dares to wander out in daylight, so he can't be a normal lingering spirit. At the very least, he is at the level of a baleful Specter. But why would he stay here so long? Is it because he has unfinished business here? Could it be that the object of his possession is buried deep in the building's foundation?"

Chen Ge felt uncomfortable knowing that a boy's soul was unable to find peace. He decided to help the boy fulfil his last wish. Chen Ge rushed down the stairs. He did not know how to encounter the boy, so he found a blind spot from the camera and summoned Ol' Zhou.

"Just now, a woman told me a little boy is wandering in this stairwell, can you sense his location?" Chen Ge asked Ol' Zhou. He was hoping for a positive answer.

"I can't feel anything. Perhaps he's in hiding." Ol' Zhou looked around. "But this place is rather strange."

"Strange? What do you mean?"

"A normal lingering spirit wouldn't be able to appear in daylight. Even for baleful Specter, the period of appearance is only very short. If they wander too far away from their object of possession, it would cause irreparable damage, or at least, that should be the case. However, our Haunted House is an exemption. I do not know exactly why. Even in broad daylight, we can appear anywhere we wish inside the Haunted House. There is no limitation of time, and in fact, the place feels very comfortable to us."

After describing Western Jiujiang's Haunted House, Ol' Zhou turned to study the stairwell that they were in. "Even though this place is not as comfortable as the Haunted House, I can stay here for a very long time. This building appears to have shielded itself fully from the sunlight, and the Yin energy gathered here is very thick.”

“You can stay in Nightmare Academy for a very long time?” For a moment, Chen Ge thought of having Ol’ Zhou stay behind to act as his spy.

“Not only me, even normal spirits like the students from Mu Yang High School should be able to do it. This kind of location is too rare,” Ol’ Zhou said meaningfully.

“Nightmare Academy has been in operation for many years already. This is probably due to its unique geographical location and mode of operation.” Chen Ge leaned against the wall.

“The negative emotions vented by the visitors pooled around this place, and combined with the natural Yin energy inside the building, if this is allowed to continue, this place will only attract more and more ghosts and monsters.” Ol’ Zhou’s brows were heavily creased, and he looked severe. “Just like how our Haunted House occasionally has special visitors, if the people here cannot deal with them, something very dangerous might happen, and it might lead to unimaginable results.”

“You have a point.” Chen Ge thought silently. “So, what do you think we should do?”

“We should take over such a dangerous location. After all, we have already gotten used to the danger.” Ol’ Zhou sighed and offered his advice.

After a moment’s silence, Chen Ge finally said, “With great power comes great responsibility. Even though I don’t live in Xin Hai, I can’t just let bad things happen to Xin Hai. After we deal with everything at our place, we should contact Director Luo, and with his help, hopefully, we can take over this building and snip the danger at the bud.”

“It is lucky that they ran into someone like you, boss.” Ol’ Zhou’s brows relaxed, and he sighed.

Chen Ge and Ol’ Zhou were a dream team and formed a great contrast to the boss of Nightmare Academy and his employees. This was probably due to Chen Ge’s natural personal charm.

With Ol’ Zhou in tow, Chen Ge ran to the first floor. The end of the stairwell was not the exit but a large door painted on the wall. “The door is drawn on the wall. According to the game rules, if the visitors found out the large door was merely a painting, they would definitely panic.”

After spending so much time inside the building, Chen Ge had familiarized himself with Nightmare Academy’s layout. Both left and right sides of the building had a ‘not so safe’ safety corridor leading to dead ends. The real path was the elevator in the middle, the elevator used by the visitors when they started the tour.

There were pros and cons to this arrangement. On one hand, it could elicit the darkest fear in the visitor’s heart, but on the other hand, should they encounter a special visitor, the employees themselves had no place to run.

“Ol’ Zhou, after we find the boy, you stay near the elevator. Keep the elevator on your floor.”

“Understood.”

With Ol’ Zhou’s help, Chen Ge felt much more relaxed. However, the man in the surveillance room was in for a surprise because he was about to witness something inexplicable.

After Chen Ge and Ol’ Zhou arrived at the first floor, they soon realized that the building not only went up, it also had a staircase that led down into the basement. Staring at the basement first floor that was specially painted using red paint, Chen Ge paused. The atmosphere there was completely different to the scenarios above. The staircase was filled with dust and littered with dusty newspapers. Some of the copies even had dark brown stains on them.

Picking up a random one, Chen Ge scanned through it. “Carelessness of the father, the violation of building rules by the contractor, who is responsible for the boy’s disappearance?”

It was unclear whether the copies were the Haunted House’s doing or real articles. In any case, they were all articles about the missing boy, and they made the readers feel rather uncomfortable.

“The expert’s final analysis was that the boy should be hiding inside the incomplete underground basement.”

Chen Ge tossed the copy aside and bent down to glance at the basement corridor. There was no light, and the Haunted House seemed to have left this place untouched.

“If this is not a scenario, there should be a no-entry sign near the entrance, but there isn’t one, so this means that even though it might not be related to theme of phantom school, it is a part of Nightmare Academy. Technically, it should be a hidden scenario.”

To prevent being discovered by the camera, Ol’ Zhou maintained a distance from Chen Ge. The latter walked down the stairs alone. His shoes stepped on the newspaper, and they rustled noisily. When he was halfway down the stairs, Chen Ge suddenly stopped. He turned back to look before turning back forward. His eyes landed on the last step. “This staircase has thirteen steps?”

Chen Ge was sure that he was not wrong; the staircase that led underground indeed had thirteen steps. “Is it a mistake by the builder, or did Nightmare Academy do this on purpose? Why would there be an extra step?”

Carrying the backpack, he moved downward. His left feet landed on the thirteenth step. Looking around, Chen Ge did not see anything special. However, when he tried to move forward, standing only on his left leg with his right leg moving in midair, the ground before him suddenly ‘opened up’!

A man about the height of a seven-year-old child jumped out, screaming. Red paint covered his face, and he attempted to grab Chen Ge. Chen Ge’s full attention was on the thirteenth step, so he did not expect there would be a hidden compartment on the ground just beyond the last step.

The man surprised him, but Chen Ge’s reaction when he was surprised was different from all the other visitors. Before confirming the man’s identity, Chen Ge’s swung his backpack at his attacker and yelled out a name subconsciously. “Xu Yin!”

After those two simple words appeared from Chen Ge's lips, it seemed like Pandora's Box had opened. The cold draft that seemed ever constant in the basement stopped, the speakers suddenly malfunctioned, and there was only one sound remaining in the world.

Drip drop, drip drop...

Blood dripped from a tall spot before landing on the ground, forming blood rosettes. A thick fog of blood materialized next to Chen Ge!

The small figure hiding inside the compartment earlier lunged at Chen Ge, screaming. Before he got near, he was smacked backward by an old backpack. He landed on his limbs. He held his woozy head in his hands. Due to the attack, he did not hear what Chen Ge had said earlier. He gritted his teeth and was about to lunge forward again, but when he lifted his head, he saw a second person appear next to Chen Ge!

Fresh blood slid down the shirt, and the pair of melancholic eyes were like two blood whirlpools, swirling with curses and desperation. The man felt like his soul was about to be sucked into them.

The figure lay on the ground, and a chill spread through his body, down to his bones. His face that was smeared with red paint was frozen. It was as if time had stopped.

Who is that? There is no such character among the employee roster! His Adam's apple shook, and fear was pouring out of his eyes.

Seeing the figure's shaking body, Chen Ge soon discovered that he had stepped out of line. The thing hiding in the compartment was not a ghost, just a simple human worker. Actually, before Chen Ge made his move, he did consider the possibility that his assaulter was a human, but there was no Haunted House on the market that would hire a child to be an actor, so his first thought was that his attacker was a ghost.

The time that he had spent interacting with ghosts was far longer than with human beings. Combined with Ol' Zhou's previous analysis, the chance of ghost appearing at Nightmare Academy was higher than normal, so that had led to his quick conclusion.

However, after the figure showed himself, Chen Ge realized that the actor was actually a man with dwarfism.

I was wondering why his voice is so weird, so different from a child's; he should be an adult pretending to sound like a child.

Nightmare Academy had spent a lot of effort trying to create a scary atmosphere. Chen Ge remembered that there was a pair of twins working there. Their Haunted House did not have real ghosts, so they relied on other methods to create horror.

This man is an actor at Nightmare Academy. Unfortunately, he has witnessed Xu Yin's appearance. If I don't come up with a solution, he will spread this news to the others. Nightmare Academy already suspects my Haunted House of being haunted, so if they hear about this, who knows what kind of rumors they will start?

Of course, he was not going to kill the man because of this. Chen Ge's mind quickly turned, and he came up with a solution in few seconds. The expression on his face did not change. He bent down to give the actor a helping hand as if he had not noticed Xu Yin next to him.

"You scared me. I thought you were a real ghost. Sorry for hitting you earlier." Chen Ge tried to help the actor get up, but the man's eyes were not on him at all; he was fully focused on Xu Yin. Noticing the strange reaction of the actor, Chen Ge acted like he just discovered the anomaly. He slowly turned his head around. When he saw Xu Yin, his legs wobbled, and he landed on the step.

"What the f*ck! When did he appear behind me?" Chen Ge looked like he had been given quite a scare as well, but he soon recovered. "The actors at your Haunted House are quite good! I've visited many Haunted Houses. Yours is the first to be able to scare me like this."

Taking a deep breath, Chen Ge asked in a curious but shaky voice, like he was meeting Xu Yin for the first time, "Bro, how did you manage to walk without making a sound?"

Chen Ge stood up and walked toward Xu Yin. He only took a first step when he heard the shrill scream coming from behind him. "Don't go over there! He..."

The man's face was scrunched up in fear. The scream probably pulled on his vocal cords because his voice was unnaturally high.

"Stop acting, I am an owner of Haunted House myself. Even though you all are very professional, you're not going to scare me with just that." Chen Ge walked stubbornly to Xu Yin and raised his arm.

"He is not one of our actors!" Following the man's blood-curdling scream, Chen Ge's hand landed on Xu Yin, and then his fingers phased through Xu Yin's body. "Hmm?"

Chen Ge acted like he was surprised by this development. He was stunned by disbelief. About two seconds later, he adopted the same expression as the man. "There are really ghosts in this world?"

When he was 'frozen in fear', the man finally lost it. He crawled up from the ground and raced down the corridor. Shocked into mobility by the scream, Chen Ge snapped into motion. He jumped down the stairs, grabbed his backpack, and started running!

"How long has there been a real ghost in your Haunted House?"

"How would I know? If I knew that, do you think I will still work here? Basement one! Basement one! This is basement one! Please send help!" The man grabbed the phone and yelled for help. He and Chen Ge raced down the corridor, and the situation was chaotic.

Seeing the man and Chen Ge run away, Xu Yin stood on the step with a confused look on his face. Ol' Zhou, who had been hiding, joined him soon after. "Our boss sure is a quick thinker. He's pushing the blame, no, I mean, he is planning something big!" Ol' Zhou did not dare to get too close to Xu Yin. He stood several steps above the young man and said, "Our boss now needs your cooperation."

Xu Yin turned back to look at Ol' Zhou. He seemed to slowly understand what Chen Ge was doing.

"Do your best to scare them. There is still time to salvage the situation." Ol' Zhou looked weirdly excited. "It is about time we do it our way."

Hearing that, Xu Yin nodded. Droplets of blood slid down his shirt. He took one step forward, and the speakers throughout the building started to blur with static.

The smell of blood curled around Chen Ge and the small actor's body like tight lasso. The red ghost trailed behind them and could not be shaken loose no matter what. The two flew down the underground corridor and went back to the surface using another set of stairs.

"Boss! Are you there? Anyone? Say something!" The man was so anxious that he was about to smash the phone. He waited for a long time before the boss who had been calling other people finally replied.

"Xiao Zhao, you were perfect! I saw everything on the monitor! You managed to scare that man until he fell!" Nightmare Academy's boss praised the actor, but in that situation, the actor had no mood for compliments. His throat was sore from all the screaming.

"Boss, come to first floor quick! Call people to come here! I'm being chased. I can't hold on much longer!" The actor's small legs moved quickly; his whole body was about to collapse.

"Is the visitor chasing you? Don't worry, I'll get people to go help you now!" The boss still cared about his worker.

"It's not the visitor!" the man yelled between breaths.

"Then who is it?"

"A ghost wearing a red shirt!"

"We have an actor wearing a red shirt?"

"It's not an actor!"

"Then who is it?"

"It's a f*cking ghost! A real ghost!"

Chapter 749 - The Rumour Is Real

The small figure howled, and that finally brought his boss out from his joy. “A real ghost? A red ghost?”

As a Haunted House operator, he knew quite a bit about the rumors regarding red ghosts. Only people who had deep resentment and were heavily tortured before death had the chance to turn into a red ghost. Regardless of whether it was real or not, that was how most ghost stories and movies portrayed it.

“A red ghost appeared in my Haunted House, and he’s not one of my hired workers, huh?” That was how things currently stood, but the boss still had a hard time understanding it; certain things needed to be personally experienced to fully grasp it. “Xiao Zhao, do not panic, I’ll get people to go and help you right away! I don’t care what that thing is; as long as he is in my territory, he needs to listen to my orders...”

The call was ended by the small figure directly; he did not have the time to listen to his boss boast. Inside the dark corridor, the man ran as fast as he could. This was the first time that he had felt fear inside the Haunted House.

The previously familiar environment felt unknown. A thin layer of blood seemed to cover all the props and mechanisms that he came across along the way. All the speakers malfunctioned, and the static continued endlessly. If one listened closer, there were some whispers and painful wails mixed in.

The backstage seemed to be broadcasting a recording taken at a crime scene. The feeling of despair and pain spread through the Haunted House, torturing everyone’s ears, frightening their souls, pushing them to the edge of their sanity.

“What is happening? What’s going on? How come it feels like the whole building is coming alive? It feels like the building is going to swallow us whole!” The man screamed for help. He felt so helpless.

“How am I supposed to know? I came here from so far to visit you. I thought that I could come here to relax, but you found me a real ghost!” Chen Ge realized that the man was running too slow. Even though Xu Yin was purposely moving slowly, if they continued at this speed, they would be caught up to. Therefore, he picked up the man directly. “Stop wiggling! Where is the exit to this Haunted House?”

“The elevator! The elevator is the only exit! For some of the floors, you need the worker’s ID to access it. That is the exit!”

Chen Ge held the man by his clothes, and like a living suitcase, his body was dangling in midair, but that did not stop him from screaming.

“Okay!” Chen Ge memorized this detail and rushed to the elevator at the middle of the first floor. He pressed the button rapidly, but the elevator stopped at the first floor basement and refused to come up!

“That’s impossible! The boss is conscious of the possibility of an accident inside the Haunted House, so the elevator is maintained every day!”

“Then, can you tell me why the elevator isn’t coming ?” Chen Ge hissed anxiously like he was almost breaking down. “Is there another worker in the basement? Are they hogging the elevator?”

“No, I’m the only one arranged in the basement. The scenario is normally closed, but since today we’re being visited by...” At this point the man suddenly stopped, and the horror in his eyes grew. “Wait a minute, the elevator not coming up means that someone has been holding the elevator at the basement. Does this mean there is more than one ghost?”

The man was frightened by his own thought. Without the use of make-up, his whole face was already white.

“If the ghost has taken over the elevator, then this route is not safe anymore. After all, since they can control the elevator, they could use the elevator themselves!” The elevator was completely enclosed. The man did not dare imagine being trapped inside it with a ghost.

“What do you think we should do?”

“Run! Find other people! When we’re in a crowd, it should be fine!”

The man was really panicking. He had seen how Xu Yin appeared; that impactful image was seared in his mind forever. In the future, whenever he dreamed about it, he would bounce up in bed. Without a better option and with the ghost approaching them, Chen Ge grabbed his backpack and the man and rushed to the nearest scenario.

He kicked open the door, and the sound of a piano drifted out. The music was sad like something bad had happened to the pianist.

“Should we find a place to hide?” Being carried by Chen Ge, the man finally had the chance to calm down and think.

“You sure? In most scary movies, the characters die because they corner themselves while attempting to hide.” Chen Ge had far better experience when dealing with ghosts.

As they conversed, the sound of blood dripping appeared in their ears. The dripping sound was like a note asking for their lives. It was too late to leave. Following the man’s direction, Chen Ge hid them behind the piano.

The smell of blood slowly thickened. Through the gap on the bottom of the piano, Chen Ge and the man saw a pair of bloody red shoes.

The feeling of despair grew like vines. As if sensing someone’s entry, the piano played louder and more violently. The melancholic aria entered Xu Yin’s ear, and the melancholy in his eyes deepened. He turned to glance at the door and saw the room name—Music Classroom.

Various musical instruments were placed inside the classroom, and the most eye-catching was the piano placed in the middle of the room. Above the piano was a rope, like someone had committed suicide by hanging using the edge of piano as support.

As the melody from the piano changed, the rope above the piano started to move on its own like the spirit had returned.

The blood flowed, and Xu Yin stopped in front of the piano. He reached out to pull on the swinging rope and sat down before the piano. After a moment, his hands fell on the piano keys as the memory from the past rushed into his mind.

The bloodied fingers moved on the keys, and a different melody rang around the classroom. It felt like a rushing river, like moonlight, a dream that was always out of reach.

Hiding behind the piano, Chen Ge looked at Xu Yin. Suddenly, he realized that he did not know Xu Yin as much as he should. This unique Red Specter seemed to be hiding many things in his heart.

“If there’s a chance in the future, I should buy a piano for Xu Yin. Perhaps he can use music to ‘narrate’ the words in his heart.”

When the actor was scared sh*tless, Chen Ge took out his phone to look at piano prices. He put it away after looking through few pages.

“Please, shush.” The man held onto Chen Ge for dear life. He saw Chen Ge as his partner, albeit one that he was not familiar with.

The music suddenly stopped, and blood seeped out from underneath the white and black keys. However, upon closer inspection, this weirdly bright ‘blood’ was not as viscous as real blood.

Soon, the piano went out of control, and it started to play a strange tune. Xu Yin, who was seated at the piano, was surprised, and then he heard a forlorn weeping sound coming from inside the piano.

The 'blood' that leaked out from the piano keys pooled toward Xu Yin's fingers. His brows were locked, and his pair of sad eyes stared at the inner part of the piano. Following the weeping, a pair of pale hands suddenly reached out from inside the piano to grab at Xu Yin!

The fingers closed, and the pair of hands reached toward the chair, but they failed to grab anything.

They evaded?

The master of the hands did not panic. The 'surprise' so far was merely a test; the real terror would happen later. Reams of black hair curled around the piano strings, and a thin shadow crawled out from inside the piano. Long hair covered her face, and Xu Yin could see her bright red lips and scary expression through the gaps in her hair.

"Why don't you stay? Why don't you stay?" The woman lunged at Xu Yin like crazy. When the hair that blocked her sight part, her eyes that wore a red-colored contact finally got a good look at this unique visitor. What appeared before her eyes was a red shirt drenched in blood, wounds that had not recovered, and black threads that weaved through the flesh and blood!

This scenario was completely different from what she had expected; it was the first time that she had encountered something like that in her five years of working there!

Suffocation made her lightheaded, and the nerves in the woman's body were pulled taut. When she was almost touching the special visitor, she realized that time was slowing down, and her body became lighter as if her soul had been sucked out. She could see her body slowly approaching the visitor like in an out-of-body experience.

Chen Ge avoided Xu Yin 'narrowly' and ran out as fast as he could!

“Then, why don’t you go back to save her?”

“Er... Sister Ling’s sacrifice has brought us valuable time; we shouldn’t waste her kindness.”

When the man said that, Chen Ge turned back to look. Honestly, he was quite worried, too. I hope Xu Yin won’t act too rashly and traumatize the poor woman.

Inside the music classroom, the black and white keys were dyed red. The piano had gone out of control, and it played a maddening aria. Actually, when Chen Ge entered the classroom, he had immediately noticed that there was someone hiding inside the piano. The piano in the classroom was so much bigger than a normal one. It seemed to have been modified by Nightmare Academy to include a small space inside where a person could hide.

Chen Ge madly ran, and the small actor screamed, attracting lots of attention. The actors inside the Haunted House were used to screams and cries, but as they paid it more attention, they realized that something was wrong. How come it sounded so familiar? It sounded like the cries of their colleagues!

Chen Ge led Xu Yin through the music classroom, the clinic, and sports equipment room. He used less than three minutes to race through these scenarios.

By the time the workers received the notice from their bosses and left their scenarios to gather, Chen Ge had already led the small actor to the second floor.

“Why is the elevator stuck at the basement? Your Haunted House is built on top of a ghost’s liar, is it?” Chen Ge’s casual observation caused the man to burst out in cold sweat. There had been a rumor about that before. He had not believed it then, but with reality placed before his eyes, he could not retort. Just the thought of the elevator that they used daily had been taken by countless spirits and ghosts; he could not stop his body from shaking. Who would dare take the elevator in the future?

“Where should we go next? Where are your people? I can’t run anymore!” Chen Ge was really tired. To make it look more authentic, he had been running like crazy, and everyone who saw it would think that he was an unlucky fella.

“I don’t know, the elevator is the only exit. How about we go to the other scenario first, please don’t stop! You have many other scenarios you haven’t visited, right?”

“Have you encountered a visitor that goes on the tour while carrying an actor? Stop wasting time! Tell me where your boss is! I’m sure he can deal with this!” Chen Ge was not going to harm the workers too much. Previously, when the actors from Nightmare Academy and futuristic theme park went to his own Haunted House to make trouble, the Nightmare Academy’s boss must have known about it. After all, without permission from the boss, the employees would not have left the haunted house on a working day.

Chen Ge’s tour at Nightmare Academy had been heavily scrutinized by the boss as well. He wanted to scare Chen Ge as revenge, but he could not have anticipated that he would be roped into his own plot.

We’re both Haunted House owners, so there should be plenty of conversation topics for us.

With that in mind, Chen Ge sped up, and with the direction given by the small actor, he arrived at the fourth floor.

“The boss is inside the headmaster’s office. There is a hidden door behind the bookshelf, and behind it is the main control panel and surveillance office.” Since it was an emergency, the small actor had to share that information.

“Understood.” Kicking open the safety door, Chen Ge saw a group of people gathered outside one of the doors. There were males and females in different outfits, but they were all Nightmare Academy’s workers. “Is everyone gathered here?”

The workers at Nightmare Academy realized that something was wrong, so they had exited their scenarios and gathered before their boss’ office. Before they realized what was happening, they saw Chen Ge appear while carrying the small actor.

Hearing Chen Ge’s urgent footsteps, a few of them turned to Chen Ge. They did not have a good impression of Chen Ge, so when they saw Chen Ge was carrying a Haunted House worker, their expression turned uglier. “What are you doing? Let him down! Or else...”

Before the person who spoke finished, Chen Ge rushed to their side.

He put down the small actor and banged against the headmaster's office door madly. "Look at what you've done! Let me out!"

Chen Ge yelled crazily. The people wanted to stop him when they suddenly heard the change to the background music. An unknown static started to appear. This sound came from all the speakers, and even if they blocked their ears, they could still hear it.

"What's going on?" The main control room was inside the headmaster's office. The office door was locked, and the boss of Nightmare Academy was not showing himself. "Is the boss trying new thing?"

"No! Look down the stairs! What is that?"

The red blood vessels crawled down the corridor and rushed at them like a blood wave, trying to pull them down into hell.

An indescribable chill spread down the corridor. All the lights flickered, and then a red shadow appeared at the end of the corridor. He had his head lowered, touching the ugly wounds on his arms, his mouth mumbling, "So painful..."

“Yes, wasn’t there an article earlier about visitors purposely going to Haunted House to toy with the workers? Furthermore, there are so many of us. There is no need to be afraid.”

If there was a competition of blowing hot air, the workers at Nightmare Academy would definitely come out victorious. However, once Xu Yin approached, they all moved back in unison like it had been rehearsed many times.

“Open the door!” Chen Ge’s expression was filled with anxiety, but the door to the headmaster’s office refused to budge.

The other workers wanted to stop Chen Ge but were all forced back by the small actor. “Quick, go and get the boss! This is not a joke!”

Chen Ge was a visitor. No matter how hard he tried, he was not going to persuade the workers, but the same words coming out from the dwarf worker’s lips were far more convincing.

“Brother Zhao, what happened to you? Did something happen at your scenario?” the leading man asked. He still had not understood the severity of the situation, and the first thing that he did was push the blame onto Xiao Zhao, insinuating that everything was his fault.

“Do you still remember Pan Tian, the guy who was responsible for looking over the underground scenario with me? He asked for sick leave and didn’t come back to work, so in the end, he was fired.” The man was very afraid now. His experience that day had awakened all the fearful memories in his mind, and they all connected.

“I think I remember him. The boss said that he went back home to get married.” The leading man seemed to remember something.

“He did go back home but not to get married but to seek doctor.” The fear in Xiao Zhao’s eyes deepened. “Pan Tian has gone mad! No one knows why, but one day at work, he suddenly snapped! He kept saying that he saw something underground!”

“How come I didn’t hear the boss say anything about this?” All the workers gathered. They had no idea that something so scary had occurred at their working place.

“If the boss told you all this, would you still have come to work? Anyway, have you never considered why there were three scenarios underground but now only one is open? Why did he wish to seal up the other two scenarios? Haven’t you wondered about that?” Xiao Zhao was very tiny, and he needed to look up when he spoke, which caused his face to turn red.

Chen Ge, who had been busy knocking on the door, perked up his ears to listen. So, there is really such a history here!

With the danger encroaching, Xiao Zhao screamed, “No one knows what Pan Tian saw, but if I am going to guess, he probably saw him!”

Xiao Zhao pointed at Xu Yin. “Just earlier, this man covered in blood suddenly appeared! He materialized out of thin air before my eyes! I am not lying to you! Run! The thing hidden underground is coming up to get us!”

Red Specters were much scarier than a normal ghost; the presence was not on the same level. Baleful Specters could make people anxious, but Red Specters could draw out the deepest fear in their heart. Xiao Zhao was already traumatized, but now that he had shared the fear in his heart, he did feel better somewhat.

The headmaster’s door was still closed shut; the boss refused to show himself. Xiao Zhao, as the only worker who knew the ‘truth’, kept making things worse, and finally, the fear within the other workers exploded.

A blood wave crashed at them. This scene out of a nightmare happened in real life, and the feeling could not be described. The corridor seemed to morph into a python about to swallow them. The lights went off again and again, and every time that it came back on, the red shadow would be that much closer. The static in the speakers grew louder, and it eventually overwhelmed the original background music. Instead, a new sound appeared. It sounded like whispers and cries for help; no one could tell what it was. All they knew was that even if they closed their ears, they could still hear the sound.

Whenever Xu Yin took one step forward, the workers took one step back. It was unclear who made the first move, but just as they reached the mouth of the staircase, someone rushed down the stairs. However, once they saw the situation downstairs, they understood the seriousness of the situation. There was a worker lying unconscious at the door of the music classroom; an actor with white foam on his lips was curled up at the corner; people littered the corridor like a war had just happened there; the place was filled with signs of struggling.

Just one hour earlier, those people had been having lunch with them, and now, they were all lying unconscious on the ground; there was no scene more impactful than that.

“The real ghost has arrived!” The demands from the boss, the code of conduct, the salary, the examination—everything was tossed out of their brains. Those employees only had one thing on their mind—get out of there. Because they knew that if they ran one step slower, it would be them who were lying on the ground with foam pouring out of their mouths.

They did not dare stay even a minute longer. They rushed to the elevator, but no matter how many times they pressed on the button, the elevator refused to come up. It parked itself on the basement floor.

The speakers placed in the corners broadcasted the screams of a stranger. The yelling pulled at the listeners’ hearts, and chills ran all over their bodies.

“But why would it stop at the basement? Shouldn’t the ghost have left the underground? Wait, does this mean that there is another ghost down there?”

“Now the key question is, since the elevator is the only exit, how are we supposed to get out of here?”

The remaining workers pushed at the elevator door, and the feeling of despair spread like a disease.

“You only have one exit here? What if there’s an accident? Is this how Nightmare Academy treats its visitors? You view the visitors’ safety so lightly?”

When Chen Ge said that, it did not cross his mind that his own Haunted House did not even provide a single exit for the visitors, but there was one big difference between the two Haunted Houses. Once something happened at Chen Ge's Haunted House, the employees would show up at the first moment to help the visitors by removing the threat.

Being questioned by Chen Ge, the workers from Nightmare Academy stammered over the answer.

“Yes, I just remembered something; there are other passageways in our Haunted House!” The leader was struck by an inspiration. “Follow me, we'll go up to the second floor!”

After the Red Specter appeared, everything in the building started to go wrong. The interior was encased in a thin layer of blood, and creepy noises kept coming out from the speakers. It felt like the spirits within the building had returned!

In the emergency, the group did not stop to think about it and followed the man as he rushed up to one of the scenarios on the second floor.

“This is it!” The leader pulled back the thick curtains, and a weak ray of sunlight cut into the room. Without any hesitation, he kicked away the props on the ground. He grabbed one of the sturdier props and smashed the wooden boards that sealed the window. “We can't leave by the door, but we can use the window!”

The workers at Nightmare Academy worked surprisingly well during the crisis. Without much order, the few employees started to move and began the deconstruction!

Pa!

The wooden boards started to loosen, and by then, Xu Yin's footsteps were coming from the corridor. The sound of feet walking on blood caused everyone to break out in cold sweat. It came closer and closer.

“Quick, work faster!” The thick stench of blood rushed in from the door. The sound of footsteps came closer and closer before finally disappearing. Just as everyone was confused, Xu Yin's pale head peered into the room. He was blocking the doorway!

“He’s here! He’s coming to get us!” The workers gave it their all as they took down the wooden boards, and the window before them became their only hope.

Xin Hai Central Street was Xin Hai’s city most famous shopping avenue. No matter the time of day, the street was always bustling.

Ol’ Wu carried the new suitcase that his son had brought him and lugged it rather tiredly on his back while walking down the road. Some of the kinder passersby told him that he could have dragged the suitcase on the ground, and that would save him some energy. To them, he explained that he was training his body, but in reality, it was because he could not bear to dirty the wheels of his son’s present.

“This is such a beautiful suitcase; I won’t allow it to get dirty.” He had been poor for his whole life and supported his own son to college using his meagre income from rearing crops. Now that his son had settled down, he had invited his old father to visit him in Xin Hai.

This was Ol’ Wu’s first time going on a long journey, and like a child, he was curious about everything. He looked at the skyscrapers that reached into the sky and could not help gasping continually at how different a big city was.

He looked around the city for a long time, and when he was about to move forward, Ol’ Wu suddenly heard an insistent banging sound that came from the second floor of one of the nearby buildings. “Is it undergoing renovation?”

Before Ol’ Wu had the chance to turn to look, he heard a loud bang coming from above!

The originally sealed window was shattered with brute force. The wood chips floated down the sky. The crowd’s attention was pulled toward it, and as they raised their heads, something even more shocking happened!

A woman covered in red paint, with half a finger still stuck in her eye, jumped out from the broken window!

“Someone is committing suicide!” Ol’ Wu was so scared that the precious suitcase slipped from his fingers. He quickly pulled out his phone and tried to call the emergency services, but the woman turned in midair and landed rather safely. Then, she climbed up from the ground and ran into the crowd, screaming.

Before the crowd could recover, another man covered in blood with half of his face ruined by scars also jumped out of the window!

Searing pain came from his arms. He held on and opened his lips to ask, “Child, are you alright?”

“Thank you so much!” An adult male voice came from the small body. Ol’ Wu was so surprised that his arms weakened, and the person that he was carrying crumpled to the ground. The person did not make as much as a whimper when he landed. He held his bruised head and ran as far away from the building as he could.

“What is happening? Should I call the police? What should I do?” Ol’ Wu stood where he was. Just at that moment, another figure dropped down from the second floor. The person was wearing a doctor’s coat, and the tag around his neck pinpointed him as the health teacher. However, the man had six arms, and from the back, he looked like a mutated spider.

One after another, people in various strange outfits dropped down from the second floor of the building. Like a piece of living art, they had successfully attracted the attention of everyone on that boulevard.

Chen Ge was the last to jump down from the second floor. When he stood at the windowsill, he was shocked by the size of the crowd that had gathered on the street. "I seem to have gone overboard this time."

To not allow himself to stand out too much, after a moment's hesitation, Chen Ge also leaped out from the window.

"Another one is jumping!"

"Go and catch him!"

The screams echoed down Xin Hai Central Street, and more and more people started to rush toward the building. About ten minutes later, after the police arrived, the scene finally started to calm down.

"Do not stay here and block the road, please refrain from blocking the traffic. Let the ambulance through!" The police officers tried their best to move the spectators back. They did not spend too much time to find the few people who jumped out from the building.

"The things hidden underground have come alive! Officers! I know this is very hard to understand, but that is the truth!" Xiao Zhao kept jumping up and down, trying to get the police's attention. "There are still other visitors trapped inside! Quick! You have to go save them!"

The few Haunted House workers were agitated, still calming down from the trauma. After being briefly interviewed by the police, the officers looked at them strangely. Initially, the police had thought that there was some kind of serial killing. Then, they had thought that perhaps the Haunted House had been set on fire, and the people inside had been forced to jump out from the window to escape. However, after hearing the explanation from the Haunted House workers, the officers felt like they had been made a joke.

“The things hidden underground? Do you know what the consequence of making a fake police report is?” the leading police officer warned with a grim expression. After getting a grasp of the situation, he suspected that this was a promotional feature by Nightmare Academy to obtain some traffic online. It was all a fake show.

“We’re not lying to you! It is real! The thing came out of nowhere! He was wearing a red shirt!” The few conscious Haunted House workers talked over each other to try to describe the situation to the officer. The eyes frozen in fear, the words that came a bit too quickly, the exaggerated manner in which they spoke—the Haunted House workers appeared like they were still in character and were unable to shake their identity loose.

“Fine, fine, where is your boss? I wish to talk to him, get him out here.” The leader felt like he was unable to get through to these people. Communication was impossible.

“The boss?” The workers looked at each other. They all suddenly realized that their boss was still inside the Haunted House!

“Oh no! The boss is still inside!”

Waving the golf club in his hands, the boss of Nightmare Academy, Shang Guan Qing Hong, frowned slightly. “This is a bit too light. Oh well, I can’t find a better weapon in such a short amount of time anyway. This will have to do.”

He turned to look at the computer screen and inspected the few clips that he had cut out from the surveillance video. Chen Ge was the main character in all of these videos, and the clips that he had taken all showed Chen Ge running away in fear while inside his Haunted House.

“With such a weak boss, how is it possible that Jiujiang Haunted House could ever reach the height of my Nightmare Academy? Their boss is so easily scared. Look, he’s crying like a baby at my haunted house.” Even though many accidents had happened that day, the boss was still very happy. He felt like he had saved the reputation of his Haunted House and heavily damaged the pride and arrogance of his competitor.

“So what if the real ghost hiding underground has appeared? As long as it appears inside my Haunted House, it can be counted as a part of my Haunted House.” All’s fair in love and war. Shang Guan Qing Hong did not think that he had done anything wrong. “I have the clips of Chen Ge being scared until he mentally collapsed. Now all I need is to leave this place safely.”

After all the clips that he needed were safely transferred to his phone, Shang Guan Qing Hong put his phone away. He put on a safety helmet, knee guards, and gripped the golf club with one hand.

“It’s time to leave. Even though the thing coming from underground is creepy and scary, I have so many workers. As long as we cooperate together, nothing is going to harm us, not even a Specter from the beyond.” Taking in a deep breath, Shang Guan Qing Hong pulled open the door of the headmaster’s office. “Everyone, do not panic! Listen to my instructions, and we will leave this place safely!”

The door opened, but there were no workers waiting for him outside like he had imagined. There was not a single person in the dark corridor, only the cold wind from the air-conditioning.

“Where is everyone?” Standing alone inside the very dark corridor, Shang Guan Qing Hong could not help his heart from racing. He took out the walkie-talkie and yelled loudly into it. “Where are you? Xiao Zhao? Ol’ Lee? Xiao Jiu?”

He switched through many channels, but there was no answer. The only response was the echo of his own voice reverberating down the corridor.

“What is going on?” There was no one on the walkie-talkie, and no one answered his phone calls. It was as if he was the only person left in this world. “Where has this bunch of slackers run off to?”

Shang Guan Qing Hong held the golf club tightly. After a brief panic, he immediately calmed down. “When the accident happened, the first thing I did was contact them. The workers on this level should have gathered outside the door. Now that they have disappeared, there are only two explanations.

“First, the thing from underground is currently chasing after them. They have attracted the thing’s attention to give me the chance to escape.

“Secondly, they have all been taken down already. If that’s the case, it’s pointless for me to be worried or afraid. I will eventually run into the thing. Blindly panicking will only make me lose my focus.” Shang

Guan Qing Hong was not easily fooled. After all, he was the boss of the biggest Haunted House at Xin Hai. However, probably due to the smooth sailing of his career, there was a clear deficiency in his personality.

“My goal has already been reached, so I only need to guarantee my own safety.” Shang Guan Qing Hong decided to leave immediately. The safety of his workers? That was something to be worried about only after his own safety had been ensured. He edged carefully to the elevator. It took him a full two minutes to cover that short distance. The scenario that looked so familiar suddenly took on a strange and unique sense of horror. Wiping away the cold sweat on his forehead, Shang Guan Qing Hong pressed for the elevator to come. However, the elevator seemed to have malfunctioned, and it kept getting stuck at the basement.

“What is going on?” He pressed the button several times before the number shown on the panel started to change. The elevator was slowly ascending.

“Why is it so slow?” Standing at the elevator door, doing nothing, fear curled itself around Shang Guan Qing Hong. He looked down the dark, empty corridor and felt like something would appear in the dark. Fear was like a toxin, slowly spreading through his body. When the elevator reached the second floor, Shang Guan Qing Hong heard footsteps coming from the stairs. The background music also changed then. He could hear the voice of a strange man rather clearly. “The thing is coming.”

The footsteps coming from the staircase became more pronounced. Shang Guan Qing Hong stared at the number on the panel, and both of his hands held the golf club tightly. “Quick!”

When the footsteps appeared on the fourth floor, the elevator also reached the same floor. The elevator doors that were covered in different paints opened to the sides. Shang Guan Qing Hong hurried into it, but he only took the first step when his whole body froze. There was someone else inside the elevator!

The man was cowering in the corner of the elevator booth. His face was pale. When he saw the Haunted House boss carrying a golf club, he was given quite a fright.

“Who are you?” Both of them spoke at the same time, like they had rehearsed it earlier. They studied each other for about three seconds, and the boss was the first to break the silence. “Are you one of the visitors?”

He was paying Chen Ge his full attention that day, so he had not paid much attention to the other visitors. The middle-aged man with a white face nodded cautiously. He looked at Shang Guan Qing Hong guardedly. “And who are you?”

“I am the boss of this Haunted House. There is currently a small accident. Don’t ask too many questions. The important thing is that I will now get you out.” Before the visitor, the boss acted very professional.

After hearing Shang Guan Qing Hong introduce himself as the boss, the other person inside the elevator sighed conspicuously in relief. “Okay.”

“When you’re famous, there is bound to be some detractors. The accident today is because a competitor came here to create trouble. Normally, something like this wouldn’t happen at my Haunted House.” Shang Guan Qing Hong forced a smile and very easily shifted all the blame onto Chen Ge, which was not that far from the truth. “Friend, what is your name?”

“My surname is Zhou. Everyone calls me Ol’ Zhou.” The footsteps from the corridor came rapidly; they were already turning the corner of the fourth floor. Shang Guan Qing Hong quickly pressed for the elevator doors to close. The elevator doors that were painted with fake blood slowly closed, and those strange footsteps were drawing closer and closer!

Currently, trapped inside the elevator, the Haunted House boss could not do anything. His heart was filled with anxiety.

“Close, close, close!” Perhaps God heard Shang Guan Qing Hong’s prayers. When the elevator doors closed shut, the footsteps were still several meters away.

“We’re safe now.” He heaved a sigh of relief. However, something that he did not expect then happened before his eyes.

An arm reached out from inside the elevator to block the closing doors!

Shang Guan Qing Hong swore that he was not mistaken; the pale arm indeed reached out from inside the elevator!

The hand touched the elevator door, causing them to open again. Shang Guan Qing Hong glared at Ol' Zhou, who had moved to the door, and he was so angry that his head was about to explode.

His lips were devoid of color, but before he could get any words out, the thick stench of blood rushed into the elevator like a wave!

When he raised his head, Shang Guan Qing Hong saw Ol' Zhou move to the back, and a strange man was standing at the elevator door. The shirt was as red as blood, and black curses crawled all over his body, cutting in and out of his flesh and skin.

"Don't come any closer!" The Haunted House boss squeezed himself into the corner and watched as the bloody figure strode into the elevator. From the corner of his eyes, he saw Ol' Zhou press for the doors to close.

The elevator doors slowly closed, and this time, no one was there to stop them from closing.

"Your boss is still inside the Haunted House?" The leading officer saw the worry on the workers' faces, but he could not understand what had caused them to react thusly.

"Officer please, you have to save our boss! He's still on the fourth floor! There are other visitors still inside the Haunted House!" The officers felt like the Haunted House workers did not sound like they were joking, so they nodded. They gathered at the front entrance of the Haunted House.

"This elevator is the only exit in our Haunted House, but the elevator is currently being controlled by some unnatural beings! It stopped at the basement and refused to move..." Xiao Zhao was jumping all over when he spoke. He led the way and pointed at the panel showing the number. However, when he saw the number of the panel, his whole person froze. The number showing was two, which meant that the elevator was currently on the second floor.

"The elevator moved? This must mean that the thing from the basement has taken the elevator up to the second floor!" Xiao Zhao screamed. The number on the panel was still changing and it soon turned to one. Several seconds later, the elevator doors opened slowly before the police officers and the Haunted House workers.

The boss of Nightmare Academy was lying unconscious on the ground, still gripping the golf club. His body was spasming, and the man had already lost his consciousness.

If this was a self-made show, it had gone over the line. The boss himself was unconscious. The leading officer soon realized that things were far more serious than he had imagined. He quickly ordered a few men to take the elevator into the building.

They scoured the whole building but could not find the ‘unnatural being’ mentioned by the Haunted House workers. Instead, they ran into many fainted Haunted House workers and a couple that looked at them strangely. When they saw the police approach, the couple thought that they were actors of the Haunted House. They tried their best to trigger the event.

About thirty minutes later, the area near the entrance was cleared out. The fainted Haunted House workers and boss were sent away in ambulances. The remaining visitors and actors stayed back to give their statements to the police. In the end, everyone was taken to the nearest police station.

Sitting inside the police car, Chen Ge very expertly helped himself put on the seatbelt. He did not expect that his first visit to Xin Hai would end up with him sitting inside Xin Hai City’s police car. “Officer, you have to trust me, I am really innocent. I came from Jiujiang and travelled so far just to visit the Haunted House. Actually, I am also one of the victims...”

“Get out the way! Emergency! Get out of the way!” Medical carts rolled down the corridor, rushing the unconscious patients into the emergency room.

“There’s no more space! Send the other patients to the other sick hall! Xiao Zhang, go and call Doctor Liu and Doctor Xu who are on off duty to come back to work! A large group of workers at the haunted house on Xin Hai’s Central Street have fallen unconscious! Current speculation is that they all suffer from food poisoning! They might have ingested food that caused hallucinations!”

“There is nothing wrong on the physical scan! They probably suffered from some kind of trauma, and the fainting is because the body's self-defense mechanism kicking in."

"When will they wake up?" The leading officer was suffering from a headache. Xin Hai had always had a good security, and the area under his jurisdiction had never seen something like this before.

"No clue! Shortest will be one or two hours, but it might be days; we cannot tell for sure." The doctor could not give an exact answer. "If you are in a hurry, I suggest you transfer them to Jiujiang Central Hospital. I hear the doctors there specialize in fainting spells. They even have a special care unit that accept patients with this kind of illness!"

"There's a hospital that specializes in treating fainting patients?" The leading officer hesitated. This had gone beyond something that he could make quick decision about.

"Other patients should be fine, but the condition of the patient by the name of Shang Guan Qing Hong is very serious. He is in a deep coma and does not respond to any external stimuli. It is my professional suggestion that he be transferred to Jiujiang immediately. He should receive treatment from the leading experts."

"Okay, I will report that to my superior instantly." The leading officer nodded. "The hospital in Jiujiang is called Jiujiang Central Hospital, yes?"

"Yes, Jiujiang Central Hospital, Number 514, theme park care unit!" the doctor said seriously. "I do not know why they named their unit that way, but I am certain that they are the best of the best in treating coma and fainting patients."

“You’d better move fast; the patient’s condition is very unstable. If he stays in coma for too long, it’ll cause damage to his brain.”

...

Pushing open the glass door of the police station, a wave of commotion rushed at the captain. He frowned, looking at his place of work. The place was bustling with people, and they had exaggerated expressions as they unloaded their grievances onto the officers on duty.

“This has become such a lawless place! Is this how the rules work?” the captain yelled at the young officers who were on duty. His voice was stern.

“Captain Cai! You’re finally back. It’s not that we’re not following the rules, but the situation is very unique.” The young officer handed the compiled written record to Captain Cai.

“Red Specter? Ghost stories? Spirits underground? Knows how to play the piano? What is all this?” Captain Cai slammed the document heavily on the table. “Have you all gone insane? Have you lost your basic common sense?”

“No, captain. We’ve tried to understand it, and we even used the lie detector; it doesn’t look like they’re lying.”

“Horsecr*p! Toss that broken machine out then!” Captain Cai was angered. He took over the investigation personally, but after a long period questioning, he realized that he had spoken too soon. This group of actors that had escaped from the Haunted House were so into character that it appeared like they were no longer able to differentiate between ghost stories and the real world.

“Has that Haunted House hired a bunch of asylum patients?” Since he could not get anything from the Haunted House workers, Captain Cai decided to shift his focus to the visitors. The workers could have lied to protect the Haunted House, but the visitors would not. To prevent the workers from being influenced by the actors, Captain Cai purposely moved the three visitors to a separate room. “Follow me, please.”

After closing the door, Captain Cai, who maintained a severe expression, finally relaxed. “Calm down, you only need to answer honestly. There is no need to be concerned.”

This was Lee Yuan and Xue Li’s first time at the police station, so they were nervous. In comparison, Chen Ge looked as comfortable as if he was at his own home. He even got up to use the water dispenser to fetch himself a glass of water.

“When the accident happened, there were only the three of you inside the Haunted House, right?” Captain Cai’s eyes moved away from Chen Ge to fall on the couple.

“There were also three students and a young woman who didn’t like to speak,” Lee Yuan answered.

“We’ve verified the identities of these four—they are all temporary actors hired by the Haunted House.” Captain Cai had his men send in the written record, and he flipped through the details casually. “Give it some more thought. During your tour, did you come across other visitors or people that didn’t appear normal?”

“People that didn’t appear that normal?” Through the window of the room, Lee Yuan looked outside. “None of them look normal.”

He really did not understand what was happening. He merely went for a Haunted House visit but ended up at the police station. “Sir, me and my girlfriend just went to visit a haunted house, hoping that it would be a memorable date. We had no idea the place was hiding such a big secret. If we knew that, we would have demanded to be let out. Why would we stay there for so long?”

“Understood. In other words, the two of you didn’t come across the red monster mentioned by the actors during your tour.” Captain Cai very quickly caught onto the key. The visitors had no reason to lie, so they should be telling the truth. “The monster and spirits at the bottom of the building are probably a show designed by themselves. I suspect that this is their latest promotional method.”

“I guess so.” Lee Yuan and Xue Li were still shivering. They had only just realized that the three students and young woman were all actors. To have actors play visitors to get their trust before betraying them, that was a cruel tactic.

Captain Cai asked a few more questions, and they answered honestly. In the end, Captain Cai could not get anything new, so he moved his attention back to Chen Ge.

“Chen Ge.”

“I hear you’re from Jiujiang, and you came here today to visit this Haunted House?”

“Yes, I operate a Haunted House myself, and I came to visit the biggest Haunted House in Xin Hai to study.” Chen Ge did not hide this information because he knew that the police could find it out easily.

“In other words, you are in the same business as the actors outside?” Captain Cai narrowed his eyes. Years of experience told him this young man was more than he seemed.

“My business is incomparable to theirs. I have a small budget business. They are much better than I am.” Chen Ge pouted sadly.

“According to witness accounts, you jumped down from the second-floor window alongside the actors, so did you see the red monster that they mentioned?”

“Honestly, I was made confused by them. At the time, everyone was screaming, and the speakers were broadcasting this strange noise. Everyone was running, so I was following them.”

No matter what Captain Cai asked, Chen Ge’s answers were perfect.

“Okay, the three of you, please follow this officer. After we complete some paperwork, you can leave.” After they left, Captain Cai stared at the chair that Chen Ge had vacated. “This young man’s mind is very sharp, and his answers were perfect; it was if before I asked the question, he already had the answer. He doesn't appear that old but has a calmness beyond his age. During our conversation, there was not a ripple of emotion in his eyes. That is too scary. No, I need to look further into this. Perfection is a form of imperfection."

Captain Cai used the computer to log into the law enforcement server. In the modern age, looking for criminal data was very simple. After he keyed in Chen Ge's information, he was stunned when he saw the page that popped up.

The man was not only not a criminal, he had even been given a medal for his numerous contributions to the city of Jiujiang. He had received medal and award from the inspector of Jiujiang Station personally. He had also been a helpful aid in many police cases—just the information of his commendation was enough to fill up a whole page!

With his lips twitching, Captain Cai suspected that Chen Ge was an undercover police officer sent over by Jiujiang law enforcement. This kind of background was rare even in Xin Hai.

"There is short interval of time between each entry. Does this guy spend most of his time doing nothing but wandering about the various crime scenes?"

Captain Cai found that very hard to accept. After reading through everything, he took out his phone and called a number. It rang a few times before being answered. An impatient voice came from the other end. "Ol' Cai, speak quickly. I don't have time to waste."

"Lee Zheng, after you got transferred to Jiujiang's heavy crime unit, even your tone has changed!"

"We're working on a homicide case, so I don't have time to chat. I'm hanging up. After this case is over, I'll treat you to a meal."

"Wait, this won't take up too much of your time." Captain Cai looked at the computer screen. "I'm calling you because I want to ask you about someone."

"Who?"

"Chen Ge."

"Who? Say again."

“He’s the boss of a haunted house in Jiujiang. His name is Chen Ge. I saw the page that you had on him inside the shared server.”

“He has gone to Xin Hai?” Lee Zheng sounded worried.

“Yes, we got an emergency call this afternoon. People were jumping out from a Haunted House, and we found him there.”

“Was he the one who made the call?”

“No, he was one of the jumpers.”

“Chen Ge jumped out of the building? That shouldn’t be! Is he alright?” Lee Zheng sounded confused.

“That kid is very well-trained. Quite a number of people jumped out of the second-floor window, and he is the only one that walked away unscathed.” Captain Cai was confused as well. He had checked the surveillance footage from the building opposite. Of all the jumpers, Chen Ge was the one with the most experience. The slowing down, the landing pose... everything was right out from the textbook like he had done it many times before.

“That does sound suspicious, but I don’t think you should worry that much. As long as it was not him who made the call, it probably isn’t anything big.” Lee Zheng shared his experience.

“We have a few injured individuals and some still unconscious, that is nothing serious?”

“I don’t know why he is in Xin Hai. If you have the misfortune of receiving his emergency call in the future, you will understand what I mean. Ol’ Cai, enjoy the temporary peace now. I still have something else to do, I gotta run.” Lee Zheng then prepared to hang up.

“Wait a minute! What do you mean by that? If you don’t explain yourself, there is no way I am going to let you hang up.” Captain Cai could be quite stubborn.

“Fine, fine. You win. What else do you want to know? Ask quickly.” Lee Zheng was really busy. He had just gotten discharged from the hospital, and the work had been piling up. He had more than a few cases that he needed follow up on.

“I’ve looked through his information, and the time between each entry of his police work involvement is very short. In fact, there’s a period where he provided two vital pieces of information for two different cases within one week.” Captain Cai sounded serious. “Can a normal person run into two serious crime cases within one week? Can so many killings happen so consistently around a normal person? Unless he’s the killer, the possibility of this is very, very low.”

“Your suspicion is very valid, but did I say that he is a normal person?” Lee Zheng knew the man had misunderstood something.

“I wish that was the case. The kid has a natural talent for law enforcement, but unfortunately, he wastes that talent on running a Haunted House.” Lee Zheng sighed regretfully. “When we first received the call from him, we ran a thorough background check on him. He might look easy-going and very not serious normally, but he carries a pain that he doesn’t share with others.”

“Oh? What’s his story?”

“About one year ago, both of his parents practically disappeared off the face of the earth. There were no bodies or any news about them. Even now, the case is still open. Based on the report from a local senior, the child was devastated. He lived a purposeless life for a very long time and finally found his footing several months ago. It was probably then that he started to take it upon himself to find his parents. The surveillance near his home showed him leaving home late at night; he was probably compiling his own clues. He went to those dangerous places to look for his family.”

After hearing what Lee Zheng had to say, Captain Cai did not respond instantly. His memory of Chen Ge appeared in his mind, and that pair of calm eyes struck him the most. “His actions are very dangerous. Haven’t you tried to advise him against doing so?”

“We’ve done that more times than I can count, but it’s pointless. Actually, I can understand why. Place yourself in his shoes, his family is still missing, and all the memories in the past have become a haunting memory. A person like that will definitely hate criminals with a passion.” Lee Zheng had a lot of respect for Chen Ge; he admired him a lot. He had survived a complicated and troubled past to grow into a man with a great, unshakeable sense of justice. Captain Cai started to see it that way as well.

phone to call his superior to ask them for permission to send the boss of Nightmare Academy to Jiujiang for treatment. After getting the permission, Captain Cai departed for the hospital immediately.

Chen Ge left Xin Hai Police Station at around 5 pm. Compared to Jiujiang Police Station, the procedure undertaken at Xin Hai Station was much more complicated, but that was probably because the officers in Jiujiang knew Chen Ge and skipped most of the steps.

“I thought that I could leave around noon but ended up spending a whole day here.”

After leaving the station, Chen Ge got a cab and headed back to Nightmare Academy. After all, he needed to meet up with Xu Yin and Ol' Zhou. Xin Hai Central Street was filled with busy people as usual; the incident that afternoon did not slow down the traffic there. With his head lowered, Chen Ge mixed in with the crowd and glanced at the Haunted House. The door was closed, and there was police tape at the door.

“I can't use the front door. I'll need to cut through the shops.” Chen Ge entered the shopping lot through the building's other entrance. He activated the recorder to try to contact Xu Yin. He walked around the building for several minutes, and suddenly, the recorder gave out a static sound. Chen Ge realized that Xu Yin had sensed him.

He turned into the toilet and found an unoccupied cubicle and started to call Xu Yin's name in his heart. The lights in the toilet flickered, and the doors creaked. Suddenly, the light went out.

The faucet dripped noisily, and a faded scent of blood permeated the air. Then a row of bloody letter appeared on the cubicle door. ‘The toilet of the underground parking lot.’

Chen Ge did not think too much of it and headed to the basement parking lot. He searched for a long time but could not find a toilet; all he found was an abandoned storeroom that had a no-entry sign on it.

“This should be the place, right?” Opening the door, Chen Ge entered it. This place was had indeed formerly been a toilet, but it had been abandoned a long time ago and was used to store various trash.

He called Xu Yin again, and this time, the red Xu Yin and the honestly smiling Ol' Zhou appeared at the same time.

“Boss, we found something inside this Haunted House.” Ol’ Zhou led the way. They opened the door of the last cubicle. The wall was broken down, and behind it was a dim, dark passageway. After moving all the wooden boards that blocked the way away, Chen Ge and his two employees walked into it.

“This place is connected to the haunted house’s basement; it leads to a sealed scenario.”

With Ol’ Zhou leading the way, Chen Ge came to a scenario that was completely sealed up using wooden boards. After removing the boards, Chen Ge looked into it. The whole scenario was empty. Most of the props had been removed, leaving behind a desk in the middle of the room. It was a normal desk, nothing special about it. Chen Ge looked inside the drawer and found a diary sitting inside.

“Is this what you found?” Chen Ge took the diary out and flipped through it. He thought that the content looked very familiar. He took out the diary that he had obtained during Nightmare Academy’s new student welcoming ceremony. After comparison, the two diaries were about ninety percent similar.

The only difference was that the diary inside the drawer had all of its words sewn on the pages using red threads. It looked rather scary.

“This diary came from behind the door?” Chen Ge knew that Ol’ Zhou would not say something like that to trick him. He placed both of the diaries that he had found at Nightmare Academy on the table.

“Boss, I suspect that the success behind Nightmare Academy is because the boss took a lot of inspiration from this diary when he was designing the haunted house. The content of the diary records the scenarios behind the door very clearly, and the boss practically recreated the whole scenario behind the door in real life,” Ol’ Zhou gave his own opinion.

“Could it be that the boss of the Nightmare Academy has entered the world behind the door?” Those who managed to survive a trip to the world behind the door were definitely not normal.

“We’ve interacted with the boss of Nightmare Academy already. He is just a normal person with a heart weaker than normal, so I sincerely doubt that he has been to the world behind the door. He probably found this diary by accident.” After Ol’ Zhou gave his analysis, he turned the diary to the last page. “The handwriting in this diary is all different; it is written by different individuals, and some of the pages have been torn apart. However, that is not that important. The important thing is that Xu Yin and I found this inside the diary...”

Ol’ Zhou pointed at the bottom of the diary’s last page, where several words were written—I, Die, One Three, School of the Afterlife, Run.

The phrases did not seem connected, and it was hard to tell what the writer was trying to convey. Ol’ Zhou and Xu Yin saw the term School of the Afterlife, and they knew that their boss had been trying to find information on this school.

When he saw the terms School of Afterlife, even the glow in Chen Ge’s eyes changed. “School of the Afterlife? Could it be that this diary was taken out of the door at this phantom school?”

“That is highly probable, but I think that we should ask the Haunted House’s boss in person to find out the truth.” Ol’ Zhou scratched his head. “The man is probably still at the hospital. Since he was the last person left inside the Haunted House, Xu Yin and I decided to play with him for a while.”

“There’s no need to worry. The police did brief me a bit about the boss’ situation. They told me that he is not in mortal danger, so we should get moving to the hospital to find him.”

School of the Afterlife was the first four-star Trial Mission given by the black phone. The time limit to unlock the mission was almost up, but Chen Ge was not confident that he could complete it. Xu Yin was injured, and Zhang Ya was hibernating. It was very dangerous to commit to a four-star trial mission in his current state. However, Chen Ge was unwilling to give up on this mission. The futuristic theme park was about to open for business, so if he stopped working on his Haunted House, the customers that he had gathered over the few months prior would most likely abandon him.

This was why he had been researching the School of the Afterlife so much. Be it to attempt the trial mission or to abandon it, he would require plenty of information before he came to a decision.

“You’ve been here the whole afternoon—did you find anything else?” There was another purpose that Chen Ge had asked Ol’ Zhou and Xu Yin to stay back. He wanted them to examine this location.

Ol’ Zhou shook his head. “Even though this building is situated at a strong Yin location and shields itself from the sunlight no matter the time of the year—which means that the Yin energy is heavily pooled here—since it is situated on Xin Hai Central Street where people come and go much too often, there are no ghosts or monsters that linger here.”

“It has been built in the middle of a busy city, but it is also a place where lingering spirits can stay for a long time. The location of this Haunted House is perfect.” The more Chen Ge stayed there, the more he fell in love with it. “When I return, I seriously need to talk to Director Luo about this.”

Chen Ge shoved both of diaries into his backpack. He summoned back Xu Yin and Ol’ Zhou and silently sneaked out of Nightmare Academy.

“I need to find a way to wake up the boss of Nightmare Academy as soon as possible. Unfortunately, Doctor Wei is busy manning the fort at the Haunted House, or else this could easily be solved.”

When he was at the police station, Chen Ge had overheard the name of the hospital where the Haunted House workers had been admitted. After he left the underground parking lot, he hailed a cab to rush to that hospital.

This hospital in Xin Hai was huge. There were a lot of patients. Chen Ge walked around for a long time before he found an officer standing on duty outside one of the sickrooms.

The actors from Nightmare Academy are inside this sickroom? Chen Ge pretended to walk past the sickroom, but when he passed the glass window in the door, his pupils narrowed as he used Yin Yang Vision. Almost everyone is in there, but how come the boss is nowhere to be seen? Is he still in the emergency room? That's impossible. Ol' Zhou and Xu Yin are both so kind, so they wouldn't have harmed him so seriously.

Chen Ge knew his employees well, and he placed his trust in them. Before arousing the officer's suspicion, Chen Ge went to accost the officer. He asked with a face filled with worry and anxiety, “Sir, is my big brother alright?”

Hearing that breath that was catching in Chen Ge's throat and seeing the worry on Chen Ge's face, even though the officer was confused, he did not turn Chen Ge away. “Who is your big brother?”

“He's the boss of Nightmare Academy! I heard that something bad happened to him. How's he doing?”

“You are Shang Guan Qing Hong's younger brother?” The officer tried to calm Chen Ge down. “Your brother's condition is not looking so good—he is in deep coma. Following his doctor's suggestion, we transferred him to Jiujiang City to seek better treatment.”

“You've sent him to Jiujiang?” The shock on Chen Ge's face could not be hidden, but he reacted very quickly. He swiftly added, “You refused to let him seek treatment at the biggest hospital in Xin Hai but transferred him to a hospital at a small town. Based on my knowledge, the medical standard there is much lower than Xin Hai! Are you treating my brother's life as some kind of joke?”

“Please calm down. Yes, the overall medical standard of Jiujiang is not as good as Xin Hai, but in treatment of trauma and coma, they are the

“You aren’t lying to me, are you?”

“You can look it up online if you want. The hospital’s name is Jiujiang Central Hospital. They have a care unit that specializes in fainting cases.” After obtaining the information that he wanted, Chen Ge excused himself from the officer, and he was ready to leave.

“Wait a moment!” Seeing Chen Ge’s back, the officer suddenly felt that this young man look familiar; he seemed to have met him that afternoon.

Without turning around, Chen Ge rushed into the crowd and escaped into the stairwell when the officer was not looking.

This officer has such a good memory. I was almost recognized by him.

To prevent another encounter with the officer, Chen Ge headed to the second floor. He wished to take a detour around the first floor before leaving, but he only took a few steps, and something caused him to stop. There was someone sitting on the bench outside of a private sickroom, and the man was looking at him with a strange look on his face.

“Boss, didn’t you go to visit a Haunted House? Why are you at the hospital?” The man who was sitting outside the private sickroom as none other than Zhang Jingjiu. That morning, he had asked Chen Ge for a day off because his father was ill and he wished to return to Xin Hai to visit him. Since Chen Ge wanted to visit Nightmare Academy, the two had taken the same train to Xin Hai.

Chen Ge did not dawdle on this question for long. He could not possibly tell him that the hospital was actually his third stop because he had taken a detour to the police station before going there.

“How’s your father doing?” Chen Ge sat down next to Zhang Jingjiu and glanced through the window into the sickroom.

“He’s fine, I...” Zhang Jingjiu sighed. “Sometimes, I feel so useless. I should have returned earlier to see him. Earlier, we had a very long talk. Even though decades of conflicts could not be resolved just like that, at least both of us have taken that first step.”

Staring through the window, Zhang Jingjiu looked at the old man in bed who was asleep. “When I was young, I saw him as an unreasonable b*stard with a horrible temper. He had meetings to attend every day and disliked coming home. Now that he's fallen, seeing him lying in bed, I suddenly realized that, even for someone as strong as him, they will eventually grow old."

Silently turning his head away, Zhang Jingjiu took a deep breath before continuing in his usual tone. "I'm sorry, I haven't seen him for so long so..."

"It's okay, I understand." Chen Ge patted Zhang Jingjiu's shoulder lightly, but he did not say anything. He just quietly stayed by his side. After Zhang Jingjiu reached adulthood, he had lived in Jiujiang alone. Other than the father inside the sickroom, he did not have any other family, so Chen Ge was the only other person that he could unload on at that moment.

When it was almost 6 pm, Zhang Jingjiu called a nurse over and handed her a letter. He asked for her help to hand it to his father, and then he left with Chen Ge.

"Boss, when we were coming down earlier, why did the police officer keep looking at you?"

"Shouldn't you care more about the fact that there is police presence at the hospital?"

"Oh, ya! Why are there police officers in the hospital? Was there a big case?"

"Perhaps."

The two took the last train back to Jiujiang. Once they left the train station, Chen Ge and Zhang Jingjiu took a cab to go back to Western Jiujiang's New Century Park. Chen Ge had been away for the whole day, so he was worried that something might have happened at the haunted house.

Zhang Jingjiu went along to offer help. After all, he had missed work for the whole day, and when he went to visit his father, Chen Ge had even given him a large sum of money, telling him to buy something for his father. To be honest, Zhang Jingjiu was very touched.

When they arrived at the park and entered the haunted house, Chen Ge realized that his worry was unnecessary. The operation in the day did not have any problems. Xiao Gu and Xu Wan had left work after cleaning the bathroom. Scissors had followed Uncle Xu around the theme park to help whenever he could, and Uncle Xu had used the opportunity to introduce him to the other workers. This was Uncle Xu's kindness toward Scissors. Scissors did not like to speak and preferred to be alone. Unlike Xiao Gu, if no one guided him, he would probably not interact with the other workers at the theme park for the rest of his life.

"Uncle Xu, was everything fine this morning?" Chen Ge did not expect to see so many workers at the theme park even though it was already so late. They were hurrying with the decoration to prepare for the imminent holiday.

"Without you around, the place could not have been calmer. It is much better than before." Uncle Xu looked like he was in a good mood.

"Big fish can only survive in tumultuous weather. We can't be satisfied with a calm environment." Chen Ge had Zhang Jingjiu go and help the workers. He entered the Haunted House and returned the Specters in his backpack back to their posts.

It had been a very interesting outing. It proved that he could go on in the morning to do his own thing without worrying about the haunted house. "My workers have already familiarized themselves with the rules, so I can leave this place to them."

After walking around all the scenarios and ensuring that everything was fine, Chen Ge summoned the doctors into his comic and left New Century Park again to head to Jiujiang Central Hospital.

Slowly opening his eyes, the hospital's white glow landed on his face. Nightmare Academy's boss, Shang Guan Qing Hong, pursed his dry lips, and several seconds later, his consciousness slowly returned.

His head felt very heavy, and the world was spinning slightly. He tried to raise his hand and finally managed it after a few attempts.

"Where am I?" He turned his neck with some effort. Shang Guan Qing Hong realized that he was lying on a hospital bed, and two doctors were standing next to him.

"This is Jiujiang's Central Hospital's special care unit. You have been unconscious for a whole afternoon. We attempted many methods to resuscitate you," the lead doctor told Shang Guan Qing Hong to stay quick. "Take a good rest, we've contacted the police from Xin Hai City. They will probably arrive tomorrow."

"The police? Why did you contact the police?" Shang Guan Qing Hong held his own head. He felt like he had just experienced a particularly realistic nightmare.

"We do not know the exact details. We are doctors, and our responsibility is merely to help people. Stay here and rest. Based on our previous experience, long-term comas like yours usually include some aftereffects, and you'll need some time to get used to it." The doctors explained a little bit more before leaving. Yet, Shang Guan Qing Hong had no idea why he was at Jiujiang Hospital.

"Boss, did you also go to visit his haunted House?" A familiar voice came from the adjacent bed. Shang Guan Qing Hong turned to his side and saw a man with a feminine face looking at him with a bitter smile.

"Lee Changyin? Why are you here as well?" Shang Guan Qing Hong had not expected to find one of his own workers at the hospital.

"This room is specially designed to treat the visitors from New Century Park. Not only me, everyone here is a victim of that haunted house." Lee Changyin pointed at the other beds, and only then did Shang Guan Qing Hong realize how big the room was. It was a combination of three sickrooms.

Shang Guan Qing Hong felt rather embarrassed that his weakness had been exposed to the others, but he soon realized that there was no mocking in these people's eyes. Instead, there was plenty of pity and understanding.

What is this sense of camaraderie?

With a dry cough, Shang Guan Qing Hong struggled to sit up. "All of you fainted in Western Jiujiang's Haunted House?"

The other patients all nodded.

"Changyin, you got here earlier than me. Can you give me an introduction?" Shang Guan Qing Hong winked at Lee Changyin.

"The patient in bed one, the one nearest to the window, is Fei Youliang. He was this unit's first patient. By now, he has almost fully recovered, but do not mention anything related to relationships around him, or he will act up instantly.

“The uncle in the second bed is an engineer from the futuristic theme park, and he suffers from night terrors...”

Lee Changyin introduced them one by one, and his voice was laced with pity. It almost caused Shang Guan Qing Hong to shed tears. This whole room was filled with victims, and their experiences kept getting worse and worse.

“Alright, that’s enough.” Shang Guan Qing Hong looked at all the patients in the room, and his fists slowly tightened. After a long time, he finally said, “We have undergone the same experience. We are all the victims of that haunted house, so we cannot allow this to go unpunished!”

Shang Guan Qing Hong was a boss. He had experienced many big events, and he would not surrender so easily.

“What do you plan to do?” the engineer from the futuristic theme park asked. He felt like Shang Guan Qing Hong was different from other patients.

“I think that we should cooperate together. We are all victims. We can write down our separate experiences and then find some flaws or weakness in them.” Shang Guan Qing Hong’s eyes slowly narrowed and sharpened. His words attracted the interest of all the patients.

“Brother, what is your name?” Fei Youliang was the one who had basically recovered. Normally, he looked and acted no different from a normal person.

“Shang Guan Qing Hong.”

“Even from your name, I know you’re meant for great things.” Fei Youliang wanted to say something else, but his eyes suddenly caught sight of the window outside the room. His body shivered involuntarily, and he could barely believe his own eyes.

Many unsightly memories flashed through his mind. Fei Youliang rubbed his eyes before moving his head away. “That should be my imagination. My condition has worsened again. He wouldn’t show up here.”

“Before coming here, I had no idea that the haunted house has victimized so many people. I feel so sorry for all of us.” Shang Guan Qing Hong then connected the dots. He knew that ghosts had appeared at his Haunted House, but he had no idea that it was related to Chen Ge. The confusion in his eyes disappeared. Shang Guan Qing Hong heard the resentment buried in Feng Youliang’s words. When he suggested that they should gang up to ruin Chen Ge’s Haunted House, he had seen lights shining in his fellow patients’ eyes.

The enemy of my enemy is my friend. Shang Guan Qing Hong knew how to make use of resource to achieve his own goal.

“Changyin, you should form a group and get everyone to join. After I’ve recovered, we will start discussing how to deal with that haunted house.”

“Don’t get your hopes up.” The engineer from the futuristic theme park was someone who had been through many things, and he was not used to getting orders from others. “If we could launch a counterattack, we would have done that already, so do you think things are that simple?”

He scoffed at Shang Guan Qing Hong’s suggestion. In the industry, the futuristic theme park was the largest force, and they had done plenty of things openly and in the dark against Chen Ge’s Haunted House, but they had all failed. Now, a patient who had also fainted promised to succeed where they failed. The engineer thought that it was unrealistic.

“If you’ve lost the urge to resist, you are destined to live in the haunted house's shadow, and you will never recover from your illness." Shang Guan Qing Hong was calm. Holding his dizzy head, he wished to sit up because that would make him appear more in control.

"What do you mean by that? Didn't you faint in the Haunted House as well? Have you heard of pot calling the kettle black?" The engineer picked up the teacup from the table. When he looked around, he caught sight of Fei Youliang's body shaking.

"I am different from you." Even though Shang Guan Qing Hong's face was pale, there was a victorious smile on his face. "I did not faint in his Haunted House. I fainted in my own Haunted House."

"Your Haunted House?" The engineer was confused. This was nothing to boast about, so why the pride on the man's face?

"Yes, I own a Haunted House myself, but my haunted house is definitely scarier than Jiujiang's Haunted House." Shang Guan Qing Hong maintained his mysterious smile. "I have a secret weapon, one that is not available at any other Haunted Houses on the market!"

"What secret weapon?" The patients turned to him with curiosity.

"If I tell you, will it be a secret?" Shang Guan Qing Hong was very confident because he had personally experienced that fear before.

Shang Guan Qing Hong's acting made Lee Changyin next to him feel something. He whispered to ask, "Boss, the thing downstairs has returned?"

"Yes, the thing from before that scared Xiao Tan insane."

"Boss, are you sure about that? This is not a joke. If that thing really appears in the Haunted House, not only the visitors, even our workers won't be able to stay inside the Haunted House!"

"Desperate times call for desperate measures." Shang Guan Qing Hong lay in bed. His face was white, and his limbs weak, but he had the confidence of a general who knew that the war ahead was his to be won.

"What are you two talking about?" The engineer looked at Shang Guan Qing Hong. "You fainted at your own Haunted House, so you have no right to speak at all. I suggest you go and take a spin around New Century Park's Haunted House before you come to talk to us about cooperation."

“I know you won’t believe me.” Shang Guan Qing Hong nudged his tight neck. “Changyin, get me my phone. Open the third video file for him to see.”

Lee Changyin took out the phone and found the video. It was the video that Shang Guan Qing Hong had cut from his haunted house’s surveillance cameras. Chen Ge was inside the underground corridor, and suddenly, he saw something scary. His body lost balance, and he jumped from fright.

“See this? The man that you’re afraid of was defeated by me in my Haunted House. In terms of fear level, my haunted house and his are not even on the same level.” Shang Guan Qing Hong omitted the part where his place was really haunted.

“This is really the boss from New Century Park!” The engineer watched it multiple times to ensure it was not a tempered video. Finally, he believed Shang Guan Qing Hong. He was about to discuss the revenge against Chen Ge when he raised his head and saw that familiar face outside the door!

“Wait a minute...” The engineer’s arm was shaking. Before he could put the phone down, he saw the room door being pushed open. Silence fell over the room, and the patients did not dare to even breathe too loudly.

“I’m not lying to you, am I?” Since his body had not recovered, Shang Guan Qing Hong tilted his head to look at the engineer. “Join the group first. I will slowly teach this b*stard who does not know his limit a lesson.”

“Cough Cough.” Lee Changyin held his lips and started to cough violently. As he did so, he blinked continuously at his boss.

“Are you okay? I’m sorry to have put you through this, Changyin, but don’t you worry, it won’t be long before the day you see that man being admitted into this very room! Then, we will have gotten our revenge!” Since they were competitors, Shang Guan Qing Hong had been meaning to deal with Chen Ge for a long time. “A Haunted House in a small town dares to trick people with words and fake videos online. It is time for the man to face the music.”

Shang Guan Qing Hong realized that no one was reacting to his words. He frowned. “Changyin, why do you keep coughing? Should I call the doctor for you?”

“No, no, I think it’s time for my meds.” Lee Changyin turned to the shelves to look for his things, but the shelves were mainly used to store clothes.

“What about the rest of you? Why aren’t you sleeping?” Shang Guan Qing Hong turned to Fei Youliang. “Little brother, you were the first one to come here. So, we will start with you. We will go around sharing our experiences and see if we can find any weakness or leverage in your stories.”

Fei Youliang, who had initially admired Shang Guan Qing Hong, suddenly acted like he could not hear the man. He leaned next to the window and took out his phone while looking at the moon outside. “Mom, I don’t think I’ll be coming home this new year. Work is very busy. Huh? It’s only June. It’s nothing, I’m just calling to wish you an early new year.”

“What is going on?” Shang Guan Qing Hong felt that something was wrong, and he turned to the engineer. The latter instantly avoided his gaze like he did not know this person at all. He held the phone in his palms and looked at the video with deep interest. “This hospital’s Wi-Fi sure is fast; there’s no lagging at all. These videos published by Western Jiujiang’s Haunted House are very interesting.”

“Videos? Aren’t you holding my phone?” Shang Guan Qing Hong soon realized the problem. He turned his neck around as far as he could, and when he did, he almost fainted again. The sickroom door was open, and Chen Ge was standing next to his bed holding his backpack!

“You’ve awakened already. This is such a waste. I went far and wide to find a professional doctor for you.” A warm smile hung on his face. It was as if Chen Ge did not hear what the man had said earlier.

“When... when did you arrive?” Shang Guan Qing Hong became quite a fright. He probably would not dare to sleep on his side ever again.

“I just arrived. I have some questions for you, and I hope you will answer them honestly.” Chen Ge first took out the fake diary from Nightmare Academy and showed it to Shang Guan Qing Hong. “Where did you get this diary?”

“I wrote it myself, why?” The man was still trying to argue.

“Then what about this?” Chen Ge then took out the diary that he had found in Nightmare academy’s basement.

When he saw the blood-like handwriting inside the diary, Shang Guan Qing Hong's face turned paler.

"You don't want to tell me?" Chen Ge did not force the man. Instead, he turned to the other patients. "I wish to talk to this man alone..."

"Christ, I left my glasses in the bathroom. I need to go get them."

"The doctor told us to go for more walks. It's good for our health, so I think I'll go for a stroll."

"Wait, we'll go with you."

The patients had been waiting for the cue to leave. With a speed that surprised Chen Ge, they cleared out of the room.

"Great, now there are only two of us." Chen Ge pulled over a chair and sat down next to Shang Guan Qing Hong.

“There are no outsiders now, so there’s no reason to worry. Tell me everything you know.” Chen Ge placed both diaries before Shang Guan Qing Hong.

“Where did you find this?” Shang Guan Qing Hong had not recovered from the shock. From what he saw at Nightmare Academy, even though Chen Ge might not have been scarred permanently from his experience, he should have fainted at least. However, the Chen Ge before him was not only very well, he radiated a very dangerous presence around him.

“Your Haunted House is truly haunted, and the origin of all the tragedies began with this diary.” Chen Ge pulled open the zipper of his bag. If Shang Guan Qing Hong wished to play dumb any longer, he would summon the few doctors to give the man a thorough examination.

After a moment’s silence, Shang Guan Qing Hong suddenly laughed. He moved his neck around with difficulty to look at Chen Ge. “Even if I tell you now, it is useless because the thing inside this diary has already left. Now, it’s nothing more than an empty shell.”

“I will not lie to you. I bought this diary from a mother. Her child unfortunately fell into a coma after a car accident. She took care of her child for five whole years, and one midnight, her child suddenly awoke. However, the world around the child seemed to fall into a very deep terror, and he seemed to be living inside a long, long nightmare.” Shang Guan Qing Hong’s words deeply aroused Chen Ge’s interest.

“A coma patient waking up? Where is the child now?” Chen Ge did not think that Shang Guan Qing Hong was lying. He wished to find the child himself.

“He’s dead now, happened not long after he woke up.” Shang Guan Qing Hong’s voice was strange. It sounded like he had to hesitate before he decided to say the words. “During the period when the boy was awake, he kept rambling about strange things, and he was afraid of everyone around him, including his mother. After about two days, the boy finally put his guard down around his mother. He told his mother that he had hidden a diary inside the room and wished that his mother would take good care of it. The mother naturally promised to fulfill her son’s wish, but that night, the boy passed away, and the cause of death for the boy was sudden cardiac arrest.”

“The boy passed away after telling his mother the secret?” Chen Ge felt that there was something bigger hidden in this story.

“The mother refused to accept the truth. The boy that she had looked over for five long years finally awakened but left her forever on the midnight of the second day of his resuscitation. She was severely traumatized, and her mental health deteriorated. Even after a long period of treatment, she still had trouble walking out from the trauma.

“Finally, at the suggestion of her doctor, she sold everything that was related to the boy. This was an effort to act like the boy had never been in her life.” Shang Guan Qing Hong knew a surprising amount of the details; he had clearly done his research on the diary. “I met the mother and her attending physician at a secondhand market, and it was around then that I made the purchase of this old diary.”

“How is the boy’s mother now? What is her current address? Is she still in treatment?” Chen Ge’s brain was already spinning. He could ‘sniff out’ the unnaturalness surrounding this whole story.

“Unfortunately, the treatment was not that successful. Selling the items did not mean that she could forget about the past. Due to extreme sadness, the mother eventually collapsed under the mental pressure and left this world one quiet night.” Shang Guan Qing Hong tried his best to sit upright. “That is all that I know.”

“Then, what about this empty shell that you mentioned?”

“When the diary was first taken back to the Haunted House, every night at midnight, there would be the sound of children laughing and crying. This is one of the main reasons that our night tours were so popular and scary at the beginning. But later, the diary suddenly turned back to normal, so I suspect that it is just an empty shell.” Shang Guan Qing Hong acted very normal. Chen Ge was not sure whether Shang Guan Qing Hong was lying to him or not, but one thing he was certain. There was indeed no longer any spirit lingering inside the diary, which had been confirmed by Ol' Zhou and Xu Yin.

"Everything that I told you is the truth." Shang Guan Qing Hong's voice softened. "I know that Jiujiang is your territory. Since you have the power to transfer me from Xin Hai to your territory, I have no choice but to admit defeat."

Shang Guan Qing Hong had just woken up from his coma, and he still had not caught up to speed. When he first opened his eyes, he found himself inside a strange sickroom in a hospital of an unfamiliar town, and his nemesis was just outside the door.

A normal person would have filled in the blanks, much less someone who was as paranoid as Shang Guan Qing Hong. Thus, naturally, he had come to some misunderstandings.

"Stay here and recuperate. It was the police who made your transfer; it had nothing to do with me." Chen Ge felt like there was nothing else to be gained from staying there. He shoved both of the diaries inside his backpack and stood up to leave.

"The police?" Shang Guan Qing Hong was left alone inside the room. He was still trying to digest what Chen Ge had said.

Once he stepped through the gate of New Century Park, Chen Ge noticed the difference to the decoration around the park. There were many new things. "The holidays are coming."

All the workers had left the park, so Chen Ge sat inside the haunted house's staff breakroom alone. He locked the door from the inside, closed the window, and pulled down the curtain. Then he placed the black phone on his desk.

Scrolling down the screen, Chen Ge turned to the page with the mission details. He looked at the words written in blood on the screen.

"The four-star Trial Mission School of the Afterlife will expire in twenty-seven hours. Warning! After the mission expires, said scenario will be locked forever!"

"After twenty-seven hours, I will not be able to obtain this four-star mission anymore, and School of Afterlife will never be unlocked."

Chen Ge raised his head to look at the clock on the wall. "In twenty-seven hours, in other words, tomorrow night, the mission will disappear."

His finger dangled over the screen, but Chen Ge did not have the confidence to press accept. After experiencing the 3.5-star Li Wan City, Chen Ge could only imagine how dangerous and scary four-star scenario would be. That kind of terror would be far beyond his current imagination.

"Zhang Ya is hibernating. No matter how much I call her name, there is not even a single response. Even though Xu Yin is now a Red Specter, the curse on his body hasn't been cleansed, and that seriously dampens his strength. The remaining employees are not good in a fight, so they won't be of much help in dangerous situations." Chen Ge scanned through all the employees in his mind, and he felt a heaviness in his heart.

When he went to challenge the 3.5-star scenario, the cooperation of all the Haunted house workers barely managed to help him survive the scenario, and now, he was going to challenge a four-star mission while the best of his employees were damaged and unavailable. So, how was he going to clear this mission?

Whenever the timer on the black phone dropped down, the conflict in Chen Ge's heart deepened. His finger floated above the phone. He tried it several times, but in the end, he did not press the accept button. "For the sake of security, perhaps I should ask the Pen Spirit first."

Chen Ge took out the ballpoint pen covered with cellophane tape and used the Pen Spirit's fortune telling power. "Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, will I walk out of the School of Afterlife alive?"

Chen Ge was merely referring to the Pen Spirit for a sense of internal consolation. He did not even dare ask whether he would be able to clear the scenario successfully. Several minutes later, the ballpoint pen that Chen Ge was holding started to move on its own, and it wrote its response on the piece of white paper.

"If you want to bring me to the School of Afterlife, I would choose to kill myself. Compared to going to that place, suicide is a much happier ending."

"Did you understand the meaning of the word happiness? Plus, is the place really that scary?" He frowned while he read the words on the white paper. Chen Ge was surprised by the Pen Spirit's determination of destroying herself rather than being dragged into this mess with the School of Afterlife.

"My prediction only gives me a vague understanding of the situation, and the feeling I got from that prediction led me to this conclusion." After leaving behind that second passage, the Pen Spirit did not respond to Chen Ge anymore. If Chen Ge did not know that a normal Specter could not leave their object of possession for long, he would probably have believed that the Pen Spirit had escaped.

"The Pen Spirit has a fifty percent chance of getting her prediction wrong. This is probably the instance where she got it wrong." Chen Ge picked up the black phone and rushed hurriedly down into the underground parking lot. He went to find the crying statue.

"I have a question to ask you." Standing inside the dim bedroom, before Chen Ge even asked his question, with just the mention of the term School of Afterlife, the eyes of the statue started to cry endless tears of blood like it had seen something incredibly scary.

"The standard of level is too different." Chen Ge had two employees with prediction powers in his Haunted house, but they were both normal Specters, so they were not that powerful. "If the Pen Spirit can evolve into a Red Specter, she will become another central core of power at my Haunted House."

Looking at the broken old ballpoint pen, Chen Ge shared his idea with the Pen Spirit, but he did not get a reply.

"Is giving up my only choice?" The mission was due to expire the following night. Seeing such an important four-star mission disappear just like that, Chen Ge's heart was practically bleeding. Actually, there had been instances before when Chen Ge would ask Pen Spirit for her opinion when he had no idea how dangerous a Trial Mission would be. She would most often say things like there was a ten percent chance he would survive or it would be very dangerous, but this was the first time that Chen Ge had seen the Pen Spirit write something like she would rather commit suicide than go on the mission.

"I mustn't act to recklessly." He repeated that to himself and eventually moved his finger away from the phone screen. He slid the page down further, and Chen Ge chanced upon an ongoing mission—the story of the Left Oculus.

"I've only completed the first part of the mission related to Chang Gu —the Private Viewing Theater of the Dead. The remaining two parts still have not been completed.”

Before going to Xin Hai, to help Zhang Wenyu fulfil the wishes of the suicide victims, Chen Ge had gone in search of a film crew. He had run into Chang Gu in a total accident and obtained a valuable piece of information from him—Chang Gu’s young sister had once been a student at School of the Afterlife, but she had managed to escape.

Unfortunately, it was where Chang Gu’s sister’s soul currently was. Her left eye was now transplanted into Chang Gu’s skull, but due to complications during the surgery, Chang Gu’s normal eye had been affected, and he was practically blind.

“Chang Wenyu went inside the School of Afterlife before, and she had a student pass from that school. I should be able to find more information from her.” Chen Ge found a new opening, and he decided to deal with this mission first. “There are only twenty or so hours left—I must not waste time anymore.”

Chen Ge packed his backpack. He did not rest for long before leaving the haunted house again. After climbing into the taxi, Chen Ge took out his phone to call Chang Gu’s number, but strangely enough, even though he called multiple times, there was no answer.

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Staring at the number on his phone, Chen Ge fell into deep contemplation. Qiumei, the Red Specter who can phase freely between the real world and the movie world, is still inside the comic. Chang Gu wouldn't have abandoned her and run away, would he?

Even though Chen Ge had not spent a long time with Chang Gu, he could sense from the man that he was not the type who was cowardly. A man who was willing to transplant a ghost eye into himself for the sake of saving his little sister, how could someone like that drop his friend and escape on his own?

Did he run into a problem that he can't resolve, or has my appearance alerted him?

He took the cab to Yong Lin Mount Holiday Villa. With his previous experience, Chen Ge very expertly jumped over the walls into the compound. "The clothes that were drying outside last time I was here are still there. The surroundings haven't changed. Did Chang Gu escape the night right after I left?"

Chen Ge activated the recorder to summon Xu Yin. With Xu Yin's accompaniment, he entered the Dead's Private Viewing Theater for the second time. The door was left open, and there was a dusty smell in the air. The place appeared ransacked like someone had been there to turn the place upside down before Chen Ge arrived.

"There are no footprints on the ground, the stage is free from any dirt, the recordings have been messed with, and all the movies backstage have been deleted..." Chen Ge's observation was thorough; he did not miss any details and inspected every inch of theatre.

"Someone has been here since I left yesterday!" The other person was looking for something inside theatre but probably left with nothing. Chen Ge strode into the broadcasting room. "This place has been ransacked as well. This proves that the search hasn't stopped; they probably haven't found what they need."

He opened the projector. It needed a password to log in, and only Chang Gu knew this password. "If they have captured Chang Gu. Then they wouldn't need to ransack the place and mess everything up."

Chen Ge had no idea who had come after him. However, he felt like they had been watching Chang Gu for a long time but had not made their move for some reason. His appearance that night had probably ruined their plan, so they had decided to push their plan forward right after he left.

"Chang Gu's biggest secret is the left eye that he got from Wenyu, and the left eye was taken out of the School of the Afterlife by Chang Wenyu. Is the sudden visit of these people related to the School of the Afterlife?" To solve this puzzle, the simplest way was to find Chang Gu and ask him in person. Chen Ge opened the comic and released Qiumei. This unique Red Specter looked around in confusion just like when she had first been conscripted by Chen Ge.

"Chang Gu has gone missing. Can you locate him?" Chen Ge asked directly. There were only twenty hours or so until the expiration of the mission for School of the Afterlife, so every second was precious.

Hearing that Chang Gu had gone missing, Qiumei's expression instantly changed. Strands of blood appeared on her face, and her empty eyes locked onto Chen Ge.

"Calm down, I'm trying to help you!" Before Qiumei could get any closer, Xu Yin blocked Chen Ge. Viscous blood dripped to the ground, and the whole theatre was covered in this thin layer of blood. Fear and anger mixed together. Qiumei's lips fell over, and a shrill scream escaped from them.

"Please, don't panic. If my guess is not wrong, your object of possession should be the left eye or the movie recording of the Left Oculus. No matter which it is, they should be with Chang Gu. Try to sense them, and through that, we should be able to locate Chang Gu." Chen Ge repeated that many times before Qiumei finally understood him. She closed her eyes, and her body started to fade as the blood vessels withered. This process lasted for a whole minute. When Qiumei opened her eyes again, she dashed out of theatre.

"Quick, follow her!" Unable to communicate, Chen Ge could only use this method to find Chang Gu. Qiumei soon left Yong Ling Mount Holiday Villa. She deserted the road and rushed deeper into the mountain. This lasted a whole hour before Qiumei stopped moving. Before her was a small house that appeared to be used by forest ranger.

“Is Chang Gu hiding here?” Chen Ge knocked on the door lightly and whispered, “Chang Gu? This is Chen Ge, the person who accompanied you to the movies last night. I came back with Qiumei.”

To prove that he was not lying, Chen Ge allowed Qiumei to enter first. Moments later, the door opened, and the thin, harried Chang Gu in a shredded shirt appeared at the door. “Quick, come in.”

He was armed with a wooden knife, and there were many wounds on his arms and legs. Those appeared be cuts from briars and branches when he was running through the forest.

“Why are you hiding here? Did someone come to the villa after I left?” Chen Ge examined the interior of the house. It was furnished with various everyday items and filtered way. This appeared to be a hideout that Chang Gu had prepared beforehand.

He nodded slightly. Chang Gu stood at the door, brandishing the knife. He looked very tired, but he did not show any trace of fear.

“Who were those people? What did they want with you?” Chen Ge was more curious about that. In the whole of Jiujiang, no one should be interested in the ‘door’ other than him.

“They are victims, too.” Chang Gu sighed. “The case with my little sister is not an isolated incident, but she is the only one who has recovered. The other children are still unconscious while others have already perished.”

“The School of the Afterlife admitted more than one student, but the only student who managed to survive the ordeal, according to my knowledge, is Wenyu. So, the parents of the other students wished to get more information about her from me.” Chang Gu dragged his tired body back to the chair. “They came from a good place, but their methods are wrong. If they follow the route that I’m on, they will only fall down deeper into the abyss.”

He took a sip of the water on the table. “The incidents in my movies are all real. About ten years ago, I noticed the peculiarities surrounding my little sister; there seemed to be a different soul living inside her. That was when I started the investigation, and I realized that she often talked to herself like she was conversing with someone that only she could see. Then...”

Chang Gu’s fists tightened. “The soul in her body, to prevent this secret from being leaked, turned to the rest of the family and...”

At this point, Chang Gu could not push himself forward anymore. Veins popped on his forehead, and he needed some time to calm down. “I was lucky to escape, but I didn’t dare return to that home. One day, I ran into Qiumei in a total accident. After I approached her, I realized that the evil spirit inside Wenyu had found a replacement, and the scariest thing was that the replacements themselves would continue to find other replacements. That eye is like a recurring nightmare.”

With a shaking voice, Chang Gu paused for a long time before continuing. “Qiumei was the only exception. Even though she was killed by the replacement and she possessed a deep hatred toward these things, she retained her basic humanity. She was not corrupted by the left eye and resisted the devil’s temptation. The recurring nightmare stopped with her, and she lived inside my little sister’s body for years.

“Her kindness planted a seed inside my mind—try to transfer the left eye from her body to mine and use that eye to find my sister’s soul.

“But the operation failed. Both of my eyes now have problems. Other than the occasional strange visions, I cannot see anything.

Chapter 759 - Last Four Hours [3 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chang Gu's whole life was a tragedy, but this was because of the appearance of the School of the Afterlife. This school not only took his little sister away from him but also indirectly caused the death of his parents. However, in comparison, the School of the Afterlife was merely a mission to Chen Ge. For Chang Gu though, this school was akin to a cage that had entrapped his whole life.

He was more desperate than Chen Ge to know the secrets of the School of the Afterlife, and that was one of the reasons that Chen Ge had chosen to cooperate with him. After hearing Chang Gu's story, there was still a question in Chen Ge's heart. "But what does that have to do with the other parents? Why would they target you?"

"Initially, I had no idea that Wenyu's incident was an isolated story. Through my investigation in the dark, I paid visits to many families who went through the same experience as me. I asked about their stories and tried to find clues from them. This was to help them and to provide salvation for myself. Unfortunately, I greatly underestimated the complexity of human thought. Human beings can easily abandon their hearts due to hatred and can do anything for the sake of love. They started to refuse to cooperate with my investigation and turned on me. They interrogated me, hoping to find out everything that I know. In fact, some of them tried to gouge out my left eye." Chang Ge did not go into the details, but it was definitely not a happy memory, or else he would not have gone into hiding even though he had the protection of a Red Specter.

"If I have some residual strength after locating my little sister, then of course, I will not hesitate to help them, but in reality, I am now almost blind in both eyes. With this fragile body, I can barely manage to look after myself; I simply do not have the capability to spare any more energy to help them." Chang Gu's voice slowly rose. He dared to vent like this because he was hiding in this old house deep inside the mountain.

“What you did wasn’t wrong.” Chen Ge leaned against the door. He still wanted to say something else, but he was cut off by Chang Gu.

“Actually, there is something that I have been hesitating about. I wish to come to a decision before both of my eyes are completely ruined.” Chang Gu turned to face Chen Ge and opened both of his eyes. His right eye was completely white while his left eye looked on the surface to be no different from a normal eye. However, once one looked closer, one would realize that the spot where the pupil was connected to the rest of the eye was covered in clusters of blood vessels. “The hesitation has stayed with me for a very long time, but your appearance has given me the determination I needed. I cannot allow this to drag on anymore.”

“This is somehow related to me? Did I trigger something?” Chen Ge had no idea what he did wrong. “But I need you to calm down first. We are now partners. No matter what this is, we can sit down and discuss it first.”

“How can you know that if you refuse to tell me anything about it? Even if I cannot help you, I have a bunch of friends and buddies. You met them that night.”

The mention of the incident that night caused Chang Gu’s expression to turn green. He was silent for a very long time before he opened his lips once more. “Since the eye transplant surgery, the eyesight of my right eye has continued to deteriorate. I cannot see anything out of my left eye, and all it gives me is day after day of torment. I have been suffering it quietly, but one day, the pain became so intense that I was woken from my sleep. In the blurriness of the night, I seemed to catch a glimpse of a door. To allow myself a better look at it, I subconsciously closed my left eye and only looked out from my right eye, but to my surprise, when I closed my left eye, the blurry door completely disappeared!”

Chang Gu’s emotions were raging. He turned to exclaim at Chen Ge. “Do you know what that means?”

“That’s right! I saw a door using my sister’s eye!” When Chang Gu said those things, green veins popped up on his face. The eye protruded, and it looked like it could fall out of the man's face at any moment. It honestly looked quite scary.

"What does the door that you saw look like? Was it completely blood red with pulsing blood vessels on it?" When Chang Gu mentioned the term 'door', he had Chen Ge's complete focus. 'Door' carried a very special meaning for Chen Ge.

"Blood red?" Chang Gu shook his head. "The door that I saw was a very normal door, but when I woke up fully, the door had already disappeared."

"A very normal door? Did you come across that door again?" Chen Ge had no idea why the door that Chang Gu saw would be different from other blood doors.

"I did, but every time, it was when I was half-asleep. I tried to get close to it, but once I was conscious enough to do that, the door would immediately disappear."

"Based on what you've said, seeing the door does not seem to have any use."

"That's what I thought initially, but later, I discovered something very weird. The distance between me and the door was slowly drawing close! It felt like it was trying to draw me into it!" Chang Gu's voice took on a creepy undertone. "A few months ago, the door was already next to my bedside. Once I woke up from my dream, my left eye would see the door standing next to my bed! I only needed to lift my hand to push on it and possibly enter it!"

Chang Gu gasped greedily for air. This should be the secret hidden at the deepest part of his heart. "I have no idea where the door leads to and know even less about the possible existence living behind the door. I have been afraid, but I don't want to run anymore. Since this door is only visible through the left eye, it is very likely that it leads to the School of the Afterlife!"

Chang Gu's supposition surprised and shocked Chen Ge, but he quickly calmed down. He had entered the world behind the 'door' before, and he had done so more than once. He had seen many doors, and every single one of them was painted blood red.

"Your analysis is very logical, but I feel like that door might not lead to School of the Afterlife. We need to investigate this further." Chen Ge had not attempted a four-star mission before. He had no idea what the difference between a three-star scenario and a four-star scenario was. So, he could not say sure that the door for a four-star scenario would definitely be blood red in color.

“Okay, if you insist on trying that, then I won’t stand in your way. I only hope that you will fulfil a small favor that I have.” Chen Ge himself did not have much time left. There were only twenty hours or so left until the expiry of the four-star scenario.

“What favor?”

“When you push open the door tonight, I wish to stay by your side to prevent any accidents from occurring. Think about it before you reject me. This is the last thing that I can do for you.” Chen Ge’s attitude was sincere, and his eyes were shining with authenticity.

“Tonight?” Chang Gu was stunned, but he soon agreed. “No problem, tonight it is!”

When Chang Gu gave him the promise, the black phone in Chen Ge’s pocket suddenly vibrated. He turned around to take out the phone and click on the new message.

Reading the content of the new message, Chen Ge’s heart raced. He read the message again and again. This mission detail is so strange. The description of the mission is just question marks, and the warning states that the mission itself will be filled with many uncertainties. The biggest confusion is that it warns me to make a careful choice, but it didn’t give me any options to pick!

Putting the black phone away, an indescribable worry spread through Chen Ge’s heart, and for once, he was feeling apprehensive.

“Are you alright? You don’t look so good.” Chang Gu poured a glass of water for Chen Ge.

"I'm fine, you should get to bed. I will guard beside you." Chen Ge summoned Xu Yin back into the recorder. He pulled over a chair and sat blocking the entrance.

"Thank you." Chang Gu crawled into bed and pulled on the thin cover. Time moved slowly. Even though two hours had passed, Chang Gu was still wide awake. "Perhaps I'm being too nervous. I don't feel sleepy at all."

Then again, almost anyone would have trouble falling asleep being directly stared at by someone else in the room.

"How about I go back into town to buy some sleeping pills for you?"

"Don't bother. The trip going up and down the mountain will take more than three hours. Furthermore, the pharmacies will be closed at this hour." The thought that he was going to open the door that night caused the drowsiness to abandon Chang Gu immediately.

"Probably it's because there is a stranger in the room with you. I will go stand guard outside, so you try your best to relax." Chen Ge stood up, opened the door, and walked out. The insects flitted about in the dark, and Chang Gu tossed and turned, but he was no closer to falling asleep. He kept glancing at the clock, and soon, 2 am arrived. "The body is very tired, but I simply cannot fall asleep. This is so strange."

This continued until the sun rose, and Chang Gu was still awake. He exited the wooden hut with an embarrassed smile, and he realized that Chen Ge had been guarding outside the door throughout the night. "I'm so sorry. I have no idea why I cannot fall asleep tonight."

"It's fine." Chen Ge was not doing so well mentally either. Because he was worried that he might miss the moment that Chang Gu would push open the 'door', his nerves had been taut. "Looks like we will have to wait for the coming night. Chang Gu, try not to fall asleep in the day, and I will come back again later at night."

"Okay." Chang Gu felt quite guilty for having Chen Ge wait outside his door the whole night.

They decided the time that they should meet later that night, and then Chen Ge left with Qiumei in tow. It was not that he needed Qiumei as a hostage—it was simply that Chen Ge did not know the way back. He trekked through the mountain for forty minutes before he finally left Yong Ling Mountain. He pulled Qiumei back into the comic and caught a cab to get back to New Century Park.

Chen Ge arrived at theme park at around 8:30 am. All of his employees had already arrived, and they could not wait to start a new day of work.

“Come, I’ll help all of you with your make-up.” Chen Ge did not have even a second to rest. After helping his workers with their make-up, Chen Ge went to inspect all of the scenarios one by one. He busied himself until the theme park opened for business. Finally, he thought he could get some rest. However, once he stepped into the staff breakroom, before he could even touch his bed, he was pulled away by Uncle Xu.

The theme park was readying up for a busy holiday. Chen Ge’s haunted house was the major promotional point, so Director Luo had many things to discuss with him. From the simplest promotional slogan to the channels that they should use to promote the haunted house, and finally, the plan regarding Xin Hai’s Haunted House—the discussion between the two lasted the whole morning.

Director Luo hoped that Chen Ge’s haunted house would open a new scenario to the public in conjunction with the promotion and advertisement. That was exactly what Chen Ge was hoping, but due to the uniqueness of the School of the Afterlife’s mission, Chen Ge did not give the promise easily but instead told Director Luo that he would need some more time to think about it.

They finally came up with two concrete plans by around lunch time. One was the projected plan, and the other was a backup plan.

After a tense night up in the mountain and then a whole morning of discussing the promotional plan and future direction of the haunted house with Direction Luo, Chen Ge was understandably very tired. He decided to skip lunch because the desire to sleep was far greater than hunger. He rushed back to the staff breakroom, hoping to take a quick nap, but before he even arrived at the Haunted House, he was interrupted by yet another incident.

“Boss Chen!” A rather familiar voice appeared behind Chen Ge. He turned back to look, and surprise was plainly written on his face.

“Qu Changlin?” This genius mannequin designer who worked at Nightmare Academy had appeared at New Century Park, apparently to meet Chen Ge. “After our previous encounter, I asked for your information from my colleagues, and then I went online to look up your story...”

Qi Changlin’s facial expression was hard to read. This caused Chen Ge to be quite worried; he realized that the man was not as easily fooled as he had previously thought.

“So, what did your colleagues say?”

“In only a few months, you managed to turn a Haunted House facing bankrupt into the Haunted House with the highest daily visitor count and the highest number of positive reviews online. You have singlehandedly created a miracle; undeniably, you are the best Haunted House operator that I have ever met. To have my design complimented by you is truly an honor. I am glad and thankful.”

“Everything I said was the truth. Your overall ability is far beyond that of a normal haunted house worker, and you have a genius-like talent when it comes to designing mannequins; you deserve a better stage to show off your talent.” Since the man had come to find him, naturally, Chen Ge was not going to let him go so easily.

“Compared to the information that I found online, you are kinder and more understanding in person. The things that you told me that day, I will forever remember in my heart. You gave me the ability to regain the trust in myself, to push myself further, to wish for a better version of my life.” Qu Changlin did not see Chen Ge as his enemy. No matter which perspective he viewed him from, Chen Ge had been helping him, and everything that he had said was out of a kind consideration toward him.

“You came all this way to tell me thank you?” The sunlight fell on Chen Ge’s face, and his smile was radiating warmth and energy.

Qu Changlin hesitated for a very long time before uttering the words in his heart. “Boss Chen, I wish to interview to work at Haunted House. I wish to learn more things from you.”

“A man will be faced with many decisions in his life, and today, you have made a correct decision that will be instrumental in changing your life.” Chen Ge led Qu Changlin into the haunted house and handed him the employee’s manual.

“Do I need to memorize everything?”

“You only need to understand the rules. After all, you have years of working experience, and you have the necessary talent; what you lack is a stage for you to shine.” Chen Ge led Qu Changlin to the entrance to the scenario for Night of the Living Dead. This scenario was on the first floor of the haunted house. It had been abandoned. Since there were more than enough scenarios underground, Chen Ge had allowed it to go unattended.

“Your task is to redesign this entire scenario. You will be managing everything. I wish to see the limit of your talent.” Chen Ge and Qu Changlin stood at the entrance to the Night of the Living Dead. This scenario was far larger than the toilet that Qu Changlin had been responsible for. The environment was also far nicer than a toilet.

“What? I can’t do it! I just arrived here. I don’t even know anything, and you wish to hand such a large scenario over to me? Boss Chen, I have no experience dealing with such a large scenario, and this scenario is on the first floor! This is the first scenario that the visitors will encounter when they enter the haunted house. If I fail you, it will leave a negative impression on your visitors, and it might even ruin the reputation you’ve built for your haunted house!” Qu Changlin was really panicking.

Before he arrived, he had run through many possibilities in his mind, but this one was definitely something that he had not imagined would ever happen.

“It’s fine if you don’t trust that you are capable. It’s enough that I believe in you.” Chen Ge patted Qu Changlin’s shoulder. “Be bold and don’t hold back—this is my test for you.”

Actually, Chen Ge had a very clear plan in his mind. There were too many secrets in his Haunted House, and certain things were too early to reveal to Qu Changlin, so he decided to allow the man to redesign this abandoned scenario.

“Your expertise is mannequin design. I have the phone number of a mannequin workshop. If you need anything, you can contact him directly. Just tell him that it was me who sent you.”

The scenarios opened by the black phone were usually empty, and he would need plenty of mannequins to hold them up in the future. He was incapable of coming up with so many mannequins alone. So, he needed a worker to share the burden with, and Qu Changlin was just the person that he was looking for. “By the way, how much money do you think you will need to redesign a scenario of this size?”

“How much money?” Redesigning naturally would cost money. Qu Changlin was very cautious. He walked around the scenario for almost half an hour before returning to Chen Ge. He opened his lips and uttered cautiously, “This scenario originally had a zombie theme. The current props and mannequins are already severely damaged. I wish to update all of them and redo them with a whole new design...”

At this point, he sneakily lifted his head to steal a glance at Chen Ge. Seeing that Chen Ge had not tutted in impatience or annoyance, he dared himself to continue. “I have made a quick calculation in my mind, and even the smallest budget will require three thousand RMB.”

When he gave this number, Qu Changlin was worried that Chen Ge would reject him instantly, so he sneaked another glance at the man. After all, when he was working at Nightmare Academy, he had only asked for one hundred to upgrade the mannequin, and the boss had rejected him outright.

“I am going to give you a budget of thirteen thousand, but you can always come to me to ask for more,” Chen Ge said casually. “I only have one request. I need you to do your best and revive this scenario.”

“Thirteen thousand?” Qu Changlin was stunned in disbelief.

Actually, Chen Ge also wanted to see what the limit of a ‘normal person’ was and what the difference the scenario designed by a normal person compared to that unlocked by the black phone was.

Qu Changlin started to busy himself inside the scenario. He threw himself fully into work. He was completely different from the Qu Changlin whom Chen Ge had met at Nightmare Academy.

“He has the talent and is probably the most professional worker in my haunted house other than Xu Yin. However, I cannot place my trust in him fully yet. To become a full member of the haunted house, he has to pass a few more trials.” Chen Ge did not wander off that afternoon. He listened to Qu Changlin’s design direction and project framework inside the scenario for Night of the Living Dead. He also filled the man in on things that were not listed in the rulebook, hoping that Qu Changlin would mix into his new working environment as soon as possible.

At 6 pm, the haunted house closed for the day. After sending out the last batch of visitors, Chen Ge did not introduce Qu Changlin to his other existing workers but told him to leave work earlier.

After he left, Chen Ge called for a simple meeting. He told his workers some stuff and then told them to go home.

He was the only living person left inside the haunted house. He used the broom to clean the toilet. He took a spin around all the scenarios before sitting on the steps outside the haunted house entrance. The sky was darkening, and the theme park was quiet. Chen Ge took out the black phone and fell into a silent thought while staring at the countdown for the mission for School of the Afterlife.

“There are only four and a half hours left.” Chen Ge was unwilling to give up just like that, but to force himself to attempt the mission, he might not even return alive. He teetered between the two choices until it was about 8 pm, when he received a call from Chang Gu.

“Chen Ge, I am currently at Jiujiang Psychological Illness Treatment Center. I need you to get over here now!”

Chang Gu sounded incredibly urgent but did not give a reason for that. Before Chen Ge could ask for more information, the call had already ended.

“Why would Chang Gu be at a psychological illness recovery institute? Also, isn’t he almost completely blind? How did he get there in the first place? Was he kidnapped?” Putting the phone away, Chen Ge grabbed the backpack that he had packed earlier and slowly stood up.

“For now, I think I should put the mission regarding the School of the Afterlife aside. I will make a decision on what to do after meeting up with Chang Gu in person.” He left the theme park and hailed a cab to get to Jiujiang Psychological Illness Treatment Center.

There were three currently operating mental asylums in Jiujiang, and incidentally, Chen Ge had been to all three of them already. After entering the lobby, Chen Ge found a deserted corner and summoned Qiumei out from the comic.

“Hey! What are you doing over there?” Before Chen Ge could communicate with Qiumei, he was spotted by one of the doctors. “The visiting time is already over. If you wish to visit someone, please come earlier tomorrow.”

“But I’m not here to visit a patient...” Chen Ge slowly turned around while his brain turned quickly trying to come up with an excuse. To Chen Ge’s surprise, he managed to recognize the doctor. When he was there in Lee Zheng’s name to investigate Jiang Xiaohu, he had encountered this doctor. Even though he had forgotten the doctor’s name, Chen Ge could still remember the doctor’s face.

“Did Inspector Lee tell you to come here again?” The doctor was also surprised to see that it was Chen Ge.

After nodding, Chen Ge added in a soft whisper, “I wish to ask about someone from you.”

“Who?”

“His name is Chang Gu.”

“There are no patients here with that name.”

“Then, could he be one of the visitors that came today? He has weak eyesight, and one of his eyes is missing a pupil.”

“If such an easily recognizable person showed up today, the nurses on duty would have talked about it. Wait a minute, I’ll go ask them for you.”

In the breakroom, when the doctor listed Chang Gu’s physical characteristics, it struck a bell with one member of staff immediately. “I think they arrived around dusk. They were visiting a patient in a deep coma.”

“They?”

“Yes, other than that blind man, there were two men and a woman with him. I have no idea what their relationship is, but they acted strangely around each other. It felt like they did not know each other at all.” Since the doctor was there and Chen Ge looked like he was part of the law enforcement, the employee answered truthfully.

“They left after visiting the patient, but now that you mention it, there was something weird.” The employee thought about it before explaining further. “The two men and woman returned about half an hour after they left. They asked me if I’d seen the blind man. They seemed to have been separated, and I even helped them look around the grounds for him.”

Chen Ge had a basic grasp of the situation. Chang Gu had been found by the ‘parents’ and dragged there for some reason. After visiting this mysterious patient, Chang Gu had made use of the chaos and slipped away.

“Brother, who is the patient that they visited today? Do you mind showing me this patient as well?”

“This...” The employee turned to the doctor with difficulty. After the doctor nodded at him, the employee stood up and said, “Okay, I’ll take you there.”

The group walked out of the building and headed toward the quarantine zone at the back of the institute. Chen Ge had visited this kind of quarantine zone before—they were normally used to treat and accommodate highly dangerous and hostile patients.

“The patient that they visited is Chang Wenyu; she is in a coma. She has been with us for many years now. She does not have much family left, but every month, someone comes to deal with her hospital bills.” The employee had a deep impression of Chang Wenyu.

“Why would you place a coma patient in a quarantine zone? I don’t think she’ll be able to harm anyone else, will she?” Chen Ge asked out of curiosity.

“Even though she is in a coma and shows no sign of resuscitation so far, those who went too close to this female patient had some strange things happening to them.” The employee still wanted to say some more, but the doctor next to him suddenly coughed, interrupting the employee.

“I have heard of this patient, Chang Wenyu, before. After her physician examined her body, they realized that her mental nerves and nervous system are working perfectly. She does not have the symptoms of a coma patient. Instead, it is more fitting to say that she is in a deep sleep,” the doctor explained to Chen Ge.

“To put it simply, you can understand it as the patient is in a dream that she cannot wake up from.” The doctor appeared to be reluctant to continue this topic with Chen Ge, so he walked faster. “We’re here. This is it.”

Jiujiang Psychological Illness Treatment Center’s quarantine zone was different from the Third Sick Hall’s quarantine zone. It was more humane in appearance. There was no sign of wires and walls. There was merely a no entry sign that hung on the door to pose as a warning.

After entering the quarantine zone, Chen Ge felt a conspicuous drop in the surrounding temperature. The temperature inside the building was much lower than outside, and it was much quieter. There were no other sounds; it was as if they were the only living people in the area.

As he was led down the corridor, the curiosity in Chen Ge's heart grew.

Normally, the more dangerous the patient, the deeper their room would be assigned. Chang Wenyu was merely a coma patient, but her room was in the deepest part of the building!

"Can I enter the room to take a look?" The room door was not locked. Before the doctor even gave him the permission, Chen Ge pushed the door open and entered it.

The room was surprisingly big. There were three beds in the room, but only the bed in the middle was occupied. Walking to the bedside, a face that could only be described as uniquely beautiful entered Chen Ge's eyes.

The patient's information hanging at the end of the bed showed that the woman was supposed to be almost thirty, but the woman lying in bed could easily pass as an eighteen-year-old girl. Time seemed to have left her untouched. Maturity and sweetness mixed into a deep, scented cocktail or a milk tea with ice.

The only flaw was that the woman's left eye was missing, and only a hollow eye socket remained. It ruined the overall beauty of the face. However, in another way, it also made her stand out from the rest.

"So, she is Chang Wenyu." The patient lying in bed was completely different from the Chang Wenyu in Chen Ge's imagination. He definitely did not imagine a mature woman trapped inside a young woman's body.

His gaze moved downward, and Chen Ge noticed that part of the cover was pulled aside. It just so happened to show the detaining straps that were underneath.

"What are these?" Before the doctor could stop him, Chen Ge pulled the cover back. Under the thin cover specially used by the patients, Chang Wenyu's hands and legs were all strapped to the bed.

"Why would you do this to a coma patient? Don't tell me you expect her to wake up at any moment?" The confusion in Chen Ge's mind continued to grow. He stared right at the doctor, demanding an explanation.

Knowing that he was not going to slip out of this one, the doctor sighed and finally admitted the truth. "Actually, it is nothing serious.

Some of the staff once saw her appear in the corridor when they were on night duty, and they thought that they had run into a ghost.”

“Yes, and it happened more than once. Yet, curiously enough, that never showed up once on the surveillance footage. And it only happened after midnight. The strangest thing is that whenever we tried to place surveillance on her, she would not move. Only when people were not purposely paying attention to her would this happen.” The doctor pushed the employee that was next to him slightly forward. “He saw her once before.”

There was quite a number of male nurses at the hospital, and most of them worked the night shift.

“Yes, I saw her once. It was near the door of the bathroom. I was washing my hands when I noticed a second reflection in the mirror. She walked past just behind me.

“At the time, I was scared sh*tless. I screamed for help. After I calmed down and rushed out to chase after her, she was already missing. I ran back to this room, and I found her still sleeping soundly in bed.”

The employee shivered involuntarily, remembering that night in his mind.

“Could it have been a different person? Are you sure the person you saw was her?” Chen Ge started to dissect the employee’s memory from different perspective. “Perhaps it was other mental patients disguising themselves as her, or maybe something else showed up that night.”

“Cough! Cough!” The doctor kept coughing. He felt like if he did not stop Chen Ge from speaking, their institute would not have any nurses willing to work the night shift in the future. “From our perspective, the most possible reason to explain this situation is sleep-walking, but the unique point about this patient is that she is a coma patient. No one knows what she sees when she is in a deep sleep, or rather, we cannot tell what she is experiencing at the moment, so we cannot apply traditional method to cure her. Our only solution is to detain her like this.”

“Then after you detained her, did any staff on night shift encounter her again?” Chen Ge had a feeling that things were not that simple. However, no matter how hard he pressed, the nurse and doctor maintained the same story. After they strapped Chang Wenyu into the bed, she stopped appearing after midnight.

The staff should have corrected their internal version already, and they decided to push everything onto the symptom of sleepwalking. After all, Chang Wenyu was in deep coma; she could not feel anything and could not resist. In the end, it was naturally the hospital that decided what to do with her.

Knowing that he would not get anything more from the staff, Chen Ge prepared to leave. The most urgent mission for him was to find Chang Gu. Just as he was about to place the cover back on the woman, he suddenly caught sight of a hand poking out from underneath the bed.

Five fingers poked out from underneath the bed, and the hand appeared to be trying to catch Chen Ge's attention. There was dirt stuck under the fingernails, and there were scratches caused by tree branches on the back of the hands. When Chen Ge saw this hand, he was instantly reminded of Chang Gu.

The most dangerous place was most often the safest place. The 'parents' who kidnapped Chang Gu would never imagine that he had not actually left the hospital.

When a normal person saw a strange hand poking out from underneath a bed, even if they did not yelp in shock, there would at least be a slight shift in their expression, but Chen Ge maintained the same calmness throughout.

He used his own leg to shield Chang Gu's hand from view. He took one step forward and used the heel of his shoe to kick Chang Gu's hand back under the bed. "Gentlemen, I am here today to investigate a homicide, and the situation that you described is very similar to the condition at the crime scene."

When he heard the term 'homicide', the male nurse's face turned pale. He often worked the night shift, and that had probably implanted many scary memories and images in his mind.

"This doctor should know my relationship with Jiujiang's law enforcement. I am not going to talk in circles. Tonight, I wish to stay guard outside this room for a whole night. There is something very important that I need to check." If it was someone else who said something like that, they would be sent packing by the doctor, but Chen Ge was a different case. The doctor often heard about Chen Ge from Lee Zheng because he was good friends with the latter.

"It is too dangerous for you to stay in the quarantine zone alone." The doctor shook his head.

"The doctor is right. Even us nurses on night shift rarely come here at night." The nurse thought that Chen Ge was mad. What kind of person would go to a mental asylum to spend the night there? Something had to be wrong with him.

"How about this?" The doctor gave it some thought, and he turned to whisper to the male nurse next to him. "Xiao Zhu, tonight, you will stay back to stay guard in the quarantine zone. Also, give Huang Wei a call. Get him to come report for work as well."

"Ah? I need to stay back to accompany him?" The male nurse could not believe his ears.

"Make sure you keep a close eye on him. If anything arises where you cannot make the decision, call me immediately. I will be in my office." Doctors at mental asylums actually had a very hard job. Many people might think, would such a doctor have many patients? But once one took a stroll around an established mental asylum, one would realize that the rooms there were always full, and some patients with light cases had to sleep in the corridor. Normally, a single doctor had to deal with multiple cases, so working overtime was considered normal.

After the doctor left, Chen Ge felt much more relieved.

Perhaps because Doctor Gao had left too deep an impression on him, when he was dealing with these doctors, psychologists, or psychiatrists, he would be that bit uncomfortable.

"Do you mind waiting outside? I have some words to speak to this woman."

"She is in deep coma. No matter what you say, she is not going to hear you," the male nurse, Xiao Zhu, reminded Chen Ge.

"I know." Chen Ge entered the room and stood next to the bed. Studying the unconscious Chang Wenyu, he said softly, "Hopefully, you will be able to fall asleep tonight. I will stay guard next to you. If that door appears again tonight, I will try my best to help you."

In Xiao Zhu's eyes, Chen Ge was definitely not a normal person. At the thought of spending a night with such a person, his scalp went numb.

Chen Ge felt a tug on the edge of his pants. He knew that this was Chang Gu's response. He did not leave the room but went to lie on to the other bed.

"The left eye was brought out of that school, so it should be able to see the things inside the school." The reason that Chen Ge was helping Chang Gu was very simple. He merely wished to take a look at the School of the Afterlife, to gauge how difficult it was. If the danger level was far beyond the level that he could handle, then he would not hesitate to abandon the mission.

Chen Ge lowered his head to look at the time on his phone. It was 10 pm; there were still a full two hours until the expiry of the mission for the School of the Afterlife.

His eyes staring at the bed where Wenyu was, Chen Ge trained his focus. Several minutes passed like that, and drowsiness swept at him like waves. He had spent more than thirty-six hours awake. Holding the phone, the sight before Chen Ge's eyes slowly blurred.

It suddenly became very quiet inside the room. Xiao Zhu, who stood at the door, saw Chen Ge lying motionless in one of the beds, but he could not imagine what the man was doing.

"Such a strange fella." He sat on the bench by the corridor. Leaning against the wall, sleep also caught up to him.

Chapter 761 - Night School

A strange sound came from somewhere of the room. It sounded like a small bug crawling past one's ear.

Chen Ge blinked. Drifting in and out of sleep, he saw a white glow coming from the screen of the black phone. He had received a new message. He did not click it open because he could only see the beginning of the message.

His brain was heavy like something heavy was pressing on him. Chen Ge wished to move his body to touch his phone, but when he lifted his head, he saw a ‘door’ standing between the two sick beds. Five fingers were dangling on the doorknob. As the fingers closed with force, the door that looked so normal started to open. A figure crawled out from underneath the bed; he merely did a forward leaning motion, and his whole body was pulled inside the ‘door’.

“Chang Gu?” Chen Ge’s body could not move like some invisible force was pressing him into place. He could hear unfamiliar voices coming from inside the door; someone was calling his name again and again. At the same time, he could hear different voices from his shadow calling his name. It sounded like they were trying to wake him.

“Am I dreaming?” Waking up in the middle of the night to realize that a door was situated next to the bed and that it was slowly moving closer, anyone would have panicked in that situation. Chen Ge wanted to scream for help, but he soon realized that he was powerless to do anything—he could not even bite his own tongue.

He lay there and watched the door approach. Several hands reached out from inside the door to grab his head and neck. At the last minute, a scream elicited from Chen Ge’s shadow, and his body regained some strength.

Chen Ge, who was too weak to do anything, pressed his fingers over the black phone. Then, he was dragged into the world behind the door that he could see clearly even with the Yin Yang Vision.

The door slowly closed. The last thing that Chen Ge saw was the backpack, which he had placed next to himself in bed, and Chang Wenyu, who was standing next to his bedside. She reached her hand into Chen Ge's backpack and pulled out the diary that Chen Ge had taken from Nightmare Academy's basement.

The pale fingers turned to the last page, and the pair of hollow eyes stared at the empty pages blankly. There was no expression on her face; she was like a mannequin who had lost her soul. The last shred of light disappeared as the door fully closed.

"Xiao Lin? Lin Sisi! Stop sleeping! The teacher is coming!" Someone patted his shoulders. Chen Ge slowly opened his eyes. He was currently lying on top of a table. Without saying anything, the first thing that Chen Ge did was bite his tongue. The iron taste of blood circulated in his mouth and the pain shocked his brain awake.

Am I really not dreaming?

Maintaining his current posture, Chen Ge moved his head slowly. He narrowed his eyes and looked around. He was inside a rather old-looking classroom. It was slightly smaller than a normal classroom. The paint on the tables and chairs was peeling, and various words were carving into the furniture.

The fan above his head turned, and it creaked noisily like it could fall at any moment. The deep blue curtains were thick, and when they were pulled shut, one could not see the scenery beyond the window at all.

More than ten students were seated in the room, but it was worth noting that the students came from various age groups. Some of them looked so young like they had just begun primary school, but some looked like they were already over thirty.

"Xiao Lin? Have you still not woken up?" The voice came from the seat next to Chen Ge. It was a normal-looking boy who spoke. His voice was thin like he was in a perpetually panicked state. After some time, Chen Ge finally turned to his deskmate. His dark pupils were darting inside his eyes, and his gaze was scary.

“What did you call me earlier?”

“Xiao Lin, what’s wrong with you? Didn’t you say, since Lin Sisi sounds too much like a girl’s name, I should call you Xiao Lin?”

Xiao Lin... Chen Ge had recently encountered this name somewhere else—inside the toilet at Nightmare Academy, the poor class prankster who was ganged up on by the rest of his friends was also called Xiao Lin.

Every scenario at Nightmare Academy was a replication of a scenario in the diary. Chen Ge had not gotten a chance to go through the diary taken from the basement thoroughly. Perhaps the name Xiao Lin was already present, and Qu Changlin merely made use of it.

Could it be the same person? Many possibilities appeared in Chen Ge’s mind. Shang Guan Qing Hong bought the diary from a mother. Her son is the real owner of the diary. Now that I think about, the fact that her son woke up from a deep coma and died mysteriously after mentioning the diary is rather similar to Chang Wenyu’s situation. They were both probably students at the School of the Afterlife, but while Chang Wenyu brought out a left eye, he brought out a diary.

The School of the Afterlife was definitely not a good place. After the male student brought out the diary, he had soon died. Chang Wenyu’s story was even sadder; her body had been taken over by the left eye, and her soul had gone missing.

The deskmate is calling me Xiao Lin. Have I taken over the role of the diary’s main character?

There were too few clues to go around. Chen Ge could only run over the various possibilities in his mind to provide himself with some direction. Leaning on the table, Chen Ge did not act strangely and did not ask further questions to arouse suspicion.

Now, everything around him was an unknown. It was best not to attract unnecessary attention.

This... does not appear to be a dream.

Chen Ge clearly remembered staying overnight inside Chang Wenyu’s room. He wanted to help Chang Gu explore the door that only the left eye could see, but some kind of accident had probably happened. The door that the left eye could see did appear, but after the man under the bed pushed the door open, everything went out of control.

He could not fully regain his consciousness, and his ears had picked up two voices simultaneously. One had come from inside the door and the other from his shadow. One had wanted to pull him into the door, and the other had wanted to wake him.

Now I understand why the black phone gave a warning about the Left Oculus' mission. There are way too many unforeseeable changes.

As the thought of the black phone crossed his mind, Chen Ge quickly looked through his pockets, but to his surprise, the black phone that he had been holding in his palm had disappeared!

He only found an old flip phone in his pocket, and this phone had a password lock. Before he knew the password, the phone was useless. A bucket of cold water was splashed over him. Chen Ge lay down on the table. Throughout the whole process, he did not show any anomalies, but his heart was already raging with emotions.

The things inside my backpack and the diary are all outside the door, and the black phone is now missing. What should I do next?

There were too many uncertainties. Chen Ge could not even tell whether he was inside Chang Wenyu's dream or the four-star scenario, School of the Afterlife.

Chapter 762: Xiao Lin

Was it Chang Gu who pushed open the door from under the bed? Why didn't the door bleed like the rest?

There were too many questions in Chen Ge's mind. He had not attempted a four-star Trial Mission before and thus had not seen a door to a four-star scenario before. He had too little information, and all he could do was keep a low profile and try not to garner other people's attention.

All my workers are inside the backpack—Xu Yin, Yan Danian, and all the preparation I've done.

Without any back-up, it would be impossible to say that Chen Ge was not worried, but he had been through too much to be defeated just like that.

Currently, things haven't reached the worst state. At least I know what this identity I've assumed is—Lin Sisi.

Chen Ge parsed through the information in his mind and then settled on a bone-chilling reality.

In the diary, Xiao Lin died from his classmates' prank. Since he liked to prank others so much, in the end, the other students all worked together to play a 'prank' on him.

Now my deskmate calls me Xiao Lin, but could the name itself be a code? Like all the targets that everyone gangs up on are called Xiao Lin?

That was a scary thought, but it did not show on Chen Ge's face. Without being exposed, the rest would not directly threaten his safety. The slow process of being led to the inevitable might be the safest moment for Xiao Lin.

Once a prey is cornered, to defend oneself against the predator, one has to be more vicious than the predator.

Even though Chen Ge had no back-up, he still tried his best to appear in control.

Calm down. The black phone would not give a mission that you'll only fail. Even though I'm inside a four-star scenario, there must still be hope.

Chen Ge turned around subconsciously to look at his shadow; his last hope was hiding in there. Under the reflection of the pale light, there was no change to Chen Ge's shadow.

My shadow and appearance haven't changed—even my outfit remains the same—but the deskmate referred to me as Xiao Lin. That is a strange thing. How did he recognize me?

Memorizing this question in his heart, Chen Ge slowly arranged his thoughts.

The most urgent task now is to identify this place and see what dangers are lurking and try my best to fit into the surroundings.

Chen Ge's idea was maddeningly brave. Any other person would have tried to escape first, but he was different. He wished to mix into the world and find himself a way out through it.

Asking random questions might cause suspicion, and I cannot confirm that they will not lie to me. So, to understand everything, I need to do my own investigation.

Chen Ge ceremoniously placed the old flip phone back into his pocket.

Some important information is probably hidden inside this phone, but finding out the password is rather difficult at the moment. I should take a look through Lin Sisi's daily objects and various books. I might stumble across some clues.

To get to know this scenario, one had to know oneself first. Rationality and calmness were Chen Ge's only weapons. He leaned on the table for a while. Then he straightened himself and stretched lazily as if tired from maintaining the same posture for too long.

He sat on the last row, nearest to the window. This was a Feng Shui location because, be it teachers or other classmates, no one paid him any attention during class. Chen Ge nudged his hand toward the curtain. He used his pinkie finger to lift up a corner and turned his head slightly to look out the window.

His pupils narrowed. Beyond the window was an abandoned school shrouded in darkness. Chen Ge called it an abandoned school because there was no light inside the school.

This place is so big! It is even bigger than Mu Yang High School, Western Jiujiang Private Academy, and Jiujiang Medical University combined!

Even with Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could not see to the edge of the school compound.

I am most likely at the School of the Afterlife, but why aren't there any blood vessels? Shouldn't the world behind the door be a despairing world covered in red?

The incident at Li Wan City had left a deep impression on Chen Ge. However, even though the door was almost out of control and practically consumed half of the small town, the scenario was merely a 3.5-star scenario. What kind of secret was hidden at the School of the Afterlife for the black phone to have judged it a four-star scenario?

Staring at the school compound in the dark, Chen Ge's palms started to get wet with cold sweat. He had no idea why, but he felt like, when he was looking into the darkness, the school in the dark was looking back at him.

I need to get to the bottom of this!

Chen Ge took out the notes and books from the drawer and tried to find some clues from them. There was a black bag inside the drawer, and it was stuffed with many books related to market research and marketing.

"How to manage a sales teams", "Confidence, the source of your success", "Creativity and the market"... Those titles had been popular a few years back, and most of the content had been made obsolete by time.

Why would the school teach such things?

Chen Ge took out the notes and flipped through them. Slowly, the picture started to manifest in his mind. This school's full name was Jiujiang University, and it was split into two campuses, eastern and western.

The western campus recruited normal students; it was a normal university. The eastern campus, where Chen Ge was, was a night school; it was opened specifically for adults who wished to further their studies.

The programs were mainly on subjects and courses that might help the students find a better job opportunity, like marketing, transportation, real estate, management, and so on.

Xiao Lin studied marketing, and from his notes, one would realize that he was really a hardworking student.

Chen Ge found a study schedule at the back of one of the notebooks. This schedule provided Chen Ge with some useful information.

Wake up at 7 am, breakfast, work at the factory from 8 am to 5:30 pm. The break can be used for revision and studying. School from 6 pm to 9 pm, co-curricular activity from 9:30 pm to 10:10 pm, deal with minor tasks from 10:30 pm to 11 pm, go back to the bedroom at 11 pm.

If the schedule had ended there, it would not have surprised Chen Ge, but the main problem was that the schedule was only beginning—there were still other tasks after that.

Prepare the tools from 11 pm to 11:20 pm; inspect locations like the elevators, corridors, toilets, libraries from 11:20 pm to 12 am; finish homework from 12 am to 2 am, go to bed at 2 am.

The first part of the schedule was normal, but the latter part was very strange.

Why would he go to these locations in the middle of the night? Did it have to be after midnight? Doing homework at twelve to 2 am is also very strange.

Chen Ge knew that in other people's eyes, he was currently Xiao Lin. So, in other words, to mix into this class, he had to play the role of Xiao Lin well.

This is going to be difficult; the man does not appear to be normal.

Chapter 763: Not One Too Many, Not One Too Less

Other than the books and schedule, Chen Ge found a ring of keys and sharpened scissors inside the bag.

The teeth of the keys are completely different. They should correspond to different doors.

Chen Ge had no idea why Xiao Lin was in possession of those keys, but he had a feeling that they should be related to Xiao Lin's 'homework'.

The bedroom was mentioned in the schedule, so I should find more clues there. I need to head over there to look. I have a feeling as time moves on, more bad things will happen.

Without his employees and with the black phone missing, Chen Ge's every nerve was shaking. He needed to try his best to survive. He pulled the curtain back. No matter what he was thinking, on the surface, Chen Ge always appeared calm and collected.

After he stretched, he lay back down on the table and studied the rest of his classmates out of the corner of his eyes. With his trained focus, he memorized the faces of all those students in his mind.

This is the first time I've seen these people. There is no sense of familiarity from them—they look just like a normal person.

But how could someone that existed behind the door be a normal person? Chen Ge memorized their faces to prevent himself being backstabbed in the future.

The person from under the bed came in before me. If he was Chang Gu, why isn't he here? Has he moved to another classroom? Or was he not the door-pusher at all?

Initially, Chen Ge had really thought that it was Chang Gu who pushed the door open in Chang Wenyu's room because that door could only be seen by the left eye, and the left eye was in Chang Gu. However, Chang Gu had been missing for some time, taken by the 'parents', so an accident might have happened then.

I should be more careful. There are no real friends in the world behind the door; there is no trust.

Chen Ge was coming up with the next step of his plan. He knew that he could not afford even a chance of making a mistake. Once he made the wrong choice, death itself might become a luxury.

Footsteps came from the front door. Then, the door was pushed open, and a man with hair parted down the middle walked up to the podium. He was wearing a black suit and holding a white file under his armpit. He looked like he had just come from a funeral.

The man's face was strangely pale. With a nervous look, he placed the file on the table. The first thing he did was to count the number of students under his breath. When he was almost done, his expression relaxed greatly. He glanced at the number on the file. "Not one too many, not one too less."

His gaze scanned the room, and a smile appeared on his face. "Alright, class is over. Try not to run around at night. Recently, things have been a bit chaotic around the school."

"Mr. Bai, has the thief still not been caught? Do you need our help?" a muscular boy who sat at the front row said. He was wearing a basketball jersey, most likely the jock type.

"That has nothing to do with any of you. Just don't wander off after class." Mr. Bai left in a hurry, and he accidentally left the white file inside the room.

"Xiao Lin, let's go. We'll return to the bedroom." Chen Ge's deskmate packed up, put his bag on, and prepared to leave. It looked like he was a good friend of Xiao Lin's.

"Wait a minute." Chen Ge packed his bag slowly, and he kept his eyes on the white file on the podium. Using his Yin Yang Vision, he saw that the cover of the file was a form, and it had the student numbers of various classes. Each teacher was responsible for a class, and the overall number inside one classroom seemed to include the teacher as well.

“Class D, seventeen people?” The code of the classroom was written on the door. Chen Ge was in Class D, and from his earlier calculation, there were indeed seventeen people in this class. “Right, there is not one too many or one too less, but that hasn’t included the teacher.”

Chen Ge had no idea what had happened at this school and could not guess what Mr. Bai was worried about, but he knew that the classroom that he was in was very dangerous.

I can't stay with them. I need to leave first.

After realizing that there was one extra person in the classroom, Chen Ge did not stay. He took his bag and left. The lights in the corridor were sound-controlled, so whenever someone stepped into it, they would light up.

This place doesn't look that different from a normal school, but why is it that I'm so anxious?

Without a map or Xiao Lin’s memory, Chen Ge had no idea where the bedroom was. He purposely slowed down. When his deskmate caught up to him, he followed next to him and headed down the corridor.

“Xiao Lin, I’m a bit hungry. How about we take a detour to the canteen first?” Xiao Lin’s deskmate scratched his head, looking rather cute. Earlier in the classroom, Chen Ge had seen his name on his textbook. This shy young man’s name was Wang Xiaoming. He came from a similar family background to Xiao Lin—they were not particularly wealthy.

“I left something at the bedroom. Let’s go back first.” Before getting to know Xiao Lin’s identity, Chen Ge was not going to wander around the school. Every second was crucial to him, so he needed to find some ways to defend himself before the scenario showed its ‘claws’.

“Okay.” Wang Xiaoming and Chen Ge walked down the corridor, and there were many pictures of doctors on the walls. Normally, only those who had contributed a lot to the school or the school’s famous alums would have their pictures hanging on the wall, but all the pictures there were not-so-famous doctors. Chen Ge could not identify even one of them.

Why are there so many pictures of doctors here?

Chen Ge did not voice his question. He felt weirdly pressured when walking down the corridor, like he was being watched by many eyes.

The two soon left the education block; the student dormitory was not far from the education block.

Looking around, Chen Ge realized that there were a few more tall buildings on the western side of the school. Human shadows could be seen moving about; it was much busier there.

Without stopping, Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming entered the student dormitory.

There were several ads with red lines on them pasted on the bulletin board near the entrance. Before Chen Ge had a chance to examine them, Wang Xiaoming rushed past the entrance. He did not seem to be willing to stay at the entrance for long.

They ran all the way up to the fourth floor. Wang Xiaoming moved very quickly. Chen Ge had to run fast to not get abandoned.

“Every time I come here, I feel strangely worried.” Wang Xiaoming sighed in relief when they reached their bedroom door. He smiled at Chen Ge as he took out the keys to open the door. Chen Ge was about to follow him when Wang Xiaoming suddenly blocked his way. “What are you doing?”

“Getting something. Didn’t I tell you?”

“But you live over there. Did you leave something here at my place? Have you been into my bedroom?” Wang Xiaoming looked at Chen Ge with suspicion while stealthily kicking a black trash bag near the door deeper into the room with his left leg.

“You are overthinking things.” Chen Ge saw the black trash bag out of the corner of his eyes, but he did not place much attention on it at all. Regardless of whether it was a dead body part or everyday trash inside the trash bag, what did that have to do with him?

Chen Ge had not lost his mind. The first thing that he needed to figure out was his own identity; he needed to find out what kind of person this Lin Sisi was. From his perspective, there had supposedly not been any changes to his physique and appearance, but he had no idea why Wang Xiaoming and the people around him had been treating him as Lin Sisi.

Perhaps this Lin Sisi is not even a person's name but a code name, a type of identity.

“If you wish to go to the canteen later, you can come and get me. I'll go with you. But now I shall go and rest.” Chen Ge's expression did not change much. It was as if he did not see the trash bag at all.

“Okay.” Wang Xiaoming was about to slither inside the darkened bedroom when he was suddenly reminded of something, and he turned around to yell at Chen Ge, “Xiao Lin, you slept in class again today. Did you hear the few crucial things that Mr. Bai specifically told us about?”

“Do not leave your bedroom at night, and we should stay quietly inside our room. Other than that, the time for lights out has been moved earlier from the previous 11 pm to 10:30 pm. There will be people patrolling the corridors after the lights go off, so it is wise for us to pay more attention to these details.”

“That’s all?” Chen Ge had thought that Wang Xiaoming wanted to tell him something very important. He had been inside the door for quite some time already, but the things, incidents, and people that he had encountered could not have been normal, or at least they could not have been more normal on the surface. This school appeared no different from a normal night school, and there was nothing worth investigating about it.

Wang Xiaoming bit on his lips. He seemed to have more to say, but due to uncertainties, he eventually revealed nothing. The door closed, and Chen Ge was left alone in the dormitory corridor. The surroundings were extremely quiet—there was no sound at all.

“It still hasn’t reached the time for lights out, so why is the corridor so quiet? Could it be that all the bedrooms here are actually unoccupied?” Chen Ge took out the keys from his bag and then turned to look at the door of the bedroom opposite from Wang Xiaoming’s. There was a number on the door, 413.

“Is this Lin Sisi’s room?” Staring at that number, Chen Ge suddenly felt it looked so familiar. “The four probably represents the fourth floor, but what about the number 13? The 13th room?”

Chen Ge had once seen this number thirteen inside the diary in the basement of Nightmare Academy, and he remembered it very clearly. On the last page of the diary, the following phrases was written—I, Die, One Three, School of the Afterlife, Run.

“Does the thirteen mentioned in the diary refer to this bedroom? I sincerely doubt it is that simple.” Inside the eerily quiet corridor, the only sound was the keys turning the lock. Chen Ge tried multiple keys before he found the correct one. After he got the door open and strode into the bedroom, Chen Ge’s brows creased heavily when he saw what was inside the bedroom.

The bedroom was not big by any means, but there were six beds in total. They were all bunk beds. The beds were placed on the top bunk, and underneath were a table, shelves, and storage for various objects.

If that was everything, Chen Ge would not have thought anything was a problem, but what attracted Chen Ge’s attention were the walls of the bedroom. There were many human shadows on the bedroom’s ceiling and walls. They had the same height as a normal person, and it was hard to tell whether they had been pasted there or drawn there.

“One, two, three...” Chen Ge made a rough count, and there were five shadows inside the bedroom. These things were so eye-catching that it was hard to pretend that they did not exist. For his own safety, Chen Ge first climbed up the bunk bed's ladders to study the human shadows at a closer distance.

His fingers touched the shadow closest to him. Chen Ge used his fingers to lightly peel at the wall. "This is painted by some kind of paint, but who would do this kind of thing inside their bedroom?"

Those shadows that had the same size of a normal person were so scary in broad daylight, but once the lights were off, how scary would it be to open one's eyes and realize that there were human shadows everywhere?

After scanning all the shadows with his eyes, Chen Ge jumped down from bed. After losing the aid from his employees, Chen Ge had become more careful than ever before. "There are six beds in total, but there is only one water bottle in the room, and there is only one pair of slippers on the ground. Xiao Lin is probably the only person who lives in this bedroom."

Chen Ge looked through the tables and shelves of the other bunk beds. Even though they were filled with junk, they were not everyday items. Instead, they were strange objects like a painting palette, paint cans, the broken arm of a statue, a ruined electrical wire, and so on. This bedroom was like a storage where Xiao Lin was the only living occupant, and the rest was not occupied.

"There are few students who stay at the night school's dormitory. Xiao Lin does not come from a rich family, and it is impossible to think that he would spend more money to live at school, so the only explanation is that staying here cost less than renting a house outside the campus."

Normally, the price of a dormitory apartment would be far higher than the rental of nearby houses. However, since Xiao Lin could afford to stay there, there was only one explanation—there had to be something wrong with the room.

Chen Ge had no idea what had happened in Xiao Lin's bedroom in the past, but there was a strange sense of urgency inside his heart. Chen Ge walked to the bed number four, which was furthest from the door. This bed had a new mattress and cover. Even though the other beds also had mattresses and covers, most of them were covered in dust, and they had long outlived their usefulness.

"Since no one is staying here, why would they prepare the mattress and covers? Would anyone even someone sleep in such a dirty bed?" Chen Ge climbed up the ladder and sat down on the fourth bed. He looked around the bedroom from this perspective, and it felt completely different; it no longer felt so cramped.

"I must be right. This is Xiao Lin's bed." There were words of encouragement and a schedule pasted next to the pillow. If this was not inside a strange school, Chen Ge would have had no doubt that Xiao Lin was a hardworking ace student.

"The cover has been recently cleaned; there is still a lingering smell of the detergent. The blanket is carefully folded. When I was at school, I rarely saw such organization in a male dorm. Xiao Lin should be an extremely self-disciplined student who cannot stand messiness." Chen Ge started to draft up an image of Xiao Lin in his mind.

Other than the blanket and pillow, a book and a pencil were in the bed. Chen Ge thought that this was because Xiao Lin was reading in bed, but once he read through a few pages, he realized that things were not that simple.

Most of the books related to the subject and schools were clean and untouched; there were no mark on them at all. It was like they were brand new. But Xiao Lin's own notebooks were dog-eared and folded at many pages, which was a sign that they were heavily used. Chen Ge took out the three notebooks that were hidden among the textbooks. They were filled with paper scraps. Some were directly cut out from newspapers, some came from the notices pasted on the bulletin board downstairs, and there were also small notes with different handwriting.

"These are..." Chen Ge just had a casual glance through them, but he was quickly drawn into them.

"The man entered the student dormitory when it was a holiday, but he did not expect that there would still be students who had not left. He hid inside the closet and was discovered by a student when he tried to escape in the middle of the night.

"The student's body was found inside the closet at dawn the next morning. The murderer has still not been found. All the students and staff must be on full alert."

The newspaper cuttings were all about some mysterious cases. There was no detailed address to any of them, and the names had all been removed. The articles merely spoke of killing cases that people should be conscious about.

“The people’s names look like they have been purposely removed. Where did Xiao Lin find these newspaper articles? The paper itself is yellowing, so they should be from some time back.” The notebook recorded more than one case, and the crime scenes were all over the place. They included the library, a bedroom, laboratories, and inside the elevator booth.

“Could these cases have all been real?” Chen Ge looked through the notebook. The further he read, the more nervous he became. “This notebook is extremely important.”

As he read through the notebooks, Chen Ge’s curiosity in Xiao Lin only continued to grow. Who was this person? Why would he keep tabs on those strange, curious cases?

Chen Ge placed all of Xiao Lin’s notebooks that he had found on the bed. The one that he had been carrying inside the bed and the three found on the bed, so now Chen Ge had four notebooks in total. “The notebook inside the bed should be used for some kind of distraction. It does not contain any real important information. These three notebooks found here should be Xiao Lin’s biggest secret.”

Chen Ge read through them carefully and tried to memorize everything that he saw. Chen Ge paid his full focus and did not allow himself to be disturbed, but at that moment, knocking came from the door.

The silence was broken, and out of habit, Chen Ge quickly held his breath.

The door knocking continued a few times before it stopped completely.

“Is it Wang Xiaoming outside the door? Does he wish to ask me to go with him to the canteen for dinner?” Chen Ge did not want to presume too much about this Wang Xiaoming, but he did not wish to have much more interaction with him either. After about one whole minute, that annoying knocking sound returned again. It was as sudden as the one before it.

However, this time, the knocking appeared to be more forceful. Chen Ge did not make a sound; he did not move to open the door either. The knocking continued for several seconds, and then... the sound of a key being pushed into the lock, the spring of the lock moving, and the door unlocking came!

CREAK...

The door was pushed open. The pale-faced teacher, Mr. Bai, appeared at the door, holding the key and a flashlight.

“Why didn’t you come answer the door?” Mr. Bai glared at Chen Ge. His forehead was breaking in cold sweat, and his Adam’s Apple was shuddering. He appeared to be deeply fearful.

“I fell asleep.” As Chen Ge pulled himself straighter, he very naturally yanked the blanket to cover himself and to shield the three notebooks from view.

Mr. Bai did not enter the room—he merely stood at the door and looked around the room. “Do not wander off at night. Stay inside your room after the lights are switched off. Do you understand?”

“Yes.” Chen Ge nodded.

Mr. Bai closed the door and left straight after.

“What a strange man. He was being so urgent when he was trying to open the door. It was as if he was trying to see whether I am still alive or not.” With the blanket over him, Chen Ge was about to continue reading the notebooks when the lights in the bedroom were switched off.

“It’s already time for lights out? It is already 10:30 pm?” Lying in the darkness, Chen Ge suddenly came to a realization. “Ever since I entered the world behind the door, I don’t think I’ve encountered any object that can tell time. There hasn’t been a clock, watch, or phone in sight.

“Time should be a very important clue—it might prove useful to my investigation.” Ever since the lights went off, Chen Ge had been dividing his focus into two. One part was to count his heartbeat silently, and the other was to use his Yin Yang Vision to read the notebooks in the dark.

“After I’ve studied everything in the notebooks, I should go look for other clues. If nothing is found, I should go to another location.” Mr. Bai had the bedroom key, and he could enter the bedroom freely, which gave Chen Ge a very weak sense of security.

The curtain inside the bedroom was very thick, and only a very thin sheath of light was able to pass into the room through the gap.

There were five human shadows in the room, and as time passed, the atmosphere inside the room became more pressured.

Bang, bang, bang....

In the dark, Chen Ge suddenly heard someone knock on the bedroom door, but it was very soft.

Why do I have so many visitors?

This new knocking was completely different from Mr. Bai's, so it should be a different person beyond the door.

Could it be Wang Xiaoming? No, he looks so easily scared, and he is too afraid to stay in the dormitory corridor alone. This shouldn't be him.

Chen Ge stayed in bed with the blanket over him. He was reminded of what Mr. Bai and Wang Xiaoming had said that night, 'Do not leave your bedroom after dark.'

Chen Ge was still hesitating over whether he should go take a look when the knocking stopped. The person only knocked three or four times.

The knocking stopped, but I don't hear any footsteps, so the person is probably still outside the door.

Chen Ge was quite experienced when it came to sleuthing and deduction. He did not make any sound—he did not even move his body—he wanted to create the impression that the bedroom was completely empty.

After ten minutes, there was still an enveloping silence outside in the corridor.

Has the person left?

Chen Ge sighed slightly in relief. He moved his hand inside Xiao Lin's bag and found the sharpened scissors.

Whether it is useful or not, having this at least provides some security.

Chen Ge was not a passive person, no matter how deep his despair, he was not going to give up so easily.

However, before he even pulled the scissors out of the bag, the knocking began again. It was not very hard, and it had a constant rhythm to it like it was made by a machine.

Has the monster outside the door caught onto my presence?

Chen Ge tightened his grip around the scissors as he kept his eyes glued to the door. This time, the knocking did not stop but instead became more erratic.

The thing outside sounds like he's being chased by something. Don't tell me... he's coming in here to hide?

Chen Ge himself was in deep water, so obviously, he was not going to go open the door. The frequency of the knocking became more intense, but the force was weakening. It felt like the thing's life force was draining.

Could this be a prank? It's merely trying to lure me to open the door?

As the knocking changed from urgent knocking to a weak, dwindling knocking, his eyes narrowed.

The knocking appeared out of thin air. There was no other sound in the corridor. Something is not right. Perhaps I've missed an alternative possibility.

Chen Ge flipped through the notebook next to him. One of the pages recorded the case of a murderer hiding inside the dormitory's bedroom closet. When the murderer attempted to escape around midnight, he was spotted by the student, and then the student's body was eventually found inside the closet.

Regardless of whether it was the murderer or the student, they were both inside the bedroom that night. So, if that incident happened inside this room, the knocking that I'm hearing right now isn't coming from outside but a cry for help coming from inside the room! The ghost is probably inside the room with me!

A chill ran up Chen Ge's spine, and the position of the human shadows on the walls appeared to have shifted slightly. To make matters worse, Chen Ge suddenly felt something moving under the cover!

The weak light outside filtered through the curtain to land on the walls. The black human shadows seemed to have come alive. If one moved one's eyes from them, they would disappear from their spot and run to another spot. Chen Ge maintained his posture and ensured that he did not move. His whole body was tensed as his fist tightened over the scissors.

Something moved earlier under the cover.

This bedroom was less safe than he thought. Chen Ge's heart was gripped by anxiety. He did not pull the cover back to take a look. After all, if there was really a ghost under the cover, pulling the cover back or not would not change that reality. The ghost would not leave because it had been seen; if anything, that might only pressure it to turn aggressive.

The knocking sound weakened. Something that felt like a bug crawled past his feet, and that unsteady feeling grew. Goosebumps rose all over Chen Ge's body. He could feel something moving up his leg. Cold sweat slid down his face, and the atmosphere inside the bedroom became more intense. About ten seconds later, the knocking on the door suddenly disappeared!

Chen Ge turned his head back to look. The door was still closed, but the five shadows on the walls had all disappeared. His eyes moved to other places inside the room, and Chen Ge noticed that the other five beds were bulging like there was someone lying under the cover of each bed!

They've returned?

The strange feeling moved from his feet to his upper calf. Chen Ge was certain that something had indeed crawled under his cover!

Even though the image of a decapitated head appeared in his mind,

Chen Ge managed to maintain a superhuman calmness. This was because being afraid was not going to solve the problem. If the knocking sound really came from inside the door, then their goal was to make him leave the room.

His legs were growing numb. Chen Ge knew that if he hesitated much longer, he would slowly lose control of his body, and he would even lose the right to resist. He stopped hesitating and did a mad action. He bent his body slightly, arcing both of his legs, and he pushed his hands against the mattress and stood up!

He did not stop to take a look at the stuff under the cover. He grabbed the scissors and his bag as he jumped off the bed. He rushed to the bedroom door and opened it. The whole series of action was smooth and fast like it had occurred many times in his mind already. After getting the door open, Chen Ge did not stay inside the room and ran directly out into the corridor.

Jumping out of bed, opening the door, running down the corridor, Chen Ge made a big commotion, and the sound travelled quite a distance.

“I’ve opened the door, but will the thing follow me?” It was not Chen Ge’s aim to find trouble with these things. He merely wished to know more about Lin Sisi’s identity and where he was. Holding the scissors with his left hand and the bag with his right, Chen Ge stood in the corridor for several minutes. Everywhere was quiet; there was nothing strange inside the door.

“It didn’t chase after me?” Chen Ge sighed in relief and rubbed his hands together. “Assuming the articles in the notebook happened inside room 413, then the knocking was done by the student who died horribly inside the bedroom. It wanted to get out, and I helped him by opening the door, so he did not come after me. That means that he can still be reasoned with. He is in my debt, and he has maintained a certain semblance of rationality, which should be enough to form the basis of communication. I am sure that we can get to know each other further.”

Chen Ge’s mind was sharp. He started to move and slowly returned to room 413, where he had just escaped from.

“Yes, there is validity behind my thoughts. I’ve just arrived at a new place, and I need some guidance. It will be for the best if I can form a good relationship with them.” There were good and bad people, and the same could be said for ghosts. However, ultimately, Chen Ge was making a bet.

Chen Ge used one minute to finish walking a distance of several meters. To prove his sincerity, he even put the scissors away. “No matter how sharp these things are, they’re useless against spirits and ghosts. Might as well put them away to show my willingness to cooperate.”

Three meters, two meters...

Chen Ge kept his body stuck to the wall opposite from room 413, and he was in a highly-strung state. He was afraid that once he got close enough, a head or several shadows might rush out from inside the bedroom to pull him back into it. Taking a deep breath, Chen Ge finally reached the door of Room 413. He was about to peer into the room when the door behind him suddenly opened!

The door creaked open, and Chen Ge almost swung his bag in defense.

“Xiao Lin, why are you still wandering about after dark? If Mr. Bai sees you, he will definitely punish you!” Wang Xiaoming lowered his voice to an urgent whisper. It looked like he was worried about Chen Ge.

“I don’t want to be out here either!” Chen Ge glanced into Room 413. The situation inside had returned to normal. The trash littered the ground and the covers of the beds were now flat, but one of the human shadows on the walls was missing. His eyes widening, Chen Ge counted again, and he confirmed that the shadow closest to the door had already disappeared!

Only four are left? Has it run out of the bedroom?

The corridor was dim, and the school compound was also dark. Even with his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge would have a hard time locating the missing shadow.

It seems like it was desperate to escape. I have the same wish. This brother shares the same goal with me, so perhaps we can work together, one working in the shadows, the other in the open.

A plan was forming in Chen Ge’s mind, but this plan was too hard to put into action. He needed to be extremely careful; one wrong step, and he might die.

“If only this was a recurring nightmare where I would revive after every death, I would have a wealth of choices to tackle this mission. Unfortunately, I’m afraid I only have one chance—dying here will end everything.”

“What are you grumbling about?” Wang Xiaoming sensed a strangeness from Xiao Lin. It felt scary like he was not the person that he usually was. “Just now it was you who was running down the corridor, right? People are preparing to rest. If you wake them up, you are going to be in big trouble.”

“There are other people staying here?”

“Of course!”

Chen Ge nodded and quickly moved away from this topic. He carried the bag with one hand and gripped Wang Xiaoming’s shoulder with his other hand. “Brother, my room feels a bit strange. I feel like there’s something moving under the cover whenever I try to fall asleep. Perhaps it’s a rat or something, come help me find it.”

It was Chen Ge’s impromptu plan to invite Wang Xiaoming into Room 413. He wanted to see if Wang Xiaoming knew about the room’s history or not. Of course, this was only part of the reason. If he was really trapped by a ghost inside the room, with Wang Xiaoming around, at least there was a partner.

“The school rules forbid students from bunking; everyone has their own designated bed.” Wang Xiaoming sounded more unwilling to share a bed with a man than being actually afraid.

“What are you so scared of? They’re not going to expel you for bunking, right?” Chen Ge ignored him and practically dragged Wang Xiaoming into Room 413.

This was Chen Ge's second time entering Room 413, but this time, with Wang Xiaoming's accompaniment, Chen Ge did not feel that panicked.

"Xiao Lin, don't you ever clean your room? You are supposed to be the only one living here, but somehow, it feels like there are several people living here." This appeared to be Wang Xiaoming's first visit to Room 413, and this attracted Chen Ge's curiosity. After all, the two friends stayed literally just across from the corridor. Even though they might not have a sleepover, normally, when they came across each other in the corridor, they should be able to look into each other's bedroom, unless Xiao Lin had been purposely trying to keep that a secret.

"My eyesight is not so good. Can you help me see what those things on the walls are?" Chen Ge had not fully placed his trust in Wang Xiaoming yet. He did not dare to leave the man unattended near the door. What if the young man suddenly decided to turn back and lock Chen Ge in the room? That would be horrendous.

"Okay." It did not look like Wang Xiaoming knew anything about the horrors inside Room 413. In his eyes, this was probably a student bedroom that could not have been more normal. Using the ladder of the bunk bed, Wang Xiaoming climbed up bed number one. He used his hands to touch the walls. "I don't see any posters inside your room, so why are there so many nails here?"

"Nails?" When Wang Xiaoming climbed up the bed, Chen Ge quickly hurried to bed number four. He was planning to grab all the information and notebooks. He was not going to return to this bedroom ever again.

"That's right. And what is with the dark spots on the wall? It looks like a human crawling on the wall. Aren't you afraid staring at them at night?" Just looking at them, Wang Xiaoming was already feeling uncomfortable. Chen Ge did not give a direct response; he was still going over Wang Xiaoming's words in his mind.

The spot of the wall that Wang Xiaoming was touching originally had a human shadow, but it had just escaped from the room earlier. It had disappeared.

"Let me see." Chen Ge grabbed the bag and climbed up the bed. He reached out to touch the wall, and under the coat of white paint, the wall was punctured with many nails. All the nails were on the human shadow that was once on the wall. Then, could it be that it was those nails that had pinned the human shadow onto the wall? Was it because of those nails that the shadows were unable to escape?

Chen Ge was thinking when he felt a sharp pain coming from his stomach. "There's a bug?"

Chen Ge lifted up his shirt. He noticed a small cut on his stomach, but since the cut was so small, it was not severe enough to cause bleeding.

"Did some kind of bug crawl into my shirt earlier?" He took out his jacket to inspect his clothes closer. He did not come across any bugs, but he found an incredibly sharp nail inside his shirt pocket!

"Xiao Lin, why are you carrying something like that with you? Aren't you afraid of accidentally scratching yourself?" Wang Xiaoming asked out of curiosity, but one could not say that he was surprised. From his reaction, Chen Ge suspected that even in his class, Xiao Lin was considered a unique specimen. No matter what he did, his classmates would normalize it on the account of him being Xiao Lin.

"It's fine." Chen Ge might have said that, but internally, his heart was raging. The nail that was used to pin the ghost shadow on the wall suddenly appeared inside his pocket, and it was used to prick his skin. That was definitely not a simple coincidence.

Is the shadow looking for a scape goat?

Chen Ge was thankful that he did return to the bedroom, or else he probably would not have known what went wrong. Only when he died and was pinned on the wall would he have realized the mistake that he had made.

I was kind enough to help him open the door, but he repaid my kindness with vengeance and wish to use me as a scapegoat!

Chen Ge compared the nail in his pocket and the ones hidden underneath the paint coat, confirming that they were one and the same.

It is understandable that he wants to find a scapegoat but at least gives me a warning. To do something like this behind my back is such a rude thing to do.

After slowly calming down, he took out the scissors, wishing to use them to yank out the rest of the nails from the wall, but the nails were in too deep. Chen Ge needed a more heavy-duty tool.

There is danger at every corner. If I am not careful, I will not even know how I died.

In just these few minutes, Chen Ge felt like he was pinned again, but this time, the pain came from his calf. He shook his pant legs, and a short nail fell out.

For now, they appear very far between each other, and they honestly are not that painful, but as time moves forward, will these nails appear closer to each other and then become more and more painful?

Chen Ge did not mind being pricked once in a while, but the thing was, he did not know when the nail would show up or where they would show up. If they happened to show up inside his shoes when he was running away from a threat, then it would over. Other than that, Chen Ge was worried about another situation. If he just ignored this, one of the future nails might appear inside his body, and that would be more than just a bleeding matter.

No wonder I've been feeling so pressured since I've arrived at this place, this place is so dangerous.

Before even knowing his identity or even the overall image of the location he was in, Chen Ge had already triggered some kind of slow death. However, even in those circumstances, he managed to maintain his cool.

I woke up inside the classroom, and after Mr. Bai showed up, he kept on repeating for us to stay inside our bedrooms and not wander out of the bedrooms at night. Is this some kind of psychological trick? The findings at the desk and the content of the notebooks also all pointed toward the bedroom. To better understand my identity, the best option was to visit the bedroom—it was a place that I had to go see no matter what.

Chen Ge had no choice but now that he was thinking about it, two details popped up at him.

The first was when Chen Ge said that he needed to go back to the bedroom, Wang Xiaoming had suggested they take a detour to the canteen first. Whether he meant something by it or it was just a pure coincidence, if Chen Ge had agreed to follow Wang Xiaoming to the canteen, he would have been able to temporarily prevent this from happening.

This explained that at least in this incident, Wang Xiaoming had no intention of harming him. Of course, that did not go far in proving that Wang Xiaoming was an ally. After all, there might be a deeper trap waiting for him at the canteen, and Wang Xiaoming was merely luring Chen Ge there to be killed.

The second thing was that before the lights went out, Mr. Bai personally checked up on him to confirm if Chen Ge was inside his bedroom. The expression that Mr. Bai had back then was one of pure terror. He did not move an inch inside Room 413, which proved that he knew about the danger residing and lurking inside Room 413.

He had told Chen Ge to sleep there while knowing there were dangers at Room 413. There had to be something wrong with that man. After summarizing everything that had happened so far, Chen Ge came to such a conclusion in his heart. Wang Xiaoming might not be a good person, but Mr. Bai definitely had an ulterior motive and was a bad guy!

Chen Ge memorized that the people he had met, the words that they had said and the expressions on their faces—it was not because he had such a good memory, but this was his way of surviving.

Room 413 is very dangerous, but I was not killed instantly after entering it. I was merely made a scapegoat, and the enemy used a very slow method to kill me. Looks like the mission is not really a dead end.

Turning his attention back to the room, Chen Ge studied the other human shadows, beneath which should be a large group of nails hidden.

The ghost has made me his scapegoat, so that is why I have been constantly pricked by these nails. If I remove all the nails inside the bedroom and use them to poke another person, what will happen?

Chen Ge had already been poked twice by those nails that had appeared out of nowhere. If this was a normal person, they would have tossed away the cursed nails or buried them deep in the ground already. However, Chen Ge did not do that. Instead, he kept the nails and intended to find a few characters that he was annoyed by and try to use them as experiments.

These nails can pin ghost shadows into place, so they should be able to damage lingering spirits or baleful Specters to a certain degree. They're valuable items, but will I cause some kind of panic going around poking people with nails in the middle of the night?

In any case, Chen Ge thought that this idea was workable.

I should try to keep some nails on me. The focus will then be to find the ghost who is attacking me and try my best to persuade them to attack another person with me. If they refuse, I will just use the nails to pin them back onto the wall.

Studying the nails on the wall, Chen Ge tried to use the scissors to pry them out, but it was to no avail.

I will need a hammer or pliers for this. There should be a maintenance room at the school. I believe I will be able to get some tools there.

Chen Ge's mind moved very fast. He was not one to dawdle on one issue for a very long time.

I should carry more useable tools with me. That way, I will have more choices when dealing with complicated situations.

"Xiao Lin? Xiao Lin!" Wang Xiaoming extended his hand and waved it before Chen Ge's face. "What are you thinking about? You even started to laugh for some reason."

"Xiaoming, do you know where our school's maintenance room is?" Chen Ge asked in a casual tone.

"Why do you want to know that?" Wang Xiaoming had no idea what was going through Chen Ge's mind. The two of them were not on the same wavelength at all.

"There is a problem with my bedroom door. It creaks noisily at night, so I wish to get some tools to fix it." Chen Ge jumped off the bed and stood at the door.

“It should be around the staff dormitory, but students rarely go there. I think you should wait until tomorrow morning and tell the dormitory management about this. Although our dormitory management...” Wang Xiaoming shivered involuntarily and did not continue the conversation.

“There is no need to trouble the dormitory management. After all, this is just a small problem. I will be able to deal with it myself.” Chen Ge found out that the maintenance room was near the staff dormitory, but the problem was that Chen Ge had no clue where the staff dormitory was situated.

“If you wander around like this after the lights have been switched off and are discovered by the staff, you will be severely punished! Xiao Lin, you have to seriously consider what you’re planning to do. It’s one thing if you want to sneak to some other location, but the maintenance room is right inside the building where the staff dormitory is!”

“I know there is a certain risk to this, but I cannot sleep at night if I do not do anything with this door. It keeps making this creaking noise, and it is too noisy for me to even try to fall asleep.” Chen Ge looked at Wang Xiaoming with sincerity. “Brother, how about this? I will sleep over at your place for one night. After all, you are the only occupant of your bedroom, and the other beds are empty.”

“You want to sleep over at my place?” Wang Xiaoming’s face twitched conspicuously. After giving it some thought, he said, “I think you should go take a look around the maintenance room. Even if you run into the staff, I am sure they will understand if you just explain and communicate the problem that you are facing.”

“Okay then, how about you lead me to the area around the staff dormitory?” Chen Ge grabbed hold of Wang Xiaoming’s arm, and he was not going to let go no matter what.

After some back and forth inside the bedroom, Wang Xiaoming finally relented. “Fine, but I will be leaving after we arrive. I will not step into the staff dormitory no matter what.”

“Thank you.”

“You’re welcome. There’s no choice because you are my only friend.” Wang Xiaoming returned to his bedroom to change his shoes. Chen Ge closed the door to Room 413. When he was waiting for Wang Xiaoming, he took out his notebook to study closer the information of the student who had perished inside the bedroom.

“A student studying the art of oil painting? He is normally very cowardly and does not like to speak, but he is a kind person and prefers to stay alone inside the oil painting room and come up with many strange paintings.” Xiao Lin’s notebooks contained some snippets of information, and Chen Ge had to compile them together to form the bigger picture.

“The most urgent goal right now is to find the tools. If there is not enough time, I will try to poke Mr. Bai with the nails; if there is enough time, I should try to take a spin around the oil painting room.”

After Wang Xiaoming changed his shoes, the two walked down the corridor together.

“Xiao Lin, try not to make any noise. If you attract the dormitory management’s attention, it will be over for the both of us.” Wang Xiaoming was clearly very afraid of the management, and this caused Chen Ge to start to wonder about the manager’s real identity. Just what kind of person would be able to instill such a fear in Wang Xiaoming?

If not for the danger and urgency of the situation, Chen Ge would have made a detour to go and see them.

The two eventually arrived at the first floor. The door of the dormitory block was not locked.

“Quick!” Wang Xiaoming waved at Chen Ge, and the two rushed toward the entrance. However, just as they were about to reach the entrance, the curtain inside the dormitory manager’s room was pulled open, and a gray face leaned against the window. Next to this face was the notice that forbade students from leaving the compound after the lights were switched off. The glass window was slowly pushed open, and a cold draft poured out from inside the room.

“Run! The dormitory manager is coming!” Chen Ge had no idea whether the dormitory manager had seen them or not. He grabbed Wang Xiaoming and raced out of the student dormitory. The two of them ran for a long time in the dark school compound. They only dared to slow down after a peacefulness returned to their surroundings. They found a corner to hide and catch their breath.

“Why are you panicking? He didn’t even see our faces.” Chen Ge thought back to that pale face, and a small chill spread through his body. That face definitely did not belong to a living human. Be it Wang Xiaoming, Mr. Bai, or the other students in the class, they looked on the surface to be no different from a normal person. In fact, they even possessed warm flesh. But that dormitory manager was completely different. The face that he had seen earlier in the window had no life or expression to it.

The dormitory manager is different from others. This can be considered a valuable piece of information. If there’s a chance, I should try to poke him with these nails or try to get him to take my place as the scapegoat.

Chen Ge’s plan was continually changing based on the information that he obtained, but the general direction had remained the same. The school compound at night was very scary. Chen Ge had no idea why, but he felt like the buildings that were so crowded in the morning had the same crowdedness to them even though he could not see any people inside them at night.

After walking for a few minutes in the dark, Wang Xiaoming, who had been very silent, suddenly stopped moving.

“Not yet, I merely realized that, since we’ve been discovered, there is no reason to stay in the hiding and mind those details anymore.” Wang Xiaoming seemed to have thought things through.

“Why? Have you decided to go to the maintenance room with me?” Chen Ge felt that something was wrong with Wang Xiaoming.

Shaking his head, Wang Xiaoming turned around to look at Chen Ge. He was breathing heavily through his nostrils, he was chewing something hard in his mouth, and his lips were dyed red.

After a long time, he managed to say, “This is the canteen.”

“The canteen?” They were supposed to go to the maintenance room, but Wang Xiaoming had suddenly had a change of heart and led Chen Ge to the entrance to the canteen without informing him.

Chapter 767 - Partners in Crime

Wang Xiaoming was acting very strangely. Both of his eyes were bloodshot like a gambler who had nothing else to lose. This was completely different from how he had been when they had been at the male dormitory.

“We should head to the maintenance room first. After getting the tools I need, I’ll come back to the canteen with you.” Chen Ge knew that the change in Wang Xiaoming had occurred after they had been spotted by the dormitory manager. It felt like since his plan had been exposed, he was not going to keep up the façade.

Carrying his bag, Chen Ge gripped the nails in one hand while patting Wang Xiaoming’s shoulder with another. “You are my only friend, trust me.”

Wang Xiaoming’s body temperature came through his palm. Chen Ge’s deskmate was a strange fella, but he was really not much different from a normal person. Compared to a ghost, he was more like a problem child with a mental issue. Facing this kind of child, one should not deny their request; instead, one should give them more love and care.

“But... I am really hungry now.” A crunching and chewing noise came from Wang Xiaoming’s mouth. His lips were dyed red from the blood that leaked out. Is he munching on his own teeth?

Chen Ge had met someone similar in Li Wan City—the female boss who was trapped behind the hotel’s fridge. The woman had suffered from an eating disorder. She was in a constant state of hunger and would consume everything within her mouth including her teeth and tongue. Only through constant chewing and consuming could the psychological hunger be appeased.

“Brother, if you really are that hungry, why don’t we split up now? You can go to the canteen, and I’ll head on over to the maintenance room.” Through the few minutes’ worth of experience inside the bedroom, Chen Ge understood how dangerous this scenario was. There was danger at every step, and he would be dead if he let his guard down.

Under those circumstances, he would definitely not follow Wang Xiaoming to a strange place. Chen Ge stated his intention—they were going to separate peacefully.

As long as you don’t come after me, then I won’t harm you.

Based on Chen Ge’s own prediction, Wang Xiaoming would leave on his own and would not attack Chen Ge so soon.

The two stood in the darkness. The cold wind that came from who knew where crawled into their collars. With a strange expression, Wang Xiaoming lowered his head to think, and he slowly awakened to his old self.

He made a choice that confused Chen Ge. “Oh well, I guess I will stay with you. After we get the tools, we’ll come back to the canteen.”

Wang Xiaoming rubbed his taut muscles on his face like what had happened earlier was just an illusion.

“You’re such a good friend.” Chen Ge hugged Wang Xiaoming’s shoulders. One of them silently raised his hand to wipe away the blood on the lips while the other quietly put away the nail in his hand.

“This way.” The two nursed each of their plots. Wang Xiaoming led the way, and Chen Ge followed behind him. His brain never stopped moving. Every person at that school was very strange. It seemed like their goal was not to simply kill Chen Ge; they each had their own agendas.

What are they trying to do?

Chen Ge felt like an invisible net was expanding around him, and each of the knots represented a character at the school. Leaving the squat building, Wang Xiaoming led Chen Ge in another direction.

“The staff dormitory is near the field at the back of the school. It is a very deserted place, and people rarely go there.” Wang Xiaoming had returned to normal, and he seemed to have abandoned the hold of terror that the dormitory had on him. “Actually, if you think about it, the school really doesn’t treat us well. The normal students have their own private sport auditorium, and the best resources are given to them. Those of us from the night school are like the children of the stepmother.”

“Our goal here is to learn. The rest is merely the process.” Chen Ge was able to say that because he had gone through the trials given by the black phone. Even when he was walking close to death’s door, he was able to provide others with some good energy.

Walking past a small copse, they came across a row of very old-looking fence. The top part was curled with steel netting. There was a small field just beyond the fence; it was about a quarter of the size of a normal field. There was no goal post or sport equipment; it was completely deserted. If not for the lanes that were drawn on the ground, Chen Ge would not have expected this to be a sport field.

“Do you see that small building over there? That is the staff dormitory, but it is quite strange. Even though this place is called the staff dormitory, I rarely see any teachers there.” Wang Xiaoming used his finger to point at the building on the other side. “We’ll be discovered instantly if we use the front door. We should take a detour around the trees.”

Wang Xiaoming was very familiar with the surroundings, and this roused Chen Ge’s suspicion. Would a normal student know the layout of the staff dormitory so well?

With this in mind, his curiosity toward his deskmate grew.

On my own, the possibility of me escaping here is null. I need someone who has the same goal as me to act as my partner.

Everyone at this school had a story, and Chen Ge was curious how they ended up there.

Normally, the world behind the door was weaved from the door-pusher’s despairing memory—everything surrounded the door-pusher, and all the clues pointed toward the door-pusher. The situation there seemed to be different; everyone had their own back story, and each one had their own goal.

“School of the Afterlife, students, graduation...” A few phrases appeared in Chen Ge’s mind, and he tried to link them together. Oh well, I have too little information. This school is split into two campuses. After I find the ghost that used me as a scapegoat, perhaps I can get over to the other campus. I might be able to find more clues there.

He had woken up right behind the door, and he did not even know who he was, but even so, Chen Ge had managed to carve a road for himself. He bent over as he trekked through the copse, and a thick layer of leaves was gathered under his feet. Stepping on them felt like he was stepping on human flesh. The feeling was very strange, but he could tell what the problem was.

“We’re here.” The two took a large detour to reach the staff dormitory. This place was completely different from the student dormitory. Chen Ge discovered this after he got closer. The building before him was split into two rows. The front row had lights on like there were people living there, but the back row was completely dark—it appeared to have been abandoned a long time ago.

“The front row is for the staff, and the back row consists of the apartments meant for international students. The school had a good idea, but according to my knowledge, our school hasn’t accepted any international students.” Wang Xiaoming and Chen Ge sneaked into the building at the front. The corridor was tiled, and the walls had wallpaper. The design was more luxurious than the student dormitory.

“I think the maintenance room is at the deepest part of the corridor. Be careful when you go over. Do not let any teachers spot you.” Wang Xiaoming stopped at the corridor. “I’ll be your lookout.”

“I think we should go together.” Since they were already at that point, there was no chance of returning. Chen Ge dragged Wang Xiaoming down the corridor.

“Wait! Wait a moment!” Wang Xiaoming wanted to resist, but he did not dare be too loud about it, afraid that it might attract a teacher’s attention. In the end, he had no choice but to allow Chen Ge to drag him down the corridor.

“Xiao Lin?” After walking into the corridor, Wang Xiaoming’s face suddenly paled. His bulging eyes looked around as if he could not believe that he had physically entered the staff dormitory.

“It is too dangerous for you to stay at the entrance alone. I’m the one who wanted to come here to find the key, so how could I put you in such danger?” Chen Ge made it sound like it was all for Wang Xiaoming’s own good. No matter how hard the latter tried to shake him off, Chen Ge refused to let go.

“Shush, the door in front appears to have been left ajar.” Chen Ge walked while sticking to the wall. When he reached the middle of the corridor, he noticed that one of the doors was slightly open. The lights inside the room were on, and pale white light filtered out. Afraid of attracting the attention of the people inside the room, Wang Xiaoming stopped resisting and allowed Chen Ge to drag him to the side of the door.

“What do you plan to do?” When Wang Xiaoming saw Chen Ge lean against the wall next to the door to peer inside it. He felt like his scalp was about to explode. This man before him had no idea what the meaning of fear was, and he insisted on bringing him to experiment with stuff at the edge of danger.

“Shh, the light in the room is on, and I believe I see a shadow projected onto the wall. There is someone inside the room.” Chen Ge waved at Wang Xiaoming. The two silently slid past the door. Being dragged by Chen Ge, Wang Xiaoming stopped resisting. He had surrendered to his fate. The maintenance room was at the end of the corridor—it took them a very long time just to locate it.

“The door is locked.” Chen Ge wiggled the doorknob but failed to get the door open.

“You have to be gentler! You are going to wake the entire building!” Wang Xiaoming cowered with fear, his face anxious.

“The door is locked. Do you know who has the key?” They could not stay there long, so Chen Ge tried to move things forward.

“It should be with the maintenance worker, but he will have gotten off work by now!” Wang Xiaoming tugged on Chen Ge’s sleeve. “How about we leave this place now and go to the canteen. I promise to treat you to a good meal. I guarantee that you will definitely ask for more.”

“Do you mind piping down? I need some quiet to think about this.” Chen Ge’s eyes scanned the corridor and the many doors. “When a person hears a strange sound, the brain will need about two seconds to react, and they will need several seconds to come down the corridor from the rooms. In other words, if I break down the door, I will have to crack the door, find the tools, and escape the scene in under half a minute. No, that’s impossible. There’s not enough time.”

“This building only has one exit and a staircase. The staircase is situated next to the exit. Even if I successfully find the tools I need, there is nowhere to hide.” Chen Ge very rationally abandoned the idea of breaking down the door. “The maintenance room is on the first floor. I already know the location of this place. Compared to breaking down the door, slipping in through the window might be a better solution.”

Without anything to arm himself with, Chen Ge was greatly unsettled. Other than that, he had a different plan in mind. The nails in Room 413 pinned the human shadows onto the wall. Chen Ge planned to make a deal with these human shadows. He would remove all the nails from the walls to help them escape, but in return, he would ask a favor from them.

If everything went well, this would be a win-win situation, but the plan was easier said than done. He would need to be careful at every step, and on top of that, he needed to ensure that the shadows would not betray him. Chen Ge actually did not wish to do so, but unfortunately, he did not have much of a choice. This world behind the door did not give him much chance at survival, so he would have to work hard to create the chance for himself.

Suddenly, an intense shot of pain came from his stomach—it felt like he had been stung by a bee. Chen Ge pulled up his shirt, and a short nail fell to the ground.

“This time the wound is deeper, but how come there is still no blood?” Normally, when one was hurt by a nail, the wound would definitely be bleeding when pressure was applied, but no matter how aggressively Chen Ge dealt with the wound, there was no blood. The sound that the nail made when falling to the ground was not loud, but since the corridor was so quiet, both Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming heard it very clearly.

“What are you doing?” Wang Xiaoming was understandably spooked.

“Nothing.” Chen Ge picked up the nail, and when he was lowering his head, he saw a bright light coming from the building’s entrance. Someone had just entered the staff dormitory with a flashlight!

“We’ve been discovered!” Wang Xiaoming clamped his mouth with his hands as he leaned his body against the wall. “It was the sound of the nail. That alerted him to our presence!”

“This corridor is about twenty to thirty meters long. Do you think the person can hear the sound of a nail dropping from so far away?” Chen Ge maintained his rationality; he was very calm. “It is a coincidence that this person is showing up. Trust me!”

“Then what do you suggest we do now? They are coming here!”

“Stick close to the wall. They are relying on a flashlight. It means that their eyes won’t have the time to get used to the darkness. As long as we hide in the shadows and the flashlight doesn’t hit us, we won’t be discovered.” Chen Ge was making a bet. Normally, people used the flashlight to light the immediate path before them, they would not shine it into the distance.

“What if the flashlight catches us?” Cold puffs of air came out of Wang Xiaoming’s lips, and his eyes were filled with terror.

“I will repeat myself. They are holding a flashlight, and their eyes are not used to the darkness. If the flashlight happens to catch us, the first thing we need to do is to charge at this person, grab the flashlight, and run out through the exit.”

“What kind of lousy plan is that?”

“Shush, take your spot in the corner. Be prepared to make a run if the situation calls for it.” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes and used the bag to cover the lower half of his face. In the darkened corridor, the light teetered left and right. It slowly approached. Both Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming held their breath. After a few difficult seconds, the light stopped before one of the rooms. The room door was pushed open, and the light soon disappeared.

“The person has entered the room!” Wang Xiaoming’s voice was shuddering from the overwhelming relief.

“Stop wasting time, we need to go!” Chen Ge had a feeling that things were not that simple.

The person was not led here by the sound of the nail falling. Could it really be a coincidence? No, I must have missed something very important, but what is it?

Running ahead, Chen Ge thought back to what had happened to him after he entered the door.

The first time I ran into mortal danger was inside Room 413. With the degree of fear Wang Xiaoming showed toward the teacher and the dormitory manager, something terrible will happen if you run across them after dark.

Chen Ge concluded that from the two incidents that he had encountered, and his brows slowly creased.

It appears that the moment I stay in a specific place for too long, something bad will happen.

He had no way of affirming his speculation. He knew that things were not looking up. The difficulty and danger level of this school was far beyond the danger level of the normal nightmare missions given by the black phone.

I am being too passive. What can I do to turn things around? The black phone will not give me a mission that I cannot pass. Where or what is this crucial item or incident that will help me survive?

While Chen Ge used all the energy in his brain to think, the door not that far away from him suddenly opened again!

That was the room where the light disappeared inside earlier! Has the person been waiting for us?

They had nowhere else to run. Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming were currently trapped in the middle of the corridor.

“This way!” There was a room door that was left ajar. Wang Xiaoming started to panic from the scare. When he saw the reappearance of the light, he dragged Chen Ge into the room in the middle of the corridor. As they did so, the light cut down the corridor.

“That was so close! We were almost caught!” Wang Xiaoming gasped greedily for air as he hid behind the door.

“Even though it is temporarily safe, it might have put us into deeper trouble. After all, the lights in this room were left on. If there is someone inside, we might need to deal with two or more people instead of just the one outside.” Chen Ge did not get into an argument with Wang Xiaoming simply because he made a decision without consulting him. This was because he knew that arguing was not going to solve any problem—it would only waste the valuable time that should be spent on escaping.

“First, you cannot confirm whether the teacher outside the door has seen us or not. If they have discovered us, then they will be waiting for us to come out. Secondly, I believe that there is someone with us inside the room. It is truly unknown if we will be able to survive until the teacher outside leaves.” Chen Ge would never leave his life in the hands of fate. He carried the bag and headed into the kitchen.

“What are you doing?”

The room was curiously spacious. There were three bedrooms, two bathrooms, and one kitchen. It did not look like a normal apartment. After Chen Ge rushed into the kitchen, he made a beeline to the door, but to his disappointment, an anti-burglary net was installed on the window. Without stopping to nurse his disappointment, Chen Ge rushed to the kitchen counter. He pulled out all the drawers but could not find any sharp instruments like a knife. “This feels less like an apartment and more like a prison cell.”

“Xiao Lin, someone’s coming!” Wang Xiaoming leaned on the ground. He kept his voice to a whisper. His face was scrunched together from intense fear.

“Lock the door to stop them from getting in.” Chen Ge could not tell for sure whether the person outside had seen them or not. After all, he and Wang Xiaoming had been moving in the dark.

“Okay.” Wang Xiaoming was so scared that he lost his ability to think. He merely did what he was told. “It’s now locked.”

Even though he knew that the door was locked, Wang Xiaoming was still so nervous. He had his hands over the doorknob, and his forehead was drenched in cold sweat. Chen Ge did not expect Wang Xiaoming to be so afraid of the teachers. He grabbed Wang Xiaoming’s hand lightly. “Don’t panic. The more you are afraid of it, the more likely the thing will happen.”

“Xiao Lin, this is not the issue of panicking! Have you forgotten that, after dark, the teachers...” Wang Xiaoming’s words were cut short because footsteps suddenly came from outside the door. Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming’s faces paled immediately. The two of them shared a look and raised their index fingers to their lips simultaneously.

Come here. Chen Ge used his finger to point at the empty space on the opposite side of the door. He gestured to explain his plan. He wanted Wang Xiaoming to hide at the other side so that they could ambush the person who opened the door. Chen Ge’s plan was good, but unfortunately, it was hard to put into motion. Wang Xiaoming was not as brave as he was. He did not listen to Chen Ge’s order and escaped into the bathroom that was furthest from the door.

“Hey!” Chen Ge refused to stay in the living room alone, so he turned and followed Wang Xiaoming. “What are you doing hiding inside the bathroom? If you only know how to escape, you’re eventually going to get cornered! If you do not learn to resist, you will never be able to fight for the right to choose!”

“I know, but I am unable to control myself.” Wang Xiaoming pouted with tears in his eyes, and he silently closed the bathroom door. The two held their breath and waited. Ten seconds passed, but there was no sound coming from outside.

“How would I know? He might be hiding just beyond the door, waiting for us to come out.” Chen Ge rolled his eyes. “Go out and take a look.”

“Okay.” Wang Xiaoming gathered his courage and pushed open the bathroom door. It was dark outside, and he went to open the light in the living room. “It’s clear.”

Realizing that there was no problem, Wang Xiaoming urged Chen Ge to come out, but once he turned back and saw Chen Ge’s expression, he was confused. “What’s wrong?”

“The lights in the living room were on before, but now the lights are off.” Chen Ge lowered his voice. “Do not move! The people inside the room have already discovered us!”

Once Chen Ge said that, a little girl’s laughter echoed across the room. A head with tussled black hair floated above the back of the sofa. A girl with a creepy smile turned to look at Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming.

“We do not mean any harm. We merely happened to slip into this place.” Realizing that it was not a teacher inside the room, Wang Xiaoming sighed in relief and came up with a horrible lie.

The girl tilted her head to the side as she studied Wang Xiaoming and Chen Ge. Her gaze was strange. There was a mentally unstable emotion behind it. It was hard to describe, but it felt as if she was not looking at living humans.

“Are you the daughter of one of the teachers at our school?” Chen Ge did not dare get close to this girl who looked positively harmless.

“Yes.” The girl nodded. Her eyes were glued to Chen Ge. Compared to Wang Xiaoming, she seemed to be more attracted to Chen Ge. “My dad is a substitute teacher at the night school. His name is Bai.”

“You’re Mr. Bai’s daughter? Then we came to the right place. Please don’t be afraid, we are Mr. Bai’s students. He told us to come here because he had something to discuss with us, but since he’s not here, we’re not going to disturb you anymore.” Chen Ge signaled for Wang Xiaoming to stay away from this girl.

“My dad told you to come here?” When the girl heard that, her eyes glistened brightly. “Looks like he still remembers his promise to me.”

“Promise?” Wang Xiaoming had a bad feeling in his heart. “It’s getting late. I think we should come back tomorrow.”

Wang Xiaoming was finding an excuse to leave, but the girl ignored him. She kept her eyes on Chen Ge and ran out from behind the sofa.

“Little Brother, what’s your name?” She grabbed Chen Ge’s arm and spoke with a sweet voice and cute smile, but her eyes made Chen Ge very uncomfortable.

“That is such a cute name.” Whenever the girl smiled, her canine teeth would show, and it made her look very cute.

“My name is not as cute as you, little girl. I still have something to do tonight. How about I come back to play with you tomorrow?” With the girl holding his hand, the hair on the back of Chen Ge’s neck was standing.

“Tomorrow?” The girl pouted. Suddenly, she stood on tiptoes to whisper into Chen Ge’s ear. “You are following a person who died a long time ago, little brother. I’m afraid you won’t live until tomorrow.”

The girl used an innocent voice to reveal a scary secret. “Don’t leave me. Why don’t you stay with me tonight?”

On one side, there was the deskmate who appeared to have died a long time ago, while on the other, there was the teacher’s daughter who was definitely not what she appeared. This was the first choice that Chen Ge had to make after he entered the door.

BANG! BANG! BANG!

When Chen Ge was hesitating, a loud noise came from inside the bedroom. It sounded like someone was using his head to knock against the door.

“What is that sound?” Chen Ge turned to look at the bedroom.

“It’s nothing. My dad gifted me a large dog for my last birthday. It is very naughty, so I collared it.” The girl’s smile grew bigger like she was reminded of a very happy incident.

“Your dad gave you a dog, and he allows you to keep it inside the staff dormitory?” Wang Xiaoming’s disbelief was plain on his face. “The school forbids the rearing of pets, and the teachers wouldn’t go against the rules, setting a bad example.”

“My dad gifted me this large dog because he was afraid that I would be too lonely. I never let it leave this room—that way, no one will discover it.” The girl’s tone was cute and innocent, but listening to her, chills ran through Chen Ge’s body.

“In other words, after you got the dog, it has never left this house?” Chen Ge’s brows lifted.

“What’s wrong? The dog was originally very feral. Me and my dad used a long time and effort to train it, to make it obedient.” The corners of the girl’s lips curled upward into a bright smile.

“It’s just that animals will get sick after being left inside a house for a long time. Occasionally, you have to take it out for a stroll.” Chen Ge turned to the bedroom where the strange sound had come from earlier. The bedroom door was closed, so he could not see anything. Even the strange sound had disappeared.

“Xiao Lin, don’t listen to her. Our school has strict rules against keeping a pet. Be it the staff or students, if they are discovered to have broken the rules, they receive a severe punishment. A pet like a dog is different from a snake or lizard—it will make noise. Once the neighbors hear that, they will report this to the authority. The secret can’t have been kept.” Wang Xiaoming did not believe the girl’s words at all. “After all, you are not the only person who stays here.”

“Me and my dad considered that before, so we gave the dog a special training.” The girl had a cute smile. She was so cute that one would have to urge to hug her and pinch her cheeks. “When the dog first arrived, it was very unruly. Whenever someone passed by the door, it would scratch on the door or knock into the furniture. Later, me and my dad came up with a solution. We purposely left home and pretended to be passersby walking down the corridor. Whenever the dog made a sound, we would return to take something away from it. After repeating this about ten times, the dog slowly learned its lesson. Now even if there really is someone who passes by, it will be very obedient.”

“You sure are experienced at training dogs.”

The girl was very happy to have been given some praise. “There is not much experience to be said. Once you deal with more than enough dogs, you’ll eventually come across the solution.”

“Have you reared many dogs in the past?” Chen Ge asked in shock.

“Yes, initially, I kept them in secret. After I was discovered by my dad, he was very angry.” The girl sounded wounded. “Without asking for my permission, he took care of the dog. I was so mad. I refused to speak to him for a very long time until he later gifted me a large dog.”

“How come I feel like none of the dogs you kept survived for long? A dog has quite a long life span. From the looks of it, you are at most twelve years old, and if you took care of them, one dog should have been enough to accompany you until now.” Chen Ge squatted down before the girl. His pupils narrowed as he looked into the girl’s eyes.

“It’s mainly because they are so disobedient. If they were obedient, they wouldn’t have been punished.” The girl looked at Chen Ge, and her voice slowly dropped. “I don’t know why, but they are all very afraid of me. If only they were all as friendly as you are around me, little brother.”

Friendly?

A little girl was not only not afraid when two strange men showed up in her room, she was very happy. It was obvious that there was something wrong.

“What are you talking about?” Chen Ge pretended like he did not hear the girl’s last sentence. He carried a warm smile on his face and hugged the girl lightly. “This is the first time I’ve met a girl as cute as you. What is your name?”

Chen Ge sat on the sofa and placed the girl on his lap.

“My name is Bai Ling.” Chen Ge was stunned when he heard that name. San Chi Bai Ling 1, traditionally, represented suicide by hanging.

“Good name, it’s classical, pure, and rolls out the tongue.” Chen Ge paused before asking, “Bai Ling, your surname is Bai, so is your father Mr. Bai who teaches the night school?”

With a wink, the girl slowly nodded. “Yes.”

“You’re Mr. Bai’s daughter?” Before Chen Ge said anything, Wang Xiaoming was the first to yelp. It appeared as if he had suddenly been reminded of something scary. His face was white, and he kept making nonverbal hints to Chen Ge.

“Even though we are students from another campus, we’ve heard of Mr. Bai. He’s a hardworking, responsible teacher.” Chen Ge maintained the friendly smile. “Bai Ling, we still have something else to do, so we won’t stay to disturb you anymore.”

“You’re leaving already?” The girl’s expression changed instantly. The innocence on her face disappeared. Green veins surfaced on her neck, and her large eyes stared fiendishly at Chen Ge.

“It’s over now.” Wang Xiaoming silently moved to stand behind the girl. He gestured at Chen Ge by placing his palm over his lips. He wanted to detain the girl and then run as fast as they could. Since their faces had been seen, what was the point of running? Chen Ge used his hands to caress Bai Ling’s head lovingly. Since there were no escape, he was going to try to get more benefits and information before leaving.

Never give up, never surrender—that was Chen Ge’s motto.

“Bai Ling, we’re not leaving. We just want to go look for something inside the maintenance room at the end of the corridor. Since you stay here, do you know how to open that door?” Chen Ge said calmly like he did not notice the scary transformation of the girl’s face when she was angry. He continued to lovingly touch the girl’s head.

“I think my dad has a spare key. It’s inside the bedroom drawer. I’ll go take a look.” The veins around the girl’s neck slowly disappeared, and she reverted to her previous state, but her hold on Chen Ge’s arm grew stronger. The girl led Chen Ge to the bedroom door. She hesitated when she wanted to push the door open. It was as if she was worried that Chen Ge might see the thing inside the room. “Wait here, I’ll be out in a minute. Don’t go anywhere!”

She pushed the door open a gap and quickly slipped through it and closed the door.

“Xiao Lin, this is our chance! Quick!” Wang Xiaoming ran over to grab Chen Ge’s wrist. “She is Mr. Bai’s daughter. Mr. Bai will eventually return! If we’re caught by him, then it’s really over!”

“The girl has already seen our faces. She will tell on us to her father. The point is we’ve also tricked her, so she will definitely add more offences when there are none.” Chen Ge stood where he was. He realized that the people at this school liked to grab his arm—it felt like they were all fighting to claim him.

“Now is not the time to care about those details!” Seeing Chen Ge still standing at the door, Wang Xiaoming panicked until his forehead was drenched. “Xiao Lin, you heard what she said earlier. Mr. Bai has brought Bai Ling many large dogs!”

“In the past, there have been cases of students mysteriously disappearing after they were sent to detention. It was Mr. Bai who sent them to detention!”

Wang Xiaoming's meaning was very clear. The large dog that the girl mentioned was not a dog at all but the missing students. This whole family was crazy.

"I know what you're trying to say, but did you notice something weird?" Chen Ge dropped his voice to a whisper. "Why does she look at me differently from when she looks at you? That pair of eyes filled with pure evil was focused on me. Does she know me?"

...

"Now is not the time to think about that, Xiao Lin. We need to leave now!" Wang Xiaoming grabbed Chen Ge and prepared to make a run for it, but at that moment, footsteps came from inside the bedroom, and soon, the door was opened. The girl wore pink pajamas, and she held a long ring of keys in her hand. "Found it."

"Okay, we will go to the maintenance room now."

Of course, they were going to leave, but before that, Chen Ge wished to obtain more useful things. He reached out to take the girl's keys, but the latter took one large step back. "Even though I have the spare key, my dad warned me from getting close to the room at the deepest part of the corridor and forbade me from giving the key to strangers."

After Chen Ge revealed his purpose, the girls also started to show her fangs. From the beginning, she had never intended to help them, but other than herself, no one knew what her real goal was.

"Both me and this student know Mr. Bai, so how can we be strangers? If you don't feel like going with us, why don't you give me the keys? After I open the door, I'll come back to return the keys to you," Chen Ge said calmly. His expression was serene; it was difficult to read his thoughts from his facial expression.

"No, my dad said that the keys cannot be given to strangers. Only family can use them." The girl's voice softened. She made it sound like she was being bullied. Chen Ge frowned slightly—he felt like the girl was hinting at the fact that she wished for him to be her family.

After a quick contemplation, Chen Ge squatted down again. He pinched the girl's cheek. "We are friends now, the best of friends. No matter what, we can rely on each other like family. If you're bored because you're alone, the two of us will come to keep you company." Chen Ge was a careful thinker. He knew that some ghosts' obsessions were like a curse. Once he gave them his real name, they would stick to him forever, so he dragged Wang Xiaoming down with him without much hesitation.

"The two of you?" The girl's eyes were glued onto Chen Ge. From the beginning, she had never laid her eyes on Wang Xiaoming. This was one of the things that had struck Chen Ge as strange. The girl stood at the bedroom door. She was still hesitating when the sound of a heavy object knocking against a wooden board came from inside Bai Ling's bedroom!

The bedroom door was not closed tight. The 'dog' inside the room seemed to have confirmed that the visitors this time were not acted by Bai Ling and Mr. Bai from Chen Ge's conversation with the girl.

BANG! BANG! BANG!

"Okay, that's a promise." The girl's smile was like a blooming flower. "Wait a minute, the big dog is acting up again. We mustn't let it attract the other people's attention."

The girl's gaze lingered on Chen Ge for a long time before she turned to head back into the bedroom. The sound of banging slowly dwindled. Then, several minutes later, the girl walked out from the bedroom. Her expression was normal, but she had changed into a new set of pajamas.

"I'll go with you. You open the door and look for your things while I wait for you outside." There was an indescribable excitement in the girl's voice. She jogged through the living room and waited at the entrance. Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming moved to follow her.

"Xiao Lin." Wang Xiaoming pointed at the girl and then waved his hand as if reminding Chen Ge not to get too close to the girl. Chen Ge nodded silently. He was prepared to grab the tools and run.

The girl held the doorknob and started to turn it. She had just opened the door a sliver when the door was suddenly pulled outward!

“There’s someone outside the door!” Chen Ge jumped from the shock. Thankfully, with the training from the black phone, his reaction speed was far faster than a normal person’s. Just as the doorknob was about to slip from the girl’s hand, he ran forward and slammed into the door, knocking it shut!

BANG!

The sound of door closing echoed down the corridor. In this silence, the sudden boom was very scary.

“Xiao Ling, I am Uncle Zhang from next door. There have been sounds coming from your place, so I came over to take a look. If you need any help, please open the door.” A man’s voice came from outside.

Chen Ge lowered his voice and leaned against the girl’s ear to whisper, “Do not open the door no matter what. Would he eavesdrop outside the door for so long if he wished to help? Furthermore, he was trying to pull the door open earlier, which proves that he wished to barge in. This man is lying to you.”

The girl, Bai Ling, did not expect someone to be hiding outside her room, but there was no fear in her eyes, only a trace of alertness and dissatisfaction.

“Go and hide inside my father’s bedroom. Remember to lock the door.” The big dog was in her bedroom, and her father’s bedroom was the innermost room. She jogged back to open the lock. Bai Ling urged Chen Ge to hurry back. The girl did not seem to care about Wang Xiaoming at all—she merely wished to hide Chen Ge.

“Quick, get in here.” Chen Ge was not going to leave his partner behind, so he pulled Wang Xiaoming into the room as well. The bedroom door closed again. Wang Xiaoming leaned against the door and could hear his heart pounding in his chest.

“There is someone else hiding outside the door. Thankfully, we didn’t run out and escape earlier, or else we would have been caught!”

“The person outside the door is probably the teacher who saw in the corridor. He was using a flashlight and almost discovered us,” Chen Ge replied absent-mindedly because his focus was on the room that he was in. This was Mr. Bai’s bedroom! He might find what he needed there!

“Just now, it was Bai Ling who used her key to open the lock, so in other words, without going through her, we would not normally be able to access this room!” Chen Ge did not panic even though things were not looking optimistic. If anything, he thought that he was being lucky. He looked through the drawers and shelves and soon discovered something.

“Student’s Registration File? Why would something like this be found inside a teacher’s drawer?” Chen Ge flipped through it at top speed. This was a normal file—the only special thing was that when he had still been in Mr. Bai’s class, he had counted only seventeen other people, including Mr. Bai, but in this file, there were the pictures of twenty-one students.

When Chen Ge woke up inside the classroom, he had memorized the faces of all his classmates. It was something that he had done out of caution, but that would come in handy now.

Comparing the file and the memory in his mind, Chen Ge soon realized that something was wrong.

Chapter 772 - Maintenance Room

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

At the time, the register that Mr. Bai was holding stated very clearly that there were supposed to be seventeen people in total, combining both students and teacher in the class. However, when I made the calculation myself, I realized that there were already seventeen students in the class! In other words, there was an extra student! The correct student number should be sixteen! It's unclear whether Mr. Bai made a careless mistake or purposely ignored this due to certain reason!

The student's registration file came with pictures. Comparing them with the memory in his mind, Chen Ge soon filtered out five cases from the file, these were the five Chen Ge did not encounter in the class.

Five people are missing from my class?

Chen Ge instantly related that to another detail. There were exactly five human shadows on the walls in his Bedroom 413.

Is that a coincidence, or were the five who have gone missing all transformed into the shadows on the wall?

Looking through the file again, he soon discovered another problem.

How come there is no record on Xiao Lin?

He had looked through it twice, but Chen Ge could not find the case file on Lin Sisi.

The extra person in the classroom is Lin Sisi? Am I the one unaccounted for?

Chen Ge thought about the content inside Xiao Lin's diary that he had found at Nightmare Academy. Because Xiao Lin liked to prank people, the rest of the classmates had ganged up to play a joke on him.

"I think I get it now." Chen Ge did not utter the rest of his thoughts.

He felt like Lin Sisi probably represented not an actual person but an identity. No one there was really his friend, but at the same time, he shared an unknown relationship with the rest of them.

Without any aid, without any clues, and everyone I encounter is my enemy. That is already hard enough, but on top of that, I have to face the 'rules' of this school filled with despair. Is this the difficulty of a four-star mission?

Chen Ge's hand that gripped the file tightened involuntarily, and he subconsciously turned to look at his shadow, but there was no change to it.

The truth was often the cruelest and heaviest. Chen Ge took a slow breath.

It'll be fine. At least, this is not a dead end. I still have a chance at survival.

Everyone at that school was concocting their own plans. Each of them had their own goal to achieve, and this was a chance for Chen Ge!

Memorizing the faces of these five students, Chen Ge shoved the whole file into his bag. He continued searching inside the bedroom. Meanwhile, Wang Xiaoming leaned against the door, eavesdropping on the situation outside with a worried expression on his face.

"Xiao Ling, open the door. I'm worried about you. I'm afraid that some bad guy has entered your room."

"It's just a little pet that my dad got me. It escaped from its cage, and I was running around trying to catch it."

"Your father gifted you a small pet?"

"Yes, Uncle Zhang, please don't tell that to anyone else. I promise it will not affect anyone."

"Ol' Bai definitely has crossed the line this time. The school rules state very clearly that we are not allowed to keep pets. Oh well, I'll pretend to ignore it this time, but you'd better deal with that thing as soon as possible."

"Okay, Uncle Zhang, promise you won't tell anyone about this."

"Don't worry, why would I tell other people about this?"

The sound from the living room disappeared. Then Bai Ling ran over to open the bedroom door. "He's gone."

"Could he still be hiding behind the door?" Chen Ge shifted the bag behind him. He was worried that the girl might notice that his bag had become fuller. In that short period of time, Chen Ge had searched the entire bedroom. Other than the student's registration file, he had found a teacher's ID, a canteen card, and a library card. He carried all of them with him, not knowing whether they would prove useful or not.

"I believe he has gone. Mr. Zhang is a good person; he suffers from paranoia, that's all." Bai Ling led Chen Ge and Wang Xiaoming back to the living room. She had Chen Ge look through the peephole. After confirming that there was no one outside, she opened the door. "Let's go. I'll wait for you outside the maintenance room."

The lights in the corridor were off. It was dim, and the darkness appeared to hide many dangers. Chen Ge made a shushing gesture. He turned off all the lights in Bai Ling's room. After his eyes got used to the darkness, he walked out from the room.

"Be careful." Chen Ge knew how to make use of his advantage. With his Yin Yang Vision, in the dark, his sight and senses were much better than those of others. The three moved to the end of the corridor. Bai Ling took out the ring of keys from her pajamas pocket and tried them one by one.

In the silence, any sound would be amplified. Wang Xiaoming leaned against the door, looking around nervously. Chen Ge kept his eyes on Bai Ling, afraid that she might set a trap against them. On the fourth trial, the key finally stuck into the keyhole, and the lock gave.

A yellow-colored copper key.

Narrowing his eyes, he felt that the key looked very familiar. He reached into his bag to look for the ring of keys that he had found inside Xiao Lin's bag. When he first obtained the ring of keys, Chen Ge had been wondering why Xiao Lin would have so many keys.

This is one of the keys on Xiao Lin's key ring!

Chen Ge had no idea where Xiao Lin had gotten this key, but this was good news for now. When he encountered a locked door in the future, he could try to open it with the keys in Xiao Lin's bag. Perhaps one might work.

Assuming Xiao Lin is an identity, does the presence of this key point to the fact that Xiao Lin has once been to this maintenance room?

“Why are you spacing out? Get your things now, or else some other people might come.” Wang Xiaoming pointed at Bai Ling quietly as if reminding Chen Ge that Mr. Bai might come home soon.

Chen Ge stopped wasting time. He entered the maintenance room, but what he saw was something that he did not anticipate. The room was indeed filled with tools but not those used for fixing machines. They were tools related to human anatomy, like the gum separator used by dentists, a scalpel, syringes, medical threads, an artery clamp, and so on.

Am I in the wrong room?

In the middle of a room was a table with a white cloth. There was something protruding from underneath the cloth. The four corners of the room had four mirrors covered in white cloth. The racks were clean, and many tools that Chen Ge could not recognize could be found.

“Is this the maintenance room?”

“Yes,” Wang Xiaoming and Bai Ling answered in unison. When they stepped into this room, their faces turned paler.

“This maintenance room... is probably not used to fix electrical appliances or furniture.” Chen Ge stopped wasting time. He moved down the racks. Certain things could not be changed, so he could only do his best given the circumstances. “It’s fine. The tool used to pull out teeth can be used to pull out the nails.”

The maintenance room was small. There was no dirt or blood as if someone cleaned it daily.

After placing all the tools that he could use into the bag, Chen Ge walked to stand before the first mirror.

The mirrors sat in the four corners of the room, and each of them was hidden behind a white cloth. One could only see the bottommost part.

“Why would they place mirrors inside the maintenance room? They are placed almost ceremoniously around the room...” Whether the maintenance room was used to fix living humans or furniture, it should have no use for mirrors either way. “After they have corrected whatever they’re fixing, do they place it before the mirrors to be admired first?”

Before Bai Ling or Wang Xiaoming could say anything, Chen Ge reached out to pull away the white cloth that covered the mirrors.

“Do not touch that!” Bai Ling’s warning came a little late. The white cloth fell to the ground, and the three were given an unobstructed view of the thing behind the cloth.

“Is this paint?” Chen Ge stood before the mirror and used his hand to touch its surface. The smooth surface had a coat of something that appeared like red paint. It ruined the purpose of the mirror, and it could no longer reflect anything.

Chen Ge used his nails to scratch at the surface. The red coat seemed to have grown out of the mirror itself. It had melted into the mirror and could not be removed so easily.

“Mirror...” Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of something. This was the first time that he had come across a mirror after waking up inside the classroom. Mirrors were common in the real world, but they seemed to be a kind of taboo at this school.

There was no mirror in Room 413, Xiao Lin did not carry any mirror on him inside his bag, there was no mirror inside the dormitory manager’s room, and even Bai Ling and Mr. Bai’s room did not have a mirror!

Chen Ge quickly moved to proceed to remove all white cloths from the mirrors. Chen Ge realized that all four mirrors had distinctive shapes and appearances—they seemed to have been moved there from different places.

The maintenance room's key should be with the maintenance worker and the teachers. Normally, people rarely come here. The school has placed these four mirrors here because they do not wish for people to come across them on a regular basis.

The coat of red paint was left on the surface of the four mirrors. Even when he stood before the mirror, he could not see his own reflection.

The mirrors are practically useless. Is it because they are afraid of seeing themselves in the mirror?

Chen Ge did not understand why, but he made a mental note of this. When he came across another mirror in his journey, he would pay it more attention. Perhaps a chance of escaping this place could be found from it.

“Xiao Lin, have you got everything? It’s time to go.” Wang Xiaoming kept urging Chen Ge. As time moved forward, the young man became more and more agitated.

“Wait a moment.” Chen Ge studied the mirrors in the four corners closely. The first mirror did not have a frame but instead was surrounded by clear cellophane tape. It appeared like it had been yanked out from a closet. The second mirror was small. Someone had probably taken it from a make-up table, something that did not appear like it should belong at a school. The third mirror had the term ‘laboratory’ written on it, so it probably came from there. The last mirror had a wooden frame, and a series of number was etched into the frame—413. Underneath the numbers, at the edge where the frame connected to the wall, there was a person’s name—Lin Sisi.

“Why would this last mirror have Xiao Lin’s name on it? Could it be that this mirror was taken from Xiao Lin’s room?” Chen Ge had a feeling that things were not that simple. Xiao Lin’s file could not be found on the student register, so why would the name Lin Sisi be on the mirror?

Squatting down before the last mirror, Chen Ge looked at the mirror’s surface, which was tempered. It was unclear whether it was his own shadow that fell on the mirror, a trick of the light, or an issue with the angle, but Chen Ge felt like he saw someone inside the mirror.

Lin Sisi's name is on the mirror, so if there is really someone inside the mirror, could that person be the real or the previous Lin Sisi?

He used his hand to touch the surface. The chill and eeriness were like he was touching a 'blood door' that was slowly opening.

The mirror before him seemed to transform into a python with a gaping maw. Chen Ge resisted the discomfort to grab at the edge of the mirror. When his fingers landed on the back of the mirror, he found that the back of the mirror was uneven, like something was carved there.

It felt like I was almost swallowed.

Slowly turning the mirror around, when Chen Ge saw the back side of the mirror, he took a deep, cold breath. The back of the mirror was covered with the name Lin Sisi, painted in bright red paint!

The names covered the back of the mirror. The creepy part was that the names came from different handwriting.

"Wang Xiaoming, help me turn the mirrors around. Check and see if they are all covered with human names on their backs." Chen Ge carried the fourth mirror with both of his hands while signaling for Wang Xiaoming to move the other mirrors. However, he waited for a long time, but Wang Xiaoming stood frozen at where he was.

Chen Ge turned back to look and realized that both Wang Xiaoming and Bai Ling were staring at the mirrors inside the maintenance room like they were possessed. Their bodies were leaning forward, and they stood on their toes. Green veins surfaced on their pale faces, and hatred as well as endless resentment swirled in their eyes.

"What's wrong with the two of you?" The mirrors were painted with this unknown red substance, and they could no longer reflect anything, but it felt like Wang Xiaoming and Bai Ling were still able to see the mirrors' reflections.

Do they see a different mirror than what I see, or can they feel a type of presence from within the mirrors? Bai Ling's father warned her from getting too close to the maintenance room. Could it be due to these few mirrors?

Bai Ling and Wang Xiaoming were Chen Ge's temporarily allies, but he was afraid that the two might suddenly turn on him, so he quickly picked up the white cloths and placed them back on the mirrors.

After the mirrors were hidden from view, Wang Xiaoming and Bai Ling gradually calmed down. The veins on their faces disappeared, and the resentment in their eyes slowly dissipated. They did not seem to remember the strange phenomenon that overtook them, like everything was just Chen Ge's imagination.

It appears like the mirror can reflect their true self.

There were very few mirrors around the school, and these remaining four mirrors had their surfaces ruined by this red paint. Chen Ge was curious. If Wang Xiaoming and the rest were given a direct look at an unaltered mirror, what would happen to them?

"We've already gotten what we came for, let's go." Chen Ge moved rather unwillingly away from the maintenance room. If not for the humongous size of the mirror, he would have carried one with him. What Chen Ge needed to do next was find a way to hurry back to Room 413, remove the nails on the walls, and persuade the remaining shadows.

"Xiao Lin." It was unknown when Wang Xiaoming managed to slither behind Chen Ge. He pulled on Chen Ge's arm lightly. "Based on our previous promise, you'd better remember to stop at the canteen to accompany me to buy some food."

"Is the canteen still open so late at night?" Chen Ge said with a smile as his eyes moved between Bai Ling and Wang Xiaoming.

"Of course, you'll see once you follow me there. There is a stall that sells very delicious food." Saliva dripped out of Wang Xiaoming's lips, and it made him look very scary.

"You cannot leave! Didn't you promise to stay? I said I would only bring my family here! You have to follow me back!" Bai Ling hugged Chen Ge with both of her arms. She refused to surrender Chen Ge to Wang Xiaoming.

"She's right, so what should I do?" Chen Ge purposely acted like he was troubled. Looking at the two who held claim over him quite literally, he said, "How about the two of you decide between yourselves where I should go?"

“He gave me his promise first!” Wang Xiaoming glared at Bai Ling and raised his voice.

“But you are now in the staff dormitory. Without my help, you would have gotten into the maintenance room,” Bai Ling retorted with a sweet smile on her face. Her hands were still curled around Chen Ge’s arm. “Come over to my place. I still have many things I want to tell you.”

...

Chen Ge was squeezed between the two. He knew better than anyone else what was happening. The big dog being reared at Bai Ling’s home was the missing student. If he followed Bai Ling home, he would end up as the girl’s plaything. It would not be too safe to follow Wang Xiaoming either. The man had been saying that there was delicious food at the canteen, but he did not mention what kind of food it was. If he really did follow Wang Xiaoming to the canteen, Chen Ge had a feeling that he would end up as the food himself.

Everyone in that school had their own evil agenda, but they would never show it directly. Both of those choices would lead to certain death—the difference was how he would die. Looking at the two fighting over him, Chen Ge did not push them away.

With one hand over Wang Xiaoming’s shoulder and the other caressing Bai Ling’s head, Chen Ge acted touched. “You both are my good friends. One is reliable and trustworthy, and the other is kind and cute; I really can’t find it within myself to reject either one of you!”

He hesitated for a while before squatting down to pick up Bai Ling. “I will follow my friend to the canteen to find something to eat first. Later, I’ll come back, okay?”

“No! You cannot go with him!” The girl’s sweet expression immediately froze. Small lumps started to swell on her body, and she seemed to have grown slightly taller.

“Okay then.” Chen Ge turned to Wang Xiaoming with a helpless expression. “Brother, how about you go to the canteen ahead of me? I will stay to accompany this girl for a while. She is probably too afraid to stay home alone.”

“Have you lost your mind? When Mr. Bai returns and sees you in his room, he will send you to detention!” Wang Xiaoming was stronger than Bai Ling. He pulled Chen Ge over to his side. “Follow me! We will go to the canteen!”

Chen Ge was dragged by Wang Xiaoming to the door, but Bai Ling refused to let go. “But you promised me!”

The transformation of the little girl became more pronounced. Her eyes sunk, and tears flowed out of her eyes. The tears cut open her face like a sharp knife. The monster that was hiding inside the girl was showing itself.

“You’re making this very difficult for me.” Chen Ge flung both of their hands away. “You two can discuss this among yourselves. I will wait outside the door for you. Come and find me when you reach a decision.”

After dropping that announcement, Chen Ge opened the door and left. Once he closed the door, the sound of a heavy thud came from inside the room. It sounded like someone’s head was slammed into the wall.

“It’s so surprising that I’m so popular here. There are so many students at this school, so why are they so hung up over me?” Chen Ge memorized what his two friends had said. Once he exited the maintenance room, he did not pause for even a second. He grabbed his bag and raced directly out of the staff dormitory. The moment that Chen Ge stepped out of the staff dormitory, a voice came from the darkened corridor behind him. It seemed to be calling Xiao Lin’s name.

However, the biggest difference between Chen Ge and the other protagonists of horror movies was that he would never be curious about things that might kill him. It was unimportant who the person that called after him was; the important thing was that he had obtained what he needed, and it was time to begin the next step of his plan.

“I need to move faster. If Bai Ling survives, she won’t know my exact location, but if it’s Wang Xiaoming who survives, everything will be much more complicated. This deskmate knows my room location and will definitely return to the dormitory to find me.” Chen Ge did not turn around once as he jogged all the way back to the male dormitory. “There is not even one person to be seen in this school after dark. No matter how strict the rules are, shouldn’t there be some guards patrolling the compound?”

It was a completely different atmosphere at the night school before and after the lights went out. The lights were probably some kind of boundary line there. “Staying here for too long will lead to some bad things, and staying in the dark for too long will attract the unwanted attention of monsters. There sure are many rules that can cause death here.”

Having many death-causing rules was not that scary; the thing that made it scariest was the fact that no one had told Chen Ge what the rules were. Even though he had been exploring the place for so long, Chen Ge was not completely confident that he had correctly deduced all the rules.

Chen Ge did not stop to catch his breath as he jogged back to the male student dormitory. He did not enter the building directly but hid behind one of the big trees next to the entrance. He used his Yin Yang Vision to scout out the area first.

The entrance was not closed shut, but the dormitory manager that Wang Xiaoming was afraid of appeared to have gone to sleep already.

“Something’s not right. When Wang Xiaoming and I left this place earlier, I made sure to close the entrance door, but now, it’s open. It can only mean that someone has been in or out of this place during the period that we were out. The school forbids students from wandering about after dark, so the person who arrived here was either a member of staff or the dormitory manager.” Chen Ge ran to the other side of the road to switch to a different vantage point. He saw something new.

There was a pair of brown leather shoes sitting in the corner of the first-floor corridor. Someone appeared to be hiding there!

“If I’m not mistaken, Mr. Bai wears a pair of shoes just like that. Is he the one who’s hiding there?” The more Chen Ge thought about it, the more he felt that it was likely. He had been in the staff dormitory, but he had not run into Mr. Bai.

“I sure was lucky. He has been waiting for me at the student dormitory, and that gave me the perfect opening to sneak inside his room.”

This kind of dangerous action caused Chen Ge’s heart to race. “It’s a good thing that Mr. Bai is hiding here. Wang Xiaoming knows that I will return to the bedroom, so if he survives the encounter at the maintenance room, he will rush back here. If he’s careless, he will run headfirst into Mr. Bai, and that will solve one of the loose ends.”

Chen Ge would run into more danger if he wished to continue his exploration of the school, but he had handled this situation nicely. While he attracted danger, he kept shifted the focus on him to something else. This made it so that even though he was in constant danger, he was not in mortal danger.

“For now, I can’t return to the student dormitory. I need to change up my plan somehow.” Chen Ge decided to go to the art room first. From Xiao Lin’s notebook, he had found out that the first student who died in Room 413 was an art student.

“It’s fine if you want to use me as a scapegoat, but you have to clarify some things first. If the discussion fails, I will personally hammer back the nails that you’ve put on me one by one.” Still hiding in the shadow, Chen Ge silently retreated. He did not have a map and had to avoid the different danger, so he walked very slowly.

“I’m at such a disadvantage because I don’t know anything about the different scenarios at this school. I need a real partner that I can trust.”

After taking a long detour, Chen Ge came to the laboratory building. There were few buildings on the night school’s campus, and he believed the art room might be inside this building. In any case, that was the likeliest possibility.

Chapter 775 - Who Is Following Me?

Chapter 775: Who Is Following Me?

The night school's laboratory building was not tall by any means; it only had four floors in total. Instead of saying that it was a location for the students to conduct experiments, it was more like a tacked-on location to fulfil the appearance of being an educational establishment. This building was not far from the student dormitory. So, if Chen Ge made too much noise there, it would be heard clearly by those residing in the male student dormitory.

Chen Ge silently sought his way to the building entrance. He looked through the glass door into the building for a while. There was a dark corridor and numerous rooms with closed doors. Looking in from the outside, there was nothing that particularly stood out about the place.

"Everything looks normal." Chen Ge had a standard in his heart used to gauge the scary factor of a scenario. The lowest standard was for those scenarios where the scenario itself was not scary but the characters or events that transpired at the scenario were very scary. The highest standard was reserved for scenarios where both the setting and the characters possessed incredible danger, and a careless mistake could lead to your death.

Obviously, this school belonged to the highest standard. Therefore, Chen Ge reminded himself not to be fooled by a seemingly peaceful appearance. "The stiller the water on the surface, the deeper it runs."

Resting a moment before entering the building, Chen Ge adjusted his breathing. When he was ready, Chen Ge moved forward to give the entrance door a light shove. The glass door of the laboratory was not locked. With a light push from Chen Ge, the door slid open practically soundlessly.

A chilling draft came from inside the building. Staring down the dark corridor, the hair on Chen Ge's arms stood on end. "Something does not feel right here."

Chen Ge had conducted many Trial Missions, and a normal scenario would not have caused him such a feeling.

Squinting his eyes, Chen Ge studied his surrounding carefully. “Things look like how they should be in real life. There is nothing that stands out, so how come I have this disconcerting feeling in my heart?”

The corridor was laid with clean and slippery tiles, and the walls were painted white. The place was spotless. There was no graffiti to be seen, and this place was very well kept, but somehow, it made Chen Ge feel incredibly uncomfortable.

“What is the problem?” An instinctual sense of fear curled around Chen Ge’s heart. He entered the building with as much care as he could manage. The moment that his hand let go of the doorknob, the glass doors slid back into place.

“Not good!” Without any hesitation, Chen Ge instantly turned around to grab the doorknob. He pulled with all his might, and the doors swung open easily. He was not trapped inside the building.

“This is different from what I thought.” When the doors slid shut behind him, Chen Ge had thought that his escape route had been cut off and that he had been quarantined inside the building, but that was not the truth. “They allow me to escape if I want to, or does this mean that they know I will not be able to survive even if they allow me the freedom of getting out the front door?”

Chen Ge let go of the door and watched as the glass doors closed. So far, everything that Chen Ge had encountered inside this building could not have been more normal. Any other person would have doubted their conviction and lowered their guard, but Chen Ge was not that kind of person. “I need to find what is causing me the anxiety as soon as possible. I don’t care whether it is a person, a ghost, or something else.”

Carrying the bag, Chen Ge entered the corridor with his back pressed against the wall. The interior of the building was very small, but it contained many labs. They were for different subjects, and every classroom had a different name on it.

“All the labs and activity rooms for the night school should be in this building. That means that I will probably find the art room here.” Chen Ge’s footsteps echoed down the corridor as he walked down the path alone at night. This pressure was hard to describe, but every single second was like tortuously long. Chen Ge tried to open the classroom doors as he walked down the corridor. He had lost count of the doors that he had tried, but the majority of them were locked. Only a small handful were left unlocked, but even so, the doors could not be opened. They were too heavy to move as if someone had placed a heavy object behind them to block entry.

Chen Ge reached the end of the corridor. He had searched the entire first floor, but he had failed to locate the art room. To his surprise, the building, which only had four floors, came with an elevator. "Are there no stairs? Only an elevator?"

Everything else in the building was fine until the appearance of this elevator. Chen Ge did not dare to utilize it so recklessly. He stood about four meters away to study it first.

"This appears to be an elevator normally used to transport heavy objects. Does the lab need to have bigger objects transported up and down between the floors often? In that case, why didn't they fix the stairs but install an elevator?"

As he got closer to the elevator, Chen Ge got an increasingly stronger whiff of a horrible stench. The smell came from inside the elevator. "Just what kind of things is this elevator normally used to transport?"

Chen Ge stood at the door for a long time. Actually, Chen Ge was reluctant to take the elevator because the booth was a confined space. Once the doors closed, he would lose the ability to escape. There was no way to run. "The art room is not on the first floor, and to get to the other floors, I have to use the elevator."

There were two choices. One was to take the elevator and continue exploring the building, to search for the shadow that had escaped from Room 413. The other was to leave the night school directly and head to the western campus where the normal students should be gathered.

Chen Ge did not dare to wander about the night school anymore. Mr. Bai was waiting to ambush him at the dormitory; if he ran into either Bai Ling or Wang Xiaoming, he would be exposed, and then he would end up in a very dangerous situation.

"The frequency for the appearance of the nails is becoming shorter and shorter. I have to deal with this curse as soon as possible." Chen Ge hid one of the nails in his palm and pressed the button to summon the elevator. The number on the panel above the door originally showed three, but after Chen Ge pressed the button, the number on the panel soon turned to two.

“This building does not possess a staircase. So, the only way to leave is to use the elevator. Before I called the elevator, it was parked at the third floor and not idling on the first floor. This means that at this moment, there is someone else inside this building, and he is on the third floor!” Chen Ge gripped the nail tightly. As the number on the panel slowly changed, he silently retreated to the middle of the corridor. He was worried that once the doors opened, something would rush out at him from inside the elevator.

The school was filled with danger at every step, and Chen Ge felt like he could never be too careful. The number on the panel soon turned to one. The elevator doors opened, and the strange stench in the air seemed to have thickened. Chen Ge, who stood several meters away, peered into the elevator booth with his Yin Yang Vision. The inside of the elevator was empty; there was nothing there.

“That thing hasn’t come down, so it is still on the third floor!” Chen Ge returned to the elevator. He started to search inside his bag. He wished to use the dental floss and artery clamp to make a simple tool. The plan was, when he took the elevator to the second floor, he would place those items between the two doors so that the elevator could not close fully. The elevator would not move to another floor, and he would not have to worry about the thing from the third floor coming to get him.

As a Haunted House boss, Chen Ge had personally designed many props in the past, and he finished the tool in mere seconds. “This should work.”

Chen Ge entered the elevator and pressed the button to go to the second floor. The button lit up.

The elevator booth was much more spacious than a normal elevator. Chen Ge felt very uncomfortable standing in there. “What is this elevator normally used for? What does it usually transport? Why is there such a horrible stink?”

After selecting the desired floor, the gray doors slowly closed, and the intensity of the stench inside the elevator almost doubled.

“The stench continues to thicken.” Chen Ge subconsciously moved his hands to cover his nose. He looked at the screen above the control panel with a frown. He wished to leave the elevator as soon as possible, but once the doors completely closed, the button that represented the third floor on the panel suddenly lit up.

“Someone is going to the third floor?” After this temporary shock, Chen Ge’s eyes gradually widened!

The light on the button would only light up because someone had pressed on the corresponding floor number from inside the elevator!

“There is something else inside this elevator!” The heavy stench rushed into his nostrils. Chen Ge did not turn around. He faced the elevator doors and kept himself frozen solid inside the elevator.

Chapter 776: Guardroom

“There is another existence other than me inside the elevator. It was the one who pressed for the number three on the control panel.” Thick stench rolled out from behind him. It was like an invisible hand, holding Chen Ge firmly in its palm. Chen Ge’s breathing became difficult. The sound of a cart sliding suddenly echoed in the elevator that should have been empty except for Chen Ge.

The rough wheels ground against the metallic surface. It sounded like someone was pushing a small cart back and forth inside the elevator.

“I looked inside the elevator with my Yin Yang Vision, and there were no people or ghosts, much less a cart. Have I encountered something that even the Yin Yang Vision could not discern?”

The Yin Yang Vision came from the black phone, and it had been strengthened multiple times. One time, Zhang Ya had blown a breath of Yin energy into his eyes. This talent of his was very powerful, and there was next to no chance of it suddenly failing.

“What is standing behind me?” The simplest way to get to the bottom of the puzzle was to turn around. However, Chen Ge knew that curiosity killed the cat. He bit down on his lip and refused to budge. The stench continued to thicken. It was hard to tell where this smell originated from. It permeated around Chen Ge and kept trying to seep into his body. The elevator booth was rather spacious, but as the elevator moved upward, Chen Ge felt his surroundings closing in. Even his breathing became lighter and lighter.

“It feels like the space around me is crowded even though the elevator is supposedly empty.” Chen Ge kept his head lowered and glanced at the control panel out of the corner of his eyes. He did not dare move his gaze aimlessly, afraid that he would see things that he should not.

“This is so slow...” Inside the enclosed space, there was no place to hide or run; all Chen Ge could do was wait. Under Chen Ge’s gaze, the number above the control panel started to change, and the red one now turned into a two. It was only a few seconds, but it felt like years to Chen Ge. “The elevator doors are going to open soon!”

Every muscle in his body was pulled taut. Chen Ge was very worried that the elevator would refuse to open on the second floor and directly take him to the third floor. The elevator that was moving upward shivered slightly. Then a ringing sound came from the screen, and the elevator stopped. The silvery-gray doors slowly opened. At the same time, the stench rushed toward Chen Ge, forming a palpable wall that attempted to push Chen Ge deeper into the elevator.

Without waiting for the doors to open fully, Chen Ge waved his arms around and darted out of the elevator!

He slowed down after running several meters. He stood on the right side of the corridor and turned back to look. The doors were slowly closing. There was nothing inside the empty elevator booth. The stench also slowly dissipated as the doors closed.

“Why isn’t there anything?” Moving his eyes about, Chen Ge caught a glimpse of something on the floor of the elevator booth. There was a stain there, and it had the shape of a human face. The doors closed fully, and the number on the panel above the doors turned from two to three.

“All of them appear to have moved onto the third floor.” Chen Ge was still holding the item that he had crafted earlier. It was already soaked in sweat. “Thankfully, I did not drop this thing at the door. If the elevator was unable to move up, then the thing inside would have come after me instead.”

Placing the item inside the bag, Chen Ge looked at the elevator with residual fear in his heart. “Perhaps it will be safer to jump out from the window when I need to leave later. After all, a second floor is not too high up anyway.”

Before knowing what kind of existence he was dealing with, Chen Ge swore not to take the elevator again.

“Chen Ge, snap out of it. Follow the plan.”

Narrowing his eyes, Chen Ge held the wall to begin his search for the art room.

Now that he was on the second floor, the anxiety in his heart only grew stronger. This whole building was different from any of the locales that he had visited in the past. He could sense that there was something wrong with the building, but he could not pinpoint what was wrong with it.

His footsteps were the only sound as he moved down the darkened corridor. After walking for several meters, Chen Ge discovered a very strange room.

“A guardroom? Why is there a guardroom here? Do they need someone to stay overnight to watch over this place? Is it because something valuable is stored here?”

Two questions surfaced in Chen Ge’s mind. Why was there a guardroom in the building, and why was the room situated on the second floor, not the first floor? Did the watchmen on duty only have to look after the second floor?

“Could there be someone currently inside this room?” Chen Ge sidled over to the door. He glanced in through the window on the door. The room was sparsely furnished. There was only a bed, a wooden table, a chair, and a closet that could fit two adults. Placing his hands lightly on the doorknob, Chen Ge realized that the door was not locked. He pushed the door open and entered it.

“This room should contain information or at least the layout of this building. If I can confirm that the art room is not in this building, then I’ll jump out the window and leave immediately.” Chen Ge left the door open and walked to the closet. The closet was unusually large. Chen Ge was worried that someone was hiding inside, so the first thing that he checked was the closet. Holding a nail, Chen Ge slowly pulled the closet door open.

Several sets of blue work outfits sat inside. Probably because he accidentally nudged against them when he pulled open the door, the clothes were swinging slightly on their rails.

“There’s nothing wrong with the outfits, but how come all the places where the name of the school should be have been torn out?” Chen Ge inspected all the work clothes and realized that anything that could clarify the school’s identity like the name or school symbol had been removed.

“The school staff probably wear such clothes.” Chen Ge grabbed a random set and shoved it inside his bag. “When I go to the western campus, perhaps I can disguise myself as one of the workers.”

Pulling up the bag’s zipper, Chen Ge left the closet open as he turned to search the rest of the room. He opened the wooden drawer, which contained some inventory and transport records. All the product’s names and prices were represented by symbols, so Chen Ge could not understand it.

“Should I take the account book with me?” Chen Ge thought about it and decided against it. The account book was quite useless to him, and it might place him in danger.

There was nothing else in the room. Chen Ge closed the drawers and prepared to leave, but when he turned around, he realized that the cover of the bed was wrinkled, like someone had recently sat on it. “Was the cover already wrinkled when I came into the room?”

The longer Chen Ge stared at the bed, the more confused he became. “Normally, a bed should be placed next to the wall, so why is this bed placed in the middle of the room? It’s not adjacent to any wall...”

Standing next to the bed, Chen Ge could hear some soft whispering. He looked at the covers. Holding the nail, he slowly bent down. Reaching out to grab a corner of the cover, Chen Ge looked underneath the bed while half squatting.

The wooden bed was placed in the middle of the room, and there was nothing underneath it. Sighing in relief, Chen Ge was about to get up when he felt something touch his shoulder. He turned back to look and realized with a shock there was a pair of legs dangling around the head of the bed.

“Who is it?” Chen Ge jumped up immediately, but he found no one seated on the bed. Apparently, he could only see the legs if he was looking from the beneath the bed.

“I cannot stay here any longer.” Chen Ge grabbed his bag and prepared to leave. When he closed the door of the guardroom, he saw some red clothes fluttering inside the closet.

Why would there be a red outfit floating inside a blue closet that is supposed to be filled with blue outfits? Unless, of course, it was not clothes but a person wearing red clothes.

When he entered the guardroom, Chen Ge had thought that the closet was very unusual. The first thing that he had done was inspect the closet, but his Yin Yang Vision did not spot anything unusual.

Why can't my eyes see them?

Chen Ge was reminded of the left eye that Chang Wenyu had brought out of the school.

Perhaps only that eye can see the truth of this place, but unfortunately, that eye is currently with Chang Gu, and I have no idea where he is now.

After the door was pushed open, Chang Gu had probably become stranded somewhere in this school, but the school in the man's eyes was probably very different from what Chen Ge was currently seeing.

If I can find Chang Gu, it'll be much easier if we work together. I'll have more choices to work with as well.

Chang Gu was the most suitable partner in the school for Chen Ge. Both of them came from outside the door, shared the same goal, and pursued the same outcome. However, the key issue was that Chen Ge was not sure if Chang Gu had the ability to survive in this world. This school was the lowest layer of hell for a normal person.

He has the left eye and can see things that I can't. If he is careful, he should have a chance of survival.

To find Chang Gu in such a large school compound was very difficult; Chen Ge would not waste his time to purposely do that. This was because he knew perfectly well that after he found Chang Gu, while he might gain Chang Gu's help, Chen Ge would also have to take on the responsibility of looking after Chang Gu.

When they were together, their choices would increase, but at the same time, the risk of getting exposed would also double. After leaving the guardroom, Chen Ge picked up his speed. He realized that he was being a tad too optimistic. Not only was the third floor of this lab building dangerous, the whole building was rife with danger—it was merely that the intensity of despair on the third floor was higher.

I still have underestimated this place's danger level. Now my eyes are probably only seeing what the scenario wishes for me to see. There should be a blood red world behind the door, and this scenario should be no exception!

The danger at this school was like an iceberg because the danger that Chen Ge had seen so far was merely the tip. As for how many things were still hidden in the ice under the surface of the water, Chen Ge had no idea.

Rushing down the corridor, Chen Ge walked past many labs that he had not heard of before. He did not stop to examine them. As long as the room's name had nothing to do with art, he would leave immediately and continue to move forward. He carried on until the other end of the corridor. Just as he was about to reach the end, Chen Ge suddenly saw a room name that caught his attention—Paint Storage Room.

They need a whole room just to store the paint?

Paint could be used in painting, but it could also be used to cover the surfaces of mirrors. When Chen Ge saw those few words, he did not rush into the room immediately.

The notebook said that the first victim that died in Room 413 was an art student, so he probably came here when he was still alive.

As Chen Ge grabbed the doorknob, his arm slowly applied force. However, before he even opened the door, a sharp pain came from his chest!

Gritting his teeth, Chen Ge forced the yelp down his throat. He pulled up his shirt to take a look and realized that a very deep hole had been made by a nail on his chest.

It has started to aim for my heart! I cannot allow this curse to go on any further. If the nail decides to show up when I am running away, it will cause a life-threatening influence.

When he peeled up his shirt, the nail dropped to the ground. There was no blood on it.

It's getting more and more painful.

Chen Ge bent over to pick up the nail. When his head was upside down and he prepared to reach out to grab the nail, his eyes glanced at the corridor behind him. Not far away from him, someone was following him with their head lowered.

Chen Ge jumped up instantly, and he threw the nail right at where the person was standing. However, when he straightened himself and turned back to look, the corridor behind him was empty—there was nothing there.

“What was that?” His body could feel something rush at him, but he could not see anything. There was no staircase leading off the corridor; there was only a dead-end. Chen Ge did not hesitate. He pulled open the door and ran into the paint storage room.

He locked the door. Chen Ge leaned against it to block it from opening. After a long time, there was no sound from outside the door, and only then did Chen Ge's heart slowly return to normal.

Why is it that only when I bend over to pick stuff up will I see someone who also has his head lowered following me? Can he only look downward because he died from jumping off the building? Or is this a sign that the world that he's looking at is upside down from the one that I'm seeing?

Chen Ge wished to lower his head to try to take another look, but he was afraid that once he did that, he would find himself inside a room filled with people, and then he would be in even greater danger.

Not seeing anything will probably make me feel better.

Chen Ge grabbed his bag with one hand and held the nails in another as he slowly walked around the room. All the racks and shelves in the room were covered with white cloth. There were several easels that sat in the corner of the room. One of them had a white sheet of paper fixed on it, and the paper had faded pencil scratches like someone was making the outline of a painting.

This kind of paper is specifically used for oil painting, and the easel for oil painting is much heavier than a normal easel. This should be an incomplete painting.

The sketch was very rough, and the content was rather strange. The theme of the painting was two inverted sickrooms. There was a bed placed in each of the inverted rooms, and in each of them laid a patient. Inside the two inverted sickrooms, there were two identical patients lying above two beds that were inverted, looking at each other. "What is this painting trying to express?"

Chen Ge could not figure it out. He moved the easel away to continue his exploration. He came upon several balls of paper inside the trashcan on the ground. He picked them up and spread them out. Every paper was painting the same scene.

Seeing the sickrooms inside the paintings, the confusion in Chen Ge's heart grew. "Why would they paint a sickroom? I don't think I've encountered a sickroom at this school, much less a patient."

Then, Chen Ge was reminded of a detail. When he first woke up and was returning to the dormitory with Wang Xiaoming, the two of them had walked down the corridor of the education block, and Chen Ge remembered seeing a lot of doctors' portraits lining the wall. Normally, a school would have pictures of their famous alums or great contributors to education showcased on the wall to inspire the students. Yet, this school had doctors' portraits, and none of the doctors were remotely famous.

The education block is filled with doctors' portraits, and now, these pictures mysteriously appear at the paint storage room...

Chen Ge slowly lifted his head, and a possibility crossed his mind.

I entered the door in a mental asylum. Could these things be a kind of hint?

Chen Ge was unsure of his thought, but he did not dare go verify it. After all, with one mistake, he would die.

Doctors' portraits and paintings of sickrooms appear at the school, but why would the paintings of the sickrooms be inverted? The same patient lying in different beds looking at themselves...

Chen Ge examined the paintings closer. He used his fingers to touch them and realized with a shock that the upper part of the painting had a rough touch to it, and the lower part was much smoother. It felt like someone had painted over the lower part, giving it a much smoother coat. This meant that these paintings could be hiding some kind of hint.

Chapter 778: Third Floor

Painting paper was cheaper and easier to handle than painting canvas, which meant that new art students commonly used it. However, oil painting was a unique painting style in that students normally had to be relatively skilled before they were taught oil painting. By then, they would have outgrown painting paper. Thus, when Chen Ge saw the painting papers on the easel, he was confused, especially regarding the identity of the painter.

Chen Ge had studied toy design and manufacture in university. His minor was in classes that were related to art and art appreciation. He could tell from stylistic choices and skills employed in the simple sketches that the painter was not a newbie.

“He seems to be attempting to express something through multiple trials.” Chen Ge’s finger glided across the surface. The upper half was rough and the lower half smooth, giving him completely different sensations. “Why did he insist on oil painting? Is it because only oil painting can express what he wishes to express?”

Two inverted sickrooms and two patients with the same face. There was no problem with the theme, but when he used his finger to touch the painting itself, he noticed the problem.

“Since this is a painting, do I have to use paint on it to clarify the difference?”

With the intention to test it out, Chen Ge peeled back the white cloth from the racks and prepared to choose his paint. The rack was very large and the paints there were different from the ones sold at the shops. They were all stored inside glass jars that came without any labels or signs.

“Why... are there only red paint?” Looking at the rows of glass jars, Chen Ge was stumped. Various shades of red sat on the rack. Other than red, there were no other colors. As he twisted one of the jars open, a faded scent of blood drifted out. Chen Ge was certain that this was not a smell that should come out from a paint can.

“I’ll use this one.” Chen Ge picked up the brush on the easel, dripped it into the jar, and placed several strokes on the painting. With the first stroke, Chen Ge noticed the problem. There seemed to be an invisible line in the middle of the paper. The paint in the jar only managed to leave behind a faded line on the upper part of the painting, but it left a deep red gash that looked like an open wound on the lower half of the painting.

After several brushes, the painting took on a new look. The upper half looked like a sickroom that was installed with a light red lamp while the latter part seemed to have been soaked in blood. The patients in the painting were supposed to have the same expression, but the feeling that they gave off was completely different. One looked normal, if a little bit lost, but the other was covered in blood, and their expression was frozen in hatred and sin.

Several seconds later, Chen Ge witnessed something even stranger. On the unique piece of paper, the color of the upper half slowly faded while the bottom part was darkening. It felt as if the paint from the upper half was moving to the lower part.

“Isn’t this how the door works? Despair from real life will keep on seeping into the world behind the door. One cleanses itself, and the other sinks deeper into its despair.” The more he studied it, the more Chen Ge believed that this painting had everything to do with the world behind the door. He attempted to pull the painting out, but he was only halfway through when he heard knocking coming from outside the door.

“Has it come?” His sweat follicles immediately stood on end. Chen Ge abandoned the painting. He picked up one of the sketches on the ground and raced to stand next to the window. Before entering the building, Chen Ge had noticed from outside that none of the windows were installed with anti-theft nets. Pulling back the thick gray curtains, Chen Ge pushed open the windows. He was about to jump out when he saw someone standing right at the bottom of the building.

The man had his head lowered. He was wearing a pair of leather shoes, on the thin side, and he did not look like he was in a good situation. "Mr. Bai?"

Mr. Bai, who was supposed to be waiting at male dormitory, had suddenly arrived there. He seemed to be searching for something. Chen Ge pulled his body back into the room. He quickly yanked the curtains shut with his heart still pounding. "I was almost discovered!"

Glancing through the gap in the curtains, Chen Ge saw Mr. Bai wandering around the building. He seemed to be hesitating over whether to enter the building or not. "If I jump from here, I'll fall right into his arms, what do I do now?"

BANG! BANG! BANG!

The knocking became more intense. Chen Ge was trapped between a rock and a hard place. His brain was quickly spinning, but the thing outside the door did not give him much time. The sound of the key going into the lock was like a knife piercing Chen Ge's chest. He did not have time to hesitate; the door would be unlocked the next second.

"There's no time to waste. I need to leave now."

Carrying his bag, Chen Ge stepped onto the edge of the windowsill. Since he could not jump down, he was going to seek his escape elsewhere. He adjusted the timing and moved to the windowsill of the room next door. "Hanging out here makes me an easy target. If Mr. Bai lifts his head, he will see me."

Holding onto the rim of the air-conditioning machine for dear life, Chen Ge did not have the chance to take a second breath before the door of the paint storage room was opened. The person inside noticed he open window immediately and rushed toward it!

The sound of footsteps approached. The person only needed to look outside the window, and they would stop Chen Ge!

"Third floor it is!" Gritting his teeth, Chen Ge gripped the edge of the third-floor windowsill with both hands. Without any safety gear, he climbed onto the third-floor windowsill. Just as he did so, a pale arm reached out from the paint storage room's window. Chen Ge perched on the windowsill and did not dare breathe too loudly.

Maintaining this posture required a great deal of energy. Once his grasp slipped, he would fall. Chen Ge tried to push the window. When he realized that it was not locked, he decided to jump through it. With no time to inspect the room, he first squatted down next to the window and observed Mr. Bai from the dark.

“Why is he still there?” The third floor was the most dangerous floor. The elevator was waiting at the third floor, and when he took the elevator earlier, the things inside the elevator had also headed to the third floor.

Staying in the corner, Chen Ge kept motionless. He decided to wait inside this room until Mr. Bai left before working out what to do next.

The night breeze wafted into the room, and the red curtain floated across his neck. Chen Ge was about to close the window when he remembered that the color of the curtain on the second floor was gray.

He paused for a second. Chen Ge retreated a few steps. After he moved away from the curtain, he opened the door and rushed out.

The corridor was dark with not one ray of light. All the doors leading to the labs on that floor were open. Some were creaking noisily. Lightly closing the door behind him, Chen Ge ran into the opposite room. He planned to jump out the window there. The room was on the opposite side of the building, so he would be out of Mr. Bai’s line of sight.

The third floor was the most dangerous floor; almost everything in the elevator was trying to get to this floor. The seemingly empty corridor might be bustling with people if viewed from another angle.

“The curtains of this building are grayish black in color. The red thing that floated around my neck earlier was definitely not gray in color, so it was not the curtain. It was probably the monster from the second floor that had caught up to me.”

A Red Specter was on a completely different level compared to a normal Specter. Therefore, when Chen Ge encountered a Red Specter, he did not hesitate to turn and run.

Without the aid of his workers, Chen Ge was practically defenseless before a Red Specter. He knew very well that he did not pose a threat to a Red Specter with the few nails that he was holding. “I didn’t find anything off on the first floor, and there’s a Red Specter on the second floor—I wonder what awaits me on the third floor.”

The laboratory was only one of the many buildings at the school, but this four-story building was already proving too much for Chen Ge to handle.

“On the surface, the school maintains a normal appearance. It hasn’t been that long since the lights got switched off, so the school hasn’t arrived at its scariest point yet.” Chen Ge was getting more confident that he was in the School of the Afterlife. The scary factor at this school was far beyond any of the other schools that he had been to in the past. “No matter what, I have to shake that Red Specter loose.”

Chen Ge headed to the room on the opposite side of the corridor. He had just taken the first step when he felt something touch his shoulder. “Did I knock into someone?”

Squinting, Chen Ge used his Yin Yang Vision, but in his eyes, there was nothing in the corridor. "It was not my imagination; I definitely brushed against something earlier."

He took another step forward. This time, not only his shoulder, his arms and legs knocked into something. "This corridor isn't really filled with 'people', is it?"

Actually, that question was no longer that important to Chen Ge. He forced himself to 'squeeze' through the corridor. Just as he was about to reach the door of the opposite room, the door before him suddenly was closed by someone inside!

Without any warning, the door that had been left ajar was slammed shut. A chill surged through his body. Chen Ge reacted very quickly; he turned to run toward the next room. However, before he even took his first step, the next door was closed as well.

"The things inside the rooms don't want me to get close to them?"

At the same time, like they had received a signal, all the doors that were left open in the corridor were closed from within. A light stench drifted down the corridor and crawled up Chen Ge's nostrils. He had encountered a similar smell when he was inside the elevator. "It's this smell again."

Chen Ge leaned against the wall. The stench formed a palpable wall around him. It felt like 'dead bodies' were surrounding him.

BANG! BANG! BANG!

Suddenly, knocking came from behind him. Chen Ge turned to look, and the knocking was coming from the room that he had just escaped from.

"It's the Red Specter knocking! I can't stay here any longer." The doorknob turned like the person inside was trying to open it. The Red Specter might appear at any moment. "Why is this thing chasing after me? Is it because I took its clothes?"

Chen Ge reached into his bag to take out the work outfit that he had 'borrowed' from the second floor guardroom.

Strangely enough, when he did so, the stench around him seemed to lighten. "Why would that happen?"

Chen Ge put one of his arms into the sleeve, and the stench dissipated even further. “I cannot see the monsters inside this building, but they carry a smell like the smell of decay around them. With the stench fading away, it can only mean that their interest in me has lowered. They have moved away from me.”

Chen Ge’s original plan had been to return the outfit to the Red Specter inside the guardroom, but that had changed.

Putting down the bag, Chen Ge put on the whole outfit. He tried to push open the door before him, but it felt like something was being used to block behind the door. Even though the doorknob could be turned, the door could not be opened. He tried several rooms before finally giving up. He grabbed his bag and rushed toward the elevator.

“The monsters on the third floor that give off the stench are not hostile toward me. The Red Specter from the second floor is still in the third-floor room. So, at this moment, the elevator should be safe.” Chen Ge ran faster. He knew that his prediction might be wrong, but he had no other choice. Without his employee, without the black phone, he could not even contact the police to come and help him—he could only rely on himself.

In this despairing environment, one had to make the choice in the shortest available time, but the smallest mistake might cause death to become a type of luxury. Negative emotions corrupted his mind, and a curse would bring more pain to this physical body, but even under such stressful conditions, Chen Ge still forced himself to move toward his destination and goal.

When he arrived at the elevator door, the number on the panel was three, and a smile appeared on Chen Ge’s face. Pressing the button for the elevator, the doors opened, and Chen Ge slipped into it. He started to press the button for the doors to close madly. The Red Specter did not exit the room. It seemed to be under some kind of limitation—it was not allowed to break anything inside this school. The gray doors slowly closed, and the elevator moved.

“When I reach the first floor, I’ll need to remain cautious of Mr. Bai. This scenario is impossibly difficult. Even for those supposedly hell-difficulty games on the market, you wouldn’t be chased by both monsters and ghosts at the same time.” Chen Ge was thinking about how to avoid Mr. Bai when he noticed that something was wrong.

Turning to look at the screen, in three seconds, the number on the monitor turned from three to four. “The fourth floor? But I pressed for the first floor! Someone on the fourth floor was calling for the elevator when I was using it?”

Without much time to think the situation through, the doors opened. Wearing the guard outfit, Chen Ge gripped the nails and hid in the corner. He was about to jump out should anyone come in. The doors opened fully. Beyond it was a dark corridor and nothing else.

“There’s no one?” A faded stench drifted in from the open door. Then a stench harsher than the one on third floor floated into the elevator booth. All the numbers on the elevator control panel lit up on their own. The stench in the booth reached an unbearable level, but the elevator doors refused to close. Several seconds later, the control panel screamed its warning, and the term ‘overload’ appeared on screen.

“I’m in the elevator alone, but the weight’s over the limit?” The beeping warning was particularly screechy inside the quiet building. Chen Ge could not imagine what was happening inside the elevator. After some hesitation, Chen Ge kept his head lowered and came out of the elevator with hasty steps. Once he left, the doors successfully closed, and the stench disappeared.

Standing inside the fourth floor’s corridor alone, Chen Ge’s emotion was complicated.

Chapter 780: Uniqueness of a Four-Star Scenario

“Mr. Bai is on the first floor, the Red Specter is on the second floor, and a bunch of invisible monsters are on the third floor. What will be on the fourth floor?” Chen Ge stood in the corridor alone, not daring to breathe too loudly. His pupils narrowed to a point, and the muscles all over his body were tense. “Since I’m already here, might as well take a look around.”

Moving his feet, Chen Ge’s body was slowly swallowed by the darkness. In the dim corridor, the only light source came from the elevator’s panel. The red number was like a smiling face carved out by a knife. It could not heal, and the painful smile had to be maintained forever.

Creak...

After walking for a while, Chen Ge discovered another room related to art—the model storage room. The door of this room had been left ajar. It felt like someone was hiding behind the door, spying on the corridor. Chen Ge slowly pushed the wooden door open. The room that he was greeted by was rather strange.

There were no tools, only columns of white cloths that ‘stood about’. It felt like people covered by white cloths were standing in the room.

“What are these?” Chen Ge approached one of them and pulled away the white cloth that was closest to him. He wished to know what was underneath the white cloth, but at the same time, he was afraid that the thing underneath might be dangerous. Therefore, he moved with extreme speed and caution. He was going to make the first move before the other party could react.

The white cloth fell away to reveal a skinned human model statuette.

Chen Ge frowned lightly. The white cloth was hiding a human model that had no skin. The muscles appeared tense, and the blood vessels coursed through the muscles. It looked so real, replicating every single horrifying detail. “Did the art students at this school use these models during their classes?”

He looked at the model, and the model stared back at him. The pair of eyes that were sunk inside blood vessels and bone glared lifelessly at Chen Ge. “The paint storage room has rows of red paint jars that give off a faint scent of blood, and the model storage room has a bunch of skinned human models. I cannot imagine what I will find inside the art room.”

After replacing the white cloth, Chen Ge learned from his previous lesson; he did not stay in the room for long and left immediately. Just as he turned around, his eyes caught the inner part of the model storage room. A white cloth was lying on the ground, but the thing that it should have been covering was nowhere to be seen.

After leaving the model storage room, Chen Ge found the canvas storage room at the other side of the corridor. It was filled with half-processed or fully processed ‘canvases’.

Touching them with his hands, Chen Ge found that the processed ‘canvases’ had a smooth surface, but he was unable to tell what kind of materials had been used to treat them. However, what caused Chen Ge alarm was that the ‘canvases’ had the same touch as human skin. It felt like he was touching other human beings. He did not stay there for long. Wiping his hands on the working outfit, Chen Ge left the room.

With the discovery of the art room, part of Chen Ge’s goal of entering the laboratory had been accomplished. He walked hastily forward to push on the door. The wooden door fell open with his push. There were thirteen easels in the rooms, and various paintings hung on the wall.

At first glance, it looked like a normal art room, but once one looked closer, one would notice the endless horrors hidden inside this room. The paintings on the walls were all curious and strange. There were human faces, twisted souls, human portraits, and convulsing bodies; the content was all different, but all the humans or ‘ghosts’ in the paintings were inverted.

The backgrounds of the paintings were upright, but the people were inverted. It was as if they lived in a different world, and the paintings were merely capturing their shadows. The paintings that ran down the wall gave Chen Ge an immense impact. As he walked into the room, his gaze was pulled naturally toward them, and it felt like he was walking into a nightmare.

He walked to the center of the room. Thirteen incomplete paintings sat on the thirteen easels. Among them, three of the paintings greatly attracted Chen Ge’s attention. The first painting was of two inverted doors. One was bloody red, and the other looked normal. These two doors were wide open, and inside the doors stood two painters holding a paintbrush. He lowered his head to look at his inverted self, and it appeared like he was thinking about something in his mind.

The name of the painting was ‘Me Inside the Door’. A row of description was scrawled underneath it in blood—‘Overflowing despair will open the door, then if I remove the despair, will the world behind the door return to normal?’

The painting was the only painting in the room that was named. The painter obviously knew about the door’s existence. The second painting that caught Chen Ge’s attention was quite scary; it was a painting of that very room.

On the upper part of the painting, there were thirteen painters seated before their easels painting. However, the lower part of the painting was completely blood red. The thirteen painters died in different ways; their bodies collapsed on their seats. The most suffocating discovery was the painters were painting their own death in the upper part of the painting.

“These painters seem to know their ending beforehand, but they still insist on continuing their painting. Is it because they knew the ending was inevitable?”

The third painting that drew Chen Ge’s attention was the least completed. The upper part of the painting showed a child standing before a mirror. The world beside him was totally normal, but the surface of the mirror was dripping with redness. The boy in the mirror was covered in blood and was tapping heavily against the surface.

The lower part of the painting was still of that boy. The world around him was red, and the only exception was the mirror before him. It was clean and shining. The boy who was covered in blood slammed on the mirror heavily like he wished to strangle the uninjured version of himself on the other side of the mirror.

“I saw blood red mirrors in the maintenance room. Do the mirrors in this school have the same purpose as a door? No wait, I seem to have forgotten an important detail!” Chen Ge knew that a four-star scenario would be completely different from all the other scenarios that he had attempted in the past. Therefore, his experience from before could no longer be applied.

“Doors and mirrors, the blood doors and bloody mirrors behind the doors...” Various clues connected in his mind, and they led him to a brazen conjecture.

“Perhaps I should bring this painting with me.” There was another reason that Chen Ge valued this painting so much. The spot where the painter would leave their name read... Lin Sisi.

This painting might be created by the real Lin Sisi, and solving the mystery around Lin Sisi might help Chen Ge understand the world behind the door. In fact, that might be the main objective that Chen Ge had given himself.

Chen Ge’s hand reached toward the painting. Before his finger even touched it, a giant change happened to the art room. Droplets of liquid fell on the top of his head. Chen Ge used his hand to touch it and realized that it was not water but blood.

The air became humid, and the heavy stench made its silent return. Blood started to leak out from the walls, and deepening footprints surfaced on the ground.

The normal world appeared to be overlapping with the other blood world. All the paintings inside the art room became distorted. A black shadow suddenly leaped out from one of the paintings and headed right for the door.

The shadow felt strangely familiar to Chen Ge. He immediately stopped what he was doing, grabbed the nails, and rushed toward the exit.

Chapter 781 - Finally Found You

Chapter 781: Finally Found You

The giant change inside the art room forced out the shadow which was hiding there. Chen Ge had extremely good vision with the aid from Yin Yang Vision. With one glance, he managed to match the escaping shadow with the one that came from Room 413.

“I’ve finally found you!” Nails kept stabbing into Chen Ge’s body. The pain that it brought was not that serious; what he hated was the feeling that his life was slowly fading. The shadow made the first move, but Chen Ge was closer to the door, and thus, he reached it faster than the shadow.

Chen Ge knew that the enemy was not in its corporeal form, so he might be able to stop it. Therefore, he decided to close the door that had started to bleed. The change continued in the art room. Just as everything was about to get swallowed up by blood, Chen Ge chose a method that was no different from suicide.

“You wish to make me your scapegoat, so I’ll pull you down into hell with me. We’ll hold hands as we head toward death. Maybe we’ll end up as good friends in our next life.” Chen Ge’s maddened solution indeed gave the shadow a shock. The shadow paused where he was for a moment before extending both hands to grab the doorknob.

“Want to run?” Chen Ge blocked at the door. The nails that were hidden in his palm pierced toward the shadow. He used his fingers to shield the nails from view. He only allowed the pointy end of the nails to poke through the gap between his fingers when he was about to make contact with the shadow.

The shadow initially thought that Chen Ge would not be able to harm him, so he did not put up any guard. That was until he was pierced by the nails at his neck. Chen Ge’s heart was hardened after going through so many Trial Missions. Rationality and madness should be two opposite qualities, but they melted together perfectly in this man. Chen Ge knew that he likely only had one chance to strike, so he chose the most fatal spot to attack.

The nails pierced into the shadow's throat, knocking his head to the side. If he was still alive, this blow would have taken his life. "I was acting out of kindness when I helped you, but you want to make me your scapegoat. We certainly have some scores to settle."

The pain and curse that he was experiencing was thanks to the human shadows inside Room 413. Therefore, Chen Ge did not hold back at all. Seeing that the nails could damage the shadow, Chen Ge did not give the shadow any chance to retaliate. He pulled out another sharp nail from his pocket and aimed it at the shadow's eye.

The shadow's head was tilted on his shoulder. After being ambushed once, he no longer dared underestimate Chen Ge. He retreated several steps to maintain a steady distance between them. More blood leaked out from the corners of the room. This art room was slowly changing, like the blood world was overlapping with the real world, and the former was leaking into the latter. It would be very dangerous to stay inside the room, but Chen Ge blocked the exit and refused to budge. "Since you want me dead, I'm not going to let you leave."

Chen Ge said that with a smile on his face. He knew the shadow now had the urge to strangle him. However, there was a process to finding a scapegoat. In other words, if the shadow wanted Chen Ge to be his scapegoat, he had to make sure that Chen Ge died the same way as he did. This was similar to why those who drowned wanted to pull their victims into the depths and why those who died from hanging would influence others to do the same.

Of course, this was merely Chen Ge's own opinion. If the understanding of scapegoats inside the door and outside the door was different, there was nothing he could do. After all, he was already in this state, there was no turning back, he could only press forward. The art room was slowly swallowed up by blood. Chen Ge and the shadow froze, at an impasse, before the door; no one was able to move.

This situation was very rare. Normally speaking, after the ghost found a scapegoat, they would hurry to reincarnate or possess the victim's body. Specters that were below Red Specters could not leave their item of possession for long. The scapegoat would be trapped around the place of death for a long time and could not go after the ghost that had harmed him in the first place. Therefore, this kind of situation where the scapegoat found the original ghost and the original ghost was halted by the 'scapegoat' was very rare.

“Don’t you plan to say something for yourself?” When he saw the human shadow, Chen Ge’s heart dropped back to his stomach. The curse on him could claim his life at any moment. He had to undo the curse, but he could not confirm where the shadow was. Going to the art room had merely been a guess, but who could have known that the shadow was really hiding there?

The shadow didn’t seem to possess the ability to speak. He kept waving his arms, gesturing something. Chen Ge could see the shadow’s agitation. In fact, he could sense a trace of fear from the shadow. If they stayed inside the art room any longer, something incredibly bad was about to happen.

Chen Ge did not wish to die. He had done all that just to convey his attitude. Now that the shadow was scared into submission, Chen Ge’s tone softened. “Remove the curse from me, and we won’t owe each other anything. In fact, I might be able to help you find your next scapegoat. Live together or die together—the choice is yours.”

He believed the shadow would not reject him. After all, this was non beneficial to either of them, but several seconds later, the shadow’s reaction caused Chen Ge to frown. The shadow shook his head, waved his hands, and then used his finger to write out several words in the air. Chen Ge finally understood what he was trying to say.

Chen Ge had no idea whether the shadow was lying to him or not. In any case, before he achieved his goal, he was going to move away from the door. “Can’t be removed? Then can you delay the time of death, like give me a few more weeks or a few more months?”

After Chen Ge said that, the shadow thought about it before shaking his head.

“This cannot, that cannot! Do you think I am easily bullied, or do you think I’m not willing to die together with you? I advise you to think about this clearly. This school is so big. After you tricked me in Room 413, you didn’t leave immediately. This means that you do not know how to leave this place either. Even if I really become your scapegoat, in the future, I will figure out a way to find you and how these nails pin onto my body. I will slowly pin them back onto you.”

After a pause, Chen Ge added, “I am not threatening you—I’m just telling you the truth. Now only by working together will we be able to achieve a win-win solution.”

Perhaps Chen Ge’s words convince the shadow, or maybe the art room being swallowed by blood was getting too dangerous, but the shadow finally changed its mind. He signaled for Chen Ge to show him his hand.

“I’m warning you, do not play any tricks. Even if I die, I will not let you go,” Chen Ge said coldly.

The shadow’s head was tilted on his shoulder, and a nail poked through his neck. He looked worse for wear. He had no idea whether he had found a scapegoat or some kind of demon that he could not shake loose.

Helpless, the shadow grabbed Chen Ge’s hand. His finger touched Chen Ge’s palm lightly, and the lines that were darkening stopped increasing in color as if they felt some kind of influence.

The palm print stopped turning black, and the anxiety curling around Chen Ge's heart slowly disappeared. He felt like his breathing had become smoother. The human shadow was not lying to him. On the brink of death, he had made the correct choice.

After the Chen Ge's palm print stopped darkening, the shadow's body started to waver even though he had almost coagulated into a physical form earlier.

"I still don't know if I can trust you." Even though Chen Ge had already gotten the advantage, he did not plan to let the shadow go. There was only one chance, so he had to make use of it carefully. When the weakened shadow heard what Chen Ge said, he was practically jumping from agitation. He tried to go and grab the doorknob again, and as a result, there was another nail poking out from his neck.

It was too cruel.

The shadow's face was blurry, so no one could tell his actual facial expression. After being scammed twice, he did not dare stay close to Chen Ge. As the one who lifted his curse, he could barely believe that he would be cornered to this point by his scapegoat. Blood was about to consume the art room. Everything would be swallowed by blood. The shadow waved his hands madly. If they stayed there any longer, there would be nothing of them left behind!

"You are a cunning, despicable, cruel, and scary ghost, and I am just a normal person. The gap between our power is too big. How do you expect me to trust you? I do not know the process of scapegoating, so I have no idea what the lightening of the palm print represents. Even if you have done something to my body, I cannot tell." Chen Ge could feel the change happening inside the art room. The strange paintings were slowly dyed red, and the inverted paintings were turning to normal. Blood covered everything. The two in the room were slowly pulled into the depth of the ocean by a mysterious force that they would find difficult to escape from.

The shadow was unable to speak. He bounced up and down, waving his hands, his gestures becoming bigger and bigger.

“You wish to say that you haven’t lied to me?” Chen Ge knew that they could not stay there for long. He leaned against the door and stood at the spot closest to the door, ready to rush out at any moment. “Fine, I’ll trust you this once, but I hope I can see your sincerity.”

The shadow grasped Chen Ge’s meaning. He had a hard time believing that he would be scammed by his own scapegoat.

“You originally stayed inside Room 413, so you should know a lot about Lin Sisi. I need you to tell me about that—do not hide anything from me.” Chen Ge spoke quickly.

When the shadow heard that, he nodded swiftly. Then he tried to walk forward, but Chen Ge pulled out another nail from his pocket.

“There’s another thing. You stay in the same bedroom as Lin Sisi, so you should know about the password to his phone.” That was one of the key items obtained by Chen Ge, but he lacked the password, so he could not utilize it.

The shadow’s action paused. Just as he was about to express his thought, Chen Ge added, “Don’t think about lying to me. I have his phone right here!”

Retrieving the phone from his phone, Chen Ge turned on the screen. “Tell me!”

When he saw the phone, the shadow’s reaction was slightly out of place. He stepped subconsciously backward and then started to gesture several numbers at Chen Ge.

“51413?” Chen Ge felt that the number was quite familiar. Whenever the shadow gestured a number, he immediately typed it in. After keying in all five numbers, the phone was finally unlocked. “This is an important discovery!”

Memorizing the password, Chen Ge pushed open the door and left the art room. He was a man of his word; after he left, he did not close the door to stop the shadow from leaving. Only after the shadow slipped out did Chen Ge close the door.

The blood inside the door poured and splashed everywhere and swallowed everything, but everything outside the door was normal, completely unaffected. Chen Ge believed that this strange phenomenon had everything to do with those strange paintings.

“I wonder who the painters are. There are thirteen easels in total, so there should be thirteen painters, but their themes and painting styles are so similar. Could it be that they have the same teacher?”

With one problem solved, several new problems rushed into his mind. Chen Ge stood where he was and was frowning in thought when he felt a chill coming from behind him.

Turning back to look, the shadow was expanding, his expression was changing, and his body twisting. His fingers turned into animal claws. The anger that he had experienced when he was inside the art room was finally exploding.

“If you kill me, who is going to be your scapegoat?” Chen Ge opened his arms, and he looked calmer than before. “If I’m not mistaken, everyone at this school is looking for a scapegoat, and there are very few suitable candidates.”

Taking a confident step forward, Chen Ge lifted his eyes to look at the scary face. “After you got me to be your scapegoat, you immediately went into hiding. This proves that you’re also afraid, afraid that after your success, you’ll be targeted by ‘other people’, am I correct?”

The dark claws wrapped around Chen Ge’s neck. The shadow’s heart was filled with resentment—he seemed to be angry at what Chen Ge had done to him earlier.

“I am your scapegoat, and you are the one who made it so. That is the strongest connection binding us together, and no one will be able to contest that.” Chen Ge’s expression gave people a warm feeling. He reached out to touch the shadow’s hand but phased through the shadow. “We are not only not enemies but are allies with the strongest bond. Think about it. You cannot kill me, because if you did, you’ll lose your scapegoat. I am just a normal person, so I won’t survive in this school, and I might be ambushed by some unknown ghost at any moment. The only person whom I can trust and rely on is you because I know you won’t kill me.”

The claw stopped right next to Chen Ge’s neck. The shadow gave it some thought and felt like Chen Ge’s words had some logic to them. However, he felt strange that there would exist such a peaceful relationship between him and his scapegoat.

“This school is filled with danger, and everyone has their own agenda. Cooperation and trust are impossible, but we have worked through that, so we are the most suitable allies!” Chen Ge walked toward the shadow. “Even if the scapegoating is completed, you cannot leave this school. Why don’t we work together to find the exit?”

Looking at Chen Ge, the shadow was beyond shocked. He had never encountered a situation like this before.

“I am in the open, and you’re in the dark. If we work together, we’ll definitely surprise many people.” Chen Ge was completing an impossible thing. At least in this school, such an arrangement had not been attempted before. The shadow’s body was returning to normal. He hesitated a long time before gesturing something with his fingers.

“You want to know why I’m not afraid of you?” Chen Ge shook his head. “I am not not afraid of you—I am so very scared—but I can put on a brave front. Let’s stop wasting time. What else do you know about this Lin Sisi?”

The black shadow and Lin Sisi shared the same bedroom; he even knew Lin Sisi's phone password. This proved that they shared a more than casual relationship.

"I wish to know everything about Lin Sisi. This is related to whether we can escape from this school or not." Chen Ge opened his lips to ask, but the shadow did not reply, as if the name Lin Sisi was this school's taboo and discussing it would bring about some bad luck.

...

Slowly shaking his head, the shadow pointed at Chen Ge. He painted at the top of his head and then at the bottom of his feet. It was hard to tell what he was trying to express.

"Are you trying to say that what we're discussing might be overheard by something else?" Chen Ge tried to read the shadow's gesture. The shadow shook its head and then used his fingers to make out several words—"We've killed Lin Sisi. All of us are Lin Sisi."

"All of us are Lin Sisi?" Chen Ge seemed to have understood something. He was about to ask another question when a faded stench drifted through the air. "Something's coming!"

The shadow reacted faster than Chen Ge. It opened the door opposite and slipped through it. After it got into the room, the shadow did not close the door. Chen Ge grasped his intention immediately and followed him into the room.

He even remembered to leave the door open for me. Looks like he's willing to cooperate now.

Chen Ge had not lied even once in his words—at least, that was how he saw it. While the ghost needed a scapegoat, he had to be careful that his scapegoat was not stolen by another ghost. Likewise, the scapegoat needed to survive and thus could only pick the most trustworthy one among all the ghosts.

How things would be resolved was a problem for the future. What Chen Ge needed now was to consider how to survive this night. He would make use of everything within his disposal and try his best to see another day.

“Just what is giving off this smell?” Chen Ge stayed away from the door and hid behind the shadow. By then, the shadow had returned to normal. He looked very thin and at least one head smaller than Chen Ge. By having Chen Ge hide behind him, it made a strange scene indeed.

“The change to the art room has most likely affected the workers inside the lab. I saw a guardroom on the second floor, and the Red Specter from there might want to take our lives due to the destruction we’ve wrought to the art room.” Chen Ge analyzed the situation calmly. The shadow agreed with Chen Ge’s reasoning, but he was curious. How did Chen Ge know that there was a Red Specter inside the guardroom?

“This place is no longer safe. We need to leave this building and find another place to hide and discuss the next step of our plan.” Chen Ge had achieved his goal of entering the lab. He did not wish to stay inside this dangerous locale one moment longer. Walking to the window, Chen Ge pulled back the curtain. “It’s a bit dangerous to climb down here.”

However, going back to the elevator was no different from asking for death. The window was the only option. After ensuring that Mr. Bai was not outside, Chen Ge jumped through the window and carefully grabbed onto the ledge. The cold draft lifted his hair. Chen Ge’s back was soaked with sweat. “I sure hope this is nothing but a nightmare. In that case, I’ll be sure to wake up if I just jump down from here.”

Aiming at the machine of the air-conditioner on the third floor, Chen Ge slowly adjusted his posture. “If I miss, everything’s over. Everything depends on this jump.”

Chen Ge took a deep breath, but just as he was about to let go, the black shadow appeared at the window. He stood next to the edge and glanced at Chen Ge hanging outside the window. If he pried open Chen Ge’s fingers at that moment, he could easily kill Chen Ge.

“Follow me! We’re going to leave this place together!” Chen Ge’s voice was filled with trust and concern. This made the shadow feel uncomfortable. In the end, he did not harm Chen Ge.

“Quick!” Hanging in midair was very physically exhausting. After aiming for his landing spot, Chen Ge let go.

BANG!

Both of his feet landed firmly on top of the air-conditioner’s exposed machine. Chen Ge leaned forward to stick to the wall. “That created too much noise. The monsters inside the building and Mr. Bai will definitely have heard that. I cannot hesitate any longer!”

Turning to look up at the fourth-floor window, the shadow was still standing by the window. He appeared to have his own plan.

“You wish to hide some more? This school is a cage. No matter how long you hide, you will still be trapped! Cooperating with me is your only chance! We’ll escape this place together!” Stopping for less than a second, Chen Ge jumped down to the second-floor air-conditioner. He lifted his head again. The shadow was still standing on the fourth floor.

Chen Ge had already obtained more than enough information from the shadow. Actually, the shadow was not that useful to Chen Ge. However, Chen Ge still hoped that the shadow would be able to leave with him. He needed a helper, and more than that, he needed a local from the School of the Afterlife to be his guide.

Wishing to turn his situation around, he had to gather enough strength, and this shadow was where Chen Ge placed his hope. “I don’t know anything about this school’s rules, but I know that after consuming more than enough normal Specters, even a normal Specter can evolve into a Red Specter.”

Standing outside the second floor, Chen Ge stopped hesitating and screamed. “If I’m captured and become another ghost’s scapegoat, you’ll spend the rest of your life being pinned back on the wall!”

At the mention of his potential fate, the shadow started to hesitate. He stood on the edge and dipped downward. Chen Ge saw a shadow flit down the wall before falling into his own shadow.

“Are... you okay?” There was no response from his shadow. Chen Ge’s heart was conflicted, but he soon regained his composure. He jumped down to ground and then ran toward the brush.

“There are monsters and ghosts inside every single building here—entering them means taking on a lot of risk.” Chen Ge stayed in the brush motionlessly. About ten seconds later, Mr. Bai came out from the other side of the lab and stopped not far away from Chen Ge.

He lifted his head and spotted the window on the fourth floor that was hanging open. His expression was twisted and scary, and he kept saying, “Bad student.”

Mr. Bai seemed to be afraid of this lab building as well. He did not dare enter it but merely walked around the perimeter and then left in a hurry. Chen Ge, who was in hiding, saw everything. When he could not hear Mr. Bai’s footsteps anymore, he stood up. His eyes scanned the lab building and his body shivered.

At the window that he had escaped from earlier, there was a person in red attire staring at him!

“The Red Specter from the guardroom has been trailing me, but it seems like he is unable to leave the lab.” Chen Ge’s heart was quivering under the Red Specter’s stare, and he silently retreated.

“Where should I go next?” Chen Ge desperately needed to find somewhere safe to rest. He looked through Lin Sisi’s phone and compiled the known clues to come up with the next step of his plan.

He felt a pat on his shoulder. The thin shadow materialized behind Chen Ge. He pointed at the eastern side of the campus and gestured the following—the wall.

“The wall? Why would we go to somewhere like that?” Earlier, the shadow had been granted many easy chances to kill Chen Ge, but he had not elected to do so. There was already a basic trust between the two.

The shadow did not answer Chen Ge. He seemed to be hesitating over whether to lead Chen Ge there or not. The place that he had in mind was most likely a location that he was planning to use to hide.

“Feel free to deny me the answer if the question is too difficult. We are partners now and friends. There is no need to have so many concerns,” Chen Ge said with an easy smile and natural tone.

The shadow stood before Chen Ge alone. He was not tall and was on the thinner side. He looked quite fragile. Ever since he joined this school, this was the first time that someone had said such things to the shadow. He stood facing Chen Ge and did not hide himself for the first time.

Introverted, shy, self-effacing—the shadow was different from his peers. There was no liveliness in him at all. It was as if many bad things had already stripped away his happiness before he even joined the school.

Chen Ge’s words reminded the shadow of certain things. Most of his memories were gray, and whenever he was pulled down memory lane, the debris from the past would seep into his nostrils and ears. They were no longer painful—they merely dampened his spirits.

“Why are you spacing out? Let’s get going. Staying in one place for long will cause bad things to happen.” Chen Ge patted the shadow’s shoulder, but his fingers phased through the shadow’s body and fell on his chest. Chen Ge did not seem to mind it and seemed to have gotten used to this already. Taking a big stride forward, Chen Ge opened his back just like that to the shadow and did not put up any guard at all.

Staring at Chen Ge's back, the shadow still had a hard time believing that he was cooperating with his scapegoat.

"Where is this wall that you mentioned?" Chen Ge headed in the direction that the shadow had pointed in for about ten minutes. He was no closer to seeing the edge of the school—this school was incredibly huge.

The shadow kept urging Chen Ge to pick up his speed. The ghost and human flitted through the brush for a whole five minutes before Chen Ge realized that he had returned to the same spot that they had departed from.

"Are we going in circles? How come the trees around us seem to have changed? There are now more trees..." It was untrue to say that Chen Ge was walking in circles because he had reached the eastern campus, and he could see the tall buildings at the western campus.

He and the shadow had been moving toward the western campus for a very long, but those buildings were still blurry like they were hiding behind a layer of fog. "Are you sure we're going the right way?"

The shadow also realized that something was wrong. He stood behind one of the trees. His thin body wavered from the window like a leaf that would be blown apart at any moment.

"Brother, are you alright?" The shadow seemed to have sensed something. He pulled back his arms, signaling for Chen Ge to retreat and stop walking ahead.

"There's a ghost around us? Is it very powerful? How powerful is it compared to you?" Chen Ge asked a series of questions, but the shadow answered none of them. He moved his body backward, and at the same time, he ensured that Chen Ge was within two meters of himself.

"Looks like there is really something inside the brush." Chen Ge brushed the sweat from his forehead. Even the brush by the roadside was not safe anymore. He had a new understanding of this school. "Hopefully, it's not a Red Specter or half Red Specter."

Just as Chen Ge and the shadow were slowly retreating, a different voice seemed to drift out from the deeper part of the trees. "Save me..."

It sounded like the voice of a girl, and from the sound of it, she was less than ten years old.

“Someone is calling for help, does the voice sound familiar to you? Can you recognize her?” Chen Ge sidled up to the shadow. At that moment, it was wise to stay together. The shadow shook his head softly and then pointed at Chen Ge’s ears as if trying to remind Chen Ge to close his ears and not to listen to the girl’s pleading.

“Save me, save me... will you save me...” Even though he held his hands over his ears, the girl’s voice echoed in Chen Ge’s mind. The voice was getting clearer and clearer like the girl was getting closer.

“She sounds like she’s in so much pain. Shall we go help her?” Chen Ge took out the nail from his pocket and hid it inside his palm.

The shadow was not privy to Chen Ge’s intention. Why would he talk out a nail if he said he was going to help the girl?

He shook his head naively and gestured—‘Danger, run.’

As Chen Ge retreated, he asked, “Is she wearing bloody clothes or just normal clothes?”

The shadow had no idea what Chen Ge was up to, but he answered honestly—‘Normal clothes.’

“If it’s not a Red Specter, I think we have a need to go help her.” Chen Ge stopped moving. He counted the nails in his pocket. “A girl asking for help in the middle of the nowhere. She must be in deep trouble. How can we just ignore a plea like that?”

“Save me, don’t go, please, save me...” The girl’s voice sounded poor and weak, but at the same time, it was getting clearer. Chen Ge and the shadow were moving fast, but the girl was still able to catch up to them, which presented many problems.

“Did you hear that? This girl sounds so pitiful. If we can, we should help her.” Carrying his bag, Chen Ge hid a nail each in both hands. The shadow saw that Chen Ge was about to go help the girl and panicked. He gestured wildly, repeating the same word—‘Danger!’

“I know that it might be dangerous, but with great risk comes great reward.” Chen Ge not only did not run away, he headed toward the source of the voice. He walked deeper into the brush and yelled, “Where are you? If you’re injured, just stay there, and don’t move! I’ll be there to help you in a moment!”

Seeing as Chen Ge had answered the girl’s plea for help, the shadow’s body dissipated. He seemed to be gripped by both panic and fear. He wished to leave but had something that concerned him. In the end, he escaped back into Chen Ge’s shadow.

“Certain things cannot be avoided. Even if there’s only a miniscule chance that this girl is really injured, we need to go take a look. She only has us to rely on now. Many tragedies can be avoided with Good Samaritans,” Chen Ge claimed loudly, enough for nearby characters to hear him.

Chen Ge stood where he was, and several seconds later, a pale arm poked through the bush.

“Save me, please don’t go, save me...”

“What happened to you? How can I help?” Chen Ge asked.

“Yuan Ming has gone insane—he has really lost it. I wished to break up with him, and he threatened me with his death. Then, he asked me to meet him here, saying that he wished to have a little talk with me. We had an argument, and now he wants to kill me! He’s coming soon! Save me, save me, okay?” The girl’s voice was very weak from the copious loss of blood. Even her breathing sounded heavy.

“There’s another one?” Chen Ge stood where he was. “I’ll call the police for you. Then I’ll take you back to school to find the staff.”

“Okay, thank you, I cannot crawl anymore. Can you come over to pull me up?” the girl asked through her tears.

“Sure.” Chen Ge hid the nails in his palms and slowly walked close to the pale arm. He was about to extend his hands when the arm grabbed at Chen Ge’s palm!

It was a broken arm! The arm was not connected to anything!

“Help me! Help me! Dig the rest of me out from the ground!”

The girl's voice suddenly turned shrill, and the broken arm shot forward like a python that was striking its prey. It flew to grab Chen Ge.

"Don't worry." Chen Ge tightened his fists, and the nails poked through the gaps. He targeted the hand that shot at him and hit it heavily.

...

"I'm so cold! I'm just underneath your feet! Save me! Save... AH!" The girl's harrowing howl was interrupted by a scream.

"Are you alright?" Chen Ge looked at the broken arm that fell next to him. The hand was very beautiful with tapered fingers, fair fingers, but the back of the hand had been pierced through by a nail, pinning it to the ground.

"Where are you buried? I saw a severed hand earlier, is it yours?" Chen Ge unclenched his palms, which were covered in sweat. Actually, he had been given quite a fright. Thankfully, he had been well prepared to face this situation. The begging ceased, and only a shrill female cursing voice remained.

"Is it that painful? I've been pricked a few times myself, and it doesn't feel so bad." Chen Ge looked around carefully as he slowly retreated. If there was a broken hand inside the brush, there was no guarantee that there was nothing else.

The girl's voice became clearer, and Chen Ge's ears twitched. With the talent of Ghost Ear, his hearing was better than most. He could hear the mumbling of ghost, and that effect came in handy at this moment.

It's on my left. Chen Ge reached into pocket and grab another nail. He ensured that the weapon was close by. The arm that was pinned to the ground was still flailing about. The girl was incensed, and she stopped disguising her voice. Chen Ge moved to the left, and suddenly, he felt something give underneath his feet. It was very soft.

Not good! As the thought crossed his mind, Chen Ge's body already reacted. He quickly jumped back, but a mysterious power pulled on his calf, preventing him from leaving.

"Didn't you want to save me? Why are you leaving? I'm buried here, the plot of land that you've just stepped on!" Pain and hatred turned the girl's voice ugly. Chen Ge ignored the girl and turned his head down to look. His calf was being grabbed by another broken arm. And worse than that, he realized that there was something wrong with this whole plot of land. It felt like a muddy bog, and his body would sink if he stayed there for too long. When he saw that hand, Chen Ge reacted swiftly. He held the nail and pushed it deep into the girl's hand. The curse in Room 413 seemed to be very powerful, and a single nail proved to be so damaging.

No wonder it's the room for Lin Sisi. There are probably some other treasures hidden inside that bedroom.

The scary curse turned into something useful in Chen Ge's arms. Even the shadow in hiding was shocked by his response.

"I feel sorry for what has happened to you, and I do wish to help you, but what do you plan to do to me in return?" Chen Ge pushed the nail deeper into the other broken arm before swiftly retreating.

"Didn't you say you'd save me? My body is just buried here! Dig me up and help me escape!" The girl's voice echoed in his ears. Chen Ge turned back to look, and three meters away from him, there was a hole in a tree. Inside the dark enclosure sat a scary female human skull. The hair was tattered, and the eyes that had no pupils were yanked open as they stared at Chen Ge. "Liar! You didn't intend to help me at all! You're all liars!"

"I really did wish to help you—that's undeniable—but you refuse to communicate nicely with me. Why did you try to grab me?" When Chen Ge saw the girl, his hands reached subconsciously into his pocket. The girl had died a horrible death, and he might not have enough nails to deal with her.

Chen Ge had a love-hate relationship with these nails that he pulled out from his body. With the addition of each new nail, it meant that he was that much closer to death, but at the same time, it was because of these nails that he could compete against the girl and the shadow.

“Stop lying to me! That was what the man said! But in the end, this is what they did to me! Go to hell! Go to hell all of you!” The skull was sitting snugly inside the tree house. With the screaming from the girl, the surroundings started to change again. The air seemed to freeze, and the leaves rustled noisily. Soon, strands of hair floated down from between the branches, and things that looked like blood vessels surfaced on the ground. It looked quite scary.

“She seems to have joined with this plot of land after being buried here for so long.” The situation had changed to go out Chen Ge’s control. He started to retreat.

“Didn’t you say you’d save me? Why are you leaving? Is it because I look so ugly? Didn’t you promise that you’d love me no matter what happened to me? Now that I’ve become something like this, why are you turning away? Come back and accompany me! I’m so cold here alone. Come stay with me, I’ve missed you so much!” the girl screamed madly. She seemed to have treated Chen Ge as Yuan Ming, and the face inside the tree hole had morphed into something inhumane.

“She has to be in so much pain now, but I cannot communicate with her at all, and I can’t do anything to help her. Oh well, perhaps I can figure out a method to make her forget this horrible memory.” Chen Ge turned to look at his shadow. “If her spirit lingers, her pain will never end. We can’t just allow this to carry on. The head inside the tree hole should be her real form. Can you help me detain her?”

The shadow did not imagine that, in just a few seconds, the situation would deteriorate to such a stage. He looked at the two arms that were pinned on the ground, and he could not imagine how Chen Ge was going to save this girl.

“Brother, don’t just reply me with silence! As long as you can detain the head, we have a chance!” Hearing Chen Ge, the shadow shook his head in panic. He was afraid. Even though the girl was not a Red Specter, it did not mean that she was easily bullied.

“You need to have faith in yourself! No matter what happens, you have to trust yourself! This is strength from the bottom of your heart!” The shadow had a soft personality. He had been through too many things when he was still alive. Chen Ge yelled loudly, trying to resolve the lock in the shadow’s heart. “I am your scapegoat, so I won’t harm you! This girl is the first hurdle that we’ve encountered as a team. We have to overcome it so that our path in the future will be smooth!”

Chen Ge spoke very fast, and he did end up convincing the shadow. The thin shadow appeared behind Chen Ge. His body swayed with the wind and looked like he would disperse at any moment.

“Don’t be afraid! Don’t hesitate! Think about your past! You do not wish for the tragedy to occur again! You cannot allow yourself to continue being like this!”

The shadow gradually grew. With the encouragement from Chen Ge, the shadow grew to twice his size. The hands turned into claws, and the resentment around him thickened.

“Yes! Anger, pain, and despair are your power. Go ahead! This hurdle before us is not the enemy—it is just a soft fruit. Make her a part of you, carry her spirit with you. That way, you won’t only have saved her, you’ll end up saving yourself!”

Chen Ge’s voice was low and hoarse, like the murmuring of the devil.

Chen Ge's voice seemed to possess some kind of magical power, and words became a weapon even sharper than a knife. In the dark forest, the air stilled to the point that it formed a suffocating barrier, strands of black hair dangled down from the treetop, and the blood vessels on the ground weaved together. Based on some unique rules, when the skull in the tree hole spotted the shadow, a flash of confusion crossed her eyes that were pupil-less.

"Don't hesitate! Any hesitation is a waste of time that we can use to escape! Do you wish to cancel out our hope with your own hands?" Holding the nails with both hands, Chen Ge stood behind the shadow. "No matter what happens, I'll face it with you!"

The shadow, which was originally smaller than Chen Ge, was now three meters tall. The resentment and hatred gathered in his heart was evoked by Chen Ge. His hands morphed into claws, and a beast-like roar escaped from his throat.

This shadow that had been pinned to Room 413 possessed huge potential. In fact, his potential was far greater than Chen Ge imagined, which caused him to become more curious about the shadow's past. "Everyone has hope, but to turn that hope into reality, it depends not on charity but everything you've got. Only by giving it your all might there be a chance!"

Chen Ge pointed at the skull inside the tree hole. "And that is our hope."

The shadow body was continually expanding, and when Chen Ge said that, the shadow's face cracked, causing many thin black lines to surface on his body. Then, the shadow charged forward.

The girl's scream filled the brush again. The decayed muscles that littered the ground carried an indescribable stench with them, and they tried to stop the shadow. At the same time, the black hair from the branches seemed to gain a life of their own as they curled toward Chen Ge.

“Coming at the two of us at once?” From his many experiences of being chased by ghosts, Chen Ge’s body was very agile. This was a valuable skill that he had obtained.

“The girl can influence the neighboring grounds. If we don’t deal with her, it’ll be very hard to leave this place.” Chen Ge had no idea what was behind him walking in circles, and he could not fix it. Therefore, he could only try to solve the problem from its basis. The battle between ghosts was extremely violent, and most of the time, it would only stop once one party was torn to pieces. After the shadow expanded, he was stronger than before, but he lacked fighting experience and was not as mad and as crazed as Xu Yin, so he soon was tripped by the girl.

“This guy has great potential, but he’s too weak now!” Chen Ge knew that once the shadow was defeated, he would not survive on his own. Veins pulsed on his arms as he grabbed the bag and lobbed it as forceful as he could at the tree hole. Before the bag reached its target, it was stopped by the net of hair that dropped from the treetop. However, that was enough to buy time for Chen Ge. He grabbed the nail and ran toward the tree hole from another direction

“I can’t stop! The ground here is soaked with her blood. I’ll die if I slow down!” Ignoring the fear before his eyes, Chen Ge pushed forward with a powerful will. Compared to the shadow, he appeared more crazed. “Soon, the pain will be over. Soon, you will not be in the torment of pain and loneliness anymore!”

Chen Ge did not think about retreating, and he moved very fast. The girl sensed the threat from Chen Ge and pulled out part of her energy to stop him. The grass wilted at an incredible speed to expose a human skin-like ground.

“Since you’re unwilling to save me, then get buried here alongside my body.” Gashes opened on the ground, which looked like interconnecting wounds. The temperature dropped as something crawled out from the gaps.

Chen Ge felt both pain and numbness coming from his calves. He slowly lost feeling in his feet. The thing that had crawled out from the gaps earlier seemed to be various insects. He did not stop to take a look. He was temporarily ignoring anything that might slow him down. At that moment, the only thing in his eyes was the skull inside the tree hole.

“I know you’re in great pain, but why unload your anger on innocent people? You aren’t going after those that harmed you but trying to threaten us innocent passersby, isn’t that a bit too much?” Chen Ge yelled loudly. He was not afraid of exposing his location. The most urgent matter was to undo the walking loop and killing this female ghost that he could communicate with. Even though he was losing control of his legs, he pushed himself forward.

The girl exhausted a lot of energy to deal with Chen Ge. The shadow made use of this opportunity to escape from her grasp and instantly reached the space next to the tree hole. He reached his sharp claws inside the hole. Following Chen Ge’s order, the shadow tried to grab the skull out of the hole, but once he tried to use force, the girl’s skull issued a horrifying scream. As the skull was yanked out, Chen Ge and the shadow realized that underneath the skull hid innumerable blood vessels that looked like plant fibers.

“What kind of monster is this?” This was the first time that Chen Ge had encountered a creature like this, but he reacted faster than the shadow. “Chop off the vessels connecting to her head! Quick!”

The girl’s eyes were white. The blood vessels under her neck were connected to the trees. The ground was slowly sinking like it was planning to swallow the shadow.

“Quick! Cut it off!” Chen Ge yelled at the top of his lungs. It was not looking so good for the shadow. He did not cut off the girl’s blood vessels, and his body was slowly being entwined by them. “Why are you hesitating?”

With the ground sinking, Chen Ge was unable to turn and run away. Instead, he used the last ounce of his energy to pounce at the girl’s skull. He did something crazy. His body rammed into the net made of the blood vessels and pierced the nails into the girl’s eyes at a close distance!

“Quick! Now!” The eyes were poked through. The girl was on a complete rampage. The bloody net was closing in on Chen Ge and the shadow. “We don’t have much time!”

At the last moment, the shadow made his first step toward transformation. His body turned illusory, but the two claws materialized physically. The shadow gathered all of his strength as he pierced his hands through the girl's skull. Blood splattered everywhere, and a piercing scream cut through the night sky.

The fog around them slowly lightened. The shadow exploded at the last moment, and his spectral nature compelled him to do many things that he had not done before. The night breeze blew. The shadow's body was returning to normal. He lifted his thin, weak arms. In the middle of his palms was a red heart yanked out from the deepest part of the tree hole.

"You've done a great job. We've passed the first hurdle." Chen Ge looked at the shadow with a smile. He was currently lying in the mud. There were many scratches on his body. The worms that had crawled from the ground earlier were not real worms but coagulations of the girl's resentment.

"Before you consume this heart, I have one last question to ask you." Chen Ge forced himself to stand up. "I wonder if you've experienced this before. How long will you hibernate after you consume something like this?"

After a Specter consumed another Specter's essence, they would go into hibernation. The period of hibernation was related to the consumer's and the consumed's power level.

The shadow had no idea what Chen Ge was talking about. He was too eager to eat the heart he was holding.

"Looks like you really don't know anything. Don't worry, I can teach you slowly," Chen Ge said with a smile and signaled for the shadow to leave the brush.

Chapter 787: Instinct and Beyond Instinct

The shadow was very weak. He would avoid a Half Red Specter, much less a Red Specter. To put it plainly, he was at the bottom of the pyramid at this school. He had forever been pinned to the wall, unable to move, unable to speak, just a stain on the wall.

Indeed, compared to the other monsters at the school, the shadow was just like a small stain. No one would give him any thought, and no one would have faith in him, least of them all himself.

“We’ve made too loud a commotion—we need to leave this place immediately.” Chen Ge went forth to remind the shadow since the latter was still standing there. The shadow was like an orphan who had seen his parents for the first time. There was a bestial element to his nature, but he did not know how to get used to it.

“There will come a day for every mammal to be weaned from its mother’s teat. If you don’t eat others, you’ll end up being eaten by others.” Chen Ge patted the shadow’s shoulder. His hand once again phased through the shadow and fell on his chest. “No one is willing to grow up, but you have to understand that you cannot stay a child.”

These words were meaningful to the shadow. The latter’s body shook. His hands held the heart that looked like a red ruby before swallowing it whole!

“Hey!” At that moment, the shadow seemed to lose his rationality. His spectral nature compelled him to consume the heart.

“This is bad. That girl should be slightly more powerful than the shadow. He will go into hibernation since he has just consumed the heart of a ghost who is more powerful than he is.” Chen Ge knew about the shadow’s potential, but even with that unique potential, he was not going to be more powerful than Zhang Ya. After Zhang Ya consumed a Red Specter, even she had to go into hibernation. There was no exception.

“Why are you acting so recklessly?” Chen Ge had just found himself a helper, and now said helper was going into hibernation. This gave him quite a headache. His original plan had been to split the red heart into several parts so that the shadow would still grow but not go into hibernation.

Just by swallowing the heart, the shadow’s size doubled. He held his head in both of his hands. He pulled on his lips and face madly like he was trying to tear his face apart. Chen Ge could see that the shadow was in great pain, but he did not know how to help him.

“Calm down. If you really cannot consume the other party, accept her—accept her power and carry out her dying wish, help her complete her dying hope!” Chen Ge yelled loudly. The shadow finally reacted. He walked to the tree hole, squatted down, and reached both of his hands into the hole like he was looking for something.

“Something is not right. Even for Zhang Ya, when she consumed a Specter from the same level, she entered hibernation in a very short time. This guy has held on for so long. Is it because of his own uniqueness, or are the ghosts at this school different from the ghosts outside?”

The shadow dug for a long time before retrieving a rusted knife from inside the tree hole.

Normally, a Specter’s item of possession was related to the item important to their life. The girl’s item of possession was most likely the weapon that had killed her, which also meant that the driving force to her lingering after her death was revenge.

The shadow’s body doubled in size. He held the knife and stood before Chen Ge. The twisted arms waved up and down like he was trying to say something. Several seconds later, the shadow crawled into Chen Ge’s shadow, and the knife fell before him.

“Does he wish for me to go look for the killer?” Chen Ge’s lips pulled upward. He picked up the knife. He was in the same camp as the shadow, so he would help whenever he could. “To go to such an extent for being a scapegoat, I don’t think anyone would have done this.”

The knife was covered in rust and dirt, but it felt quite heavy in Chen

Ge's grasp. "Could it be that the nature of the knife has changed since the girl has possessed it for so long?"

After placing the knife in the folds of his clothes, Chen Ge inspected the surrounding again. The signs of battle were obvious in the brush. There was no way to hide them, so Chen Ge decided to make use of it to misdirect people who might be on their trail.

"After wasting so much time here, it's about time we leave." There was danger hiding in every corner of this school. All Chen Ge could do then was trust in the shadow and find the location that the shadow had mentioned—the wall.

Turning back to look at his shadow, Chen Ge could feel the increasing chilling air that radiated from it. "He'll become stronger after consuming another Specter, but this school appears to have a rule of its own. All the ghosts that I've encountered limited their nature, quite unusual."

Chen Ge thought back to his experience in Li Wan City. The 3.5-star scenario had a lot of Specters, but there were few instances where the Specters went after each other because each Specter had their own territory, and their area of movement was limited.

This was completely different from this school. Most of the Specters could move freely and go to any corner of the school.

"Someone at this school has accomplished something that the ghost fetus at the pinnacle of Red Specter was unable to do." Chen Ge sucked in a cold breath. He was even more certain that there was something greater than a Red Specter at the school. "How am I supposed to face something even scarier than Zhang Ya?"

Chen Ge quickly suppressed the burgeoning sense of despair. "The black phone wouldn't have given me an impossible mission. There has to be a way out."

A three-star scenario was different from a four-star scenario, just like how a Red Specter was different from a Greater Red Specter. However, Chen Ge was unfamiliar with the exact differences. In any case, the encounters that he had experienced tipped him off to certain things.

Red Specters were tied to the instinct and nature that they carried from when they were alive, but Greater Red Specters seemed to have broken through that limitation. For example, the twelve painters in the art room and the bloody oil paintings that were hard to understand. They seemed to be collectively expressing something, and that something was already beyond Chen Ge's comprehension.

"Different from knowing the ghost fetus' identity, there should be something that I can do to deal with the owner of this school." The ghost fetus harbored deep resentment toward Chen Ge, and it could not wait to torture Chen Ge. Conversely, the owner of this school did not seem to have much personal history with Chen Ge.

"I should take it slow; my most immediate concern is to survive." Chen Ge picked up his speed. As he ran, he took out Lin Sisi's phone. He keyed in the password and finally unlocked the phone.

"After the Red Specter at the lab saw me leave the building, it stopped chasing me. From that, it shows that even Red Specters are unable to violate the rules of this school. What I need to do now is figure out the rules here and make use of the rules to increase the chance of my own survival."

Lowering his head to glance at the phone, he only took a glimpse at it, and Chen Ge was unable to pull his gaze away again. Lin Sisi's phone background was that of an oil painting. It featured a human face that was featureless.

“Is this Lin Sisi’s self-portrait? But why didn’t he paint in his own features?” Chen Ge stared at the faceless head in the phone, and the longer he stared at it, the more confused he became. Gradually, it felt like he was staring at his own face. “Shouldn’t the phone’s background keep changing? Whenever there’s a new Lin Sisi, would the human face change again?”

This phone was a treasure for Chen Ge; he had too many things that he needed to understand. Moving his fingers, Chen Ge first clicked open the photo album. “The camera functions normally, but the videos or photos inside this phone are quite strange.”

Chen Ge looked for a long time before he found the problem. There was no human presence inside the videos and photos—they were all about the scenery.

“Have the pictures with people in them been deleted? Or could the people at this school not be captured by the phone at all?” Chen Ge very bravely conducted an experiment on himself. He raised the phone and took a selfie. The phone was so old that it did not have a front camera, and the picture taken was very blurry. Chen Ge glanced at it. Initially, he did not notice anything, but later on, his eyes started to narrow.

There was not only Chen Ge in the picture taken—there was also the shadow behind him. The strangest thing was inside the picture. Chen Ge’s shadow was thin and defenseless. He was hugging his knees, curling his body together.

“This phone can capture the shadow from Room 413? This phone can capture ghosts with its lens?” Chen Ge suddenly understood why there had not been any people inside the phone’s saved photos. “All the pictures that had people in them have been deleted, but I have no idea whether it was Lin Sisi or someone else who did so.”

The phone had been tweaked before, but it did not dampen Chen Ge’s mood. He found another thing worth noticing about the phone. The shadow in the picture retained his most original phone. In other words, Lin Sisi’s phone most likely possessed the ability to see through the ghost’s disguise and recover their most original form.

“With this phone, I can avoid many dangers and have a glance of the ghost’s real image beforehand. Plus, I can use this to come up with many special plans.” Chen Ge felt like his luck had turned much better after he encountered the shadow. He took a few more pictures of himself. After confirming his hypothesis, he deleted all the pictures and returned the phone to its original state. Lin Sisi’s phone was very old. Other than the camera function, it only had a few other basic features. Chen Ge then looked at the phone book. There was only one contact inside—home.

Opening the recent calls, it showed that there were only records for calls made in the last twenty-four hours. It was worth noting that in the past twenty-four hours, someone had used this phone to call two unknown numbers several times. The last call was made right before Chen Ge awakened in this school.

“Such consistent calls means that Lin Sisi should have noticed something already. He kept calling these two numbers because their owners might have been able to aid him.” Chen Ge was now Lin Sisi in everyone’s eyes. He thought about it before calling the first number.

It rang for a long time, but there was no answer.

“Why isn’t anyone answering?” Chen Ge anxious. The other person did not end the call and did not pick up the call, allowing it to ring.

“Did the person not take their phone with them, or are they also considering whether to answer the call or not?” After it continued to ring for a while, Chen Ge ended the call, and he tried the second number.

The busy tone pulled on Chen Ge’s nerves. Several seconds later, something surprising happened. Following a light click, the second call was connected. The other person answered the call, but no one spoke. Chen Ge patiently waited for the person on the other end of the line. He listened to the background noises, hoping to triangulate the other person’s location, but unfortunately, the other line was exceptionally quiet like a morgue at midnight.

“Hello?” The phone had limited power. Chen Ge did not dare waste more time, so he spoke first. “I know you’re listening. First, I don’t mean any harm. If now is not a suitable time, it’s fine. I just have some questions, and you only need to make some sound when my predictions are wrong.”

His own echo came from the other end. The other person still did not intend to speak.

“Do you know Lin Sisi?”

Almost as soon as Chen Ge said the name Lin Sisi, the call was cut off. Chen Ge did not even have time to react to it.

“They hung up on me? But this proves that there’s something wrong with them if they hung up with such certainty after hearing the name Lin Sisi.” Chen Ge called again, and this time, it only rang once before the call was ended.

“How about we try texting then?” Chen Ge soon abandoned this thought. Speaking was bidirectional. While exposing himself, he would obtain information about the other, but messaging was one-directional. The more he spoke, the more he would reveal about his own secrets.

For the sake of security, Chen Ge temporarily abandoned the plan of messaging. He moved his fingers as he called the number for home. When he keyed in all the numbers, a boy’s voice announced on the phone, “I’m sorry, but the number you’re calling is not available.”

The number was supposed to be home, but the number led to an empty number. Chen Ge tried it a few more times, and the result was all the same.

“Looks like this number is really cut off—his home is already gone.” Chen Ge memorized the three phone numbers and left the brush in the direction given by the shadow. The eerie streetlights glowed weakly on him, pulling his shadow long. But upon closer inspection, he discovered that his shadow was wiggling like it was slowly growing.

“The shadow only needed a short amount of time to digest the girl, at least ten times faster than my experience outside the door! Is this his talent, or is this common to all the ghosts inside this door?” The shadow had digested the other Specter so fast that it gave Chen Ge a confidence boost to his plan. However, he did not get ahead of himself. “Even with such a quick digestion speed, the rules at this school are so well maintained, which goes to show how powerful the owner here is.”

Chen Ge was unsure of the other rules at this school, but consuming other Specters had to be something that violated the rules. “When I just woke up, Mr. Bai was taking a rollcall inside the classroom. At the time, my deskmate seemed to remind me that there have been students going missing from the school.

“The missing students might have been consumed by others, and most ghosts go into hibernation after consuming others, so how did the killers escape detection?”

Widening his eyes, Chen Ge suddenly was struck by a possibility. “Could it be that the killer that the school is looking for is hiding among the missing students? He might be the first student to have gone missing.”

Hypothesizing based on this clue, a flash of brilliance appeared in Chen Ge’s eyes. “There is a Greater Red Specter at this school. The locals here mostly follow the school rules, and only those who came from outside like me will go against the rules fearlessly... Does this mean that the killer that the school is looking for might be Chang Gu, who arrived here earlier than me?”

Chapter 789 - Window

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Assuming that the person who pushed open the door inside the sickroom was Chang Gu, then where did he go after entering the door?

Chen Ge knew practically nothing about this world behind the door. The experience that he had obtained from previous three-star scenarios was completely useless here, but Chang Gu was different. The man had spent years studying this specific door, and he even possessed the left eye that Chang Wenyu had taken from the School of the Afterlife.

The eye could see things that normal people could not, and possessing it was no different from possessing a cheat.

Chang Wenyu is Chang Gu's little sister. Her physical body became a vessel for scapegoats. That means that her soul should still be somewhere in this school. She won't allow anything bad to happen to her own big brother.

If this current mission's difficulty could be categorized into different stages, then Chang Gu was playing the extremely difficult version while Chen Ge was playing the hellish difficulty version.

Chen Ge started the game with nothing. When he opened his eyes, he was already in the middle of a dangerous conundrum. He had to survive without any aid, and there was not one single person whom he could trust around him. Under these circumstances, Chen Ge somehow managed to carve a way out for himself.

If I can meet up with Chang Gu, his aid will mean my aid, and we will be able to look after each other.

Even though Chang Gu had bad eyesight, he was a very clever man. He was good at hiding and was much more capable than he made himself out to be.

After the shadow wakes up, I'll go look for the list of the victims. I'll observe Chang Gu from the dark before deciding what to do.

Never one to put all of his eggs in one basket, after finding Chang Gu, Chen Ge planned to work with him, with one in the open and the other in the dark.

If this killer really is Chang Gu, then I can make use of this opportunity to put everything onto him and clear my name. I'll come out to help him at the most crucial moment. The school probably won't expect there to be two killers.

Chen Ge actually had another plan in his heart.

To confuse the school, having only two killers isn't enough—I need help from more ghosts. When there are more than a handful of killers, the school rules will be completely broken, and then I will have a chance to submerge myself in the muddy waters.

In any case, those were merely Chen Ge's temporary thoughts. It was hard to put this plan into action. There were Greater Red Specters at the school, and Chen Ge could barely imagine just how scary those monsters were.

When the other ghosts are summoned, I should try to make myself scarce. Perhaps there's a way that I can provoke them remotely.

His plan was slowly moving into completion in his head. Chen Ge reached the end of the road without really realizing it. Before him was a long wall. The paint on the wall was peeling, and it was covered with vines. The night breeze blew, and the leaves rustled lightly. They looked like many small hands waving at Chen Ge.

This wall is only three meters tall, and there is no visible support anywhere. I'll have a hard time jumping over it. Why would the shadow tell me to come here?

The wall was adjacent to a brush, so Chen Ge did not need to worry about being exposed. However, his experience told him that staying in one spot for too long would only lead to bad things. Chen Ge reached his hands toward the wall. The leaves of the vines brushed against the back of his arms. The sensation was weird, like children biting him with their small teeth.

“This wall looks normal. There doesn't seem to be anything wrong with it.” Chen Ge did not dare stay there for long. He kept turning back to look at his own shadow. The shadow's body was changing at every minute. He was in the middle of a metamorphosis and showed no sign of reawakening any time soon. "It's ironic that a scapegoat has started to get worried about the ghost that placed the curse on me."

The shadow had only told Chen Ge to come to the wall, but he did not tell him what to do when he reached the wall. "There is no sign of blood or a chilling presence. This place feels no different from the surrounding wall of a normal night school."

The wall looked too normal, so normal that it felt incongruous with the rest of the school. Chen Ge took another few steps forward before suddenly stopping. He pushed away the plants that covered the wall and stuck his ear to the wall.

"There is sound coming from the other side of the wall! It sounds like students talking!" Due to the distance, Chen Ge could not clearly hear the content. "Even from the distance, I can still catch some clues. This mean that there is a large number of speakers."

Chen Ge tried to triangulate the location. The other side of the wall was Jiujiang Private University for undergraduates.

"Why is there a need for a wall to separate the eastern and western campuses? The eastern campus is scary enough. Don't tell me that the western campus is even scarier!" Chen Ge leaned against the wall to listen. He could not sense anything that was wrong. "Did the shadow want me to head toward the western campus?"

The shadow had no reason to harm Chen Ge, and Chen Ge also trusted the shadow implicitly, but it was too difficult for him to cross the wall. Thus, Chen Ge moved down the wall. He walked for several minutes before he spotted a squat two-story building.

The house was not big and was built into the wall. The door was left half open like someone had been inside the building moments earlier. Once he got near, Chen Ge smelled a horrible stench in the air. This stench was different from the stench that Chen Ge had smelled at the lab. It was not a simple smell of decay, but it was a mixture of several horrible stenches.

"If I climb up to this building's roof, I'll be high enough to just jump over the wall." Chen Ge stood outside the building and resisted the urge to vomit. He took out Lin Sisi's phone. "This phone can capture ghosts and monsters; I might as well try to use it now."

Switching on the phone, Chen Ge discovered with some shock that the face on the background was slowly becoming more and more like his. “This portrait is changing?”

Shaking his head, Chen Ge clicked open the camera. He lifted the phone and aimed it at the small building and its surrounding. Everything looked normal.

“The stench here is different from the one at the lab. It shouldn’t be those upside-down monsters. Shall I go in to take a look?” Chen Ge levelled several glances at the small building. The building had an exposed wall, and there was no window on the first floor. The only place to support his body was the window on the second floor. “This building only has one window?”

If Chen Ge was to use the building to leap over the wall, he had to first enter the building and then climb out through the second-floor window and up to the roof.

“There are things here that are not visible with my Yin Yang Vision, but Lin Sisi’s phone should be able to capture their presence. If not for the fact that the phone accidentally captured things that it shouldn’t have, the pictures inside it wouldn’t have been tampered with.” Chen Ge finally made a decision. He walked up to the building and pushed open the door.

The door creaked noisily. Chen Ge entered the room and saw the floor that was littered with trash.

There was everyday trash and wrappings for various medicine, as well as balls of black plastic bags that appeared to be leaking blood.

“Is this building used as some kind of disposal center?” Chen Ge held the phone and did not let his guard down. With every step, he stopped to take a picture of his surroundings.

Chapter 790 - Trash Collection Centre

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Trash at a public institute like a school was normally centrally gathered before being moved out of the school in trash trucks. Therefore, this building was likely used as some kind of center for the collection of trash at Jiujiang Private University. The trash from the entire school was pooled there before being moved out of the compound. “This building is placed between the two campuses. Does this mean that the two campuses share the same trash collection center?”

Chen Ge used the phone to look around and discovered several strange locations. There were eight cubicles inside the small building, and each cubicle had a wooden plaque hanging over it on which different terms were written.

The first cubicle was categorized for paper-based trash. White paper, brown paper, and paper cups and plates littered the door.

The second cubicle was for plastic trash. Abandoned plastic mineral water bottles were left on the ground. The third cubicle had the term metal on the plaque, and the fourth was for aluminum. So far everything appeared normal. However, from the fifth cubicle onward, things started to get strange.

The wooden plaque on the fifth cubicle had the following written on it.

Human.

“Human is a kind of trash here?” The door of the fifth cubicle was not locked, so Chen Ge pushed it open to take a look.

Creak...

Various deformed ‘humans’ hung like dried meat inside the small cubicle. Their feet were tied, and that was how they were dangled from the ceiling with their heads facing downward, their heads swaying lightly in the wind. Chen Ge drew in a cold breath. There were at least thirty ‘humans’ inside the narrow space. “These should be mannequins, right?”

Raising the phone, Chen Ge took a few pictures of the hanging men. The pictures showed nothing more than what he could see with his bare eyes.

Wiping away the sweat from his palm, Chen Ge raised his hand to touch those hanging ‘humans’. The sensation that came from his fingertips did not feel like that of rubber. It was not the sensation from touching a dead person’s skin either. It felt more like he was touching a living person. The skin was warm, the pores were breathing, and the blood under the skin was still flowing.

“They’re similar to living humans, but it feels like they’ve all lost their souls.” Taking one step back, Chen Ge studied the hanging men. Their eyes were closed like they were fast asleep. “Perhaps I should stay away from them.”

Chen Ge was about to leave when he noticed that one of the ‘humans’ had the same physical appearance as the shadow from Room 413. It was 1.6 meters tall, on the thin side, and had practically no muscle on it. It looked more like a skeleton with human skin sewn over it.

“This looks very similar to the shadow. Is this why the shadow told me to come here?” Chen Ge was not one hundred percent sure that the ‘human’ inside the cubicle belonged to the shadow. There was not much walking space inside the cubicle, and there were too many obstacles in the way for him to get a good look. “Temporarily, I should ignore this. I should try and see if I can leap over the wall first. If I can, then my explorable space will have increased.”

Walking out of the fifth cubicle, Chen Ge turned to look at the other cubicles.

The sixth cubicle was for experimental trash. The door was locked, and Chen Ge could not open it. The seventh cubicle was for non-recyclable trash. Once he got near, Chen Ge was assaulted by a suffocating stench. “This is horrible.”

The door of the seventh cubicle was also locked. Chen Ge quickly walked past the door and was heading to the last cubicle, but when he passed the door, a male voice suddenly came from inside the door.

“Is someone out there?”

Chen Ge froze immediately. He turned his head slowly around to stare at the door of the seventh cubicle. He definitely did not expect a human voice to come from a room meant for non-recyclable trash.

“I hear footsteps. You’re now just outside this door, aren’t you?”

“I am the manager of the trash classification center; can you please open the door for me? When I came in here to move the trash, something slammed the door shut, and I found myself accidentally trapped in here. I’m locked inside the center’s storage room.” The man’s voice sounded normal, but there were many suspicious points in his explanation.

The cubicle door could only be opened from the outside, and an iron lock hung on the door. No matter how one knocked into the door, the lock would not have locked itself.

“I know that you’re out there. Can you please help me? The spare keys should be on the second floor.” The man continued to yell out the door, but Chen Ge did not reply. After half a minute, the man appeared to have given up. “Is there really no one there? I thought I could trick them in here and then snack on them little by little. The smell in this room is getting more fragrant by the day. What do you think?”

“He probably overheard our conversation. He won’t come in to save us. Give up already, you bunch of ugly, dirty, disgusting things.”

“I’m wondering if we should go out the backdoor and drag the person in here to join us. They probably don’t realize that we can leave this place freely, right?”

“That’s a secret that we’ve kept to ourselves. Don’t expose everything for some temporary joy.”

“But he already heard our secret. How about we kill him? What do you think?”

“Killing him will still get us exposed, you idiots! Last time, I shoved so many brains inside your skulls, so how come you’re all still so stupid?”

Listening to the heated argument coming from inside the cubicle,

Chen Ge's face was turning white. Inside the cubicle meant for non-recyclable trash, only a man's voice could be heard, but he seemed to be playing different characters. It sounded like he suffered from schizophrenia, but unlike other patients, every single persona of this person was extremely mad, crazy, and sick—none of them could think or act like a normal person.

"The people here have been completely influenced by the negative emotions. Even inside the world behind the door, I haven't met someone so crazy." Chen Ge immediately left. He glanced at the eighth cubicle.

This cubicle was situated at the deepest part of the building. The wooden plaque on the door was blank. The space around the door was very clean. It did not look like it was meant for trash at all.

"Such a scary school. Even a trash collection center can give me such creeps." Walking past the black plastic bags that were still seeping blood, Chen Ge grabbed the phone to go to the second floor. Some tools could be found there, and overall, it was cleaner than the first floor.

Chen Ge did not stop to admire the view and headed for the only window of the building. The window faced the night school, and various stains dirtied the glass. Standing inside the building, one could barely see outside.

"The monster inside cubicle seven could come out at any moment. Whether he was lying or not, I cannot stay here any longer. Though, I should keep note of this place—perhaps I'll think of a use for it in the future."

As Chen Ge reached toward the window, before he could open it, a screeching sound arrived at his ears. It sounded like someone was using their nails to scratch at the glass.

Chen Ge stared at the window before him closely. The glass was heavily stained, and it was unclear when it had last been given a good wipe. "The sound appears to have come from outside the window. Is something hanging on the wall?"

An image of a strange creature with very long nails appeared in Chen Ge's mind. It was stuck to the wall from outside, and once Chen Ge opened the window, it would leap into the room. He had encountered way too many strange things at this school, so no matter what kind of monster appeared, he would no longer be surprised.

"The stains on the window are blackish red in color, and they all run in lines. They appear to be formed from being continually scratched by bloody hands." The scratching sound of nails against glass continued to reverberate through the room. Chen Ge resisted the discomfort and placed his hand on the glass.

A sticky and wet sensation came from his fingertips, and that gave Chen Ge quite a shock. The stain was on the inside of the window, which meant that the creature that was scratching the window was also inside the room!

The brain took zero point something seconds to catch up to the situation. Chen Ge immediately shoved the window open without any hesitation. Fresh air flew into the room. Chen Ge leaped out of the window. Just as he turned around to adjust his posture, he saw a pool of blackish red damp that was growing on the ceiling. Chen Ge slammed the window shut with the back of his hand. He stepped on the palm-wide edge, and the sound of scratching became clearer and clearer.

He took out Lin Sisi's phone, opened the camera app, and aimed it inside the room. The image that showed up caused a chill to run down his spine. There was someone crawling on the ceiling!

He was wearing a uniform from the trash collection center. Several arms grew from his chest. There were male and female arms with varying lengths and sizes. The only similarity between the arms was that all of the nails had been grounded away, and the exposed skin was dripping blackish red blood. The expanding pool of damp that Chen Ge had seen earlier was actually left behind by the waving of these arms.

“That thing was dangling above me?” The window kept shaking. The monster had already run to the side of the window. He was hanging upside down from the ceiling, and the arms waved maddeningly. They scratched the window as they attempted to pull Chen Ge back into the room. The stained window started to crack. Chen Ge was not going to stay, and he jumped away from the edge to the wall.

“No wonder the psycho in cubicle seven didn’t come out to get me—there is a worker posted at the center.” The worker who dangled from the ceiling was a very scary type, the kind that would wake one up from the dream. “It’s probably responsible for categorizing the trash. Are the arms on its chest and stomach also recycled items?”

The thought that he had been in close vicinity with such a monster for a long time caused Chen Ge’s back to ooze with cold sweat. “You really cannot let your guard down for even a second at this school. Every single room is like a living nightmare.”

Sitting on the wall, Chen Ge took out the phone and snapped a picture of the small building’s only window. The window frame shook for a while before stopping. Just like the Red Specter who could not leave the lab, this worker appeared like it could not leave the trash collection center as well.

“The Red Specter at the lab was responsible for the maintenance of the rules at the lab, and this monster with hands coming from his stomach should be responsible for looking after the trash collection center.” The school was like a microcosm of a society with ghosts and Red Specters as the citizens. This gave Chen Ge a preposterous feeling. “The owner of the school appears to be trying hard to simulate the world outside the door, but why are they doing that?”

This scenario was completely different from any of the scenarios that Chen Ge had visited in the past. He had not encountered such obedient Red Specters before. Even at his own Haunted House, when dealing with Red Specters, Chen Ge usually reasoned with them because he was afraid that other methods might cause them to go on a rampage.

“To be able to make so many Red Specters act so obediently is a sign of a big trouble. Although, this could be a good thing. At least I don’t need to worry about being constantly chased by them.” Sitting on the tall wall, on Chen Ge’s left side was the dark night school with a foreboding presence, but his right side had blurry lights and the occasional laughter of students.

One side was creepy and depressed, whereas the other was lively. This contrast reminded Chen Ge of the paintings that he had seen in the art room earlier. The two campuses formed a stark contrast, similar to those inverted paintings.

However, this did not mean that the western campus for graduate students had to be safer than the eastern campus meant for working and adult students. After all, a normal university would not be so lively after midnight. If the eastern campus was like a cemetery that was enveloped in a nightmare, then western campus was like a machine that did not know rest.

One pooled negative emotions to express humanity’s darkest nature to its full potential while the other hid a machine-like coldness amid raucousness. It felt like human nature had been fully silenced.

“The hidden terror at both campuses is completely different; this is something that I could not have imagined before.” The cold wind caressed his cheeks. Chen Ge had never been so awakened in his life.

He lowered his head to glance at the western campus. There was a squat two-story building that was built along the wall. Similar to the trash collection center at the eastern campus, it was attached to the wall.

“After I leap over, should I want to return to this side, I’ll have to enter that building, which I’m assuming is the trash collection center for the western campus. I’ll have to climb up to the window again and jump over.”

Chen Ge had no idea why the school would come up with such a design. He stood on the wall and looked into the distance. The two campuses were separated by the tall wall. There was no gate or door, and the only connecting locale was the trash collection centers.

“Could it be that the trash collection centers are the entrances? The ‘students’ of the eastern campus are ‘trash’ for the western campus?”

Sitting on the wall, Chen Ge was thinking and had not made his move when he suddenly saw a man in leather shoes walking out from the brush.

“Mr. Bai? How did he know that I’m here? Did the manager at the center give him the news? That’s likely. He was probably attracted here by the sound of battle with the girl in the forest.” Chen Ge sat on the wall. If he returned to the eastern campus now, the chance of him being captured was very high.

After giving it some thought, Chen Ge descended to the western campus. When he was on the wall, he had memorized the layout of the buildings on the western campus. The scale of the western campus was several times the size of the eastern campus, and the layout was quite complicated.

Bending over, Chen Ge went into hiding inside the brush. Chen Ge silently approached the western campus’ trash collection center.

The western campus’ center was obviously cleaner than the one on the eastern side. The term ‘Trash Collection Center’ was written clearly on the door. There was no litter on the road, and there was no strange smell. Several trash trucks were even parked next to the door.

Chen Ge pushed on the door lightly. The wooden door fell away under his touch. The decoration of the interior was almost identical to its eastern counterpart.

If eastern campus was a nightmare that one could not wake up from, then the western campus was like a beautiful fairy tale. However, the one thing that concerned Chen Ge was that both campuses came from the same person's mind.

Chen Ge did not pause for long at the trash collection center. He was worried that he might wake up the manager there again.

"Mr. Bai won't follow me to the western campus, right?" Looking at the wall that was almost three meters tall, Chen Ge's lips curled into a smile. He was about to begin a completely new experience. "I wonder if the rules in the eastern campus are applicable here as well. For the sake of security, I'd better not stay at a fixed location for too long."

Rushing to leave, Chen Ge followed the edge of the brush and moved toward the western campus. Without walking for that long, Chen Ge noticed that something was off. Different from the eastern campus, the brush on the western side had been carefully trimmed and cared for. There was no wild grass at all, and in the distance, he could see very clearly that someone was walking through the brush.

"Since I cannot hide here, I will figure out another method." Chen Ge took out Lin Sisi's phone and used it to scan around him first. After ensuring that there was no 'one' following him, he took out the working outfit that he had found in the laboratory and put it on. Chen Ge brushed away the dust, smoothed down the edges, took a deep breath, and straightened his back.

"The people from the eastern campus all refer to me as Lin Sisi. Every single one of them wants me to be their scapegoat. I wonder what the differences between the occupants of the western and eastern campuses are."

As a student, he had limited access to the campus. Not only could the teachers intercept him easily, other students would not be afraid when they saw him. Therefore, the first thing that Chen Ge did when he crossed over to the western campus was disguise as a member of staff.

“I should find some easily bullied students to try this out. If I can successfully trick them, it means that this method does work.” Chen Ge still had no idea why the people from the eastern campus referred to him as Lin Sisi. Perhaps every living human who entered the campus would be called that.

“The manager of the school probably won’t expect me to come over to the western campus. After all, the two campuses are separated by a very tall wall, and the only way through is through the trash collection centers.” At the eastern campus, Chen Ge felt weirdly constrained like there had been a pair of eyes constantly on him. However, this feeling disappeared completely when he crossed over to the other campus. Clearing his throat, Chen Ge did a few breathing exercises, and his expression turned serious.

Those who did not know him would probably mistake him for an expressionless teacher when they saw him.

After placing the nails in his pocket, where he could reach easily, Chen Ge held the bag with one hand and walked out of the brush, strolling openly through the campus.

“It appears to be quite lively over there.” The western and eastern campuses were indeed different. Chen Ge only took several steps before he saw two students walking toward him from afar. They had the appearance of normal students in real life. They looked ordinary; nothing stood out about them. They had that look of innocence and hope toward future that characterized teens. After several years in the work force, that hope would be gradually winded away. The light in their eyes would disappear, and in its place would come tiredness and helplessness. However, these students were different—they felt like life was in their own grasp. They believed that if they held their hands tight, the beautiful future would not slip through their fingers.

“They appear much more normal than the creatures on the eastern campus. Looking at them makes me feel younger.” After experiencing so many things, Chen Ge’s mental age had already far surpassed his actual age. Slowing down, Chen Ge kept his head lowered like he was contemplating something. The two students walked toward him with talk and laughter.

“I was chosen by the swimming club! The senior approved of my application herself. In the future, I can openly admire her. Perhaps she might even be my coach and teach me personally.”

“In your dreams! The female seniors from the swimming club only interact with new male members when it’s recruitment time. After you join the club, you’ll be assigned a muscular male senior.”

“Wouldn’t that be even more exciting?”

“Go to hell!”

“I’m just joking. What kind of club did you join?”

“I used to like painting, but it’s strange—how come our school doesn’t have an art club?”

“That’s impossible. You simply haven’t found it, most likely.”

“It’s true. I’ve asked the seniors, and they also have no idea about it. Then I found the counsellor, and he just gave me a random excuse.”

“Then why won’t you just switch for another club? How about you join the swimming club as well? One on one teaching sessions with a female senior. It’s going to be great!”

“I still wish to join the art club... Ah! Sorry! Sorry!” The male student was too caught up in his conversation, and he accidentally bumped into Chen Ge’s shoulder. Rubbing his shoulder, Chen Ge stared at the two students with a stone-cold glare. He did not speak but stood to block the middle of the road.

“I’m sorry, I really didn’t mean it,” the male student apologized profusely.

“I hear that you wish to join the art club?” Chen Ge glanced casually at the man.

“Teacher, do you know where our school’s art club is?” The way that the student referred to him as a teacher gave Chen Ge quite a relief. The panic lessened.

“Why do you insist on joining the art club?” Chen Ge kept his tone calm, making it difficult to tell what he was thinking.

“It’s not that I insist on joining the art club. I simply like to paint, and other than that...” The male student scratched his head and started to stammer.

“Since it’s not necessary for you to join the art club, never mind.” Chen Ge made to leave. He gave off the impression of an eccentric young teacher.

“Teacher, wait!” The male student pouted. “You might not believe me when I tell you this, but recently, I’ve been having the same dream every night.”

“What do you dream about?” Chen Ge slowed down.

“I cannot remember. Whenever I wake up, I would forget all about my dreams. But since it occurred so many times, there is a lingering impression in my mind. I can only remember painting something in my dream.” The student also thought that he was being quite preposterous, and his face was red from the shame, as if afraid that Chen Ge might treat him as a nutjob.

“That’s why you want to join the art club?” Chen Ge looked the student up and down. “What’s your name?”

“Zhou Tu.”

“Okay, I’ve memorized it.” Chen Ge still wanted to ask a few more questions, but another few students were coming over from the other side. Afraid of being exposed, Chen Ge stopped the questioning. “Go back and think about it. If you really want to join the art club, come and find me at the club recruitment place.”

Chen Ge had already spotted the small pavilion where the club recruitment was happening. It was filled with people and very bright. In fact, it gave him the fleeting impression that he had returned to real life.

Leaving with slow steps, Chen Ge wore the staff outfit to disguise himself as a member of staff. He was honestly quite good at it and had a more intimidating presence than normal teachers.

Just ten meters away, Chen Ge encountered three more students. These students were chatting; the topic ranged from the school entrance exam to games. There was light in their eyes and smiles that came from their hearts. This caused Chen Ge to start to wonder if he was perhaps in some kind of illusion.

“Are they really ghosts? Can ghosts even be so innocent and pure? Do ghosts also play video games and make jokes?” Chen Ge started to have second doubts. He was unsure whether these students were actual ghosts or not. If they were ghosts, it was possible that they had no idea that they were already dead.

Arriving at the pavilion where the club recruitment drive was, every single club had people lining up to register. There were slogans pasted everywhere, and in the middle of the pavilion, the members of the street dancing club were performing.

“Nothing feels out of place. Am I really inside a door?” Walking through the pavilion, the sounds gradually weakened as Chen Ge reached the edge of the pavilion. He found a quiet place to sit down. He planned to observe the situation for now.

“Based on the clues given by Zhou Yu earlier, these children should all have forgotten something. Are they really happy here?” Chen Ge had no answer. He was not one of the students and could not make the choice on their behalf. His eyes scanned each of the student before his gaze finally stopped next to him.

About three meters away from him sat a thin student. The child sat on the step alone with no friends around him. He looked at the crowd bustling through the pavilion with envy in his eyes.

Chen Ge’s interest in the child was piqued. He walked toward him. “Hey, why aren’t you going to join one of the clubs?”

Hearing Chen Ge’s voice, the male student was shocked. When he saw Chen Ge walk toward him, subconsciously, he turned to leave.

“You’re a man—what are you so afraid of?” Chen Ge walked to the student’s side. “Just go and apply for the club that you want to join. There’s no need to hesitate.”

"I..." The male student lowered his head and leaned forward like he was hiding something.

"Don't tell me, you wish to join the art club? But the school does not have an art club?" Chen Ge guessed.

Being shown kindness by Chen Ge, the student answered, "I wish to learn how to dance, but..."

He stood up, and then Chen Ge realized that the child was limping. His leg left was heavily disformed.

"But the club refuses to take me." The male student was depressed. "Actually, not only the dance club, many clubs rejected me in a roundabout way. There are two extra credits to grab if you join a club, and that's what's bothering me."

"Don't worry, leave it to me." Chen Ge patted the child's shoulder. He was not good at consoling people, but he was good at solving problems.

"You?" The child raised his head to look at Chen Ge. A trace of distrust was visible in his eyes.

"I am a teacher here. Since I've encountered your situation, I cannot just sit idly by." Chen Ge took out various IDs for Mr. Bai out from his bag. When he was at the staff dormitory in the eastern campus, he had swiped the IDs. Using his thumb to block the picture on the ID, Chen Ge showed the ID to the boy.

"Never mind. If you force them to take me, they will not feel good about it either." The male student pursed his lips. "I don't want to create problem for others. I'll be fine on my own."

"You are one of our students and thus one member of the family. There's no need to be act all embarrassed."

"Mr. Bai, thank you, but it's okay."

"Stay here. I'll be back in a minute." Chen Ge entered the pavilion again. He asked some of the clubs for their opinion, but there were very few clubs that were willing to accept the child. Returning to the student's side, the latter seemed to have guessed the result already.

"Teacher, there's no need to mind. It's fine."

“A student like you is not an isolated case. Since everyone is unwilling to accept you, then this is more than one student’s problem but a problem for the school.” Chen Ge’s expression suddenly turned serious. “We are born with our body; we cannot do anything to change the nature gift that we’re blessed with. However, we can change the impression of the people around us, which is the strength and responsibility of education.”

The student nodded. When he heard that, his suspicion toward Chen Ge completely disappeared.

“Wait here, I refuse to believe that there is nothing to be done.” Chen Ge passed through the pavilion again to arrive at the small office next to the pavilion. There were many students there since they were there to update their clubs’ information. Mixing among the crowd, Chen Ge silently sought his way into the office. He was worried about running into other teachers, so he limited his movement to the first floor.

The office used to keep the information of the clubs was open. A female teacher was writing something with her head down inside. Next to her were several students compiling the clubs’ information.

After taking a glance at the door, Chen Ge directly strode into the room. He acted very naturally like he worked there for real. The female teacher probably thought that it was one of the students walking in, so she did not even raise her head. The other students did turn Chen Ge’s way, but they did not say anything.

Walking to an empty table, Chen Ge’s mental constitution held firm. Very calmly, he opened the drawer and found a copy of a new club formation and application. Then he sat down at the table.

Using the pen, he wrote some simple things and added the school’s seal to the form. Then, he shoved the entire document into his bag and left the office.

Passing through the pavilion, Chen Ge found the male student again. “There’s a club that is willing to accept you, and I am the teacher responsible for that club. Would you like to join it or not?”

Since no other club was willing to take him and this Mr. Bai treated him so well, there was no reason for the student to reject the offer. “Mr. Bai, what kind of club is this?”

“Sign here first.” Chen Ge took out one of the club registration forms and handed it to the student.

“Okay.” The student signed his name on the form.

“Wang Yicheng? Not a bad name.” Chen Ge put the form away and took out the club formation form that he had just written. “Our club is called the supernatural phenomenon observation club. Normally, there’s nothing to do. Most of the time, we’ll spend time studying the strange happenings at the school and study some supernatural, mysterious events that science cannot explain.”

Hearing Chen Ge’s introduction, the student was stunned. “Mr. Bai, are you serious?”

“See the seal on this form? Why would I lie to a student?” Chen Ge zipped up the bag. “You’ve signed the member form, but I won’t trouble you if you wish to leave the club. The two credits, however, will be taken away from your score.”

“Please don’t. I was just shocked.” The student had no idea whether he should be happy or sad. He had a feeling that his school life was about to change.

“That’s much better. First, tell me everything that has happened to you. Do not leave out even the smallest detail.” Chen Ge took out pen and paper to record.

“Here? We start now?”

“Quick. Do not feel any pressure. This is the tradition of our club. Any new members have to share the supernatural events that have transpired to them.” Chen Ge was not lying. He merely did not tell Wang Yicheng that he was the first and only member of the supernatural phenomenon observation club.

Seeing the look in Chen Ge's eyes, Wang Yicheng's neck shrunk backward, and he grumbled internally, This teacher is a kind person, but his personality is a bit weird. He probably doesn't have many friends in real life either.

"Teacher, I'm just a very normal student. I have not encountered anything special in my life, much less any supernatural events," Wang Yicheng said in embarrassment. "I am a bit clumsy, and you can see the issue with my leg. I think I will just join the calligraphy club. After all, they agreed to let me join even though the senior's tone is not that good."

"I'll ask you the questions, and you only need to answer them honestly," Chen Ge said seriously. Once he put on such a demeanor, Wang Yicheng immediately surrendered. He sat on the steps and gave it some thought. After a while, he said, "I have not encountered any supernatural phenomenon myself, but when I joined the university, I did hear a curious ghost story from a senior."

"A ghost story?" When Chen Ge heard these words, his eyes twinkled.

"The senior was from the student council. When we were assigned our dormitory, he was our guide. He seemed to have something against me. The story that he told was probably made up to scare me."

"What story is it? Tell me."

"The room that I was assigned is Room 413. Normally, a dormitory room houses six people, but strangely enough, my dormitory room only has five people. There is a bed that is purposely left empty."

Wang Yicheng started to tell the ghost story that he had heard.

"Initially, I thought that the student who had bed number four was away due to some emergency, so he was not around for the new student orientation. However, that senior told me that no one actually occupies that bed number four."

“When I asked him why, he told me, a long time ago, a student with a physical deformity owned that bed. No one was willing to be his friend, so he used pranks to get people’s attention. In the end, it only made others hate him even more. All the others ganged up to pull a prank on him.”

As Wang Yicheng was about to continue, he was interrupted by Chen Ge. “Do you know what kind of prank the other students pulled on him?” Chen Ge wanted to confirm the speculation in his mind, so he asked this question.

Scratching his head, Wang Yicheng continued with a frown. “According to the senior, the students tricked the kid to go to the toilet at midnight. They were going to scare him by acting like ghosts. But somehow, an accident happened, and the child perished.”

“And then what happened?”

“Since then, bed four in Room 413 has always been left empty. The senior said that the child would occasionally return at midnight. If we wake up to use the toilet at midnight and run into an extra person in the room, do not interact with him.”

“That’s all? ” Chen Ge was not satisfied. “Try to think about other things that have happened to you. Like, have you been having a recurring dream, or do some extra memories appear in your mind?”

Wang Yicheng looked at Chen Ge with a bitter expression. He knew that Chen Ge was not kidding, so he replied, “Teacher, I am a very heavy sleeper, and I never dream. It’s embarrassing to say this about myself, but I’m a forgiving person. I don’t mind the bullying that others do to me.”

“That won’t do. There are good people and bad people in this world. Your kindness will only be seen as weakness in the bad people’s eyes. They will only bully you even more.” Chen Ge looked at Wang Yicheng, and his pupils narrowed. Suddenly, Chen Ge realized that this was the student whom he had been looking for.

Wang Yicheng had a good impression of Chen Ge, trusted the latter, and most importantly, would listen to Chen Ge’s orders. There were obvious holes in the western campus’ students’ memory. Chen Ge wished to find out more, and he intended to ask some personal questions.

“Wang Yicheng, what does your parent do for a living?” Family was the most important part of a child's life. Chen Ge did not think that the students would forget something as important as that.

"They own a restaurant. Why?" Wang Yicheng thought that Chen Ge had switched the topic very quickly.

"Then, do you miss them?" After asking that question, Chen Ge was immediately grasped by worry.

"Not really. They only dropped me here yesterday, but I guess I'll start to miss them after some time," Wang Yicheng answered seriously.

"Yesterday?" Chen Ge asked a few more questions. The young man's answers were flawless and truthful. However, once Chen Ge gave it some thought, he noticed that a great chunk of Wang Yicheng's life was missing. For example, when Chen Ge asked him about the summer holiday after the big exam, the young man would stammer like that part of his memory had been vanquished.

"It's fine. There's time to think about it. Maybe it'll come back to you later." Chen Ge had already gained a lot from Wang Yicheng. The western campus also had Room 413, and it was also tied to a ghost story. There were many similarities between the two campuses. Chen Ge wondered how deep the similarity went.

"Compared to the eastern campus, the western campus is too friendly. I have to make use of this opportunity." Chen Ge felt like he should not limit his questioning to Wang Yicheng. He needed more people to compile a fuller picture.

Patting away the dust from his pants, Chen Ge stood up from the steps. "Xiao Wang, I'm going to take a spin around the pavilion and try to get a few new members for our club."

Chen Ge returned to the pavilion. The nature of the club meant that he could not have a big promotion. He could only approach some kind-looking students and ask about their interest. After being rejected five to six times, Chen Ge finally recruited the second member.

This student was called Zhang Ju—his face looked like it had been burned by fire. His left cheek and neck were scarred, and it looked quite scary.

"Mr. Bai, will I cause problem if I join your club? After all, I don't think anyone is willing to be in the same club as me." Zhang Ju had a scary exterior but a kind-hearted interior.

“It’ll be fine. The kids in the club are all good people.” Chen Ge patted the young man’s shoulder. “I hope I won’t hear anything like that from you again.”

Chen Ge’s sudden seriousness flustered Zhang Ju. This was the first time that someone had willingly come to be his friend.

“Ok.”

“That’s more like it. Come, I’ll bring you to go meet the other club members.” Chen Ge was about to leave when he heard a familiar voice.

“Good evening, teacher, may I have some of your time?”

Chen Ge turned and saw a familiar face. Behind him, the student who greeted him was Zhou Tu. He had met Chen Ge before and had asked him about the art club.

“Xiao Zhou? How can I help you?” Chen Ge asked casually. Zhang Ju, who stood next to him, silently lowered his head, hiding his face from Zhou Tu’s sight.

“Teacher, I’ve made my decision; I wish to join the art club. Can you tell me where it is?” Zhou Tu clenched his fists. He seemed to have something that he wished but had not said.

“I know where the art club is, but I cannot tell you the location now. How about this?” Chen Ge continued speaking after a short pause. “You join my club for now to fill up the members. If your performance is satisfactory, then I guarantee that I’ll personally take you to the art club.”

“Join your club first?” Zhou Tu looked at Zhang Ju next to Chen Ge. Honestly, the child really did look quite scary.

Is this some kind of test? he grumbled internally. He had asked a lot of them, and they either had not even heard of the art club or tried their best to change the topic. Only Chen Ge had given him a clear answer that the art club really did exist.

After giving it some thought, even though Zhou Tu thought that Chen Ge was a bit unconventional, he trusted that a teacher would not lie to a student, so in the end, he nodded. “Okay, I’ll join. But Mr. Bai, what club is this?”

“Fill in the form first.” After Zhou Tu filled in the form, Chen Ge said, “Our club is called supernatural phenomenon observation club. Its main objective is to study the supernatural events happening around the school.”

Zhou Tu was baffled when he heard the introduction. He could barely believe that his school would even have a club like that. However, since it was managed by Mr. Bai, it had to have been officially approved by the school.

“There are too many people here. We’ll find a quieter place to talk.” Chen Ge led his two new members to leave the pavilion. Suddenly, an argument erupted in the middle of the pavilion. Many students stopped to see what it was. Even Chen Ge stopped moving.

“What happened?”

“Looks like someone wanted to join the street dance club but was rejected. Then they got into an argument.”

“Someone threw a punch! There’s a fight!”

“Mr. Bai, should we go stop the fight?”

“This is so horrible that new students would act like this.” Even though that was what he said, Chen Ge did not personally go to stop the fight. He was masquerading as Mr. Bai, and thus, he could not pull too much attention at this kind of public event.

After a while, both parties of the fight were pulled away. The female teacher that Chen Ge had seen in the office earlier came out. The teacher appeared like she had many things to do and was very busy. Therefore, without asking for an explanation, she lectured all the students that were involved in the fight. After the students dispersed, the teacher with the explosive temper also left. She returned to the office, continuing her work.

“The teachers at this school seem to have lost some of their memory as well. That is different from the teachers on the eastern campus.” Chen Ge did not want to find trouble, but trouble liked to seek him out. The student who had gotten into a fight with the members of the dance club shuffled Chen Ge’s way while holding his arm. It was unclear whether he was not looking ahead or some other reason, but he tripped when he was going up the stairs and happened to fell next to Chen Ge.

“F*ck! Even the stairs are bullying me today! Why is everyone bullying me?” he yelled. His eyes were red as he tried to force himself to get up.

“Are you alright?” Chen Ge studied this student. The young man had a refreshing look, not that old. His earlobes were punctured, and there was a large stain on his arm like a tattoo that had not been properly erased. The child had a rather special appearance. He was not dressed in any branded goods, but he was quite fashionable. He did not look like a student.

“I’m fine.” The male glanced at Chen Ge. The teacher before him was the first who had shown him any care.

“You were the one who threw the first punch during the fight with the members of the dance club, right?"

"What if that's true? Are you going to punish me?" The gaze that the student gave Chen Ge became unfriendly almost instantly.

"I merely wish to say that there are so many members from the dance club, and there is only one you. Why would you pick a fight with them? Couldn't you have talked it out? Such recklessness will only bring you harm." Chen Ge's voice was mature and calm just like a big brother.

Seeing that Chen Ge had no intention of scolding him but seemed to be concerned about him, the male student's voice softened, and he stopped being so aggressive. "Mainly, it's because they bullied me. Because of my appearance, the student responsible for the recruitment was purposely going against me. To join the club, I reached the limit of my patience, but in the end, they told me that the registration had already reached the limit and told me to join another club."

"If that's really the case, then you're not entirely in the wrong." Chen Ge signaled for the student to move to the side. "But why is it that you insist on joining the club? Do you like street dancing that much?"

"That's not really true either." The student finally told the truth after holding it in for so long. "I've gone to ask a few clubs already, and I've been rejected. Probably because I stand out too much."

The student laughed self-deprecatingly. He probably thought that was too embarrassing to admit, so he left right after.

"Wait a minute, I have a club here. Do you want to consider joining it?" Chen Ge took out the registration form. "I see a great potential in you. If those clubs don't want you, it's their loss."

Seeing the form that Chen Ge was holding, the student hesitated. He shook his head. "Pride is earned—something given is called charity. I do not need charity from anyone."

"That's quite a backbone you have there. I find myself admiring you more and more." Chen Ge gave the student the form directly. "Your appearance is different from other students', which means that you must have a history that is different from them. Can you tell me your history?"

Chen Ge acted sincerely and spoke with a soft tone. This helped the student to walk out from his 'unapproachable exterior'.

“There’s nothing to tell really. I haven’t really met my parents before—it was my grandmother who raised me. She opened a small food cart selling dumplings inside an alley, and the two of us barely survived with that income. When I was young, I got mixed up with the ruffians running the alley. Smoking, drinking, stealing—I have done all that you can think of. It’s fun.

“After mixing with them for a few years, one day, it started to rain heavily. I returned earlier to my grandmother’s stall, and I saw the local police trying to take my grandmother’s stall away. At the time, I lost it and got into a fight with them.”

The student bit on his lips, and his expression was quite complicated. “Injuring them caused me to get sent to the youth penitentiary. When I came out, my grandmother hugged me and cried for a long time.

“Actually, there is nothing to be said. Later, I got back to school, and I managed to score high enough to get into this university.”

The student’s life was rather harsh. Chen Ge studied the man’s face closely, and he saw shyness of youth. However, behind it hid plenty of anxiety and tiredness, like he had been in constant fear and worry of something.

“You are a good kid. You just have a tendency to act rashly. But I like that recklessness. Come and join my club, credits are not that big an issue.” Chen Ge gave the invitation again. The student did not reject him this time. He signed his name on the form—Zhu Long.

“I have another new member. Looks like our club is quite popular.” Chen Ge put the form away. “Come, let’s go find a more secluded place, and we will start our first club activity.”

Chen Ge's supernatural phenomenon observation club already had four members, the limping Wang Yicheng; Zhang Ju with a burned face; Zhou Tu, who was looking for the art club; and Zhu Long, who had a penchant for getting into fights. Each member had their unique personality. If Chen Ge had really been a teacher at the school, his club would have been very interesting. Unfortunately, that was not the truth. Chen Ge wanted to get information from these kids, but he did not really want to make use of them completely.

As long as it was within his power, Chen Ge would help these students find the memories that they had lost and fight to get them out of this place with him. Passing the pavilion, the members of the supernatural phenomenon observation club gathered for the first time.

The members looked at each other, and a not so positive thought appeared in their minds. This club was like an orphanage where unwanted kids were abandoned.

"Mr. Bai, don't tell me that this is everyone from our club." Zhou Tu wanted to join the art club, but somehow, he found himself in this club instead. He felt scammed. The atmosphere was quite awkward. Wang Yicheng and Zhang Ju, who had physical disfigurements, moved their eyes away and did not dare speak. Zhu Long, though, appeared unfazed; if anything, his curiosity toward this club only grew.

"You are correct, but I suggest you watch your tone. In some time, you'll realize how lucky you are to have joined this club." Chen Ge's voice was laced with pride. "Every member of this club has been personally picked by me. Everyone here is distinct from others. My club does not need common people—only extraordinary students are allowed to join."

Zhou Tu could not help rolling his eyes when he heard that. If not for the fact that he had already signed the form, he would have left.

“I know that you have a hard time believing me now and doubt the purpose of our club.” Chen Ge’s eyes scanned the pupils. “I am not one who likes to use words to persuade others. When we begin the club activity, I will use the reality to recover the actual truth for you.”

Chen Ge’s expression was so serious that he did not appear like he was joking. The few students quieted down.

“Before I let you see the real world, I have a question to ask you. What kind of world do you think you’re living in?” Chen Ge wished to know more about these students’ past to try and find clues from their existing memories.

Wang Yicheng was the first to share. He retold the story of his past. Then, it was Zhu Long’s and Zhang Ju’s turns.

Zhang Ju had been a very normal child before he attended high school. He was a hardworking student, and he had managed to score enough for a good university. His life plan was laid, but the course strayed on the day of his high school graduation.

That night, he and his friends had gone to karaoke. When fire spread throughout the building, Zhang Ju and his friends had been trapped in the private room. When he had finally been rescued, his cheek and scalp had been severely singed, which had left behind a scary looking scar.

Zhang Ju had stayed at home for two months to receive psychological treatment. When his therapist thought that he was ready, he had chosen to face his new self and come to the university. The story was very inspiring, but Chen Ge heard some problems in it.

“Can you remember the days when you were receiving treatment at the hospital?” Theoretically speaking, this story should scar Zhang Ju deeply, but when he told the story, there was no visible change to his expression. It was like he was telling another person’s story.

Regarding the days when he received treatment at the hospital, Zhang Ju stammered a lot. Chen Ge knew that he was not trying to hide the facts on purpose—the child simply could not remember the details.

Tragedy struck Zhang Ju during the last holiday of his high school years. When Wang Yicheng was telling his story earlier, that part of his memory was very vague as well. So was the case with Zhu Long.

Chen Ge looked at the students gathered before him, and a theory appeared in his mind. These few students did not really forget what had happened during that last holiday, but their actual date of death fell within that period.

Lingering spirits carried their memories with them, whether they were good or bad. Therefore, they would remember everything that happened before that holiday clearly but could not seem to recall the details of that holiday.

“Mr. Bai, are you feeling well?” Zhou Tu was a very astute person; he was a great observer of people. He noticed that Chen Ge’s expression was not so perky after he heard the few students’ stories, and so he asked, “How about we just postpone the activity today? You should go and rest.”

“I’ve learned about their pasts. What about yours?” Chen Ge’s expression swiftly returned to normal.

“I have led a very normal life. Normally, I spent time studying, drawing, eating, and sleeping. I haven’t even been in a relationship before, so there is nothing interesting.” Zhou Tu shrugged. He felt like he was the most normal member of this club.

“Didn’t you tell me that you have been having this recurring dream recently?”

“Do I have to tell everyone that?” Zhou Tu did not believe that Chen Ge would expose that fact before so many people.

“I will not force you. If you wish to talk about it, go ahead. It’s fine if you don’t.”

“Well, it’s not really a secret...” Zhou Tu wished to rely on Chen Ge to get to art club. From his perspective, this strange club was just a means to an end. “I came to this school rather early. Since registering at the dormitory, I have had the same dream every night. In the dream, I sit inside a room filled with oil paintings. The atmosphere is strange. There are twelve other people sitting around me, and everyone is painting.”

“Oil painting room? Thirteen paintings in total?” Chen Ge was instantly reminded of what he had seen at the night school’s lab building. He realized that he had come across a valuable treasure. Zhou Tu could dream about the inside of the art room. So, this meant that he had probably been there before and was perhaps the painter behind one of the paintings. However, due to a certain reason, he had forgotten all about that.

“Yes, with each passing night, the dream becomes clearer, like I have been there myself, but I have no memory of this at all.” Zhou Tu slowly lowered his head. “This is a very horrible feeling. When I woke up every morning, I wanted to recover this dream, so I grabbed a brush and tried to paint the vestiges from my dream. However, I could not find the paint that I need, so I’ve been looking for the art club.”

After hearing Zhou Tu’s story, Chen Ge was silent for a while before saying, “If I said that I’ve seen the place in your dream before, would you believe me?”

“Yes, it’s right in this school!” Chen Ge said affirmatively. “If you want to, I can take you there, but you have to promise me one thing.”

“What is it?” Zhou Tu’s voice changed. Only he knew how important this dream was.

“From now on, you have to listen to my every order, and that is the condition for me taking you there.”

“No problem.” Zhou Tu gave his promise almost without hesitation. From his perspective, students should listen to their teachers. After getting the promise from Zhou Tu, Chen Ge nodded lightly. He did not request for the club to follow many formalities; he merely needed every one of the members to follow his orders.

“You will all feel glad for having made this choice in a while.” Chen Ge looked at the busy western campus. “It is not my intention to change all this, but everyone has the right to know. After all, this nightmare is weaved from everyone’s collective memory.”

The students had no idea what he was talking about. They just felt like this Mr. Bai was different from other teachers.

“Alright, now that we have gotten to know each other, we will begin today’s club activity now.” Chen Ge signaled for the members to get closer. “Have you heard of any ghost stories regarding our school?”

“Teacher, what do you mean?” Zhou Tu had a bad feeling in his stomach. This teacher appeared like he was going to take them to go and do something dangerous.

“Since our club is supernatural phenomenon observation club, our club activity will be to study these phenomena. What’s wrong with that?” Chen Ge said with such severity that the students had to believe him.

“That is not wrong technically, but won’t people think that we’re ahem... if we go searching for supernatural phenomenon like that?” Zhu Long coughed drily. He blanked on a favorable description. “Furthermore, it’s getting late. If we’re discovered by other teachers, won’t we get into trouble?”

“Don’t worry.” Chen Ge took out Mr. Bai’s identification document. His finger was still expertly blocking the picture. “The school won’t fault us. I'll be there to explain everything."

Hearing the promise from Chen Ge, Zhou Tu and Zhu Long visibly relaxed, but Wang Yicheng still looked like there was something bothering him.

"Xiao Wang, what's on your mind? There's no need to hide anything now that you're part of the club."

"Mr. Bai, I was thinking, what if we really run into something that we shouldn't, then what can we do? We are just a few normal students." It was unclear whether Wang Yicheng was really scared by the ghost story told by his senior or there was something in his memory that had not properly been cleaned. In any case, when Chen Ge said that he was going to take them to study supernatural phenomena, this student's reaction had been rather weird.

"Certain things have to be seen to be believed. Also, there's no need to worry about your safety. Even though our club is small, every member is an elite. Furthermore, I'll be there with you. Everything is under control," Chen Ge said confidently and calmly. He gave off a very trustworthy feeling. "So, let's hear it. What kind of ghost stories about this school have you guys heard of?"

The pavilion was not as busy as before. Most of the students had completed their club registration. The surrounding temperature appeared to have dropped as well.

"I heard of a ghost story before. Even though I believe it should have been made up, I've met the person in the story." Zhang Ju was the first to speak. "Yesterday, when I arrived at the university, because of my unique circumstances, the teacher asked me to go to the office for some questions, asking if I need any help. At the time, there was a senior inside the office. He was crying nonstop, mumbling a girl's name on his lips.

"I overheard the conversation between him and the teacher. I found that the name that he kept repeating was the name of one of his admirers. That day was his birthday. The girl had asked to meet him in the small garden to confess her feelings to him, but he had rejected her.

"At the time, he didn't think much of it. He had followed his dormitory mates back to drink and play, forgetting all about it. However, the next day, the school announced that the girl had gone missing. In the end, they found the girl's body inside the garden—she had died a horrible death.

“The scariest thing was that her time of death was before meeting the senior. Even now, no one can tell what really happened. The senior was also preparing to leave school due to overwhelming psychological pressure.”

Zhang Ju touched the part of his face that was burned. “That’s all. I am not clear about the actual details. If you wish to go to the garden, I can lead the way.”

“If the girl was dead before she met up with the senior, then it is possible that senior was lying? Is he the actual the killer and the girl did not like him at all?” Chen Ge thought back to the girl whom he had met in the woods of the eastern campus. The girl had been too caught in resentment to be communicated with.

“I personally think that the killer is someone else, and the girl merely wanted to see the person whom she had a crush on at the last moment of her life, but unfortunately, he was not interested in her.” Zhu Long touched the scar on his arm. That was a scar left behind by tattooing.

“That is a person’s name, right? I’m surprise that you’re such a romantic.” Zhou Tu glanced at Zhu Long’s arm and then turned to Chen Ge. “Mr. Bai, how about we go to that garden today and end this activity as soon as possible? We have to return to the dormitory soon. Look, there aren’t many people around anymore.”

“There’s no need to hurry. What about the rest of you? What kind stories have you heard?”

“I haven’t heard of any ghost stories before, but I read a very interesting story on the internet a while back.” Zhu Long touched the scar on his arm habitually. “The content was an innocent boy running into a girl that he likes. He gathered his courage to confess his feelings, but the girl didn’t answer him immediately. She didn’t agree, but she didn’t reject him outright either. She merely said that if they can get into the same university then they will be together forever.”

“The male student was not a good student, but for this promise, he worked extra hard. Unfortunately, his fundamental knowledge was too weak. To have such a drastic improvement in mere months and get into this school is very difficult.”

At this point, Zhu Long’s expression turned very weird. He probably did not notice this change himself. “But out of everyone’s expectations, the boy finally managed to get into the same university as the girl.”

“As long as one is willing, nothing is impossible. Finally, they got their happy ending.” Zhang Ju sighed.

Hearing Zhang Ju’s words, Zhu Long’s expression became even stranger, and he shook his head. “The girl got into the best medical university in the nation. The boy’s score was only 150 marks less than the required mark to apply for that school.”

When Chen Ge heard the term medical school, he seemed to understand something, but the other members were still confused.

“Then how did he end up meeting the girl?”

Zhu Long’s fingers were practically digging into his muscles, but he did not seem to mind it. “The boy was pulled out of the chiller and placed on the girl’s autopsy table. They finally ended up at the same university. Well, do you think the girl kept her word and stayed with the boy forever?”

His expression became even stranger. Zhu Long did not seem to realize the strange changes that were occurring to him.

Chapter 798 - Upside Down Hourglass

Chapter 798: Upside Down Hourglass

Zhu Long did not notice anything abnormal with himself at all. He did not say the name of the boy and girl, but he felt as though he had gone through a similar experience.

“Hey!” Wang Yicheng was timid. He saw that Zhu Long seemed possessed and just pushed him away.

The cluelessness in Zhu Long’s eyes instantly disappeared, and he looked at the people around him before suddenly smiling. “Did I scare you guys? Did you know that the first time I heard this story, I was scared, too? There’s actually another half to this story, and I have this impression of it in my brain, but I can’t remember it no matter what.”

“Yeah, but I forgot.” Zhu Long laughed. “Why do you all look at him like this? This is just a story I saw somewhere. It’s not a spooky story that happened in our school.”

Zhu Long saw that everyone was still staring at him, and the smile from his face disappeared. “Don’t you guys believe me? Our school isn’t a medical university...”

“Our school is a mixed university. There are three medical degrees. Because the teaching resources are weak, there are few students. We usually can’t see them at all, but they have three individual laboratories in their practical building.” Everyone was a freshman, but Zhang Ju knew the school very well and knew a lot of information that others did not know.

“Our school has a dissection room?” Zhu Long was dumbfounded. “I was just casually speaking. Don’t take it seriously.”

“The purpose of our supernatural phenomenon observation club is to seek the truth. Whether it’s real or fake, we will know once we go check it out.” Chen Ge was also interested in Zhu Long’s story. Zhu Long had been a hoodlum before and sent to juvenile detention center due to getting into trouble with city law enforcement. His past was very similar to that bad child. Coupled with his strange manners, it was hard for Chen Ge not to be suspicious of him.

Zhu Long doesn’t remember the summer break after finishing high school. Something might have happened in that summer break. Chen Ge had found lots of clues from these children. Now, he just needed to verify them at the school.

“I’m very relieved that everyone is eager to participate. We’ll go to the place you spoke of tonight,” Chen Ge said to Zhang Ju. “Let’s go to the forest you spoke off. You saw the retiring student with your own eyes. What happened on him might be real.”

“Okay, follow me.” Zhang Ju looked down. This seemed to be his walking habit in order to cover the scar on his face.

He was very familiar with this school. He did not seem like a new student at all. It was obvious that the familiarity was etched deep into his bones. It was as though he already belonged to the school.

There were few people in the small square now, and not many noticed them.

Even if someone saw them, they would not be suspicious. At most, they would be curious. After all, everyone in Chen Ge’s club seemed rather unique.

The forest was quite far from the square. Chen Ge used this opportunity to familiarize himself with the landscape of the school.

The western part of the school was very large. They had been walking for more than ten minutes, and they still could not see the border.

“That’s an artificial lake. The school forbids people getting close to it at night because someone drowned there in the past. We need to go around it.” Zhang Ju pointed at the pitch black in the distance. If he had not said it, Chen Ge would not even have known that it was a lake.

The water was calm, and there was no light. Instead of a lake, it was more like a black hole that devoured everything.

After walking another few minutes, Zhang Ju stopped. “The girl’s body was found in this forest.”

The schoolyard at night was very scary. Luckily, there were lights on both sides of the road that made them feel a little more assured.

“There used to be no lights, but after the incident, the school installed the lights.” Zhang Ju was the first to enter the forest, and Chen Ge followed close behind.

He was very close to Zhang Ju and could clearly feel that Zhang Ju seemed much more relaxed after entering the forest.

Perhaps it was because the trees could block the light, and no one could see his scarred face.

The group were scared when they first entered the forest, worrying that they might encounter that girl. However, after a while, they just felt bored. “There’s nothing special here.”

“Mr. Bai, that story must be fake. The forest looks normal. There aren’t any traces of a murder here.” Zhou Tu wanted to leave. He saw Chen Ge standing next to a tree hole, so he walked over in confusion “Mr. Bai, what are you looking at?”

Chen Ge ignored Zhou Tu and said without turning back, “Zhang Ju. Was the girl’s head found in a tree hole?”

“Yeah.” Zhang Ju was a little surprised, but after thinking about it, given that Chen Ge was a teacher, it was normal that he knew this.

“A human head was once hidden in this tree hole?” Wang Yicheng stumbled back a step. He was the most timid in the group.

“Don’t run around. There’s still hair of the deceased on the branch behind you.” Zhang Ju held Wang Yicheng, preventing him from falling over.

“Don’t scare him. Even if a murder happened here, it’s not as strange as the spooky story makes out.” Zhou Tu did not believe this and just wanted to leave.

“Little Zhou, the reality is much more terrifying than you imagine.” Chen Ge decided not to tell them yet. He had seen a tree hole that was exactly the same on the eastern side of the school. A head had been hidden inside.

The western and eastern regions of the school are similar in some ways, but there's one thing that I don't understand. Why is the girl staying on the eastern side while the boy she liked is on the western side? What standard does the school separate the students on?

The difference between the female ghost in the tree hole and Zhang Ju was that one kept his sense of reason and looked like an ordinary person, but the other was twisted by hatred.

The mental states of the students of the eastern and western districts are completely different. The western students are livelier and have a lot of positive emotions. Meanwhile, the eastern students are plagued by negative emotions and appear half-human half-ghost.

After thinking for a while, Chen Ge thought of the oil painting.

If the despair and negative emotions in the door were removed, would it be possible for the door to return to normal?

The situations in the two halves of the school were very similar to the scene in the oil painting. The western region sent all the negative emotions through a waste disposal station to the eastern region.

The two school districts were like an hourglass. The trash disposal station was the small gap in the center of the hourglass.

I think I understand what the headmaster wants to do.

Chen Ge reached into the tree hole. The inside was cleansed. There was nothing left.

Chapter 799 - Spot the Difference

Chapter 799: Spot the Difference

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The tree hole of the eastern region hides the head of a female ghost that is covered in blood and grime. The tree hole in the western region is clean, without even a leaf.

The situations in the west and east school districts were complete opposites. An image gradually appeared in Chen Ge's head.

If one compared the world behind the door to a bottomless sea of blood, then this ghost school was an hourglass floating in the sea of blood.

The headmaster of the school made the glass shell to segregate the school from the blood world and then used some means to send the remnant despair in the western region to the eastern region, making the western school region more and more similar to the outside world.

The only connection between the eastern and western school regions was the trash disposal center. The eastern school region was the real testing grounds, while the western region was like a filter that sent out the negative emotions and despair.

Chen Ge had been inside the trash disposal center, and he had seen that trash.

Despair and hatred are sent away. This explains why the door that Chang Gu opened wasn't dyed red.

Normal doors were colored blood red, but this door was different.

The memories those children forgot might be related to despair and hatred. How did the headmaster of the school do all this? Is this the power above Red Specters?

Now more than ever, Chen Ge was more curious about the headmaster of the school.

If the headmaster just wants to clear out a place without despair behind the door, then why are the students fighting to leave here?

Chen Ge had long passed the age of using purely good and evil to judge a person. After receiving the black phone and encountering all those people and ghosts, those who could become top level Red Specters all had strong desires Doctor Gao wanted to revive his wife. The shadow of Li Wan town wanted to become a human and turn Chen Ge into his shadow. Zhang Ya wanted revenge.

This meant that the headmaster of the ghost school had to have his own desire. His desire might be related to this school.

I feel there must be something more terrifying hidden in this school. I'm only performing a superficial investigation right now. I still haven't seen the true side of the school.

The new students knew very little. Chen Ge was thinking that once he had enough power, he could try abducting a teacher to help him.

Looking back at his shadow, he noticed that it had stopped squirming. The ghost hidden in his shadow seemed to have awoken.

“If I can take out the monster at the trash disposal, I pretty much have control of the entrance and can go between the two regions as I please.”

Chen Ge had a plan, but it was very hard to put it into action.

“Mr. Bai, can we go now? This place looks scary, but there are no ghosts. It's all just rumors.” Zhou Tu was getting impatient. He had joined the association to gain information about the arts society, not to feed the mosquitos.

“There's no problem here indeed, but I hope you can all remember the geology of this crime scene.” Chen Ge got up and started walking out of the forest.

“Why?”

“You will know in the future.” Chen Ge waved his hand. “Now, we will go to the next scene, the dissection room in the practical building. Zhang Ju, lead the way.”

Hearing that Chen Ge was going another place, the students were dazed.

“Teach, it’s so late already. Are we still going? Why not wait till tomorrow?” Wang Yicheng yelped.

“You guys probably won’t be able to see me tomorrow. Even if I can last till tomorrow, you guys won’t be in the same state as now.” When the ghost in his shadow woke up, Chen Ge was much more confident.

“But... if we go to the practical building at night and get caught...” Zhou Tu did not want to keep doing this with Chen Ge. He felt like he had been abducted on a pirate ship. He thought about leaving, but he was still a child. Which new student dared to argue with a teacher on the second day?

The group left the forest and walked along the lake for a while before seeing the practical building.

To be honest, Chen Ge had some mental trauma with the practical lab, but he still went in first.

“I wasn’t scared when I was alone. Now that I have so many companions, there’s even less reason to retreat.”

The practical lab of the eastern region was much larger than that of the western region. There were two buildings, A and B, and each building had six levels.

It was very late now, but many rooms were still lit up, and figures sometimes flashed by the windows.

“Mr. Bai, we won’t be stopped if we go in now, right?”

“You just need to lead the way.”

Zhang Ju walked at the forefront while Chen Ge walked in the middle with his head down. He had thought of five excuses for different situations.

The door to building A was not locked, nor was there anyone guarding. Chen Ge and the students got inside easily.

“Glass doors, white paint, and the same flooring. The layout is very similar to the western region’s lab building.”

There was no guardroom on the first floor. Chen Ge and the others walked further down the corridor, and he finally found the difference.

The western region only had one cargo lift while the eastern region also had stairs.

“There are three labs of the medical department, one on floor two and the rest on floor six. I don’t know if the dissection room is on floor two or floor six. Let’s go to floor two first.” Zhang Ju walked toward the stairs. He touched the scar on his face. Ever since leaving the forest, he had kept subconsciously touching the scar on his face.

“Wait, let’s go to floor six first and then floor two. Chen Ge knew the guardroom was on floor two. He grabbed Zhang Ju’s arm and said, “It’s too troublesome to go up the stairs. Let’s take the lift.”

Chen Ge stopped at the door to the lift, completely ignoring the words ‘For Cargo Only’.

The silver doors slowly opened. Chen Ge looked at the familiar scene and walked in decisively.

“Hurry up, don’t waste time.”

Taking the lift could avoid the guardroom. When all the students entered the lift, Chen Ge pressed the button toward floor six.

The doors slowly closed as Chen Ge stared closely at the control board. The button did not light up with his press.

His heart slowly rested, but just at that moment, a bad smell floated past.

Turning around, all the students were standing next to him.

“What’s wrong teacher?”

“Do you guys smell a bad odor?” Chen Ge looked at the empty corner and thought of something bad.

“Bad smell?” Zhu Long glanced at everyone. “Someone farted in the lift?”

“Perhaps.” Chen Ge took back his glance. He knew that it was an odor that only rotting corpses emitted.

The cargo lift slowly rose before finally stopping at the sixth floor. The silvery gray doors opened before Chen Ge. The air conditioning draft blew into the elevator—the temperature inside the lab was much lower than outside. A bright fluorescent light shone on the tiles. The corridor before them was very clean, devoid of any trash.

The eastern campus' lab building is like this as well, but there was definitely no lights there. Chen Ge glanced at the glass on the door, and his reflection stared back at him.

“How come it feels like I’ve been here before even though I’m sure that has not happened.” Zhang Ju slowly raised his head. He also saw his face on the glass. The fire scorched his face, and the glance of it made people feel uncomfortable. He scratched his head like he was trying hard to remember something.

“It’s fine if you cannot remember it now. I have déjà vu feelings like that sometimes, too. I’m sure that I’ve not been to this new location before, but it feels strangely familiar like I’ve visited the place in my dreams.” Chen Ge placed his hand on Zhang Ju’s shoulder. The warmth and power from his palm dispersed the anxiety in Zhang Ju’s heart.

“Thank you, sir, but I’m fine. However, it really feels like I’ve been here before,” Zhang Ju replied. “It’s not in my dreams but in real life. There are some shreds of a memory in my mind. They are like a ball that has been charred, and I would need to pry with all my might to look into the contents.”

“That’s quite an interesting analogy.” Chen Ge noticed that Zhang Ju was different from the other students. He had retained more memories than the others. “Come, let’s get to the autopsy room.”

Chen Ge had Zhang Ju lead the way, and the group found the autopsy room at the deepest part of the corridor.

"The lights are not on; there's no one in." Zhu Long peered into the room by leaning on the window. With the light shining in from the corridor, he could only see a single, cold operating table. However, just from the sight of that, his body appeared to shiver from an involuntary reaction.

"Mr. Bai, do we really need to go in there?" Zhou Tu was feeling uneasy. "If we don't return now, the bathroom is going to run out of hot water."

"Wait a minute!" It was not Chen Ge who spoke but Zhu Long who leaned on the door. "Since we're here, why don't we go in to take a look?"

"The door is locked, are you suggesting we go find the manager? And tell him what? Please let us into the autopsy room because we're investigating supernatural events at the school?" Zhou Tu regretted joining this club; none of the members appeared to be normal. He bit on his tongue hard. Actually, ever since he arrived at the school, anxiety had been following him. He kept having this recurring dream, and that was enough torture for the young man.

He pretended to be calm before others, putting on a brave front, but actually, he was already at the brink of a breakdown. "Strange school but an even stranger club."

"There's no need to trouble the manager; I have the key," Chen Ge said as he pulled out a ring of keys from his pocket. "I have much greater access than you might previously have thought."

The members did not expect Chen Ge to have so many keys. They were very surprised, so surprised that none noticed that the numbers pasted on the keys were different from the ones at western campus, and some of them were even stained with blood.

Chen Ge stood facing away from the students and used his body to block the door. The keys rattled noisily in one hand while his other hand searched for the scalpel and iron thread that he had found in the toolroom. From the beginning, he had never planned to use the keys to open the door. Due to his occupation, he had encountered many locks and been to many schools, so he had some confidence in his lockpicking skills. After one minute, Chen Ge's forehead was sweating.

"Mr. Bai, have you forgotten which key opens this door?" Zhang Ju and Zhu Long crowded over. Chen Ge had not expected the lock to be so tough to pick. He swiftly and quietly put the scalpel and iron thread away. Before the members got too near, he pushed a large key into the keyhole.

“Someone has blocked this keyhole. I’ll force it open now, and tomorrow, I’ll get someone to come fix it.” Chen Ge signaled for the members to get back. He looked around for signs of cameras. They were still quite close to the stairs.

“Find someone to fix it later?” The members were still quite confused when they saw Chen Ge landed a powerful kick on the door.

Bang!

The lock that had been tampered with could not withstand such a heavy blow, and it swung open from the kick.

“Zhou Tu, you wait outside with Xiao Wang. If anyone comes, just tell them you’re a student here and you just came because you heard the loud noise,” Chen Ge said and then led Zhang Ju and Zhu Long into the autopsy room.

“Sir, are you sparing us the responsibility in case we’re caught?” Wang Yicheng was quite touched. The man before him did not look that special, but his little and insignificant gestures would often touch others.

“It’s more like that he wants us to be his lookouts. Is that something a teacher should do?” Zhou Tu held Wang Yicheng while looking at the broken door.

The autopsy room there was only half the size of Jiujiang Medical University’s one, but it had all the necessary equipment. In fact, it looked just like a smaller copy of the autopsy room at the university.

The underground morgue is at Jiujiang Medical University, and that university is one of the pre quests for the School of the Afterlife.

Chen Ge was considering the connection between the two quests. He was only thinking about it for a minute, but when he turned back, he noticed that his two members were acting strangely. Zhu Long stood next to the operating table, and he was caressing it like he was touching the skin of his lover. His gaze seemed distant as he glanced at the cold metallic table. Zhang Ju, though, stood next to the window. He pulled back the curtain and stared dumbly at the mirror frame hidden behind the curtain.

“Why would there be a mirror frame here?” In the maintenance room in the eastern campus’ staff dormitory, Chen Ge had encountered several mirrors dyed red with blood. He had noticed that mirrors seemed to have a special meaning at this school. “Why isn’t there a mirror in the frame?”

“Mirrors are not allowed inside the autopsy room, so the mirror has probably been taken away.” The statement slipped out of Zhang Ju’s lips.

“Then how did you know there is a mirror frame hidden here?”

“I... have no idea.” Zhang Ju scratched his head, and his voice became louder. “I really don’t know. How did I know? I just... opened the curtain, and there it was.”

“Hmm, I believe you.” Chen Ge grabbed hold of Zhang Ju lightly. “It’s going to be fine.”

Half of Zhang Ju’s face was covered with scars. When he was agitated, his expression was very scary, but Chen Ge did not let him go. He felt a different emotion from this panicking young man—guilt. Zhang Ju’s frightening expression belied a heart that was shivering in fear.

Chen Ge had no idea what had happened to the young man, but he knew that the lock to the young man’s memory was slowly crumbling due to this mirror frame that he had found.

“Based on the color and style of the frame, the owner of the mirror was probably a girl.” Many clues were slowly being stitched together in Chen Ge’s mind. He was reminded of the story that Zhang Ju had told; the young man appeared to have been the witness of a horrifying murder.

Chapter 801 - Let Me Go!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

There was a detail that stuck out in the story told by Zhang Ju. A girl had confessed to her senior on his birthday but ended up being rejected. After that, the senior had joined his roommates to celebrate his birthday at the karaoke. When Chen Ge first met Zhang Ju, the latter had once said that his face had been scarred at a fire that started at a karaoke center. Initially, Chen Ge did not tie the two together, but now, Zhang Ju was acting too abnormally, so this thought surfaced in his mind.

All the club members' memories during the summer holiday were blurry; in other words, someone had tampered with that period of their memories, and thus, what they recalled could not be trusted fully. Zhang Ju was very familiar with the school and knew the details between the senior and the girl very well. Other than that, his face had been injured in a fire at the karaoke center, which matched the story of the senior a bit too perfectly.

After connecting all the dots, several possibilities occurred to Chen Ge. First, Zhang Ju was that senior; he killed the girl in cold blood and was a crazed murderer who was good at deceit. Second, Zhang Ju was the senior; the girl had met her demise while she was waiting for him, and he happened to witness the murder. However, due to fear, trauma, or some other reason, he did not stop the killer and was wrought by guilt because of it. Third, Zhang Ju was just an outsider or the senior's friend; he accidentally witnessed the senior kill the girl, but due to some reason, he did not expose the senior.

These filled up Chen Ge's mind in several seconds. Despair, hatred, and 'people' who give off negative emotions are sent to the eastern campus, so Zhang Ju shouldn't be the killer.

The killer not only murdered the girl but also used a very cruel method to do so. People like that would not be troubled by guilt.

"Sir, can I take this frame with me?"

“Does this frame mean something special to you?” Chen Ge asked probingly as he narrowed his eyes. “After all, this belongs to the autopsy room. If you take it with you, I will have to say something to the staff responsible for looking after this place.”

“I can’t tell why—this is the first time I’ve seen this mirror—but after entering the room, I headed to the curtain directly like I knew that this frame would be hiding behind it.” Zhang Ju’s face was eerie looking, but his expression was rather cute. From Chen Ge’s perspective, a young man like that could not be the killer.

“Okay, you have to promise me that you won’t break or lose this frame.”

“Of course!” Zhang Ju nodded sincerely. Before Chen Ge, he was only a child who had just finished high school.

Holding the frame tightly with both hands, there was a certain emotion in Zhang Ju’s eyes. This occurred so unconsciously that the young man himself probably did not notice it.

Bang!

When Chen Ge was talking with Zhang Ju, a loud crash suddenly came from the front of the room. Chen Ge turned to see that Zhu Long had just turned the entire metallic operating table over. He was not a medical student, so he did not know that the operating table could be adjusted with a dial by the side. Instead, the young man used brute force to turn the table around.

“What are doing? You’ll need to pay if you break school property.” Chen Ge walked toward Zhu Long. The latter was bent over the side of the table and had poked his head under the table.

“Zhu Long?” This devious-looking student did not reply, but his shoulders were shivering.

“Are you alright?” Chen Ge grabbed Zhu Long’s shoulders, and then the latter slowly turned around. His facial muscles were twitching, and two streaks of tears trailed down his face. His eyes were filled with panic and fear like he had just seen a ghost.

Chen Ge pressed on his shoulders firmly and glanced at the operating table. Zhu Long’s name had been carved by someone on the back of the table.

“Why would my name appear on the back of this table?” Zhu Long’s voice was shaking, and his body shook harder.

“I also wish to know why.” Chen Ge bent down to use his fingers to touch the carved name. “Just how much must the person have hated you to carve your name into the table so deeply?”

“I do not know anyone at this school! Why would they carve my name here?” Zhu Long kicked the table harshly, and the echo was booming. Chen Ge ignored him and took out Lin Sisi’s phone to take a picture. His fingers touched the names that were carved repeatedly under the table before stopping at the bottom left corner. There was a sentence carved there. ‘I’ve come to find you. You promised that once we became students at this school, you would be with me forever!’

Zhu Long’s story was real? Seeing the sentence, Chen Ge shook his head. Zhu Long doesn’t look like someone who is calculative and cunning. A lot of hoops have to be jumped through to have one’s body donated to medical school. Most importantly, the university normally doesn’t take in bodies of suicide victims.

“Stop panicking. Take a breath and find the seating chart and duty roster for this autopsy room. One would need plenty of time to carve so much underneath a table. So, the culprit should be the one who normally occupies this table.” Chen Ge quickly calmed down. He and Zhang Ju started to look around while Zhu Long stood where he was as if frozen.

After a long time, he wiped away the tears from his face and used a very slow tone to say, “There’s no need to look; I am familiar with this handwriting. It... should have been carved by my hands.”

“You carved that?” Zhang Ju had initially been immersed in his own story, but once he heard Zhu Long say that, he snapped pout of it, and fear started to cloud his heart. “Zhu Long, what do you mean by that? Now’s no time to joke!”

“I cannot remember when I did this, but I know that these words were carved by my own two hands!” Zhu Long bashed his head heavily like he was literally trying to knock some sense into himself.

“It’s fine if you don’t remember it. Do you still remember what I said earlier? No one who has been selected by me to join this club is normal. I will help you remember everything.” Chen Ge took out the scalpel that he had used to gouge the door lock earlier from his bag. “Do not be influenced by these carvings. Why don’t you try and carve your name now? Perhaps it's not what you think."

Zhu Long accepted the scalpel. With shaking hands, he carved his name on the back of the table. The sound of metal scratching against metal was amplified in the quiet night. Zhu Long stopped after he finished carving the word 'Zhu'. The Zhu was one hundred percent identical to the other 'Zhu's that covered the back of the table.

The carvings on the back of the operating table were done by him!

Ding!

The scalpel fell to the ground. Zhu Long suddenly grabbed his head as he rammed it against the table. Green veins burst on his face.

"Grab hold of him!"

Chen Ge and Zhang Ju grabbed Zhu Long by his four limbs. The latter struggled greatly. The documents inside the first operating table dropped to the ground.

"Sir, what came over him?"

"We're creating too much noise. We need to leave this place!" Chen Ge grabbed Zhu Long. As he prepared to leave, he noticed an old-fashioned mobile phone with a pink shell amid the documents.

Chen Ge used one hand to grab the phone and throw it inside his bag, but in that moment, Zhu Long managed to struggle loose.

He threw his head against the table and yelled, "Let me go! Let me go!"

“What is going on in here?” Zhou Tu and Wang Yicheng, who had been guarding the door, burst into the autopsy room when they heard the commotion. Once they got in, they saw Zhu Long, who seemed to be possessed.

“Come and help!” With Zhang Ju’s help, Chen Ge pressed Zhu Long to the ground. The young man was young, but he was quite powerful. He seemed to be in a lot of pain, and he resisted with all his might. They were being too loud, and the building manager would arrive soon enough.

“We will leave via the cargo lift and bring him to the medic room.” Chen Ge had the limping Wang Yicheng lead the way while he, Zhou Tu, and Zhang Ju suppressed Zhu Long as they headed toward the lift.

“Sir, what happened to Zhu Long for him to become like this? Is there something wrong with him mentally?” Zhou Tu’s reluctance to part way intensified. He felt uneasy being in their company.

“Move faster, don’t let anyone see us.” When Zhang Ju said that, his expression was strange. He had no idea why he would say something like that; it was as if something had triggered in his subconscious, something that he was fearful of. After leaving the autopsy room, Chen Ge clamped his hand over Zhu Long’s mouth, and the group forced the young man into the cargo lift. At the same time, he heard rushing footsteps in the corridor. Someone was running up the stairs. He hit the button for the lift. Thankfully, no one was using the lift then, and the lift was still waiting on their floor.

“Quick! Get in!” The doors slowly closed as the footsteps approached. When the number on the panel changed, the footsteps stopped. The other party appeared to have stopped at the top of the stairs.

“Sir, weren’t you guys checking for supernatural phenomenon? Why did Zhu Long suddenly go crazy? Did he get possessed?” Zhou Tu and Zhang Ju pressed Zhu Long against the lift's inner wall. The two's youngish faces still registered traces of fear.

"I also don't know what happened. The child has yet to tell us his full story." The lift slowly descended. Chen Ge took out the pink phone from his bag. The phone had originally been placed inside the operating table. When Zhu Long knocked the table over, the phone had fallen alongside the documents.

It's a girl's phone.

Chen Ge switched the phone on. The phone vibrated and opened normally.

The phone is fully charged. Either someone will come and charge this phone daily, or this is a sign that this place is forever frozen at a particular moment in time inside someone's memory.

There was no password, and the screensaver was that of a sweet-looking girl. She was of small stature and had that ability to arouse other people's need to protect her.

"Contact list, messages, history..." Chen Ge scanned through the content, but his attention was gradually captured by it. In contrast to the girl's sweet appearance, she seemed to possess a horrendous personality. She retained a sweet appearance, but the girl's phone was filled with many pictures of autopsied animals.

This is madness.

Cameras were not allowed inside the autopsy room, so obviously, the girl had violated the school rules. Looking through the photo album was a strange experience. The cute pretty selfies contrasted greatly with the macabre pictures of animal carcasses.

Appearances can be deceiving...

Chen Ge turned to glance at Zhu Long. Honestly, it did cross Chen Ge's mind that Zhu Long might have harmed the girl, but after looking through the phone, Chen Ge realized that might not be the case.

When Zhu Long saw those carvings, he kept screaming, "Let me go." There was no guilt or remorse in his voice. Instead, there was plenty of fear, so his fear of this girl should be authentic.

Zhu Long was 1.83 meters tall, even though he as on the lanky side, the young man packed a punch. Why would a person like that be afraid of a sweet-looking little girl?

Ding!

The lift arrived at the first floor, and Chen Ge noticed that scent against. It seemed to come from the corner of the elevator.

“Come, let’s leave this building for now.” Chen Ge waited for the other students to leave before stepping out of the elevator. He sniffed at the corner of his shirt, and a scant scent of decay reached his nose.

The smell inside the elevator has stuck onto me? Perhaps this work outfit has been worn by a ghost before, and the smell has seeped into the outfit.

Chen Ge took one last glance into the lift, and his eyes caught the words on the doors—‘Access only allowed for cargo, not for normal use.’

There’s a cargo lift in the eastern campus’ lab building as well. What kind of cargo are they being used to transport? Why would this strange smell be left behind?

Chen Ge had an answer in his heart, but he could not yet confirm it. Walking out of the building and as the wind outside caressed their faces, Zhu Long finally calmed down somewhat. He stopped bashing his head, but like a scared kitten, he refused to meet their eyes and wished to curl into a ball.

“Zhu Long, don’t be afraid. I’m here now, so no one can hurt you.” Chen Ge tried to console Zhu Long, but the latter’s emotions were very unstable. The way he looked at Chen Ge aroused a sense of pity. “There’s no need to panic.”

After a long time, Zhu Long somewhat returned to normal. His clothes were soaked by cold sweat. Standing alone in the shadows, he sucked in the fresh air greedily.

“Tell me, why did you start to scream earlier? Are you hiding something from us?” Chen Ge knew that the lab was not safe, so he led the students nearer to the isolated wall.

“I also don’t know why. My brain could not remember anything, but my body retained that instinct. I had to leave that room; I had to run away. It’s a hard to describe feeling. It’s like...” Zhu Long lifted his head to show his pale face. “It’s like I once died in that room.”

“You still cannot remember anything?” Chen Ge took out the pink phone. “I can help you jog your memory. If you remember anything, tell me instantly!”

“Okay.” Zhu Long looked at Chen Ge nervously.

“Do you know this girl?” Chen Ge opened the phone’s photo album and gave Zhu Long a glance of the picture inside. Zhu Long initially did not have any reaction, but after a while, he suddenly started to dry heave.

“What’s wrong with you? A cute girl like this is making you want to vomit?” Zhou Tu patted Zhu Long’s back lightly.

“When you’re done, answer my question. Do you know her?” Chen Ge asked in a stern voice. He was a bit different from before. Zhu Long’s face was as white as paper. It did not seem like he had any energy left to speak, so he just shook his head.

“You don’t know her? Then how come her phone is filled with the chat history between you and her? Even inside the contact list, there is only your name and phone number.” Chen Ge knew that this was the world behind the door, and most things were probably weaved from the victim’s dying memory like this mobile phone. The mobile’s real owner probably did not exist at this school, and the phone was probably created from Zhu Long’s memory. That would explain why the phone only contained content related to Zhu Long.

“You knew her and probably even killed her?” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes, and his lips curled into an angle.

“I didn’t kill her! It’s her...” Veins burst on Zhu Long’s face. He pressed down hard on his head and forced out those words between his clenched teeth. “She’s the killer! She’s the killer!”

Chapter 803 - Hope in Despair

Chapter 803: Hope in Despair

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Zhu Long was acting up again. His expression was severe, and his eyes were bloodshot, but strangely enough, other than blood streaks in Zhu Long's eyes, there were also tears. He looked like was in plenty of pain. The group worked together to drag Zhu Long to a more secluded place, but through this process, they still attracted some attention. Thankfully no one gave chase after them.

Zhu Long flipped over the operating table in the autopsy room, and this might cause the admin staff to come chase after us. Worse than that, Zhu Long carved another Zhu character on the back of the table, which might trigger the culprit in this school!

Chen Ge was very careful. Whether they were exposed or not, he would always plan for the worst.

On the surface, the western campus looks normal, but that is because there is 'something' here to maintain the rules and regulations and to transport the negative emotions to the eastern campus. When the staff see the additional 'zhu' on the back of the table, they will realize that there is a problem with one of the students.

They quickened their steps. Chen Ge was not betting on his adversary being an idiot; all he could do was leave the crime scene as soon as possible.

"Sir, let's hurry and get him to the medic room. He looks like he's seriously ill. Perhaps even before joining our club, this kid hid his real physical condition from the school. He might have a mental illness history!" Zhou Tu did not wish to stay with those strange people one moment longer. He planned to take Zhu Long to the medic room and then leave to find a guidance counsellor and ask to see if he could leave this club. If that did not work, he would sacrifice the credits. Compared to the additional credits, his life was more important.

"You think he has a mental illness?" In the midst of running away,

Chen Ge did not have time to act like a kind teacher anymore. Slightly turning his head, Chen Ge looked around. There was a smile on his face, but when Zhou Tu saw his smile, he felt the grip of a deepening chill. This Mr. Bai seemed to have two personalities; sometimes, he was very warm, but other times, he was hard to get close to.

“No, no, that is just my speculation. After all, you have to admit it is very abnormal for a normal person to scream something about a killer and being killed.” Zhou Tu nudged closer to Wang Yicheng.

“Zhou Tu, no matter from which perspective, you have no ground to judge him. From how I see it, you’re the one with the sickest illness of all the members.” Chen Ge paused after a while and added with a smile, “Of course, that’s excluding myself.”

“What are you talking about?” Zhou Tu was both afraid and angry at Chen Ge, and his tone was not as friendly as before.

“I know you won’t believe me now.” Chen Ge held Zhu Long and continued without raising his head. “But when I take you to the art club and you see the scene from your dreams, you might even be more affected than he is now.”

“Wh... what? Why?” Zhou Tu had a feeling that Chen Ge was not joking with him.

“Because Zhu Long is just one of the segments to his painting, but you’re the one with the paint brush.” Chen Ge had been working for several years already, and coupled with the trials given by the black phone, his experience was totally different from that of the children. Zhou Tu did not dare look Chen Ge in the eye. His right hand twitched slightly. His muscles were already starting to ‘remember’ some things. This kind of reaction would only occur in someone who had spent a long time painting.

Zhu Long hugged his head and yelled and heaved. His eyes were bulging out of their sockets, and tears streaming down his face.

“We’re still too in the open. Let’s get closer to the wall,” Chen Ge ordered Zhou Tu and Zhang Ju. The three of them worked together to control Zhu Long.

“Sir, are we sure we shouldn’t be taking him to the medic room?” Zhang Ju was worried as well. He looked at the calmness in Chen Ge’s eyes. He felt like Chen Ge was not thinking about saving Zhu Long; he was actually trying to find a quiet place to kill and bury the poor boy.

“The medic room is for those with sicknesses; he is not sick. He is merely taking back what belongs to him.” Chen Ge needed help from those who could give it to him without hesitation. “Any kind of recovery comes with a price. When he regains his memory, he will thank us.”

“I am worried that, before he finds his memory, he will first lose his life. After all, memories can be reforged, but there is only one life.” Zhang Ju very naturally said that memories could be reforged; it did not even cross his mind that it was a strange thing to say.

“There is only one life?” Chen Ge leaned closer to Zhang Ju and stared at his face. “Think back to that big fire and the things that happened at the hospital. Are you sure the only thing that the fire took away from you was your fair skin?”

Wang Yicheng was the first to join the club. Even though he also thought that Chen Ge was acting quite scarily, he insisted on the kindness of this ‘Mr. Bai’.

“We should listen to our teachers. I’ll come and help.”

The group moved a few dozen meters, and Zhu Long already felt more like himself. He gasped for air, but his gaze was sharper than before. “I’m fine now. I’m so sorry for the trouble I’ve caused.”

Zhang Ju and Zhou Tu let go, leaving Chen Ge the only one who was holding Zhu Long. His chest was rising frantically from his great gasps for air. Several deep gouges were left on his face, and his hands were covered with bloody scars.

“Have you remembered anything?” Chen Ge raised the pink phone. Whenever Zhu Long saw the girl’s face on the screensaver, his condition would worsen like he was losing his breath. “According to the chat history, you two love each other—at least, you believe that. Why would you act so frightened before your lover? What kind of girl is she? What did she do to you?”

With each of Chen Ge’s questions, Zhu Long’s face whitened further. If not for the support that Chen Ge gave him physically, he would have fallen already.

“I don’t know, I swear! I haven’t sent any of these messages; I have no memory of doing that at all!”

“Then, what memory do you have?” Chen Ge’s hand that was holding Zhu Long slowly tightened, and he looked around alertly.

“I can only remember her name is Gao Jie. The name suddenly popped up in my mind.”

“Looks like all that knocking wasn’t for naught. Congratulations, you’re one step closer to the truth.” Chen Ge’s hand landed on Zhu Long’s shoulders lightly as he tried to loosen the man’s taut nerves. “Are you feeling better?”

“Yes, thank you, sir. I can walk on my own now.” Zhu Long used his shirtsleeve to wipe his face.

“I mean, do you want to take a look at this phone yourself to regain more memories that you’ve lost?” Chen Ge wished to know how Zhu Long had ended up at the school. Only by knowing that would he have a chance to find the way out.

The school’s secret was hidden among the students’ missing memories. Even though those memories were filled with despair, there was no better idea because hope was hidden among them as well. Zhu Long did not reject Chen Ge. After remembering the girl’s name, he seemed to have gained some immunity against the content of the phone.

He looked at the phone with his both eyes. Zhu Long’s gaze wandered alternatively between the sweet loving messages and the pictures of grotesque gore. After a while, he started to dry heave again.

“When she was chatting with me, what kind emotion was she experiencing? Did she treat me as one of her projects from the very beginning? Was she admiring her work when she was sending these messages with me?”

Chapter 804: Kind Gaze

Terror of unknown origin came and swallowed Zhu Long. His body felt hollowed out as he slowly sank into a dark abyss. He felt deserted and trapped.

“Calm down!” Chen Ge shook Zhu Long’s shoulders with great strength, and finally, the latter’s dispersing gaze began to focus. “You’re getting better. This time, you didn’t faint or scream. So now, what else did you remember?”

...

“Nothing.” Zhu Long was slowly getting used to this. His tone of speech was already different from before. The youthfulness and naivete of youth was disappearing, and in its place was something else. The young man was slowly changing, and he himself did not even realize it.

“Looks like there’s not enough stimulus.” Certain things could not be pushed. Considering Zhu Long’s physical condition, Chen Ge did not pressure him further. “You should keep this pink phone; your memory is locked inside. Most of the content inside it is real, but you have merely forgotten all about it.”

“But I don’t even recognize the owner of this phone...”

“Then why would a girl’s name appear in your mind after you took a look at the content?” Zhu Long had no answer. For a normal person, this was very scary. Zhu Long gripped his head tightly. This feeling of something being on the tip of his tongue was driving him insane.

“Sir, since we now know the owner’s name is Gao Jie, why don’t you use your power to get the staff to help us find this girl? Seeing her in person will perhaps explain everything!”

“Are you sure that this girl by the name of Gao Jie also studies here?” Chen Ge looked at Zhu Long. There was pity in his eyes. The world behind the door was weaved from the victims’ despairing memories, but the person who caused their pain was not trapped behind the door. That was the ironic thing about this whole event. The victims were trapped behind the door, but the culprits kept on living in real life.

"If she is not a student here, then why would her phone appear in the autopsy room?" Zhu Long could not understand why Chen Ge did not understand such simple logic.

"Even if we manage to find her, what she tells us might not be the truth. You'll need to depend on yourself to regain the memory that you've lost." Chen Ge shoved the pink phone into Zhu Long's hand. "Keep this and use it to search for your lost memory. If you remember anything, tell me immediately."

"Mr. Bai, now that Zhu Long is fine, where are we supposed to go?" Zhu Long held the mirror frame that he had taken from the autopsy room and looked at Chen Ge with a glow in his eyes.

"It's about time we end the activity today, right? It's very late. If we linger outside any longer, we'll be locked out of the dormitory!" Zhou Tu sighed in relief when he saw that Zhu Long was more himself again.

"If you return to the dormitory now, you might forget everything that happened tonight. Of course, that is if you manage to survive to see the sun rise for another day." Chen Ge was definitely not speaking like a teacher should. Zhou Tu even started to be fearful of Chen Ge.

"What do you mean by that?"

"Just like how you cannot remember what happened during the summer holiday after your high school graduation, the few of us and the things that we have done tonight will disappear from your memory." Chen Ge looked around calmly. "Do you wish to forever relive this one day or place your trust in me? Together, we'll help find our own true selves."

"I'd rather the former." Zhou Tu did not want to take any risk. A recurring dream might be scary, but that was not as scary as spending more time with this strange, dangerous man.

"There is no hurry in answering. This world is slowly changing. Why don't you make a decision after Zhu Long regains more of his memory?" Chen Ge moved his gaze away from Zhou Tu to Zhang Ju. "You're a new student here, but you know surprising number of things.”

“Perhaps I’ve also lost some memories.” Zhang Ju attempted a smile, but as the muscles pulled on the scorched side of his face, it transformed into a rather ghastly expression. “This is such a coincidence. This school is so big, but the few of us who stand out happened to gather together.”

“It is indeed quite a coincidence.” Chen Ge did not sense any dangerous presence from Zhang Ju. “Later, you and Zhou Tu can follow me to the eastern campus. The memories that you’ve lost should be able to be found there.”

“The eastern campus? I’m not sure that’s such a good idea. When I first arrived at the school, the counsellor told us that entry to the eastern campus is strictly forbidden, and he also advised us against interacting with the students there.” Zhang Ju touched the wound on his face. “He also said that once there were students who attempted to trespass into the eastern campus, and they are there to this day as punishment.”

“That’s right. I got the same warning from a senior on my first day here. That place is only filled with trash from the western campus. Stay there for too long and the stench will stick to you, and you can’t ever return,” Wang Yicheng said cowardly. Of all the members, he was tiniest and looked the weakest. “The western campus is an enclosed campus while the eastern campus has interactions with the rest of society, and because of that, the situation there is more than a bit chaotic. Fights and brawls are an everyday occurrence, and there have been reports of serious cases happening there.”

“Looks like you have some misunderstanding about the eastern campus, but worry not, seeing is believing. Later, I’ll take you there to see the truth with your own eyes.” Chen Ge’s lips curled upward. Those students seemed to have the wrong idea about the eastern campus; the misadventures there were more serious than mere fights and brawls. It was a hellish location where ghosts and specters roamed. A careless move could make one lose one’s life.

“I also think that the counsellor was merely trying to scare us. Perhaps the students there are just slightly harder to educate.” Zhu Long’s face was the color of alabaster. He was holding Goa Jie’s pink phone. His eyes were wet, but they were still bloodshot.

“Bro, even in this state, are you standing at Mr. Bai’s side?” The way

Zhou Tu looked at Zhu Long like how one would look at a mental patient.

“You don’t understand that feeling. You cannot remember it even though you’re sure it has happened before. Mr. Bai has helped edge the door open a little, so of course, I am in his debt.”

“I don’t understand? Well, in that case, I’m not going to stick around to try to understand either.” Zhou Tu walked to Chen Ge. “Mr. Bai, I...”

“Haven’t you been meaning to go to the art club?” Chen Ge asked with a smile. “I can take you there.”

“Really?” There was an obvious change in Zhou Tu’s tone. “Thank you, sir!”

“Don’t thank me too soon. Do you know where the art club is situated?” Chen Ge leaned closer to Zhou Tu.

“Where?” Zhou Tu had a very bad feeling forming.

“The lab building in the eastern campus. The scenery from your dream can all be found in the eastern campus. Now, would you go there with me to take a look?” Chen Ge’s question was like that of a demon. It caused Zhou Tu’s hair to stand upright.

“I can tell you assuredly that your dream is real. Your unique condition is probably due to the fact that your forgotten memories are, in essence, different from those of the other kids. They are related to the foundation of this school, so that is why this is happening to you.” Chen Ge leaned closer. “Well? Would you like to go? The truth is on the other side of this wall!”

“It’s in the eastern campus?” Zhou Tu was obviously hesitant. He had received warnings from both the school and the seniors to stay away from the eastern campus, but they did not give a specific reason. However, from their tone, he could tell that the eastern campus was a very dangerous place.

“You guys have a deep misunderstanding about the eastern campus. It is actually not that different from here, but there are two different administrative styles to the management. The people there live in actual terror, but you guys live in a fake happiness.” Chen Ge looked into Zhou Tu’s eyes. “Compared to you lot, they are actually closer to hope because at least they know who they are and know how to achieve salvation.”

Chen Ge did not lie to Zhou Tu; be it the students from eastern or western campus, they were both trapped in the school. The students of the western campus had their memories altered and kept repeated the life created by the culprit; the students of the eastern campus at least knew how to look for a scapegoat to try and find a way to escape.

“The students from the eastern campus are closer to hope? But I heard only trash that are not wanted by the western campus are sent to the eastern campus.” Zhou Tu was slowly persuaded, but he still felt quite unsettled by the whole idea.

“No matter the standard use, any school that treats their students as trash has to be a trashy school itself, wouldn’t you agree?” Chen Ge reached out to point at the tall wall separating the two campuses. “Do you know the purpose of this wall?”

“What is it?”

“It’s because the school is afraid of the worlds going out of control. They utilized various methods to reconstruct societal order, but humanity is the most complicated thing in the world. No matter how they try to alter the memory, once something happens, the scar that has been left behind will forever be seared on the heart. Not remembering anything doesn't mean that it has not happened, so the school's plan is destined to fail from the beginning." Chen Ge kept saying things that the members failed to understand. They had no idea why Chen Ge would say these things, but they found themselves agreeing with him.

Those young men were naturally curious. Chen Ge kept telling them the truth about this school, and he finally managed to arouse their interest.

"So, are we going over there now? Honestly, I still have a hard time believing that the art room in my dream really exists within the eastern campus," Zhou Tu whispered cynically.

"Now is not the time." Chen Ge turned to glance at this shadow. The shadow from Room 413 was still alive, but its body had changed. If one looked closer, one would realize how Chen Ge's shadow was different from others. It was dark as ink like it was capable of swallowing the light. It seemed to have grown stronger. The potential of the shadow was a trump card for Chen Ge. After it had woken up, he would lead the students to the eastern campus and go after abandoned Specters. That way, he could not only improve his own power, he could muddy the waters at the school to provide some distraction for the other 'killer'.

Now is the time to gather strength. Before the culprit notices a small bug like myself, I need to gather as much strength as I can.

Chen Ge turned to look at Wang Yicheng. He knew a thing or two about the other members' stories, but he knew the least about this limping boy who had been the first member to join his club. "The next location we're going is Wang Yicheng's dormitory bedroom."

"My bedroom?" After hearing that, Wang Yicheng gave a strange reaction. He quickly shook his hands. "I don't think that's a good idea. There's nothing worth seeing in my bedroom."

"When you said that, your tone was higher than normal, and you also spoke faster. Other than that, your eyes were fluttering. You are really bad at lying." Chen Ge touched Wang Yicheng's shoulder lightly. "Why won't you let us go there? What are you worried about us seeing?"

"I..." Wang Yicheng thought about it for a long time but could not come up with an excuse. Finally, he turned his head away. “It’s nothing. In that case, let’s go now.”

“Sure.”

Wang Yicheng lived in Room 413 of the western campus while Lin Sisi stayed at Room 413 of the eastern campus. The numbering of the room was similar, but in Room 413 of the western campus, other than the fourth bed, the other beds were occupied. Conversely, on the eastern campus, it was the total opposite; only the fourth bed was occupied, and the others were empty.

“We should keep our club’s secret from other people. Try to keep a low profile. There are staff like myself at the school, but there are also other staff who might not share my views.” Chen Ge was on high alert. They had created too big a commotion at the lab building, so the school might have started an investigation already.

There’s not much time left for me. After checking Room 413, we should find a place to hide for a while.

There were four floors in total in the western campus’ male dormitory. The number of students was several times higher than the number on the eastern campus. It was not yet time for lights out, and the time they arrived was the most chaotic, lively time at the dormitory. The sound of washing, plastic basins falling, and chatting could be heard when they stood outside the building.

This building looks similar to the one on the eastern campus.

Chen Ge acted very normal as he entered the first building with the four students. The door to the manager’s room was closed, but the window was open. A middle-aged woman in her fifties was humming a ditty inside; she seemed to be in a good mood. There was a notice stuck next to the window. It spoke of various warnings like the using of high voltage electrical appliances and using a stove fire in the dormitory.

If I remember correctly, the notice on the board in the eastern campus’ dormitory read, ‘Due to the recent vicious crimes happening around campus, students are forbidden from leaving the dormitory after lights out.’

A wall separated two different walls, just like how it was inside and outside the door. Walking down the corridor, the group finally reached the door to Room 413.

“This dormitory is no different from other dormitories. I don’t understand why we’re here.” Wang Yicheng opened the door. Even when he walked into the room, his roommates treated him like an invisible person. They kept doing their thing, and no one even acknowledged his presence.

After Wang Yicheng took several steps into the room, the boy who had the bed closest to the door suddenly pulled off the cover to glare at him. “How many times I’ve told you this? Close the door after you enter. I know you’ve injured your leg, but have you injured your ears as well?”

The boy used a very harsh tone; it sounded like he hated Wang Yicheng for some reason.

“The reason he didn’t close the door is because someone else is coming in. If you want an apology, we can apologize on his behalf, but I wonder, what kind of apology do you require?” Chen Ge grabbed the doorknob and entered the room. He looked at the occupants. When the lad saw Chen Ge, his courage dissipated. With a growl, he pulled the cover back.

Chen Ge was very familiar with bed four because he had slept on it on the eastern campus.

Walking up to the bed, he noticed that even though no one used this bed, there were bed sheets and covers. They had been made dirty by the luggage and trash that was left there.

Chapter 806 - Zhang Ya's Side Story: Let's Get Married

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Dark clouds hung so low over the city that it felt like one could reach them by raising one's hands to the sky. Lee Man stood next to the window, watching the raindrops slide down the window, leaving their transient trails. The clock on the wall ticked as if in rhythm with the rain outside. Time was passing slowly inside the quiet room.

"5:30 pm, it's about to call it a day." Lee Man stretched lazily. She moved the plant on the windowsill back into the room and walked to her table. She took the plaque that declared the building to be the government's marriage registry office into the drawer. As if that was not clear enough, the large words on the wall read—Administrative Office for the Marriage License Registry.

"With the rain pouring, I doubt there's anyone coming." Lee Man hummed a ditty to herself as she started to clean. She was the only one left at the office; her colleague who took the table next to hers had already got off work fifteen minutes earlier.

"I'm sorry, but is this where you get marriage licenses registered?" The office door was pushed open, and a magnetic male voice came from the entrance. From the voice, Lee Man believed that it belonged to a handsome figure.

Lee Man lifted her head and saw a man wearing a black raincoat standing at the door. He looked rather normal, but there was an indescribable presence about him.

"Yes... Are... you here to get your marriage license?" Lee Man studied the man carefully. This was the first time that she had encountered someone who came to the office to register their marriage while wearing a raincoat and carrying a large, heavy backpack.

"Yes, I made my appointment online."

“Let me check. What’s your name, sir?”

“Chen Ge.”

Lee Man keyed the name into the computer, and out came the man’s appointment request. “I was just leaving work, so I hope you don’t mind if we go over this quickly. Have you brought all the necessary documents? The ID cards for both parties, and the paper proof that neither parties are blood-related across three generations.”

“I’ve got it all here.” The man opened the backpack and started to rummage through it. Lee Man thought that she heard a cat. Out of curiosity, she glanced into the man’s bag. The backpack was stuffed with a recorder, a comic, a doll, a ballpoint pen, and a furry, white cat.

“Here.” The man placed all the required documents on the table. “Everything should be here. I’ve met the girl’s family, and thankfully, they approve of me.”

“Looks like you came well prepared.” Lee Man registered the man’s information, and when she prepared to work on the woman’s information, she realized that the woman’s IC card could not be used. The computer was unable to read the card’s chip. She glanced at the name on the female’s IC card, and she noticed something strange. The man before her had come to apply for a marriage license. He had prepared everything and even brought a cat with him, but weirdly enough, his fiancé was nowhere to be seen.

“Yes.”

“Then, where is your girlfriend? How do you plan to get married alone?” Lee Man flashed an embarrassed smile. “Both parties have to be personally present to apply the license.”

The wall continued ticking, and the rain outside increased in intensity. The man bit on his lips and lifted his head to look at Lee Man. “She is here. She is just standing behind me.”

The platter of the raindrops appeared to intensify, and the air in the room seemed to freeze.

“Sir, please stop joking. Both parties have to be present to apply for a marriage license. If you insist on this, I'm afraid I can't help you." Lee Man held her hand over her chest. For some reason, she started to have trouble breathing.

"She is really here. We are inseparable. Wherever I am, there she'll be." The man's eyes were shining with clarity, and he claimed that with insistence. Seeing the seriousness on the man's face, Lee Man held the ID cards in her hands, and a possibility flashed in her mind.

Looking through the other documents, Lee Man found out that there was a death certificate for the man's fiancé. The time of death was several years ago.

"Sir..." Lee Man wanted to say something else, but seeing the sincerity and immovability on the man's face, she started to hesitate. She glanced at the man's backpack, and the objects inside peeked out at her.

Are those the things left behind by the girl? Do they represent the good memories and good times that they shared together? Perhaps the cat was the girl's pet when she was alive.

In that instant, Lee Man understood why the man would bring so many seemingly unrelated things to the office to register a marriage. The man's claim that his fiancée was always with him took on a different meaning.

With tears pricking her eyes, Lee Man held the girl's ID card. She did not know what to say, whether to offer words of consolation or reveal the horrible truth to him. Her lips slowly opened, but Lee Man could not make herself say those words. She looked at the man before her who was as innocent as a child, and her heart was twisted by a myriad of emotions.

She forced the smile to stay on her face. "Sir, you must have loved her dearly, right? How did you meet?"

"She was the one who started to pursue me. She sent me the first love letter that I have ever received in my life." The man's gaze took on a faraway look like he was going on a trip down memory lane. "Our first date was at an abandoned school."

"Abandoned school? Your first date was at such a unique location?"

"It was Western Jiujiang's Private Academy; the place means a lot to her. I stood inside the dance hall where she used to practice daily. We stood back to back, and she told me her life story.”

Lee Man listened quietly, and a romantic picture appeared in her mind. On a quiet, fateful night, a couple shared their memories inside an abandoned school. The school had once been crowded, but they were the only two left. Standing back to back, counting on each other for support, this could be the plot for a sad movie!

“The second date was at a mental asylum; she wore a fiery red dress. She took my breathing away, and her beauty shone like the sun.”

“Mental asylum?”

“Okay, I understand. I’m sorry.” Before the man could finish, Lee Man apologized. She did not have the habit of tearing into people’s sad pasts. Perhaps his parents were a second scar in the man’s heart.

“Our third date was in a skyscraper. I cornered the man who once hurt her inside an elevator and gave him a lesson he would never forget.”

“You sure love your girlfriend to have done so many things for her. I bet if she knew what you’ve done for her, she would be very happy.”

“Actually, she was just next to me at the time.” The man’s expression softened as he thought about the elevator covered with black hair in the Ghost Stories Society’s lair.

“It must have been very romantic and warm.” Lee Man’s impression of the man before her continued to improve.

“Our fourth date was in the underground morgue of a medical university. She hid the fact that she was injured from me. We sat quietly together, and she stole a cheeky hug from me.” The man’s voice was mellifluous. It was coarse with the maturity of age. As he talked about his past, Lee Man was so caught in the image that, in her mind, she pictured that she overlooked the strangeness of having an underground morgue as a date location.

“Our fifth date was on the roof of a building in a small town. That day was very similar to today; it was raining heavily, and I leaned against her.”

Compared to the previous locales, the location this time was so normal that it took Lee Man by surprise. “Did you confess to her that day?”

The man nodded lightly. “I was standing on the highest spot in the town and shouted out the words in my heart to the world. I do not think there is any promise more romantic than promising to be stuck together like a man and his shadow.”

“Wow.” Lee Man had heard many people’s stories before, but none were as shocking and interesting as Chen Ge’s. Perhaps because she had seen the death certificate, that knowledge colored her view of the story. “And then?”

“Then...” Chen Ge sucked in a light breath. “She went into a deep slumber, and it took her a long time to wake up. I stayed by her side, waiting for her return.”

The proof of death stuck into Lee Man’s heart at that moment like a steel needle, and her tears dropped without realizing it. Lowering her head, Lee Man pretended to look for some stuff. While the computer was hiding her face, she swiftly wiped her tears away. She already knew how the story was going to end. No one spoke in the office, and after a long time, it was the man who broke the silence. His hand fell on the seat next to him that was obviously empty. However, from the look on his face, it felt as if he was staring lovingly at his fiancé who was sitting right there. “Our sixth date...”

It was no longer important what the man said next. Lee Man already knew how the story would end. After the man’s fiancé passed away, he trapped himself inside a cage known as love. He deluded himself into believing the woman that he loved was still alive. Due to love, he refused to believe the fact that she was already gone. Her hands were pressed together until her fingers were white. Lee Man wanted to tell Chen Ge the truth, but she could not bring herself to burst his bubble.

She buried herself behind the computer and keyed in all the information on the related forms. She wished to help the man fulfil his dream, but when she pressed the enter button, the system told her there was an error. The girl had died several years prior, and there was no information on her in the people’s registry.

Reality poured a tub of cold water on Lee Man. She glanced at the man’s face that was still caught in his memory. She bit on her lips. “Sir, our server does not have the complete data; the system is currently updating. Unfortunately, I am not able to help you at the moment. Why don’t you come back in a week?”

Lee Man had a desperate wish to help the man; she was willing to go to the extent of going outside the law.

“Okay, thank you so much regardless.” The man stood up slowly. He packed up all of his stuff and prepared to leave. When he was at the door, he suddenly removed the raincoat and put it over his head as if there was another person standing next to him. “Zhang Ya, don’t stray too far away from me. The rain is getting heavier. Be careful.”

Lee Man saw everything clearly inside the office. Other than the man himself, there was no one else underneath the raincoat.

Watching the man walk away, Lee Man wiped the corner of her eyes. “Perhaps this is true love; everything starts and ends with you.”

Chapter 807 - The Possible 'Door'

Chapter 807: The Possible ‘Door’

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“There are so many things on the bed. If the occupant of bed four comes back later, where is he going to sleep?” Chen Ge sounded like he was talking to himself. “Do you expect him to sleep in someone else’s bed?”

Ever since he walked in, the students in Room 413 had kept subconsciously and consciously catching glances at him. After all, he was wearing the staff uniform; it was little wonder that he was catching some eyeballs.

“Are you one of the teachers?” the tall, thin student who sat on the bed across from bed four asked. He wore glasses with very thick lenses, and they gave his face a distorted look. “Bed four is unoccupied. We’re merely rationally using the space by placing our stuff there.”

“The bed is made with the covers and sheets, and you’re telling me it’s unoccupied?” Chen Ge looked at the student with a smile. “Most likely, it’s just that you cannot see him. Be careful when you sleep at night. Do not sleep on your side as you might turn around to find another person sleeping behind you.”

Chen Ge stood by bed four and moved all the luggage from the bed to the ground. “This is sad. You’re taking advantage of a ghost.”

“Hey! Don’t just touch our stuff like that!” The man under the cover poked his head out again.

“I’m trying to save you; this bed has an owner, and he has been roaming about this school.” Chen Ge had seen many things in Room 413 of the eastern campus, so he had high expectations for the same room on the western campus.

“You also know about the rumor of the fourth bed in Room 413?” The bespectacled man asked with a stern face. “But that is merely an excuse we use to scare Wang Yicheng. You don't seriously believe it, do you?"

"You'll know the answer to that soon enough."

After clearing away the bed, Chen Ge removed the bedsheet and pillow pillowcase to ensure that nothing was hiding there.

"You said bed four might be occupied, so why are you rummaging through his things like that?" The thin student pushed on his glasses. He did not seem to like Chen Ge, perhaps because Chen Ge took Wang Yicheng's side and that against their 'principle'.

"It's doesn't affect me. After all, I don't live here. If he's angered, you will be his first target." Chen Ge's way of speaking was different from how the students imagined how a teacher would speak. Of course, he was a fake teacher, so he did not care about the impression he was making. Pulling away the bedsheet and cover, Chen Ge turned his attention away from the students and focused on the bed frame. There were five fingerprints left on the edge of the bed that was closer to the wall.

"This wouldn't be one of your pranks, right?" Chen Ge used his fingers to dig at the print. He then sniffed at his finger; it was definitely dried blood. Why would there be blood on bed four?

"Sir, what is that?" Since the fingerprint was well hidden, this was the first time that Wang Yicheng had seen it.

"Dried red paint. I've studied painting before, and I'm familiar with this scent." Chen Ge turned to look at the other students inside the room. "This should be someone's idea of a prank."

He did not continue on this topic but took out Lin Sisi's phone to look under the bed. Similar to the room on the eastern campus, there was something written under the bed. It was a small handwriting, probably carved with a small knife.

"Why won't anyone talk to me?"

"Why do they ignore me?"

"I'm not lying to them! There really is a ghost! I truly saw a ghost inside the toilet!"

"This place is very dangerous! Why won't anyone believe me?"

Chen Ge read those words and thought that they feel very familiar. He read further and saw an even more familiar name.

“I, Lin Sisi, swear on my life that the toilet is really haunted! It’s real—they’ve been spying on me!”

“I know everyone hates me and wants to pull pranks on me. I don’t mind that. I understand. But the toilet is really haunted! I’m not lying this time!”

Each of the words was carved deeply, and some places were even stained with blood. The person had probably cut their finger accidentally when carving the words.

Were these left behind by Lin Sisi? But this is different from the description left in the ghost school’s diary!

Chen Ge promptly noticed the problem. The diary said that Lin Sisi was a very naughty prankster, and in the end, the other students could not stand him anymore and all ganged up to trick him to the toilet. They pranked him together but accidentally scared him to death. However, the words under the bed told a different story. Lin Sisi was not pranked to death by his classmates; he really saw something inside the toilet. Chen Ge’s eyes narrowed. He did not know what to believe.

The owner of bed four was Lin Sisi; that was undeniable. Be it the eastern campus or western campus, that was the case.

If this bedroom is a replica of everything in someone’s memory, then the words underneath the bed should be real. If Lin Sisi was scared to his death, how did he come back to carve these words?

At this point, Chen Ge was suddenly struck by a thought. He looked at everyone else in the room. In this room, only bed four was unoccupied, just like back then. Lin Sisi was scared to death and so bed four became unoccupied, but it also meant there were five other students remaining in Room 413. Lin Sisi knew that the toilet was really haunted, so after he died, he came back to warn the rest, but no one heeded his warning.

No wonder he carved these words. Of course, the living wouldn’t see it because he is now a ghost.

Chen Ge had no idea whether or not the five in the bedroom were the same five that shared the bedroom with Lin Sisi, but if they were not, then their luck could not have been worse.

On the eastern campus, every living person that joined the school would be called Lin Sisi. This name represented bad luck and a curse, and they would be targeted by all the Specters. However, from another perspective, the Specters needed a scapegoat to ‘graduate’. So, from their angle, Lin Sis, this name represented hope.

This is getting more and more interesting. The curse for a living human is the only hope in the Specters’ eyes. Just what did Lin Sisi do at this school to earn a dual identity like that?

Chen Ge could confirm that Lin Sis was heavily related to this school. Even if he was not the owner, he had to be related to the owner somehow.

If only I could find Lin Sisi, or the previous ‘Lin Sisi’.

As Chen Ge continued to look, the handwriting on the bed increased in intensity like the carver was being pushed further and further into despair.

“I really see the ghost. Can you people trust me just once?”

“Hear my voice, I am here. I am right here!”

“Fine, I don’t expect any of you to give me any trust anymore. I only pray that none of you go to the toilet on the top floor of the education block! Remember! Do not go there no matter what!”

The message under the bed stopped there. Chen Ge could feel the person’s despair from the carved words.

The toilet at the top of the education block? That is where Lin Sisi’s story ends?

Chen Ge stood where he was quietly as his brain spun. The School of the Afterlife was the largest, most complicated, and most difficult mission that he had attempted. The clues and questions that he had found were all tangled together, forming a thick fog that blocked his way. To clear them once and for all was an impossible task; Chen Ge could only detangle it little by little.

A door would not just appear for no reason—there has to be a door-pusher. Assuming that person is Lin Sisi, the door that he pushed open is most likely in the toilet on the top floor of the education block!

Chen Ge's eyes glowed from finding a crucial clue. The School of the Afterlife is a four-star mission, one I haven't encountered before, so all the previous experience I've gained is useless here. To learn more, I will have to go and investigate myself.

Chen Ge wondered just how intense one's hatred must be to be able to create such a large living nightmare; this was beyond the scale for even the combined power of both Doctor Gao and Zhang Ya.

Perhaps there is a door in the toilet, and when the students were pranking Lin Sisi, they accidentally opened the door.

Chen Ge's own Haunted House had a door. Until now, he had not dared to get any closer, so he predicted Lin Sisi might have been caught in the same situation. But while he had managed to avoid the door, Lin Sisi had opened the door.

No matter what the truth is, I have to go take a look at the toilet on the top floor of the education block!

The words did not specify whether the toilet was in the education block situated on the eastern campus or western campus. For the sake of being thorough, Chen Ge decided to check both places.

"Let's leave for now. I need you all to follow me to the lab building." Chen Ge had gathered enough information from underneath the bed. Staying in Room 413 served no more purpose. In fact, it might only arouse the other students' and staff's suspicion.

"The lab building? But haven't we just..." Wang Yicheng wanted to say something but was interrupted by Zhang Ju, who pulled on Wang Yicheng's shirt sleeves lightly. "Just listen to the teacher. We'll go wherever he wants."

Going to the lab was a smokescreen dropped by Chen Ge. The students in Room 413 had a negative attitude toward them, so once they left the room, Chen Ge would not put it past them to go and report Chen Ge's group to the staff.

"It's about time for lights out. We'll hurry back after getting the stuff we need." Chen Ge rearranged the bed and led the few club members out of Room 413. Along the way, they avoided arousing any other people's attention. After they left the male dormitory, Chen Ge saw many people hurrying toward the lab building like something serious had occurred.

"Zhu Long merely knocked the operating table over; that can be handled by the staff on duty. So, why are there so many people involved?" Chen Ge was very curious about the activity at the lab building, but he quickly stifled his curiosity. If he went there, it would be like walking into a trap, so the best choice was to avoid them for now.

"Sir, are we really going to the lab building? We just came from over there."

"No, we're going to education block one. We need to move quickly; we need to finish the investigation before we tip off the school." Chen Ge kept changing their movement. This way, it would ensure that if someone was on their tail, they would be puzzled and confused. The group ran in the direction opposite of the lab. As time passed, the campus was getting more and more deserted.

"Have any of you heard of a toilet-related ghost story?" Chen Ge asked while they moved. "Have any of you been to the toilet on the top floor of the education block?"

"No." The few students shook their heads.

"This school looks normal on the surface, but dangerous threats are hidden everywhere. When we get there, be sure to listen to my orders." Chen Ge took them on a detour around the campus to reach the education block. The education block was very imposing. There were three buildings in total, and they were all four stories tall.

The school apparently likes the number four a lot.

At this time, the education block was devoid of students. The classrooms were shrouded in darkness, and only the corridors had the lights on.

“This is my first time coming here so late in the day. I didn’t notice it in the morning, but this place is quite scary at night.” Wang Yicheng walked the slowest. Once they got close to the education block, his expression turned unnatural, like his body had a natural reluctance to come here. This change in the young man attracted Chen Ge’s attention. This limping boy had possibly experienced something here in the past.

“Follow me closely. We are heading directly to the top floor. No matter what you see in the classrooms, do not go toward them.” Chen Ge scanned the surroundings before entering the place. Each building had two staircases leading up and down, and the toilet was adjacent to the left staircase.

“Are we really going there?” Zhou Tu had trouble getting into Chen Ge’s headspace. The latter’s actions felt like there was a detailed plan behind it, but once Zhou Tu gave them a closer look, he realized that they were all without rhyme and reason. However, the man put on such a confident front that Zhou Tu wanted to crack Chen Ge’s head open to see the master plan that was brewing inside for himself.

“Try to keep up,” Zhang Ju reminded Zhou Tu kindly as he supported Wang Yicheng.

“Come on, this is a club activity.” Zhu Long’s eyes were bloodshot. Even though he was 1.8 meters tall, it did not feel out of place for him to carry a pink phone.

“I must have lost my mind to follow along this madness. Coming to the toilet to search for supernatural activity at night.” Zhou Tu walked into the corridor unwillingly. The group did not stop as they headed to the top floor. The education block was quiet at night; it was a direct contrast to when it was daytime.

“Me and Zhang Ju will go in first. Zhu Long will be our direct back-up. Zhou Tu and Wang Yicheng, the two of you guard outside.” Chen Ge grabbed the handle of the toilet door. He was about to push when someone grabbed his elbow.

“Sir, can we not go in?” Wang Yicheng was standing next to Chen Ge. His face was as white as sheet. Cold sweat slid down his face as his pupils darted about. “I just remembered something bad, and it happened right here!”

“What is it?” This was the first time that Chen Ge had seen such an expression on Wang Yicheng’s face.

“I could only remember snippets of it. It was something that I was forced to participate in. In the end, only I didn’t enter the toilet, so I was the only survivor. The rest who entered the toilet... all of them have died!” Wang Yicheng started to ramble on the verge of tears.

“Those who entered this toilet all died?” Chen Ge pressed on Wang Yicheng’s hand lightly. “You’re just a new student here. How would you know something like that?”

“I don’t know! I didn’t mean to do it! They were the one who forced me! Sir, we must leave now! Please do not open that door no matter what!” Wang Yicheng was in a pitiable state.

“I’m not going to give up now that we’ve reached this place.” Chen Ge let go of Wang Yicheng’s hand and pushed the toilet door open.

“No! Do not open that door!” With Wang Yicheng screaming, Chen Ge opened the toilet door and peered into the room. Plastic Halloween ghost masks littered the ground, and skulls and red handprints were left on the walls using paint. Entering the room would give one a feeling of being watched from all angles.

“So, this is how they pranked Lin Sisi.” Chen Ge picked up one of the masks. After making sure that it was not dangerous, he placed it inside his bag.

He slowly walked further into the room. When he passed the first cubicle, he took out Lin Sisi’s phone to snap several pictures. Everything was normal inside the toilet; there was nothing there that did not belong.

“Everything looks normal, but I keep have this feeling that something’s not right.” Chen Ge looked at the closed cubicle door. He reached out to push on it and realized that it would not budge.

“Is someone in there?” Chen Ge bent down to look through the bottom gap and saw a pair of black leather shoes sitting inside the cubicle.

“There’s someone inside the cubicle!” When he saw the black leather shoes, Chen Ge was instantly reminded of Mr. Bai from the eastern campus. The latter was wearing a pair of leather shoes just like that. “Stay back.”

Chen Ge took two steps back. He took out Lin Sisi’s phone, lowered it to the gap, and snapped a quick picture.

Lowering his head to look at the phone, the thing that Chen Ge worried about did not happen. There was only a pair of shoes inside the cubicle; there was no one wearing the shoes.

Lin Sisi’s phone can capture the image of ghosts and other unique entities. Since there is nothing on the picture, this can only mean that the shoes are the only thing inside the cubicle. But if the cubicle is unoccupied, why is the door locked from inside?

The cubicle door could only be locked from the inside, and the way the black leather shoes were placed indicated that someone was standing inside and not that someone had shoved them inside through the gap.

“Teacher, perhaps you were mistaken. Who would come to the toilet alone at an hour like this? Just the thought of it is scaring me.” The memory of Zhu Long was loosening. He was reminded of something, but it was still blurry; he could not make it out clearly. However, the influence on the young man was undeniable. Some barely discernible changes were happening to him like he started to maintain his distance from the other club members and would involuntarily stick close to Chen Ge like he believed that he was closer in nature to Chen Ge.

“Guard the way here. Inform me if anyone’s coming.” Chen Ge shook the door with brute force, trying to force it open. Many skull faces were painted inside the cramped cubicle. Standing inside would make one feel like one was being stared at by many people.

“Why would there be a pair of leather shoes here?” Chen Ge did not notice any strangeness inside the first cubicle. He came to the second cubicle. With his previous experience, he took out the phone and snapped a picture through the gap. The picture showed that there was also a pair of shoes placed inside the second cubicle. However, this time, it was not a pair of black leather shoes but a pair of old blue running shoes.

“The placement is the same. Is there a purpose to this?” Chen Ge looked through the first six cubicles. There was a pair of shoes placed inside every cubicle. They were all male shoes—sneakers, hiking boots, and flats of varying sizes. They appeared to belong to different people.

“The black leather shoes in the first cubicle reminded me of Mr. Bai; they should be for an adult. The other five pairs are mostly for students. Does this mean that each pair of shoes represents one specific individual? Lin Sisi was pranked by his whole class. Could these six shoes represent the people who had the biggest grudge against him?”

The difference between a Specter and living person was that they were built by negative emotions and hatred; understanding and kindness were not part of their make-up. No matter what Lin Sisi was like in real life, the moment he turned into a Specter, his heart would be consumed by hatred. That was the nature of Specters and spirit; it was the basis to support his survival. To trap those who had pranked him inside the cubicle to be his company, based on Chen Ge’s understanding of Specters, that was something one would have done.

“Sir! Someone is coming to the education block!” Zhou Tu held Wang Yicheng and screamed at Chen Ge from the entrance. “They seem to be coming from the labs!”

“They’re chasing after us?” Chen Ge moved quickly to the last cubicle. He subconsciously took out the phone to take a picture, but he realized with a shock that the door of the seventh cubicle had been taken off its hinges.

Where is the door?

Based on Chen Ge’s prediction, the door most related to Lin Sisi would most likely appear in the toilet, but he could not find it after searching the whole toilet.

Calm down, don't panic.

Chen Ge bit on his tongue lightly. He knew that the people would need some time to get up the stairs.

Each door corresponds to a door-pusher, so in other words, the door is the only...

His fingers touched the hinges, and Chen Ge realized how the hinges had been broken.

The door was forced open from inside!

He lowered his head to look at the interior of the cubicle. There were no shoes inside the seventh cubicle, only two bloody footprints. The footprints were placed one before the other like someone was walking out from the door.

If each shoe represents one person, does this mean that the person inside the last cubicle has escaped?

Chen Ge whipped his head around. Perhaps it was his imagination, but the skulls on the walls seemed to have come alive; their expressions had shifted.

The despair and negative emotions on the western campus have all been moved to the eastern campus, so the real blood door should be in the toilet at the top floor of the eastern campus' education block!

Before solving this problem, another had appeared. The veins on Chen Ge's forehead were close to bursting. He bit on his tongue to make himself more alert.

Take this step by step. At least I know that I'm getting closer to the truth.

"Sir! They're coming up the stairs! We'd better find a place to hide!" Zhou Tu was rushing through his words. He was weirdly panicking. "It doesn't seem like it was students or teachers who entered the block. They are walking with such strange gait!"

"They're walking strangely?" Chen Ge instantly realized that something was off. He waved for Zhang Ju and Zhu Long to get out of the toilet. "Which set of stairs are they taking?"

"The one closer to the toilet!"

"Okay! We'll run down the other stairs! Remember, do not let yourself be discovered by them!” Chen Ge did not plan to go against the enemy for now. They ran down the corridor, but when Chen Ge passed Wang Yicheng, he suddenly stopped.

His gaze narrowed as they fell on Wang Yicheng’s shoes.

Blue running shoes?

Wang Yicheng was wearing the same kind of shoes as the ones found inside the second cubicle!

The shoes in the cubicles are all male shoes...

Chen Ge thought back to the discovery, and he suddenly realized that the shoes in the toilet matched the shoes worn by the students inside Room 413 perfectly.

Room 413 has six students, but the toilet has seven cubicles. The six students should correspond to the six cubicles, and the last cubicle with the black leather shoes should represent the teacher; that is seven people in total. Chen Ge frowned. Why would Lin Sisi hate his own roommates so much? Didn't he purposely return to his bedroom to warn his roommates against going to this toilet?

Chen Ge rubbed his temples. There were too many questions to answer.

The eastern campus is unregulated while western campus is like a memory capsule where time is frozen within these several days of the new students' welcoming ceremony. To get to the truth, I'll have to compare the two campuses more closely!

The western campus is too perfect, so perfect that it feels unreal, like a child's dream. In comparison, the eastern campus is more realistic.

Chen Ge's eyes moved away from Wang Yicheng's shoes. He had already decided to take everyone to the eastern campus.

Now I have no other choice. I can only continue to search for the memory in the dream and find the truth in the reality.

The people that came from the lab had already entered the corridor. They seemed to have a specific goal in mind because they headed directly to the top floor without stopping at all.

“Quick!” Chen Ge carried Wang Yicheng on his back as the group rushed down the corridor to the other end. They hid inside the staircase, holding their breath.

“Sir, why are we stopping?”

“Keep an eye on the third floor; I’ll keep watching the fourth floor’s corridor. After they’ve all got up to the fourth floor, we’ll start going down.” Chen Ge was employing a very risky plan. He stood at the end of the corridor and looked down the long stretch using his Yin Yang Vision.

“But...”

“Just do as I say.” Chen Ge stayed at the mouth of the fourth-floor staircase alone, looking down the left side of the corridor. After about ten seconds, he could clearly hear footsteps echoing down the other end. Then, a few people in white outfits appeared on the fourth floor.

Why are they dressed so strangely? The whole outfit including the shoes are white.

Three people showed up in the corridor in total. Other than the white outfits, there was something else strange about them; their faces were all covered in scars. Not just one or two scars, but like Zhang Ju, a large portion of their faces were scorched.

Are they the school’s admin staff? Chen Ge watched them enter the toilet and led the other students to run downstairs, perfectly avoiding their pursuers.

“Sir, where are we going next?”

“We’ll find a chance to go the eastern campus?” Chen Ge said in a hurry. The people in the white clothes gave him plenty of pressure.

“No, but why are we acting so nervously? You’re making it look like we’re doing something illicit.” Zhou Tu looked at Chen Ge and the other members who were acting nervously, and he was rather speechless. “We’re students here, and Mr. Bai is a member of staff. Even if we are discovered, I’m sure we can explain our way out of it. At most, we’ll just compensate them for the broken operating table in the autopsy room. I doubt it’ll cost that much.”

“Do you really think that’s all the punishment we’ll received once we’re captured?” Chen Ge stared into Zhou Tu’s eyes. The latter moved his head away, afraid to meet Chen Ge’s gaze.

“You’ll understand everything once we reach the eastern campus.” Chen Ge led the students away from the education block. Using the isolated path, they slowly found their way to the sports equipment room close to the education block.

“Sir, aren’t we going to the eastern campus? Why are we here?”

“To find some tools. Wang Yicheng, Zhou Tu, the two of you will be on the lookout. The rest of you, come in here with me. Look for things like ropes, and bring all of them with you.” Chen Ge pried open the room’s door and located some skipping ropes.

“Sir, those people seem to be heading our way!” Zhou Tu’s voice came from outside the door. He saw several white shadows rush out from the education block heading their way.

“Huh? How do they know we’re here? It’s not surprising for them to go to the toilet at the top floor of the education block, but how did they know for sure we’re in the sports equipment room?”

A bad feeling rose within Chen Ge. He pulled on the bag’s zipper, but it couldn’t close because it was too full, so he had to carry some of the things in his arms.

“The sport equipment room is very big; it’ll take them some time to search through it. We’ll retreat now.” Chen Ge carried the bag with one hand and waved at Wang Yicheng. “Come, I’ll carry you on my back.”

Chen Ge was offering that out of kindness, but he was rejected by Wang Yicheng. The latter shook his head, his eyes bulging with fear like a child trapped in a nightmare. "Sir, I'm very afraid. I hear someone calling my name. Those people are here for me. I can hear their voices!"

"You can hear someone calling your name? When did that start?" Chen Ge did not give Wang Yicheng the chance to resist. They were pushed for time, so he forcibly pulled Wang Yicheng onto his back. "We'll talk while we move."

"Sir, those people are here for me! If you bring me with you, you'll only get dragged into it!" Wang Yicheng's face was twitching as his body shook.

"Stop this nonsense; you're my student. Just answer my question." Chen Ge quickened his steps, but he was curious about what Wang Yicheng had said.

"When you guys brought me to the education block's top floor, a bad feeling overwhelmed me. I felt like crying for some reason. The corridor felt too familiar, like something bad had happened there before." Wang Yicheng's eyes were puffy and red like a hooked fish. He had trouble breathing.

"Aren't you a new student? How could that corridor be familiar to you?"

"I have no idea. Sometimes, when we go to a new place, it feels like we've been there before. That is what I'm feeling now." Wang Yicheng's answer came intermittently. His face was frighteningly white.

"What about the voices? Did they appear suddenly? What are they telling you?" Chen Ge asked softly.

"When I saw the corridor, I started to feel uncomfortable. When I reached the door, an image flashed through my mind." Wang Yicheng took in a deep breath and continued after a long pause. "It feels as if I've been to that toilet a long time ago. I was tasked with leading someone important into the toilet. His thin body was standing inside the toilet, and the toilet was filled with various monsters! It was because of that short memory that I tried to stop you entering the toilet!"

"Wait a minute!" Chen Ge very astutely noticed a detail in Wang

Yicheng's words. "You were tasked with leading a very important people into the toilet?"

"Yes, that person, if I remember correctly, should be my best friend. I know that because there are not many who are willing to be my friend; he was the only exception." Wang Yicheng bashed on his head heavily. His memory was starting to loosen as well. "When we reached the toilet door, his voice appeared in my head. He was calling my name. I'm sure it's him! But I cannot recall who he is!"

"Is his name Lin Sisi?" When Chen Ge said the name Lin Sisi, Wang Yicheng's body started to shake uncontrollably. His arms that grabbed Chen Ge's neck started to increase in strength, crushing Chen Ge's windpipe.

"I didn't mean to do it; they forced me to! I'm so sorry! We're still best friends!" Wang Yicheng screamed with his eyes closed. His wail was harrowing like he had just woken up and seen a ghost standing above him.

"Calm down!" Wang Yicheng's sudden breakdown surprised everyone. This would only put more targets on their back. Chen Ge decidedly dropped the young man from his shoulders and gave him a powerful chop to the back of this neck.

"Mr. Bai?" The other students were shocked.

"Shut up! I'm trying to save him!" Chen Ge attempted a few times before finally knocking Wang Yicheng out. "Prolonged hallucinations will cause serious damage to his brain. The best temporary solution that I could think of is to make him stop thinking for now."

Looking at the unconscious Wang Yicheng, Chen Ge 's emotions did not recover for a long time; he had just obtained a very important piece of information from what Wang Yicheng had said. The person who lured Lin Sisi into the toilet was none other than Wang Yicheng!

Who would have thought the most crucial person has been at my side all along?

Chen Ge was thankful that he had not lost his kind nature after entering the door. When he first approached Wang Yicheng, he did not think too much of it. He merely wanted to help after seeing how helpless the young man was. Honestly, he had done what he had set out to do; Wang Yicheng now had a few more new friends, and these new friends would not look down on or bully him.

Through what Wang Yicheng said, Chen Ge had a brief grasp of what had happened. Wang Yicheng and Lin Sisi both shared Room 413. For various reasons, they were both ostracized. However, they took the segregation differently due to the difference in personality. Wang Yicheng chose to suffer the ostracization silently, whereas Lin Sisi came up with ideas to get people's attention. Technically, the two could not be considered friends but bullying victims who found each other.

The students hated Lin Sisi a lot and decided to disguise as ghosts to scare him in the toilet on the top floor of the education block to take revenge on him. To lure Lin Sisi there, they enlisted the help of Wang Yicheng, who could be said to share a good relationship with Lin Sisi. Chen Ge had no idea how those people managed to persuade Wang Yicheng, but he knew that, in the end, Wang Yicheng promised to do their bidding. Wang Yicheng was not entirely guilty, but he was the hand that pushed Lin Sisi over the abyss.

“Quick! Before Wang Yicheng wakes up, we need to get away from those people behind us.”

Chen Ge was very careful. He went to several places and only sighed in relief when he did not see white-clothed people following them.

The atmosphere on the western campus was slowly becoming abnormal. There were more and more people in white milling about. Chen Ge was not going to stay any longer, so he led his club members to the trash collection center.

“Mr. Bai, are those people in white schoolteachers as well? How come I’ve not seen them before? Why are they chasing us?” Zhu Long had many questions.

“They are not teachers but admin staff who are tasked with maintaining order on the western campus. Regarding why they’re chasing us...” Chen Ge placed the fainted Wang Yicheng on the ground. “It is because of him and the rest of you.”

“Us?”

“Yes, this school is not as simple as you might think. If you compare it to a human brain, the western campus is where they deal with various positive emotions while the eastern campus is responsible for the negative emotions and trash.” Chen Ge used a normal analogy to explain the situation. “The western campus only has good memories, and all the trash has to be transported to the eastern campus. But how can people only have good memories in their lives?”

“So, we have forgotten many of our memories?” Zhang Ju was very clever. Before Chen Ge finished, he already grasped the point.

“Yes, your forgotten memories are filled with despair, and those things are treated at trash by the western campus. Once those memories loosen or awaken, you will be sent to the eastern campus,” Chen Ge told them with a serious tone. “Now that you know the truth, do you still wish to continue searching for your memory?”

“I do,” Zhu Long promised without hesitation. “This inability to remember what I’ve done is very jarring. If this continues, I’ll go insane. Even if the memory is bad, I wish to remember everything.”

“I also wish to know what kind of memory I’ve lost. Without it, it feels like I am incomplete, like... I’m some kind of monster.” Zhang Ju’s hand brushed against the scar on his face. His eyes were filled with complicated emotions. It was hard to tell what he was thinking.

“You’ve all lost your minds! Crazy!” Zhou Tu kept mumbling. He was like a trapped rabbit, bouncing where he was.

"Since you didn't say no, I'll take that as a yes." Chen Ge picked up Wang Yicheng from the ground. "Actually, there is one more advantage in us going to the eastern campus now. The people who are on our tail wish to send us to the eastern campus, but they will never expect us to go to the eastern campus on our own."

"Is there a difference?"

"If we go over there willingly, we can still retain our 'human' selves. If we're sent there, I'm afraid you'll forget even more things." Chen Ge gave the members a few words of consolation. "The eastern campus is not as scary as you imagine. As long as we're careful, we'll be fine."

Carrying Wang Yicheng, Chen Ge opened the door of the western campus' trash collection center. The place was very clean, unlike the one on the eastern campus' side.

"Do not touch anything in here and stay away from those doors." Chen Ge did not know whether the western trash collection center was manned or not. Before going in, he gave the students some ropes. "There is a little window on the second floor. Later, I'll come out from the window to get up the wall. Watch how I do it and just follow my lead."

"What about Wang Yicheng?"

"Tie him up with the rope. Once I get on the wall, you guys work together to move him through the window, and I'll help pull him onto the wall." Wang Yicheng was short and thin; he was not that heavy. This was good news for Chen Ge.

"Be careful of your safety. Once you get on the second floor, do not linger, and follow my direction!" After he gave them the ropes, Chen Ge personally tied Wang Yicheng and tied the other end of the rope to himself before carrying him to the second floor. After ensuring that there was no one on the second floor, Chen Ge did not dawdle and headed for the window.

Opening the small window, Chen Ge very expertly stepped on the windowsill and jumped over to the top of the wall. "What are you guys waiting for? Quickly pass Wang Yicheng over to me."

The rope was tied to his body on one end, and the other end was attached to Wang Yicheng.

“Mr. Bai, do you teach sports?” Zhang Ju was the first to snap out of it. He raised Wang Yicheng out of the window.

“This is the second floor! Before careful.” Zhu Long and Zhou Tu moved forward to help. The three worked together to move Wang Yicheng out.

After a long time, Chen Ge finally got Wang Yicheng onto the wall. He was one of the key characters that night, so Chen Ge could not leave him behind. Sitting on the wall again, Chen Ge’s feelings were completely different from before.

He untied the rope on his body and leaned on the wall, starting to move slowly to make some space for the other students.

“Quick! Move faster!”

Chen Ge held Wang Yicheng and found some gaps amid the bricks and tied the rope through them. Next time, if they wanted to cross between the two campuses, they would not need to go through the trash collection center; they could use this rope that he had left behind.

The group used about ten minutes to cross over to the eastern campus. For those students from the western campus, the eastern campus was a completely unfamiliar place.

Chapter 812 - Zhang Ju's Memory

"Being chased by teachers and running over walls to escape, that is definitely not how I imagined I would spend my second day at university!" Zhou Tu patted the dirt off his body and undid the rope around his waist.

"Later, more things that you can't imagine will appear." Chen Ge tugged on the rope that he had left on the wall harshly a few times before hiding it. From how he positioned it, even if someone walked past, they would not notice it right away.

"This rope shall be our escape." When Chen Ge left the eastern campus, he had been alone, but when he returned, he was responsible for a whole club.

"Sir, did you notice something strange?" Zhang Ju stood upright, and the eye that was hidden behind his scar slowly widened.

"What's wrong?"

"Perhaps it's just me being sensitive, but it feels like the air here is much slicker and wetter, and there is a strange smell in the air like a perfume of blood." Zhang Ju said those strange words in the calmest voice. His lips slowly opened to lick at the scar on his upper lip. There was confusion and loss in his eyes. "Compared to the western campus, this place feels much more familiar. "

"You have to be joking, or are you telling me you're familiar with the scent of blood?" Zhou Tu had originally thought that Zhang Ju was just disfigured, that his mind was normal, but after hearing what he had just said, Zhou Tu gained a new understanding of Zhang Ju.

"I'm not joking; it's real." Zhang Ju turned to Chen Ge, who stood where he was with a smile.

"You are not wrong; this is the soil where sweet dreams are grown. In the world behind the door, only dead bodies and blood can be used as fertilizer to grow the most beautiful flowers.”

Chen Ge picked up Wang Yicheng and signaled for Zhang Ju to follow behind him. “I’ll take you to this one place first. Be careful, do not make too much noise.”

As they walked through the unkempt brush, the night became their best disguise. Along the way, they did not get into any accidents. Chen Ge took Zhang Ju to where he encountered the ghost in the tree hole.

“Does this place look familiar to you?” Chen Ge pointed at the tree hole where the female skull had originally been hidden and the trees around it.

“It feels like we’ve been here before... Right, isn’t this the crime scene where the girl was killed? We’ve been to this place on the western campus! How come there is an identical location on the eastern campus?” Zhou Tu’s eyes widened. Even the tree hole’s location and the opening’s angle were completely identical.

“The crime scene on the western campus is only an empty shell; the dead body and the dead’s spirit were hidden on the eastern campus. This place is the real crime scene.” When Chen Ge explained it, Zhang Ju appeared to be attracted by something. He stood beside the tree hole alone, his shoulders slightly shaking.

“Zhang Ju?” He did not appear to have heard Chen Ge. The young man slowly squatted down beside the tree hole and reached his shaking hands into the hole.

“Hey, are you mad? The girl’s skull was found inside the tree hole! Why are you reaching into it?” Zhou Tu wanted to go forth to frag Zhang Ju back but was stopped by Chen Ge.

“Do not disturb him. His memory is buried inside that tree hole; he has to dig out the thing that he has lost himself.”

“Dig it out? You people are crazy!” Zhou Tu was not as powerful as Chen Ge, and he could not struggle loose. He could only stand there and watch.

With both of his knees on the ground, Zhang Ju knelt next to the tree hole as his gaze stared directly into the dark enclosure. His arms gradually moved into the hole. His body kept shaking, and sweat slid down his face like tears.

“Why isn’t it here? Why? Why it’s not here? Impossible!” Zhang Ju could not find anything. He grumbled intermittently like he was so nervous that his breaths were breaking. “I saw it with my own eyes! I saw him bury the thing inside the tree hole! Why isn’t it here?”

His fingers pulled on the tree roots and dirt until his fingernails started to drip with blood, but Zhang Ju did not seem to feel the pain. With a deranged fervor, he continued his digging.

“Zhang Ju, are you looking for this?” Chen Ge pulled out a rusty blade from his bag. This blade was the female Specter’s item of possession. Chen Ge had discovered it buried inside the tree hole after she was consumed by the shadow. Initially, Chen Ge had taken it as an item of defense; he did not think that it would have such a use. The surroundings suddenly silenced as everyone moved their gaze to the blade.

“This blade was found inside the tree hole. The dead’s maddened spirit was lingering on this blade.” Chen Ge placed the blade before Zhang Ju. “Take it, and see if it can help you remember your past.”

Zhang Ju was at this breaking point. His arms shook harder, and his pupils were darting everywhere.

“It is very familiar, isn’t it? Have you seen this blade somewhere before? Who was holding this blade, and what was the man doing with it?” Chen Ge was like a needle piercing into Zhang Ju’s mind. His trembling fingers reached toward the blade. When his fingertips touched the handle, his face suddenly changed, his pupils narrowed, and his mouth opened wide with a voiceless scream. Before the scream could escape, Chen Ge rushed forward to clamp his hand over Zhang Ju’s mouth. “It’s alright. All that is in the past. It’s already over.”

Even though he was comforting Zhang Ju, Chen Ge kept his eyes on the blade in Zhang Ju’s hand. Once the young man attempted to attack with the blade, he would knock him over. Zhang Ju was far more powerful than Chen Ge had anticipated. As the memory returned, his strength kept growing. This child did not seem to be a normal spirit. Just as Chen Ge was about to lose control of Zhang Ju, the latter started to calm down.

Chen Ge let go of the young man, and Zhang Ju collapsed to the ground. His lips were kissing the ground, and the scar on the face appeared to become more intense.

"I... I think I just remembered something." Zhang Ju stared at his cracked nails. "That day, it was senior's birthday. A girl wanted to confess to him, but senior already had a girlfriend, so he asked me to go and reject her. I came to the promised spot, but I didn't see the girl, so I kept waiting. Then I heard something moving in the forest, so I ran over quietly, and I saw someone use this knife..."

"The girl was still struggling, but I didn't dare show myself; I was stunned. I'd never seen so much blood in my life."

His nails dug into the ground, and the scars on Zhang Ju's face were squeezed together.

"If I'd stood up then, perhaps the girl wouldn't have died."

Blame and guilt tormented Zhang Ju. He gripped the knife tightly.

"When I returned to call the police, the group of people had already escaped; I have no idea whether they were captured or not. However, I remember thinking that one of them looked very familiar.

"The following night, we drank a lot and then went to the karaoke. That was when the fire happened. I was sent to the hospital and then..." Zhang Ju whacked his own head multiple times. "What happened next? Why can't I remember anything?"

"After you were taken to the hospital from the fire, that is where your memory stopped." Chen Ge now knew about Zhang Ju's past.

"I could see the embers burning and the fire getting closer. Along with the rolling flames, I could hear the screams and wailing. I couldn't open my eyes due to the fire. I wanted to run outside, but once the door was opened, fire burst into the room."

Zhang Ju lay on the ground, and veins covered his forehead. The scars on his face were slightly shaking.

"It was hard to tell where the pain was coming from. I tried my best to run outside. The air was getting thin, I couldn't see anything, and in the end, I fainted in the corridor.

"Fuzzily, I remember someone carrying me out. At that time, I still had some lingering consciousness left."

Fingers dirtied with blood and dirt reached through the air. Zhang Ju used his elbows to support his body.

"I should have been sent to the hospital directly. I think I can remember hearing the conversation between my parents the doctors. I wanted to open my eyes, but when I did, it was a completely dark world that I saw like everything within my sight was charred."

Zhang Ju's voice was slowly returning to normal even though he was still collapsed on the ground.

"I can remember my parents' faces, and I can remember the doctors and nurses that look after me, but I cannot for the life of me remember when I woke up from the fainting, and I cannot remember how I came to this school."

"Is there a chance that actually you haven't woken up from your coma and that you're dreaming up this world?" Chen Ge's question surprised Zhang Ju.

“I still haven’t woken up? This is a dream that I’ve dreamed up?” Zhang Ju repeated what Chen Ge had said. “Then everything here is part of my dream? Even you are just part of my imagination?”

“Imagination your head. That’s preposterous. Can you please act normal?” Zhou Tu took the blade away from Zhang Ju. “I don’t know about the others, but I am definitely not a part of your imagination. I’ll hold onto the blade for you in case you decided to test that theory out on us.”

Zhou Tu felt like he was the only normal member of this club, and thus, it was safest for him to have the blade for safekeeping.

“Zhang Ju is not wrong, but there is a detail that he is mistaken about. This world is not his own dream but a collection of many people’s negative emotions and despair. It is a nightmare formed from all that.” Chen Ge scanned every member’s face. “All of you are trapped inside this world, and this world was created by all of you as well.”

When Chen Ge said that, the brush was intensely quiet. Everyone looked at him with various expression.

“I know you might not be able to accept that for now, but it’s okay, we still have time.” Chen Ge carried Wang Yicheng and looked at the wall faraway. “Wang Yicheng’s recovery of his memory has attracted the administrators, and now that your memory, Zhang Ju, has started to loosen as well, the admins might come and get us soon. We need to leave as soon as possible.” Chen Ge turned around and headed out the brush.

“Wait!” Zhang Ju grabbed the dirt that was reddened by blood and slowly lifted his head. His eyes were zoomed in on Chen Ge. “Who are you? Why are you telling us all this?”

“Who I am is not that important; the important thing is that I can help you escape from this place. Your friends and family have waited long enough for you in real life.” Chen Ge smiled. “Actually, I am not unlike you. I am also missing a part of my childhood memory, so when I encountered you, I seemed to have encountered my past self.”

Chen Ge sighed with emotion. He led the club members away from the lab and the staff dormitory, following the path to the education block. “The toilet is on the top floor of the education block; I believe the answer we’re looking for is there.”

The education block on the western campus was only quiet and eerie, but the education block on the eastern campus was filled with danger. By getting close to it, a chill would climb up one's spine.

"Be as quiet as you can. If anything happens here, the consequences will be very serious," Chen Ge whispered.

"What kind of consequences?" Zhou Tu's forehead was sweating. He gripped the blade that had been dug out of the tree hole and bent his back. His eyes looked around, and he was very nervous.

"The eastern campus is used to store the trash from the western campus. Normally, how do we treat trash?" Chen Ge maintained the smile, but the words that he said caused the members to suck in a cold breath. "After we're captured, we will be stripped of everything that we consider valuable and then abandoned. Here, death is a luxury."

There was no taking back a loosened arrow. Chen Ge was the first to head into the education block. Perhaps it was his imagination, but night on the eastern campus felt darker than on the western campus. Stepping on the old staircase, holding the banister that was charred, one could hear the sound of tables and chairs moving from inside the supposedly empty classrooms.

"This place is so scare. I can't imagine it was just a wall away from us." Zhu Long lowered his voice. He walked at the back of the group.

"Shush, don't talk." Zhou Tu, holding the knife, stuck close to Zhang Ju, afraid that this student with a scarred face might suddenly act up. The more he worried about it, the more he felt it might happen, so Zhou Tu had been keeping an eye on Zhang Ju. The latter suddenly stopped moving.

"What's wrong?"

"No, I'm just curious. Why are there so many pictures of doctors on the corridors of the education building?" Zhang Ju lifted his head to look at the pictures on the wall. "We are not a medical school, and these doctors don't appear to be renowned doctors. Many of them don't even have an introduction but pictures of them working in white coats. By the way, have any of you noticed that all of these pictures were taken when they were at work?"

Zhang Ju's words attracted Chen Ge's attention. Previously, he had thought that these pictures were very strange but could not figure out why. Zhang Ju's words reminded him of a possibility.

“The world behind the door is weaved from the door-pusher’s memory. This school is very unique; it seems to be made up from the memories of all of its students. So, the pictures of the doctors might have been people that the students encountered in real life.” Chen Ge patted Zhang Ju’s shoulder lightly. “Pay attention to these pictures. See if there’s anyone you recognize.”

“To be able to be celebrated like this has to be someone at the top of the field. How would I know someone like that?”

“Here, doctors perhaps have a special meaning. Just follow my instructions.” Chen Ge led the members up the stairs. When they passed the third floor, he suddenly stopped. “Stop, there’s someone ahead.”

The classroom nearest to the third floor’s staircase was not locked. The door made from poor quality wood creaked noisily in the wind.

Chen Ge’s group stood frozen on the spot. After a while, a shadow exited the classroom.

“That figure looks so familiar. Could it be Chang Gu?”

Chapter 814 - Do You Dare?

Chapter 814: Do You Dare?

The shadow's frame was similar to Chang Gu's, but it moved very fast, not like someone who was blind. Chen Ge did not dare just announce himself. He wished to observe the figure longer, but the person rushed straight down to the other end of the corridor like it was looking for something.

"Is that Chang Gu? Has he recovered his sight?"

...

The education block was not lit. Even with his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge was taking careful steps.

"Sir, is that a friend? Should we go meet up with him?"

"Now is not the time for reunions. We'll go to the top floor first." Chen Ge kept his gaze on the shadow. The person did not leave but went into another classroom. There was another party in the education block that night. Chen Ge did not know whether this change was a good thing or not. The group soon reached the fourth floor. The toilet was at the other end of the corridor.

"No matter what you hear, do not answer. No matter what you see, do not leave the group. Understand?" Chen Ge whispered the warning to the members and then carried Wang Yicheng down the corridor. He bent his body low and used the corner of his eyes to scan the classrooms on both sides. There was only darkness inside the windows; he could not see anything.

The members followed behind Chen Ge. They tried not to look beside them, but the more they told themselves not to do that, the more their eyes started to wander.

"What's that?"

The classrooms there needed a good tidying up. When Zhou Tu passed one of the windows, there was something that looked like many strands of hair dangling from the window frame. It felt like there was a girl leaning against the window.

“It’s not a real person, right?” Zhou Tu stood on his tiptoes as he hurried forward. He tilted his head downward and looked from underneath the window.

“The hair... is moving?”

Before Zhou Tu could get a closer look, his body knocked into something. That came as such a surprise to him that he dropped the knife that he was holding to the ground. The rusted blade clattered noisily on the ground. Inside the dark building, the sound was intensely sharp and loud.

Everyone stopped moving, and Chen Ge turned to Zhou Tu. “What are you doing?”

“I accidentally bumped into Zhang Ju.” Zhou Tu held his nose and pointed at Zhang Ju, who stood frozen. He noticed that Zhang Ju’s expression was rather strange. “Why did you suddenly stop when we’re moving?”

Zhang Ju did not reply. He lifted his head to look at the picture on the wall. His lips were slightly open, and his pupils were narrowed to a point.

“Zhang Ju?”

No matter how the others nudged him, Zhang Ju had no reply. His gaze was glued to the picture on the wall, and there was a trace of sadness in his eyes. When he saw the blade that had killed the girl in the brush, his mind had completely broken down, but now he was completely different from then. There was no maddened scream and self-mutilation to nullify the psychological pain; he merely stood before the picture quietly.

“I’ve seen... this doctor before.” He spoke so softly that only people directly beside him could hear.

“That fire burned twenty percent of my skin. I saw my blood and flesh burn. I sniffed the stench that came from my own body until my eyeballs melted off from the flame. My eyelids were glued together, and my world plunged into darkness.

“I was sent to the hospital. The pain was so intense that I couldn’t feel the pain anymore.

“I couldn’t open my eyes, and my nostrils were burnt. One of my ears was partially burnt, and the other was significantly burnt. I became a monster. I could not see myself, but I knew I’d become a monster. I could no longer return to a normal life. Have you ever wondered what it feels like to use partially sealed ears to hear your family?”

“Someone was saving me. I could feel the pain returning. I was getting closer to being saved, but how would I wake up?”

“Something cold cut open my eyes, and they were cleaning it little by little. My left eye was taken out, and I could barely see a grayish world out of my right eye.

“I could not sense light; I could only see shadows out of my right eye. Tell me, how would I survive like that?”

Zhang Ju pressed his hand on the picture on the wall. His face was leaking blood. A small trail of blood leaked out from his skin like a thread used in a suturing surgery.

“I know this doctor. He accompanied me for a week. Death had come to claim my life, and he made a bet with him.” His voice was getting coarse like it was burnt in a fire. His appearance was changing as well. The blood and scar spread on his face. His ears started to shrivel like a flower, and the skin on his left eye was slowly melting.

“I never said a word to him, but I remember him very clearly. At the last moment of my life, he was one of three people present.”

The guilt for the dead unlocked Zhang Ju’s memory. The doctor who had once saved him restored his originally blurry memory, and now the pieces were surfacing in his mind. Blood vessels dripped out of his skin like the sutured wounds were reopening. The blood vessels coagulated into blood globules and dropped on Zhang Ju’s shirt. His shirt was slowly turning red. “If you were in my situation, would you choose to live or to die?”

A Half Red Specter? After they recover their memory, the Specters will return to their original form? The girl at the tree hole was unable to retain a normal human form because her memory wasn’t fully wiped?

Chen Ge’s eyes were twitching, but his reaction was already calmer compared to the other members.

Zhou Tu was so shocked that he neglected to pick up the blade. He grabbed Zhu Long's elbow, and the two involuntarily retreated three meters away. No one responded. Zhang Ju's eyes slowly moved away from the doctor's picture to Chen Ge. "I have remembered who I am. Now, can you tell me who you are?"

The two stood inside the darkened corridor, looking at each other.

"You've asked me that question before, and I've given you the answer." Chen Ge stood where he was and did not take a step back. "We are the same. I also wish to find the memory the memory that I've lost. Helping you is helping myself."

"You're lying!" Zhang Ju reached out toward Chen Ge, but as his fingers were about to touch Chen Ge, he stopped.

"Why did you stop?" Chen Ge took one step forward. He leaned close to Zhang Ju's scary, despairing face. "Are you afraid that after you kill me, another me will stand up from my dead body? Are you afraid of me, who is wearing red?"

Gripping Zhang Ju's shoulders, Chen Ge's expression was completely maddened. His hands moved on Zhang Ju's shoulders before moving slowly to caress Zhang Ju's face and touching the young man's forehead.

"You want to kill me? Do you dare?"

Not only Zhang Ju, Zhou Tu and Zhu Long who were hiding behind were spooked.

The corridor was silent. After a long time, Chen Ge let go of Zhang Ju. He looked at the other members inside the corridor. "I just want to find my lost memory. If you help me, you're helping yourselves. The opposite is also true."

Chapter 815 - Moveable Door

Zhang Ju had long noticed that Chen Ge was not a normal person. The man's eyes could retain calmness no matter the situation, like there was nothing in the world that could shock him. To be honest, he was afraid of people like that, but it was because of that fear that he had chosen to follow and listen to Chen Ge's orders. Standing before the picture, Zhang Ju opened his remaining right eye and stared quietly at Chen Ge's face.

It was a normal facial feature, a face that would be lost in the crowd, but someone like that subconsciously radiated a presence that frightened even himself. It was hard to describe; it was like a hatred-filled Specter was mixed with a crazed madman. He could see madness, sickness, and cruelty from that face but could not find a trace of fear. Zhang Ju knew how he looked, that he looked like a scary monster, but Chen Ge's earlier reaction made him realize that there were scarier 'monsters' than him in the world.

"Yes, we should be the same type of person." He believed Chen Ge because only those who had experienced hell would make that kind of expression. The man, like him, had also forgotten his past.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Bai. It's because of this sudden return of bad memory that I lost control of myself." Zhang Ju's voice was harsh and grating, but his attitude became much better.

"It's no matter. Of course, I do not mind. A teacher has to be understanding of his student," Chen Ge said with a smile. He gave off warmth and kindness. It was hard to imagine that he was the same person who had confronted Zhang Ju earlier. "What have you remembered? There's no need to be shy. Let me everything."

"Actually, it's nothing, just some painful memory." Zhang Ju's wounds were still opening. His shirt was slowly being dyed red. "I remembered the time when I witnessed the murder. I was scared and cowardly. I remembered the pain of having my skin seared by fire. It was like having needles pierce into your skin until you couldn't feel pain anymore. I still remember the pain and helplessness I felt when I was lying in the ICU. Despair grew in my heart. I didn't want to know, but I didn't know how to survive."

"At the last moment of your life, did any special happen to you or around you?" Zhang Ju appeared in this world inside the door, but at the time, he should have lost the ability to push open any door. Chen Ge was curious how he ended up at the school. Only by knowing how he entered would they have a chance of exiting. For a three-star scenario, the door was the only exit, but that did not seem to be case for four-star scenarios.

"At the last moment of my life..." Zhang Ju reached out to touch his face. "It seems I fell into a coma, but I could sense the goings-on around me. I cannot tell the difference between the nightmare and reality, but I remember one thing very clearly. Whenever midnight came, there would be a door inside the sickroom."

"A door?"

"I stayed for seven days at the hospital. The door appeared every night, and each night, it showed up closer. Until it stopped right beside my bed." Zhang Ju lifted his bloodied face. "It was a moving door. The more afraid I was, the more despair I felt, the closer it would come to me. I couldn't ask for help. At the night of the eighth day, the door was pushed open from inside. Hands reached out from behind the door to pull me into it."

What Zhang Ju described was similar to what had happened to Chang Gu. They had both encountered a door that could move. Every night at midnight, this door would get close to the sleeping victim before ending up beside them. The door would be opened from inside to pull the victims in.

"And this school is behind the door?" Chen Ge was curious about what had happened next. He wanted to know how Zhang Ju had lost his memory. Just how did this student whose face had been ruined in a fire become a Half Red Specter?

Zhang Ju shook his head. "I felt trapped in a dream, a dream that felt so real. In the dream, everyone referred to me as Lin Sisi even though I told them again and again that my name is Zhang Ju. I said they'd got the wrong person, but they thought it was just a joke.

"No one would believe me, and I could only survive in the dream as Lin Sisi to experience everything as Lin Sisi. Eventually, even I started to wonder if I was really Lin Sisi.

“Being bullied, ostracized, ignored, it was hard to stomach, but I thought about it from another perspective. In real life, I had already become a monster. The life in the dream was not that bad.”

Zhang Ju’s voice was flat enough to feel like he was telling another person’s story. “I had no friends, and everyone hated me. I started to get dull to both the spiritual and physical torture, but then one day, a girl walked into my dream.

“It was a cloudy day. Someone planted a frog in my deskmate’s school bag. She suspected that I was the culprit, but I wouldn’t do something so stupid.

“No one listened to my explanation. The class chased me out, and everyone in the corridor gawked at me with their strange eyes. I ran away from them to go hide on the rooftop of the education block.

“I met her there.

“Even though I knew it was a dream, I felt that she was very special.” Zhang Ju’s voice started to change. “Her name was Wen Changyu, the only person who didn’t ignore me. I told her my sorrow, and she showed me sympathy.

“Then I told her about my past, and she confirmed that I am not Lin Sisi. Only when I was with her could I remember myself and not get assimilated into the dream. We would meet every dusk on the rooftop, and gradually, I felt like I couldn’t stay away from her anymore.

“She said that she was very interested in my stories, and I liked spending time with her

“Just as color started to return to my life, she suddenly posed a question to me—would I like to see the world outside of the school? At the time, I had no idea what she meant. I just wanted to stay with her, so I nodded.

“That day, after midnight, she led me to the library. The library’s door was always locked, so we jumped in through the window. We found a mirror behind one of the bookshelves on the third floor.

“The mirror was very big, and the girl said that the mirror could still be used several times and told me to keep it a secret.

“I trusted her implicitly. At the same time, I realized something. This was the first time that I had seen a mirror inside my dream!

“I asked the girl what I should do. The girl told me that I only needed to peer into the mirror.

“I stood before the mirror, and she moved to stand behind me. In the quiet night, I stared at myself in the mirror.

“The more I stared, the more I felt the reflection in the mirror changing. Slowly, my reflection started to bleed, and scars appeared on the person’s face. His ears started to wilt, his left eye closed, and his face started to get scarred and burned!

“I did not dare look further, but just as I wanted to leave, the monster in the mirror reached out to grab me!

“Blood leaked out of the mirror until the surface was completely red!

“I screamed loudly for help and turned around to look at Chang Wenyu, but she was unmoved. Even now, I can remember what she told me last. ‘Why are you afraid? That is the real you inside the mirror.’

“Her slender fingers pressed on my left eye softly and slowly plucked it out!

“The world immediate

Chapter 816: Just a Speculation

“After Chang Wenyu took my left eye, I became similar to the monster from inside the mirror. She shattered my hallucination. I was not Lin Sisi but Zhang Ju; the scary-looking monster from inside the mirror was myself.”

With his wound bleeding, Zhang Ju’s shirt was half dyed red, but the scarier thing was that the blood vessels that had started to weave on his shirt still continued to increase in number. Chen Ge had initially thought Zhang Ju was just a Half Red Specter, but he soon discovered that he had greatly underestimated the young man. As his memory was awakened, the blood on Zhang Ju began to intensify as it proceeded to color his whole body red.

“I was pulled into the mirror, and Chang Wenyu who stood outside the mirror held my left hand. Her lips opened and closed, and I believe she was saying, ‘One last one left.’

“My left eye started to change in her grasp. The memory of my life flashed in the pupil. When she took my left eye, she also took all of my hope.”

Drip drop...

Zhang Ju’s blood dripped on the corridor. Footsteps echoed down the block, but no matter where they looked, there was no one coming.

“What kind of world is it inside the mirror?” Chen Ge asked softly.

“Red. There is just red; everything is red.” Zhang Ju’s description reminded Chen Ge of the scenario behind the door of the three-star trial mission.

“Then, how did you return from that place?”

“The other me from inside the mirror, he was covered in blood. He wanted to consume me. Before I could give it some thought, my legs carried me away. I ran for a long time before I realized that inside the mirror was another school. It was completely deserted, or at least, it looked that way on the surface.”

“And then?”

“I never even survived the first night. The other me from inside the mirror caught me.” A trace of confusion appeared in Zhang Ju’s eyes. “In my memory, he killed me, but when I reopened my eyes, I had returned to this school and lost a major part of my memory, becoming part of the school.”

“In other words, your memory was tampered with after you died?”

“I guess you could say that. I have no idea what happened in between. I believe you’ll need to go to the red world if you really want to find out the answer.” Zhang Ju did not seem to be lying. Even though he looked scary, his expression was sincere.

“I think I get it,” Chen Ge said softly. “Normally, the door is the only way to enter the blood world, but there is a Specter far more powerful than we can imagine in this scenario. He could be a Greater Red Specter. This Specter uses mirrors as a medium to isolate another world from inside the blood red world. This other world is this school that we’re in. Do you understand what I’m saying?”

Every club member shook their head.

“I’ll give you a simpler example. After pushing open the door, we entered the blood red world. But inside this blood red world, we found a mirror, and when we touched the mirror, we entered the world inside the mirror.

“If we compare it to dreaming, it should be easier to understand. Normally, once we sleep, our consciousness enters a dream world, but if we start to dream while inside a dream, what happens? We enter a dream inside a dream.

“Blood red world is constructed from despair and negative emotions, and the world inside the mirror is more like a ‘dream’ created by the door-pusher.”

Chen Ge used an elaborate example to explain the situation to the students. As he did so, a crucial problem that he had was answered. When he woke up, he had lost contact with all of his workers, and the black phone was missing, which placed him in a very dangerous situation. It had been confusing him. How did the owner make that happened?

The black phone aside, Zhang Ya was hiding in his shadow, but at that moment, his shadow had become very normal; Zhang Ya was not with him. From this point, it could be understood that it was not his real self that had entered this school. Just like Zhang Ju had said, when he looked inside the mirror, there was another him. One was kind and gentle, the other cruel and ruthless; the combination of both was the real him.

I should have run into the same problem as Zhang Ju. Part of my persona is trapped inside the mirror, and the other part outside the mirror.

This was all Chen Ge's speculation, and he was not confident that he was one hundred percent right. It was like he was walking in fog, and the only source of light was himself.

"Chang Wenyu once used the mirror in the library, so after visiting the toilet, the next stop is the library." Chen Ge voiced his thought.

"Why do you wish to go there when everyone gives the place a wide berth?" Zhang Ju could not understand Chen Ge. His memory had just woken up. Various thoughts swirled in his mind, and his gaze was rather blurry.

"Compared to this place, I prefer the blood red world because that place is more realistic."

Chen Ge's word proved that he was no ordinary person. Zhang Ju thought about it and agreed. "That's perfect. I wish to know what has happened to me as well. Theoretically speaking, I should be dead, right?"

After getting that response from Zhang Ju, Chen Ge sighed in relief because Zhang Ju would be a welcomed aid.

"Come, let's head to the toilet first." Chen Ge's group had stayed in the corridor for a long time. Thankfully, nothing strange had happened.

"Zhu Long, can you see the change happening to Zhang Ju? His face... is so scary now." Zhou Tu did not dare get too close to Chen Ge and Zhang Ju; he felt like they were both madmen.

“At this time, I can only trust Mr. Bai. Zhang Ju’s change also proved that he hasn’t been lying to us, right? We are on the path to regain the memory that we’ve lost.” Zhu Long did not look so well. He gritted his teeth, and his hand that held the phone was white.

“If you say so.” Zhou Tu turned to glance behind him. He was too afraid to leave on his own. “I must have been mad to agree to join a club like this.”

He summoned the courage to pick up the blade on the ground, but as he did so and his view was inverted, he saw that there was an upside-down human head looking at him from down the corridor.

No wait!

To be more precise, the upside-down person was looking at Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng, who was on Chen Ge’s back!

Zhou Tu’s knees went wobbly from the shock. If not for Zhu Long, he would have collapsed.

“What’s wrong with you?”

“There’s someone behind us! There’re a lot of people who are following behind us!” Zhou Tu’s voice was shaking.

“Where?” Zhu Long turned to look. They were the only ones on the empty corridor. “Are you hallucinating?”

Zhu Long held Zhou Tu, and the two looked behind them. There was only darkness. There was a faint echo of footsteps, but there were no living people to be seen.

“No one’s there.”

...

“I saw them when I bent down to pick up the blade earlier. They were all following behind us while moving upside down. It’s like they’re living in a world that’s inverted to ours.” Zhou Tu was shocked.

“Those people kept staring at Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng. Should we go and tell this to Mr. Bai?”

“That’s not a bad idea.” Zhu Long looked behind them with confusion. Zhou Tu did not look like he was lying. Just as the two were discussing that, Chen Ge and Zhang Ju reached the middle of the corridor. The closer they got to the toilet, the more nervous they became.

“Mr. Bai, Zhou Tu saw people trailing behind us. They were all moving upside down. I don’t know what to say. In any case, you’d better ask Zhou Tu for the details.” Zhu Long dragged Zhou Tu to Chen Ge.

“When I bent down to pick up the blade earlier, I saw that there was a crowd of people behind us. Their heads were all looking down, and they floated in midair. No, it’s more like they’re walking on the ceiling. Those people should be attracted by Wang Yicheng and Zhang Ju. Those monsters kept their gazes on Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng.” Zhou Tu did not want to get too close to Zhang Ju; this was a natural reaction.

“Upside-down people?” Chen Ge had encountered them at the lab before. “We’ll go take a look at the toilet first to see if the door is really there. If we find nothing, we’ll leave immediately.”

This school was too strange. Even with the protection from a Red Specter, Chen Ge did not feel safe. Moving faster, just as Chen Ge was several steps away from the toilet, a grip suddenly tightened around his neck. A pair of cold, thin arms locked around his neck. The person was slowly tightening his grip, and Chen Ge's breathing became more difficult.

"Wang Yicheng? You've woken up?" Chen Ge turned back to look. Wang Yicheng's head was lolled on his shoulder. His eyes were bloodshot. He seemed to be fighting something in his mind.

"Do not go in. They're inside."

Wang Yicheng's voice was different from how he usually sounded. It was thick with guilt. He sounded like a wounded stray dog, guarding his friend's body while fists and kicks rained down on him.

"They? Who are they?"

"The other students and seniors. Everyone who hates you is inside. Do not go in. I've already informed the teacher." Wang Yicheng wanted to force a smile, but he could not do it.

"Have you knocked the sense out of him? What's he mumbling about?" Zhu Long held the pink phone and silently moved to Chen Ge's side. This education block was too creepy, and he only felt relatively safer when he was next to Chen Ge.

"Wang Yicheng, have you remembered something?" Wang Yicheng's memory had loosened at the door of the western campus' toilet. At the time, Chen Ge had been afraid of being exposed, so he had knocked the boy out. Now, even though he had recovered, there still appeared to be some psychological issue remaining.

"They had me trick you into come here; I didn't agree, so they hit me. I was forced to climb the stairs with my limping leg. I heard everything. But they still didn't prepare to let you go. Remember, no matter who tells you to go to the toilet on the top floor of the education block, do not go there! Please do not go there!" Wang Yicheng's voice was weak like he was dying.

"Other than you, have they asked anyone else to trick Lin Sisi into coming here?"

"I don't know, but I have already informed the teacher about this. Why isn't he here yet?" Wang Yicheng sounded anxious. His only hope was that teacher, but that teacher did not seem to have shown up. Perhaps that teacher hated Lin Sisi as well.

“No! Don’t go in there!” Wang Yicheng treated Chen Ge as Lin Sisi. Those were his real thoughts. Guilt ravaged him, and he really wished to atone for his mistake. To have Chen Ge give up when they were literally at the door was impossible. Plus, with the aid of Zhang Ju, this Half Red Specter who was still strengthening, he was not that worried.

Wang Yicheng’s arms tightened further until veins popped on them. This child used all of his strength to stop Chen Ge from entering the toilet, probably because he did not want to witness a repeat of the tragedy.

The toilet was at the very end of the corridor. There was a thick stench of disinfectant in the air. There were brown stains on the wall tiles and water stains on the ground. Other than that, there were plenty of footprints. They were all different, so they should belong to different people. The toilet door was locked. Chen Ge took out the tools to unlock it. When he pushed open the wooden door, Chen Ge took a step back and carefully peered into the room.

This toilet looked completely different from the one on the western campus. It was very dirty like it had been forgotten by the school. No one had entered this place, and it had obviously never been cleaned.

“Has this toilet been locked ever since the Lin Sisi incident?” Chen Ge turned back to ask Wang Yicheng. The child had lost the ability to speak. He was shaking like he was ill. Compared to the western campus, this toilet felt more real to Chen Ge. He carried Wang Yicheng into it. Once they stepped into the toilet, Wang Yicheng closed his eyes. He did not dare look nor remember.

“This room gives me a different feeling compared to the other room.” Zhang Ju looked around. Blood vessels climbed on the walls. They were like cracks that covered the whole room. The skull faces on the wall were already blurry like forgotten memories. The dried blood vessels covered all the painting on the walls like they did not wish for them to be seen. Walking to the first cubicle, Chen Ge took out Lin Sisi’s phone and snapped a picture through the gap. There were several shadows that appeared on screen.

“Who’s inside?” Chen Ge forced the door open, and what he saw was out of his expectation. There was a mannequin placed inside the first cubicle. He was wearing a pair of black leather shoes. He was about thirty to forty and looked similar to the Mr. Bai whom Chen Ge had encountered.

There was a pair of shoes placed in the western campus' toilet, and the first cubicle here contains a real mannequin. What's the reason behind this difference?

The mannequin inside the cubicle had his head lowered and his hands behind his head. He stood upright, his posture making him appear like he had made some mistake.

Chen Ge could not see any problem with his Yin Yang Vision. Lastly, he took out Lin Sisi's phone to aim at the first cubicle.

The mannequin that looked like Mr. Bai stood inside the cubicle, but the phone captured the image of a faceless boy. His hands were behind his back in the same posture as the mannequin.

Could this faceless boy be Lin Sisi? Did Mr. Bai once punish him in such a manner, so he's using the same method to punish Mr. Bai?

Chen Ge yanked open the second cubicle; there was a thin, male mannequin inside. One of his legs was distorted as he curled up inside the cubicle with dirt and trash thrown haphazardly around him.

“This mannequin bears a resemblance to Wang Yicheng.” The mannequin in the cubicle wore the same pair of blue running shoes as Wang Yicheng on Chen Ge’s back, so the mannequin should refer to Wang Yicheng. Chen Ge raised the phone at the second cubicle, and the picture on screen was heart wrenching. The faceless child was forced by a group of people into the cubicle, and they tossed various trash on him. The boy inside the picture did not resist and allowed them to bully him.

The mannequin in the third cubicle wore a pair of glasses, and his body was covered in red paint. He stood dumbly facing the wall. This mannequin looked similar to the thin, tall boy whom Chen Ge had encountered in Room 413. With his previous experience, Chen Ge aimed the phone at the cubicle directly.

A faceless boy appeared on-screen. He stood inside the cubicle alone, and around him were people who kept pouring paint into the cubicle. His clean clothes were made dirty, and the paint slid down the creases of his shirt and shorts. The boy kept his head lowered, making no sound.

“These bullies have gained a mob mentality.” Chen Ge pushed open the door of the fourth cubicle. The mannequin inside was shirtless. The wet shirt was abandoned next to the toilet. Chen Ge took out the phone and aimed it inside the cubicle. On the screen, the faceless boy slowly removed the shirt dirtied with paint while someone dumped a bottle of water on him.

Fifth cubicle, sixth cubicle...

Each cubicle presented a story that was harrowing. When people were carried away by madness, they had no idea how crazy they were acting, and they would stop at nothing to unload their negative emotions on others.

When he opened the first cubicle, Chen Ge had merely wanted to uncover the truth. He had nothing to do with events that transpired there. He was merely a passing visitor, a victim who wanted to leave. But after he witnessed the events inside the six cubicles, his heart was already changing. His face was drawn. If people who knew him had seen him then, they would have been surprised because he rarely had an expression like that. Facial expressions represented the internal emotion. If it showed on the face, one's internal thoughts could be told, and the weakness would be exposed. Thus, when Chen Ge conducted the black phone's mission, he always remained calm.

Are these students or demons?

Raising his head, Chen Ge looked at the seventh cubicle. This was the only cubicle without a mannequin and also the only cubicle without a door. The door had been taken off the hinges with brute force. The connecting spot still had broken wooden chips. It was hanging by a single hinge. The door was missing, and the inside of the cubicle was crawling with the blood vessel-like things. To be precise, the blood vessels inside the toilet crawled out from inside this cubicle. The seventh cubicle could be said to be the source of everything.

“Was Lin Sis trapped inside this cubicle?”

The black red blood vessels were like wilted veins. They crawled all over the cubicle's walls like they were covering something. Chen Ge took out Lin Sisi's phone, adjusted the brightness to the maximum, and aimed it at the cubicle.

The faceless boy was hugging his own shirt and pants. Dirty water and paint slid down his body. The colors were like a monster that was plunging its claws into the boy's body.

The cubicle door appeared to be blocked from the outside. The boy had his head lowered, hugging his clothes. He rammed against the door. He had no face, so Chen Ge could not see his expression and could not hear his voice. He had no idea whether the boy was crying or screaming for help. Chen Ge could only see that the boy was ramming his body against the door until the door blasted open. He stood at the entrance of the cubicle barefooted, holding the dirty clothes. His arms dangled by his side, cut open by the wooden chips from when he rammed them against the door. Blood leaked out the open wounds, but paint seeped back into the wounds.

Pressured, uneasy, struggling to breathe, he twisted his head. The faceless boy scanned the empty toilet. The bullies had already left, but their venomous words lingered in the toilet. The boy stood at the cubicle entrance for a long time. He slowly took up his hands and put the wet clothes back on one by one.

Other than his arms, he was not injured, but his body kept shaking from pain. The middle of his pants was slit open, and there was a large hole on the back of his shirt. The boy put on all the clothes, and a poor monster was reflected in the water that puddled on the ground. He wiped his face and tried to walk toward the toilet door. The light from the corridor filtered into the toilet. The entrance was bright, bright enough to cast a clear shine on the boy's current appearance, bright to the point that he had nowhere to hide.

He pulled his feet back. He wore the dirty clothes and walked back into the seventh cubicle. Leaning against the wall, the boy's body slowly slid down the wall. He was curled up in the corner. The faceless face looked at the toilet entrance; he appeared to be waiting for the lights to go out.

The image did not end there. The boy looked for a long time before lifting his head. The faceless face looked at Chen Ge like he knew someone was watching him.

"Would you like to be my friend?" This question drifted into Chen Ge's ears. He heard it clearly, but when he turned to the source, there was nothing there.

"Did it come from the phone? That's impossible." The video stopped at the last frame. The faceless boy was curled up in the corner of the cubicle with his face turned to Chen Ge like he was waiting for Chen Ge's answer.

"I am willing to be your friend. Even though what you said sounded like a curse." Chen Ge did not mind a curse; his whole life started with a cursed love letter. Without that letter, during his first mission, he would have died at Wang Qi's hand.

Chen Ge gave his promise, but the boy in the phone retained his posture. Looking away from the phone, there was nothing inside the seventh cubicle, but the phone could capture the faceless boy so clearly.

“Can you hear me?” Chen Ge tried to communicate with the boy, but there was no reply. He waited for a long time before the image on the phone started to change again.

The door of the seventh cubicle was pulled open, and a blood red hand reached in. The hand touched the faceless boy lightly. He seemed to communicate with the boy, and the faceless boy nodded lightly. Then the faceless boy was led away by the hand toward the other side of the door and disappeared.

“The bloody hand came from inside the door? What did he tell the boy?” Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of the question that he had heard.

“Did the owner of the hand tell the boy what I heard? Would you like to be my friend?”

“The faceless boy agreed and then disappeared?”

Chen Ge tried to analyze the situation. The faceless boy was Lin Sisi. He did not push open a door; that bloody hand had reached out from inside the door. In other words, there was a door inside the toilet cubicle. The hand’s owner had invited Lin Sisi, and the latter had accepted. In that case, the bloody hand was the real door-pusher.

After so many twists and turns, Chen Ge had finally found the ghost school's real owner. Even though it was just a glimpse of the person's hand, that was already quite a big clue.

"Just now I heard someone ask, 'Would you like to be my friend?'"

...

"Did it come from inside the phone? But I heard it by the side of my ear so clearly.

"It probably wasn't meant for Lin Sisi but for me."

Chen Ge turned back to look. The blood vessels on the wall had started to peel like fallen leaves in autumn. They had lost their life.

"Did you make the promise with him?" Wang Yicheng suddenly spoke on Chen Ge's back. He buried his head in Chen Ge's shoulders. His voice was very soft, so one could not hear it if one did not listen carefully.

"I suppose so. He looked so lonely." Chen Ge's neck was pulled tight by Wang Yicheng. Their bodies were stuck together, and he could feel Wang Yicheng's body temperature dropping.

"His friends are all dead, all dead!" The sound of dripping came from behind Chen Ge. He felt wetness on his shoulders. Turning back to see, he realized that his left shoulder was already soaked with blood. It was a wide spread of red, and it looked eye-catching.

"You..." Chen Ge shook Wang Yicheng on his back. The boy waved his arms weakly about as he grabbed at the air. Blood tears leaked from his shut eyes. "Have you remembered something?"

By retuning to this place, Wang Yicheng's memory had awakened. He kept his eyes closed, but just from hearing that sentence from Chen Ge, he knew what had happened.

“There’s no escape. Since you have promised that person, he will come to find you. No matter where you go, he will find you!” Wang Yicheng’s voice had a big change. He had sunk into madness, completely different from the weak and cowardly boy from before.

“Even if he doesn’t come to find me, I will go to find him. I like to make friends, from all meanings of the word.” Chen Ge had many friends, but they were not by his side at the moment, so he wished to get to know some new friends.

The blood from Wang Yicheng’s eyes slid down his cheeks. His shirt was dyed red. Blood bloomed like flowers on his skin. This boy who looked so weak had the potential to become a Red Specter.

“I’m getting more interested in the owner of this school. Just how did he manage to pull all of you one by one into the door.” Chen Ge did not think that the few club members that he had randomly picked would be so special. Of course, he was lucky, but from another perspective, it explained the scary factor of the School of the Afterlife. A Half Red Specter was able to handle a normal two-star scenario, but in the School of the Afterlife, Chen Ge had already encountered several Red Specters and potential Red Specters.

“Is the constant joking a way to hide the panic in your heart?”

Hearing Wang Yicheng say that, Chen Ge confirmed further that the young man had recovered his memory. The previous Wang Yicheng was cowardly and feeble; he would never say anything remotely confrontational and would only follow orders.

“I’m not joking. To have the despair to open the door, he must have possessed hope before. Granted, the hope must have been crushed by now. I sincerely wish to help him, and becoming his friend will be the first step.” Chen Ge carried Wang Yicheng to head to the door. “Have you realized that most of the students here have a sad childhood or a physical deformity or that their personality has been made twisted by outside influence? Everyone has their own sad past.”

“What is it that you wish to say?”

“I’m curious what the owner has experienced. As the door-pusher, what has happened in his past to enable him to push open so many doors?”

“Agreeing to be his friend means that you’ll be stuck here forever. This school didn’t used to be so big. The addition of despair and pain only made it into what it is now.” After Wang Yicheng said that, his eyes stopped tearing blood, but his body continued shaking.

“Looks like you know many things.” Chen Ge felt like this school was similar to his Haunted House. However, School of Afterlife went after students with despair or was attracting students who radiated the presence of despair while Chen Ge’s Haunted House welcomed everyone. “This school’s been in existence for many years, has it?”

“All I can remember is that once I opened my eyes, I was here. I do not have the experience like Zhang Ju. I died at this school and was reborn here. I’ve already forgotten many things. I only know that this school has been growing in size.”

“Then why are you here? Is this Lin Sisi’s punishment for you?” Chen Ge asked another question he was curious about.

Wang Yicheng answered after a long pause. “I was the only person that Lin Sisi forgave. The only reason I came here is, after Lin Sisi, I became his replacement. The students’ anxiety and fear transformed into bullying, and I became their target. One night, on the brink of a breakdown, the door found me.”

“Then you entered it? Based on what Zhang Ju said, when the door showed up for the first time, it started a distance away and slowly got closer to you...” Chen Ge had not finished and he was interrupted by Wang Yicheng.

“He was passive, and I was the active party. I wanted to find a place where I could hide. Plus...” Wang Yicheng hesitated for a long time before he revealed the other secret. “The hand that reached out then was covered in paint. That was Lin Sisi’s hand. He was inviting me, and I wanted to say sorry to him in person. That day, I actually reported it to the teacher, but he didn’t come.”

“That’s all. Since entering the door, I haven’t seen Lin Sisi. Until today, I haven’t seen him.” Wang Yicheng let go off his hands. “You can put me down now.”

“Are you sure you’re not lying?” Chen Ge put down Wang Yicheng. “At the door of the western campus’ toilet, once your memory returned, the school’s administrators showed up immediately. If I didn’t knock you out, I’m afraid we would have been captured. You are treated differently from Zhang Ju and Zhu Long.”

“That’s probably because Lin Sisi is my friend, and I am Lin Sisi’s friend.”

The group walked past the seven cubicles. This place recorded what had happened to Lin Sisi, but the phone had probably only captured part of it.

“I really can’t imagine what has the door-pusher experienced.” As they were about to leave the toilet, Chen Ge turned to look at the seventh cubicle. “The only thing confirmed is that the door is in the seventh cubicle. To get to know the school’s owner, we need to investigate everything that has happened inside this toilet in this school.”

With the current cubicles, Chen Ge planned to head to three places next—the school’s data filing room, the school library, and the art room in the lab building that he had promised Zhou Tu.

Chapter 820: They've Arrived

Information about the school's owner could be found in the data filing room, the mirror leading to the blood world might be found in the school's library, and the art room was where Chen Ge had promised to take Zhou Tu.

"Where should we go first?" Chen Ge turned to Zhou Tu. "I know the location of the art club and the scene from your dream. I can take you there now, but are you prepared to recover your memory?"

...

Zhou Tu had not communicated much with Chen Ge. The latter's sudden question stunned Zhou Tu. Before he recovered his memory, he wished to know what he had forgotten. But after seeing what had happened to Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng, he started to hesitate.

"Are you ready to face your past? With the memory still lost, you are just an unimportant student here; you can forget about all your troubles and live this repeated peaceful day again and again. Once the memory loosens, you will be targeted by the school administrators, and there is no way back," Chen Ge reminded Zhou Tu. He was testing the young man as well. Of all the club members, Zhou Tu was the most opinionated.

"I thought about it and believe it's better to have my memory recovered. Without a past, no matter how comfortable life is, it's just a self-made lie." Zhou Tu's eyes moved to Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng. "I wonder if my real self will scare me to death."

"I think you'd better give it more consideration," Zhang Ju said with a scorched voice. He turned his burned face around. "An uncomfortable feeling comes from you. The real you must be a very scary monster."

Zhou Tu did not know how to reply. His eyes wandered, and the hesitation returned.

"We'll go to the filing room first, so you will have more time to consider.” Chen Ge patted Zhou Tu’s shoulder. “Don’t be pressured. No matter your decision, I’ll respect it.”

“Thank you.”

Zhou Tu lowered his head to think. Zhang Ju nudged Chen Ge slightly. “His real self should be really scary. If he can recover his memory, no matter what you wish to do next, it will make things much simpler.”

“Everyone has their own choice to make. I will not intervene.”

“But aren’t you helping us recover our pasts to gather energy so that we can help you complete your goal?” Zhang Ju was confused. He remembered what Chen Ge had said earlier. They were merely helping each other, or to put it more plainly, using each other.

“I once read the following from a book. Rose never asks why, and she never asks for a thank you. She blooms because she wishes to bloom. Even though I can’t be that selfless, at least I’ve experienced the pain that you’ve experienced, and seeing you all reminds me of myself.” Chen Ge turned to the other members seriously. “There is one more thing I wish to emphasize. Our relationship is not using each other; we’re in a mutually beneficial relationship, and mutual respect is the foundation.”

Hearing Chen Ge’s voice, at that moment, all the Specters seemed to forget that this man before them was just a normal human being. But perhaps that was because he still had not recovered his memory.

Zhang Ju and Zhu Long nodded as they fell in line behind Chen Ge. Wang Yicheng opened his bloody eyes and gave Chen Ge an approving nod. Zhou Tu, who walked at the back, was lost in his thoughts, but determination started to fill his eyes. Returning to the corridor, before Chen Ge started to move, he felt that something was not right. There was a thick stench in the air, and he had smelled it in the lab before. A bad feeling rose in his heart. The more Chen Ge moved forward, the more pressured he felt. It was like he was wading into a lake, and a chill assaulted him from all sides.

“Have those upside-down monsters returned?”

Chen Ge did not lower his head to look. Things had already happened. Lowering his head would only confuse his mind. What he needed to do was leave the building as fast as possible. Standing next to Zhang Ju, Chen Ge narrowed his eyes and asked in a low voice, “Do you see those monsters in the corridor?”

“Monsters?” Zhang Ju stared down the corridor. The blood on his body slid down his jacket. “There appears to be something there, but they don’t seem like they can hurt us.”

As he finished, Zhang Ju saw his hair float upward like there was an invisible baby on the ceiling pulling on his hair. Small wounds started to appear on the bodies of Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng. The monsters had been drawn there by the two of them.

“I can’t see them, so how did they manage to hurt me?” The wounds on Zhang Ju’s face kept bleeding. Blood vessels danced all over his body. Even though his memory had awakened, he had not mastered how to use his power.

“If you look upside down, you can see them, but I don’t suggest you do so.”

“Why not?”

“Because seeing them will only make your despair deepen.”

Chen Ge signaled for the group to move down the stairs. It was hard to tell whether the monsters were attacking Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng out of natural instinct or because something was ordering them to do so. If it was the latter, things would be much more troublesome. The stench around them thickened, and more wounds appeared on Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng’s bodies. It was worth noting that with every new wound, there would be a small black thread that dug into their bodies. The thing looked like a curse.

The group raced to the corner of the third floor, and Wang Yicheng started to weaken. His footsteps started to slow. “I can feel many things biting my body. The memory is becoming blurry again.”

“Mr. Bai, things are not looking good. There may be more of them downstairs,” Zhou Tu said softly. When they reached the third floor, the stench hit them like a wall, and the strange thing was that the stench seemed to originate from beside their bodies. Bending down, like when he was picking up the blade, Zhou Tu looked toward the spot where the stench came from.

In the empty space between him and Wang Yicheng, there was an inverted human face. The monster had no skin, so his flesh and muscles were stuck to his clothes. Blood pumped underneath his clothes, and the blood stuck to the fabric, dying the entire shirt red!

“Wang... Wang Yicheng, the thing is just in front of you!” Zhou Tu screamed. His memory had not awakened. Seeing a scene like that scared him so much that he almost fell down the stairs.

“Told you not to look, didn’t I?” Chen Ge carried Wang Yicheng and stepped at the spot where the stench was the thickest and then flew down the stairs.

Zhou Tu held his chest. The spot that Chen Ge had stepped on was where the monster’s head was. “Okay, I get it now.”

When they reached the second floor, the noxious fumes filled the corridor. Zhu Long, whose memory had loosened, also became the monsters’ target.

Zhang Ju could hold on but not Zhu Long and Wang Yicheng. They were moving because Zhou Tu and Chen Ge were dragging them.

Chapter 821 - Data Filing Room

Chapter 821: Data Filing Room

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Things were getting worse. Zhou Tu started to get targeted as well, and the first wound appeared on his finger.

“Mr. Bai, what should we do now?”

...

Chen Ge had no better idea. All he could do was grit his teeth and push through. Even if everyone was shredded by the monsters and lost their mobility, he had to drag everyone out. The stench rushed into their nostrils, attempting to knock them out. When Chen Ge carried Wang Yicheng to the corner of the first floor’s staircase, a jolt of pain came from his chest. Chen Ge shuddered and almost tripped. He lowered his head to look and found a nail stuck in his chest.

“The curse from Room 413?” He noticed something instantly and turned to look at his shadow. The normal shadow was currently twisting, like the person hiding inside was in incredible pain.

“Even he’s under attack?” All the members were at their limits. They were seriously wounded. “The exit is just before us. Don’t give up!”

Chen Ge’s determination was strong; he had gotten used to pain. Pulling out the nail, Chen Ge tried his best to run forward. Even if it was just one more step, it would mean that he was one step closer to hope.

Zhou Tu collapsed on the stairs while carrying Zhu Long. His right hand was covered in wounds, and it looked like it was about to break. “My painting hand...”

It was difficult for Chen Ge to carry one person, much less four. “Hang in there! We’re almost on the first floor!”

Their legs appeared to be shackled with lead. Every step was very heavy. The stench on the first floor was heavier than on the second floor. More monsters were waiting for them there. Other than Chen

Ge, everyone was in despair. But suddenly, the stench in the air dissipated like someone had led part of the monsters away.

“This is our chance!” Chen Ge dragged Zhou Tu, carried Wang Yicheng, and made a mad dash. When he reached the first floor, he saw a black shadow standing at the other end of the corridor. The person looked very similar to Chang Gu. His left eye was shining with a red glow, and blood was dripping from his body under his clothes. He appeared to be holding something.

“Chang Gu?” Chen Ge blurted out the man’s name, but the other person did not reply. He turned to leave, and the stench in the corridor became lighter.

“Was he the one who led the monsters away?”

In Chen Ge’s memory, Chang Gu was cowardly and weak, very different from the shadow that he had seen.

“He only entered the door several seconds earlier than I did. What happened to him?”

The shadow led more than half of the monsters away. Chen Ge quickly led the members away from the education block.

“Mr. Bai, what are those monsters? Why can we only see them with our heads inverted? And why did they only attack Wang Yicheng and Zhang Ju but not you?” Zhou Tu collapsed to the ground. He felt like the stench had seeped into his body.

“The monsters are probably what the school uses to punish students. There’s a possibility that they were the students who once broke the school’s rules.” Chen Ge also did not expect the monsters to not fear Red Specters. They had lost their rationality. They were crazed and mad.

“The school owner wanted to create a paradise behind the door. The memory of your past goes against that wish, so naturally, you are prime targets.” Chen Ge inspected Wang Yicheng and Zhang Ju’s bodies. The black threads had already crawled into their wounds. The wounds were faintly giving off that familiar stench. “You have to be careful. I’m afraid that the monsters are trying to assimilate you.”

Standing outside the education block, Chen Ge used his Yin Yang Vision to look around, but he did not see the black shadow that had saved them. “If he was really Chang Gu, why didn’t he come find me?”

Or is it not yet time to meet? Or has he been targeted as well?”

Chen Ge and Chang Gu did not have much communication. He needed to guess Chang Gu’s emotions, and then he could make the most correct decision.

“It’s good that there’s someone who can help me tip the balance.” Chen Ge supported Wang Yicheng. “Come, let’s go to the office. The data filing room should be there.”

...

The western campus’ office block was close to the wall. Standing on the roof of the building, one could see the entire view of the two campuses.

“The monsters I’ve encountered in this school can be separated into a few brief categories: the normal Specters and lingering spirits, the normal Red Specters, the administrators of western campus whose bodies were scorched and wore all white, and the monsters who were walking upside down. Other than them, the most dangerous creatures are the teachers and dormitory administrators at this school. We’re going to the office block, and there’s a good chance we’ll meet them, so we have to be careful.”

With great risk came great reward. This was not the first time that Chen Ge had done something like that, but this was not common for the other club members.

“Mr. Bai, but aren’t you one of the teachers as well?”

“Don’t you think I’m dangerous?” Chen Ge replied without turning his head around and was the first to step into the office block. He had been to the western campus’ office building before, but to his surprise, the interior designs of the office blocks of each campus were so different.

The office block on the western campus was clean and organized, but once he stepped into the eastern campus’ office building, he felt pressured. The floor needed cleaning; muddy footprints were everywhere. The previously-white walls were scratched and had turned a faded yellow. Stains of mildew were everywhere.

“The teachers on the eastern campus work in this kind of environment?” Zhou Tu could not believe it.

“In this school, the teacher’s job is not to educate but to manage. They spend most of their time with the students. The office building is just a symbolic place.” Chen Ge pushed one of the doors. The door was not locked and opened easily. The amenities inside the building were old, and they looked dated.

“I’ve been to this place before. I know where the filing room is,” Zhang Ju said coldly. Ever since he found his memory, he had become reticent.

“When have you come here?” Zhou Tu was afraid of the current Zhang Ju, and when he spoke, he naturally lowered his voice.

“Before I was lied to by Chang Wenyu, I once sneaked here to find out more about this school.” Zhang Ju walked ahead. “Stick close to me. This place makes me uncomfortable. Something dangerous might be hiding here.”

Perhaps the monster inside the building had sensed Zhang Ju or some other reason, but they did not run into any danger and successfully reached the third floor.

“This is the data filing room. We should leave immediately once we find what we need. We shouldn’t stay too long; I feel like there’s something else in this building.” Zhang Ju opened the door. Several aged wooden shelves and four rows of wooden bookshelves sat inside.

Chapter 822 - Big Fire!

Chapter 822: Big Fire!

The smell of mildew permeated the data filing room. Chen Ge was the first to enter the room with his hand over his mouth. The wooden shelves looked antique. Placed next to the rusted shelves, they looked quite out of place. “These metallic and wooden shelves seem to have come from different schools.”

Chen Ge took a random document from the wooden shelf. The document was so poorly preserved that once Chen Ge touched it, it started to crumble.

“Bug infestation, water damage, the school doesn’t seem to value these documents at all.” Chen Ge carefully opened the document file. The content inside confused him. “A donation appreciation list? Why does this look so familiar?”

Chen Ge looked through it again, and an image suddenly flashed across his mind. He looked at the file that was filled with holes. “I saw this exact list in the headmaster’s office in Mu Yang High School!”

He studied the list closer and rummaged through his memory. After comparing the donor’s names, he was more certain of his discovery.

Back when he returned to Mu Yang High School to find the headmaster, he had scanned the two-star scenario but could not find the old headmaster.

“The world behind the door is created from the memory of the door-pusher, but this school is rather unique. It seems to have been created from the amalgamation of the memory of everyone who is trapped behind the door.” Chen Ge touched his chin. “Other than the old headmaster, the other students of Mu Yang High School are all currently in my Haunted House. The fact that this list has shown up here, does it mean that the old headmaster is in this school?"

Chen Ge's eyes widened. He looked at the bookshelves, and the longer he looked, the more familiar it felt.

"Could these things have been moved from Mu Yang High School? Has a part of that two-star scenario been moved here?"

"Looks like it is destined for me to meet the old headmaster."

He replaced the document, and his expression was hard to read. "Before unlocking the School of the Afterlife, there are nine missions to complete. Could there be a special relation between these nine missions and the School of the Afterlife?"

"Mr. Bai, what have you found?"

"I did find something, but the implication's still unclear." Chen Ge pulled out another ruined document. It was covered in mildew. "An investigation report of the school perimeter?"

Instead of calling this place a data filing room, it was more like a storage room for a variety of documents. Any documents and information could be found there, including accounting books, graduation forms, the canteen tender list, and so on.

"Mr. Bai!" Zhu Long found a few scrunched up newspapers in the corner. He showed one of them to Chen Ge. "Look at the article in the middle with the zoomed in picture."

"A fire of unknown origin ravaged the education block. Many students were trapped inside the toilet. The brave firemen rushed into the fire to save them." This article was placed in the middle of the paper.

"Based on the arrangement and content, it doesn't sound like the writer is that old." Chen Ge accepted the copy that was stained. A major part of the paper was unreadable. "This looks like the school's school bulletin."

Mu Yang High School was a private charity school; they should not have had the excess budget to have a school newspaper. Chen Ge flipped through the copy and noticed a familiar name—Western Jiujiang Private Academy. The location's name appeared many times, and many articles were about the Western Jiujiang Private Academy.

“Wait, isn’t Zhang Ya from Western Jiujiang Private Academy?”

Chen Ge’s first date had been with the Red Specter at that abandoned school. It was also at that school that he had walked into Zhang Ya’s heart.

“There was a fire at Western Jiujiang Private Academy’s education block?” Thinking back, he did remember seeing many burned bannisters in the school. “This is strange. Not only Western Jiujiang Private Academy, including Mu Yang High School, the schools that I’ve been to have been ravaged by fire before.”

He looked through the paper that Zhu Long had given him again. At the time, the firemen had saved six people from the top floor’s toilet. The paper hailed the firemen as heroes, but he saw an article in the corner that reminded the students about some fire safety knowledge. It mentioned briefly that a student had lost their life in the fire.

“The fire might have spread from the toilet, but why would it start there? It was already after the time for the students’ night study when the fire started. In other words, it was already past normal school time. So, what were those students doing in the top floor toilet?”

Concluding the various articles, Chen Ge quickly zeroed in on the problem. “The fire burned the fourth floor, and the only students were found in the fourth-floor toilet. The firemen saved six students, but there was one who died in the fire. This means that there were seven students in total!”

It was hard to tell what had caused the fire. This was not recorded in any of the files. The child who had died in the fire seemed to have become a taboo topic as well.

“Something like this happened at Western Jiujiang Private Academy before? How come I didn’t feel anything ‘special’ when I visited it?” Chen Ge was confused. “If the toilet’s door was pushed open by the child who died in the fire, then he should be door pusher at Western Jiujiang Private Academy, but the reason the school could qualify as a three-star scenario was because of Zhang Ya!”

Now that Western Jiujiang Private Academy had become part of the Haunted House, Chen Ge could confirm that Zhang Ya was the scariest presence at that school.

“There should be a door in all three-star scenarios, but even though Western Jiujiang private Academy is a three-star scenario, there’s no door.” Chen Ge turned to his shadow and called the name silently in his heart. He repeated it, but there was no reply. “The black phone categorizes Western Jiujiang Private Academy as a three-star scenario because of Zhang Ya, and based on my knowledge, Zhang Ya hasn’t pushed open any doors. Plus, when I went to Western Jiujiang Private Academy, I didn’t encounter a door...”

Chen Ge slowly lowered his hands that held the paper, and a red dress appeared in his mind.

“Zhang Ya, the door that has disappeared, the door-pusher...” Those three terms formed a line in Chen Ge’s mind, and he a possibility suddenly came to him.

His eyes widened as Chen Ge sucked in a cold breath. “Is it possible that the door pusher from Western Jiujiang Private Academy has been consumed by Zhang Ya?”

That would explain why Zhang Ya was so different and so ridiculously strong.

“What happens to the door after the door-pusher has been consumed?” Chen Ge thought about various possibilities. “Due to her spirit, Zhang Ya didn’t become the door pusher. After the door lost the pusher, it should have gone out of control like the door at Li Wan City, but that didn’t happen. The door only shows up at the bedside of these despairing kids... Wait a minute! Could it be searching for a new door-pusher?”

Chen Ge was shocked by his own thought. An ownerless door going on an endless search for a despairing child, and after several years, it transformed itself into a four-star scenario. That sounded impossible, so Chen Ge warned himself from getting ahead of himself.

“There are thirteen easels in the art room, so there should be thirteen painters. They know about the school’s secret. They might be the thirteen door-pusher candidates that the door has found for itself.”

A person’s energy would have a hard time supporting an entire four-star scenario, unless that person had surpassed the limitation of a Red Specter, or it was the cooperation between many Red Specters. No one knew how this would end. After all, Chen Ge had not encountered so many Red Specters in one place before.

“Thirteen, this sure is an unlucky number.” Chen Ge glanced at Zhou Tu. He had been looking for the art club and had dreamed about the scene inside the room with the oil paintings. He should be one of the thirteen painters.

“The door should have its requirements. Zhang Ju obviously doesn’t fulfil those requirements, but Zhou Tu does.” Chen Ge had not expected much from the art room initially, but now after giving it some analysis, he changed his mind. “Zhou Tu’s memory will be key.”

Of the club members, Zhou Tu was the most unique, and Chen Ge was going to face two possible developments. After Zhou Tu’s memory awakened, he might tell Chen Ge everything, or he might become Chen Ge’s enemy.

“This is a big fish. Perhaps I should pay him more attention.” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes at Zhou Tu until the latter shivered from his gaze.

“Mr. Bai, I’m going to go there to take a look.” Zhou Tu found an excuse and scurried deeper into the room.

“Why are you running away? I’m the one who should be scared.” Chen Ge continued searching the room. He believed that the filing room had more surprises for him. Very soon, Chen Ge found more articles about fires inside the room. Flames seemed to have a special significance in the school. They represented destruction but also rebirth.

“There was a fire at Mu Yang High School. There were burn marks on the stairs, and the school used to house a crematorium. Now I’ve discovered that there was also a fire at Western Jiujiang Private Academy. Are these mere coincidences, or is there a deeper meaning behind it?”

Other than the articles about the fire, Chen Ge also found a few rather well-preserved student files. Two of them were quite unique. One of them had Lin Sisi’s name, and there were many comments given about him by the teachers and other students.

Other classmates refused to be his friend, and the teachers ignored him for the most part. The child had lost his mother, and his father was a murderer. He had been adopted when he was young, but for some reason, he always ran away from home and created a lot of trouble. From his perspective, the only person who sincerely wanted to help him was an intern at the children’s home. The young man who had just graduated from university sponsored Lin Sisi through primary school even though he had not settled down himself. He even attended Lin Sisi’s parent-teacher conferences.

Based on the teacher’s observation, only in the intern’s presence would Lin Sisi’s ‘hyperactivity’ improve. The document did not have any actual information or even a picture of Lin Sisi, but there was a handwritten signature—Gu Youjia. The document was moldy and been eaten by bugs. Only the spot with the guardian’s signature was clean and untouched.

“Gu Youjia, Jiujiang Children’s Home. If I can leave this place alive, I should go pay the place a visit.” Chen Ge seemed to be talking to himself, but at the same time, his words appeared to be meant for other ears as well. Then he turned to the other selected document. This document’s date was earlier than every other file. There was no name, and there was no content; there was only one line written on it.

“Just one more minute, one more hour. It will get better. They won’t bully me forever. One day, I will grow up.” The handwriting was uneven and tilted. They did not appear to be written by an adult, more like the handwriting of an injured child.

“Patience and refusal to fight back will only make the bullying worse. It is the same no matter what. Those who gain joy from inflicting pain on others will not practice empathy and self-reflection.” Chen Ge used Lin Sisi’s phone to take a picture before putting the files back.

“The earliest file should have been left behind by the real door pusher. After he pushed open the door, perhaps his personality underwent a drastic change, and he shot down to the other end of the spectrum. If he was the person whom Zhang Ya had consumed, after he perished, the door that he opened might have continued to operate based on his lingering spirit. “If I wish to increase my survivability behind the door, I should try to follow his ideology.”

Bullying never happened to Chen Ge. The closest he had come to being bullied probably happened when he was still in primary school. The teacher had told the students to bring their old toys to school so that they could donate them to the local children’s home.

After everyone had made their donation, Chen Ge had been the only one left who had stood there wordlessly holding his bag. The naughtier kids in class had started to grab at his bag, and in that process, they had accidentally yanked down the zipper. A bloody intestine and a whole bag of decapitated fingers had burst forth like a foundation. The realistic fingers had rolled on the ground like hot dogs. The plastic bloody intestine had bounced several times on the table. It had definitely given the teacher and his classmates a day to remember.

When the vice headmaster came to the class, he had asked the teacher about Chen Ge’s family background. That afternoon, Chen Ge’s parents had been called to the school and then been led to the police station for some questions. In a way, Chen Ge should have been the only kid who got bullied in class but ended up with his parents interrogated by the police. Looking on the bright side, from then on, no one dared bully Chen Ge.

“One shan’t ever bow down to bullying.” Chen Ge had another meaning in that statement. At this school, some of the victims had restarted the cycle. The School of the Afterlife kept expanding. The door that was not completely dyed red would approach all despairing children and incorporate them into the world behind the door. It would repeat their nightmare behind the door and use their souls as bricks to create a giant tomb that could capture real life.

They looked through the data filing room for a long time until the familiar stench returned. Chen Ge quickly led the members away from the room.

“Sir, our luck is not bad. The stench only came to find us after we’d looked through so many things,” Zhu Long whispered.

“It’s not luck. Someone distracted the monsters for us.” Chen Ge was not sure whether Chang Gu was helping him or not. However, he knew that something was happening in the school, and those things were probably related to the Chang siblings.

“Let’s go. We’re heading to the lab building next.” Chen Ge turned to Zhou Tu. “Have you come to a decision?”

Chapter 824 - Red Specter Club

Chapter 824: Red Specter Club

Memory is a hard thing to describe. It is like snow that will not melt, light that is disappearing. The memories that you wish to catch, you cannot; the memories that you wish to forget, you cannot.

Zhou Tu had been troubled by that dream for a long time. He knew that he was different from others, but there was real no evidence. In the end, he had gotten lost in deep self-doubt. That was, until the day he met Chen Ge.

The man was the first to give Zhou Tu confirmation. His dream was all real. What he had experienced was not fake but a part of the memory seared in his brain that could not be deleted. Zhou Tu found the answer that he was looking for, but at the same time, he sunk into a dangerous whirlpool. He did not know whether following Chen Ge would lead to more tragedy or salvation.

Chen Ge stood before Zhou Tu and asked once more, "Have you made up your mind?"

"I..."

"If you have not, you can take a look at him." Zhang Ju and Wang Yicheng suddenly walked over. They held Zhou Tu from either side. "Zhu Long, come over here."

Zhu Long, who walked at the back, was in an unstable state. His gaze was strange like it was burning. It appeared that he was about to lose it.

"What have you two done to him?" Chen Ge looked at Zhu Long's left hand. The hand that held the pink phone was bursting with veins.

"We found a half-destroyed article in the data filing room. A courier who worked at the university went missing in the school. After several days of investigation, a body that was no longer recognizable as a human's was found inside the autopsy room's storage." Zhang Ju handed the severely damaged article to Chen Ge. "The body was him—Zhu Long."

The fake memory had been shattered. When Zhu Long saw that article, he had remembered many things. He had studied very hard; his only dream was to get into the university of his dreams, but reality was always so cruel. The girl that he liked was a hardworking student. She got into the best medical university while his studies were a mess, and he could not even scrounge up enough money for a retest. His family was poor. His only family member fell seriously ill, and their health was fast deteriorating.

Bad fortune would not let him go, but it did not defeat this young man. He learned how to take care of the ill and supported the whole family on his shoulders. When he went searching for work, people complained about how he looked sleepy, so he went to cut away his messy long hair. People thought his tattoo might scare the customers, so he used a small knife to shear away the thin layer of skin. He was not defeated; he finally found a stable job—a courier.

He was hardworking and friendly with determination in his eyes and a smile on his face. He tried his best to survive and depended on hard work to receive respect and stability. After surviving a hard summer break, he had gotten used to the job. He worked late every day, and the only source of his joy was in delivering to Jiujiang Medical University. There would be anticipation in his heart whenever he entered the school compound. He knew that the girl was at this school. Even if he caught a glimpse of her from faraway, he would be satisfied, and that joy could last him for a day. The school was not that big, but it was not that small either; it was hard to tell when he would be able to cross paths with her.

He imagined the event when they would meet in his mind many times, but when the girl really showed up, he realized that none of his preparation was enough. He was so nervous that he could not speak, like a child who had been caught with his hand in the cookie jar.

After that day, they exchanged contact information. The girl was surprisingly active. She liked to be in control, and Zhu Long mistook that as affection. His obedience traded for a mental torment. The girl liked to torture Zhu Long; her favorite habit was reminding Zhu Long that he was not worth anything. The confidence that he had built was shattered just like that. Zhu Long became a puppet in the girl's hand, but the scariest thing was that Zhu Long did not realize that.

The boy who did not have a cunning bone in his body was no match for the girl who was an expert in criminology and autopsies. He was like a defeathered chicken laid bare on the girl's dining table, a feast to be had. Eventually, the torture evolved from a mental phase to a physical phase. As death approached, Zhu Long finally understood everything, but it was too late. Blood leaked out from his wounds. Zhu Long gripped the pink phone and stared at the article that Chen Ge was holding. His memory had finally returned.

"Do you know which part of the human flesh is pink?" Blood vessels sewed up his skin like a needle and thread. Zhu Long took deliberate steps toward Chen Ge. "Just as a flesh wound is about to heal, that is when it's the pinkest. She had a preference for pink."

Zhu Long's body started to distort. Sewing marks appeared on his body. It was hard to imagine what he had gone through before his death.

"Yet another Half Red Specter." Chen Ge's eyes were curiously calm. When Zhu Long was two steps away from him, he raised both of his arms to hug Zhu Long. "I wish you to understand one thing. No matter the time or the reason, any action that harms others shouldn't be allowed, even if it is in the name of love."

Looking at the boy before him, Chen Ge's heart wrenched with pain. He patted Zhu Long's shoulders. "I have no idea what's on your mind now, but I can give you a promise. If we manage to leave this school, I will help you go and meet that girl again."

The blood threads that sewed through Zhu Long's body stopped. Zhu Long stared right at Chen Ge before slowly lowering his head. "You have a promise."

Holding the pink phone, Zhu Long silently retreated to behind Chen Ge.

Zhu Long and Zhang Ju's shirts were still turning red. Even though they were not yet Red Specters, they could be considered powerful Half Red Specters. With Wang Yicheng as well, Chen Ge would not be afraid if he ran into a normal Red Specter.

"It's time to head to the lab." Chen Ge did not ask for Zhou Tu's opinion this time. He had gotten the answer from the child's gaze. After seeing what had happened to Zhu Long, his fingers dug into his flesh. He should also have an unfulfilled wish, but he had forgotten what it was. Walking through the brush, Chen Ge led the members to the lab building. This was his second visit there that night.

“The Red Specter should still be in the guardroom. If we run into him, it’s the perfect chance to return the uniform to him.” Chen Ge had more confidence this time. He led his students and stopped outside the building.

“This building is the lair of those upside-down monsters. The art club, which is our destination, is on the fourth floor. After we visit the place, whether Zhou Tu’s memory is awakened or not, we have to leave immediately.” Chen Ge walked to the one of the windows of the first-floor room. “Now, come with me.”

The students looked at each other, and then they saw Chen Ge climb easily up to the second floor.

“I told you he’s a physical education teacher.” Zhang Ju, Zhu Long, and Wang Yicheng had awakened their memory. Scaling walls was nothing for Specters, but Zhou Tu showed difficulty on his face.

Chapter 825 - I See Myself

“Quick, it’s very dangerous inside the building. This is the safest route.” Chen Ge had the most experience. He avoided all possible rooms that might pose a danger and swiftly climbed up to the third floor. Stepping on the outside box of the air conditioner, Chen Ge half-squatted on the outside of the building, waiting for the rest to catch up. “The secret will be revealed soon. The key for the lock is on its way. When Zhou Tu enters the art room, everything will be answered.”

Zhou Tu used to be an obedient child. He lived within the rules set out by his teachers and parents, and he never stepped one foot out of the boundary. He was well protected from danger and thus was spared the ‘bad scenes’ that were privy only to the bad kids. When they reached the third floor, Zhou Tu’s arms were already shaking. He did not dare look down, and his face was pale. “Sir, are we there yet?”

“It’s on the fourth floor.” His hands holding the edge of the windowsill, Chen Ge climbed to the outside of the art room and glanced in through the gap in the curtain. The art room had returned to normal, but the colors on the oil paintings appeared to have become more vibrant like the paintings had just been done, and the paint was still wet. The windowsill was too small for even one person to fit. Chen Ge was worried that Zhou Tu might lose control once he caught sight of the oil paintings, so after ensuring the safety, he signaled for Zhou Tu to climb into the room next to the art room.

“Go in first. Don’t worry, I’ll be behind you.” The fourth floor was very high. The night wind buffeted against their bodies. Zhou Tu forced a nod and climbed, following the direction given by Chen Ge. After Zhou Tu got into the room, Chen Ge waved for the others to follow.

“One, two, three, four?” Other than Zhou Tu, four shadows had slipped into the fourth floor.

“There’s an extra one?” Chen Ge was the last to enter the room. He looked around with a frown. The room was not big, and the only people there were his club members. “When you guys came in, did you sense anything weird?”

“There’s nothing obviously out of place, but once I saw the building, there was this discomfort, and now that we’re in the building, that feeling only grew,” Zhang Ju said, and the scars on his face started to crawl like snakes. He seemed to be very anxious. Zhang Ju’s shirt was almost red. He was one step away from being a Red Specter. To make him feel uncomfortable just being in the building’s vicinity meant that there were probably more than one Red Specter inside the building. This place was more dangerous than Chen Ge had thought. Combined with the extra shadow that he had seen, he reminded himself to be more careful.

“After we go to the art room, whether Zhou Tu awakens his memory or not, we have to leave this place,” Chen Ge told them. After everyone agreed, they left the room. The corridor of the fourth floor had not changed much since the previous time Chen Ge visited it. It was eerie and dark like it had not been used in years.

“Zhou Tu, the art club that you’re looking for is on the fourth floor, and the scene from your dream is just next door.” Chen Ge smelled the stench in the air once he exited the room. He knew very well that the upside-down monsters were patrolling the area. So far, they had not attracted their attention, but the longer they stayed, the bigger their chance of being exposed. This time, Chang Gu might not show up to save them again, so he had to move fast.

“Stop looking around and head over there. Haven’t you been yearning to join the art club? Open that door, and the memory from your dream will be awakened!” Chen Ge had already wasted a lot of time there. The longer he stayed, the more unsafe he felt. Chang Gu’s appearance had given him hope of clearing the scenario another way.

“It’s right here?” Zhou Tu walked out of the room and stopped before the door. He grabbed the door handle but did not have the courage to push it open.

“Why are you hesitating? The answer that you’re looking for is behind the door! No matter the result, as long as you wish to recover your memory, don’t hesitate! Open it!” Chen Ge had lost his patience. The extra shadow seemed to have disappeared. The stench around them thickened, and the anxiety that he felt grew. Zhou Tu was the last member to have his memory recovered. He had witnessed what had happened to the rest, he knew the imminent pain, so he was under a great amount of pressure. To live in a fake but safe world or to regain his painful but true memory—anyone would struggle to choose. Zhou Tu was caught in a difficult conundrum. He gritted his teeth, and his chest rose. His knuckles turned white before finally pushing the door open!

BANG!

Because he shoved so hard, the door knocked into the wall, creating a loud crack. The member of the club huddled to the door and gazed into the room.

“Were these paintings done by students? Why would they paint something like this?”

The other members mumbled among themselves. They were curious about the art room. Only Chen Ge and Zhou Tu were quiet. Chen Ge had been there once, so he could keep calm. However, Zhou Tu looked like he had lost the ability to speak due to shock.

“Don’t just stand there. We’ll get spotted.” Chen Ge waved for everyone to get into the room. He walked in last.

“I know. Now you understand how surprised I was when I heard your description, and that’s why I promised to bring you here.” Chen Ge had a warm smile on his face like he was a big brother who could forgive anything. “Go in and take a look. Search for your past. Think about why you’re here. No matter the choice you make, I hope you remember this—we are not enemies.”

Zhou Tu might be a Red Specter, so Chen Ge had to be prepared to ensure that he would not be surprised by a sudden betrayal. Entering the art room, everything was red. The walls were red; the tiles were red; the paintings were red; even the stain on the wall was red. This was a red world. It was like a living hell, but at the same time, colored with an indescribable sense of artistry.

Zhou Tu looked at the thirteen easels in the room dumbly. His eyes moved over the easels one by one before falling on the fourth easel.

“I’ve been to this room before, I’ve taken these steps.” Slowly walking to the fourth easel, when Zhou Tu looked at the painting that sat on the easel, he froze.

“Zhou Tu?” No matter how hard they nudged him, he did not reply. There was a rush of red coming from the bottom of his eyes. His soul seemed to have been sucked into the painting.

“I can see it. The me inside the painting crying out to me.”

Chapter 826: Finally Here, the Fourteenth

“The you inside the painting?” Chen Ge leaned over to look. He had seen all thirteen paintings in the room, and he believed that he had some impression of the fourth painting. “You painted this?”

Zhou Tu did not answer. His soul appeared to have been sucked into the painting as he stared at it. The fourth painting was about this art room.

...

The upper half of the painting showed thirteen painters sitting at their chairs while the lower half of the painting was blood red. All thirteen painters died on their chairs in different ways. It was strange because the painters in the upper part of the painting were painting their own deaths. Those painters knew about their endings, but they did not choose to escape from it but recorded everything as it was.

When Chen Ge first came to the art room, he had stopped beside this painting for a long time. He was surprised that it was Zhou Tu who had painted this. As he looked closer, he noticed that the painter who sat in the fourth chair bore some similarities to Zhou Tu.

All the other paintings are expressing an inverted world; only this painting is themed with the painters themselves.

Chen Ge did not disturb Zhou Tu. His eyes wandered between the painting and Zhou Tu.

What has Zhou Tu experienced? Why would his painting be so different?

There were thirteen painters, and Zhou Tu was the fourth. He was not the oldest nor the youngest, but he had the most unique perspective. Unlike the others when their memory awakened, Zhou Tu merely stood next to the easel. There was no change to his body, but the atmosphere in the art room was slowly changing. It was hard to describe, like the people in the paintings had all opened their eyes, looking at the people outside the paintings.

“How come it suddenly feel so cold?” Wang Yicheng shrunk his neck and hid behind Zhang Ju. He looked around with a trace of fear in his eyes.

“Zhou Tu?” Zhang Ju had a bad feeling as well. He patted Zhou Tu on his shoulder lightly. His lashes blinked. Zhou Tu’s body seemed to have frozen. His eyes scanned the room, and there was no blood on his face.

“Am I dead?” The hoarse voice echoed from the throat. At the same time, the fourth painter in the painting suddenly moved. The painter dropped the paintbrush that he was holding, and his hands gripped his neck. His legs kicked out underneath him like an invisible noose had been wrung around his neck. His eyes bulged out from their sockets. He struggled with all his might, but his body slowly slid down the chair. Blood rushed to his brain, and his expression was one of despair. He was slowly becoming the Zhou Tu inside the painting.

The scariest thing was, in the lower half of the painting, the Zhou Tu who was in the blood world started to have a smile blossom on his face.

“Zhou Tu, your neck!” Wang Yicheng pointed at Zhou Tu’s neck and shouted. The Zhou Tu who stood outside the painting started to transform into the Zhou Tu inside the painting. A purple line appeared around his neck. As time progressed, the purple color intensified. His neck turned at an abnormal angle as the sound of dripping echoed in their ears. Following the sound, Chen Ge realized that the Zhou Tu who was trapped inside the blood red world of the painting had come alive. His bloodied body was crawling inside the painting. His face was stuck close to the surface, his lips tore open, and blood slid down his face. The bulging eyes looked straight at the Zhou Tu who was outside the painting. He seemed ready to crawl out from the painting to pull Zhou Tu into it!

“Mr. Bai, do we need to move Zhou Tu away?” The sound of dripping increased; it was coming from all sides of the art room!

Turning to look, the club members realized that every character in the different paintings had come to life. They were crawling on the surface of the painting like they were in the progress of coming out!

Last time, when I was here with the shadow, this didn’t happen. Is this because they’ve sensed Zhou Tu?

Reality showed the uniqueness of Zhou Tu again. Chen Ge signaled for the other members to stick close to Zhou Tu. Once things worsened, they would forcibly drag Zhou Tu away. The blood on the painting turned redder, bursting with a blood mist. The scent of blood started to fill the air.

“Things are not looking good!” Zhang Ju and Zhu Long stood around Zhou Tu. They realized that the blood mist in the room had started to gather toward Zhou Tu like a giant man-eating flower that was opening its petals. “These things want to enter Zhou Tu’s body!”

The blood fog avoided everyone else and stuck to Zhou Tu.

“Mr. Bai, we can’t wait any longer! We need to hurry and leave!” To prevent Zhou Tu from being consumed by the blood mist, out of concern, Zhu Long reached out to grip Zhou Tu’s arm. He wished to pull Zhou Tu out from the fog, but once he pulled, the blood fog coagulated into a physical rope and circled itself around Zhou Tu’s neck, hanging the young man in the middle of the room.

“Zhou Tu!” The rope lassoed around Zhou Tu’s neck. Zhou Tu swung in the room like a pendulum. He looked just like himself in the painting.

He had already seen his own death and had recorded the picture of his death perfectly.

“I have painted my own death. I can see myself getting hanged to death. I can see the breath leaving my body...”

The atmosphere in the room darkened, and more blood stains leaked out from the paintings. As Zhou Tu swung in the middle of the room, the characters inside the paintings appeared to be caught in a maddening party.

“Hanging is different from any other death. Unlike using knife piercing through the heart, after a short period of numbness, the body will feel like it’s being burned as pain spreads through the body. This is a very gentle way to die. As strength seeps away and oxygen decreases, the despair increases. You will be able to experience every second of your death.”

A male voice echoed in the room. It seemed to have originated from one of the paintings, but it also felt like it came from the edges of the walls and floor. Chen Ge could not ascertain where it came from, but he knew that the person who spoke then was similar to the one who had intervened at the education block’s top floor toilet.

“There is no need to fear death. I know you will return. No matter how many times you try to run, you’ll always be one of us.” The voice seemed to be speaking to Zhou Tu. It was impossible to tell where it came from. If one listened closely, one might even suspect that the voice had come from Zhou Tu’s own mouth.

“Do not resist. You have completed your mission. Take your seat quietly and wait for the last painter to arrive.”

The blood mist surrounded Zhou Tu, and the young man became scary. His body was shrinking at an impossible speed. Just as everyone had their attention on Zhou Tu, a fourteenth easel appeared in the room.

The mist rolled around the fourteenth easel, and a faded red color was left on the paper that was as smooth as human skin. From a far, it looked like the fluttering of a red dress.

Not just Zhou Tu, the other thirteen easels in the middle of the room had also started to change. The blood expanded on the paintings, and the originally inverted paintings started to morph. The side that was normal was overwhelmed by blood, and screams escaped from inside the paintings.

“Mr. Bai, what is happening?”

All the paintings in the room could be split into upper and lower halves. The upper half reflected real life while the lower half was covered in red. When the blood red color started to spread, the characters originally belonging to the lower part of the paintings started to crawl to the other side, following the blood. They used various methods, utilizing the tools in the paintings to kill the normal versions of themselves.

The inverted world was being destroyed. The strange thing was that more blood vessels leaked out from the characters who were killed inside the paintings, and they all rushed toward the thirteenth easel. The picture on the painting started to sharpen. Everyone's blood started to combine together to create a red dress.

BANG!

The pale-looking Zhou Tu was slammed against the ground by the blood vessels. His body was damaged like a sponge that had been overstretched. The blood mist that enveloped him thickened, and they slowly flowed toward the fourteenth easel. The girl's dress fluttered in the sea of blood. Screaming faces were printed on the dress, and her feet stepped on screaming souls; it was like a flower blooming in the depths of despair. Compared to everything around her, she appeared so unique and different. Standing inside the cage made of negative emotions and curses, the dress was the world's brightest red.

As the blood gathered, the fourteenth painting became clearer. On the mirror shards that littered the ground, she stood barefooted in the abandoned school. The blood red dress stuck to her skin. Her snow-white neck was arced back like a bloody swan. The painting only had the girl's back. Even with everything from the previous thirteen paintings, they only managed to carve out her back. Standing before the paintings, Chen Ge could not help himself from moving to the fourteenth painting. He was certain in his heart that the girl inside the painting was none other than Zhang Ya!

“Everyone is here. Those I've saved, those that have saved me. Those I've killed and those that have killed me. Everyone is finally here.” The man's voice echoed again. When the first sentence was uttered, it was a male voice, but as it continued, the voice started to become more unisex.

“Who are you? How do you know what she looks like?” Chen Ge stood next to the fourteenth painting. “Where is she?”

Zhang Ya was hibernating in his shadow. Chen Ge was worried that the enemy might make use of this opportunity to harm her. After all, the school might belong to a Greater Red Specter. There was no reply. The voice slowly disappeared amid the dripping sound. All the paintings in the art room were filled with blood. Rationality and artistry were destroyed by brute force, and only a bloody stain remained.

Why is Zhang Ya the fourteenth painting? Has all of this been planned?

Inside the four-star scenario, Chen Ge felt so miniscule. Even with so many club members by his side, he felt unsafe; he had merely been able to keep his anxiety in check.

Before things ended for real, Chen Ge would not expose his real thoughts. But this time, it was different. When he saw Zhang Ya appear in the painting, his heart had jumped into his throat.

Zhang Ya is related to the School of the Afterlife! This time, Zhang Ya is not my trump card but one of the chess pieces!

Fourteen paintings represented fourteen people. One of them had Lin Sisi's signature, and one of them recorded Zhou Tu's death. Chen Ge had already met the owner of the school and possibly brushed shoulders with him in the school.

They were competitors and also partners. To achieve the final goal, there was no bottom line that they would not cross.

The goals in School of the Afterlife are escaping and finding a scapegoat. The person who will end up bearing all the negative emotions behind the door will probably be chosen from one of the fourteen painters.

Chen Ge had no idea what was going to happen next. Everyone in the school was looking for a scapegoat, so he suspected that was the owner's plan as well. After all, the door's pusher had already been consumed by Zhang Ya. So, theoretically speaking, the owner of this school was himself a scapegoat.

This four-star scenario is huge, and it's nowhere near ending. To support a door like this, one would be under enormous negative emotions.

The art room was located at the very end of the corridor. The change here had started to affect the rest of the building. Blood red paint leaked into the walls, and blood vessels crept along them like a type of extremely resilient plant that sucked on dead bodies as nutrients. The people in the paintings were bleeding. They beat on the surface of the paintings repeatedly with scary expressions, but they were unable to escape from the paintings.

"Quick... you have to leave!" Zhou Tu, who was now as thin as stick, woke up from his unconsciousness. He raised his twig-like arm and grabbed Zhang Ju beside him. "He's coming. The painter is coming."

"The painter?" Zhang Ju was sure that this was the first time that he had heard the term in that setting, but for some reason, when he heard the term, his body naturally started to shake.

Just the mention of a word caused a Half Red Specter to shiver, which was unimaginable for Chen Ge.

"We need to leave this place first." Chen Ge signaled for Zhang Ju and Zhu Long to carry Zhou Tu. He was the first to rush to the door and pull it open. A stench and chill rushed into the room, causing Chen Ge to take several steps back. He looked a closer look and saw a man in a red uniform leaning against the door outside. His body was tilted, and he leaned against the door like he was eavesdropping.

“A Red Specter...” When Chen Ge first came to the lab building, he had run into this Specter, but he had been lucky last time to have escaped.

“Are you one of the staff here as well? This place is not safe. If you wish to talk this out with us, we can go to another place first.” Chen Ge tried to communicate with the man, but before he even finished, a scent of blood drifted from behind him.

“Be careful!” Zhang Ju and Zhu Long stood either side of Chen Ge, and they were each stepping on top of a ghostly face.

Lowering his head to look, Chen Ge noticed that the Red Specter outside the door seemed to have the hobby of collecting human faces. On the floor where he was standing, many human faces were squeezed around him.

Ding Dong Ding Dong...

The sound of metal clanking came out from the Specter’s waist. His red uniform was blown open by the wind to reveal the various autopsy tools that were hidden underneath.

The bloody faces looked like balloons whose air had leaked out. The wrinkly faces stuck to the ground. If not for Zhang Ju and Zhu Long, those things would have crawled onto Chen Ge already.

However, there was something that drew Chen Ge’s attention. When facing against this Red Specter, Zhu Long and Zhang Ju showed no fear. They were different from Xu Yin, who was maddened to the core. Zhu Long and Zhang Ju were extremely rational, and their expressions were calm. It was as if there was a voice in their heads telling them that there was no need to be afraid.

When the Red Specter saw Zhu Long and Zhang Ju, he did not launch an attack directly. He slowly lifted his head, and his face was covered behind a curtain of wet hair. Chen Ge could make out a face covered in black veins through the gap. It was pale and crazed. He seemed to be smiling.

Drip drop.

A middle-aged man’s face slid down the man’s sleeve and dropped between him and Chen Ge.

“Save me, this demon likes to peel people’s faces off. Save...”

Pa!

Before the man could finish, a blood red boot landed heavily on the face. His words were forcibly interrupted, and his face shattered into pieces. The room was very quiet. Because it was so quiet, the sound of blood dripping became very clear. The blood on the boot deepened. Originally, the color had faded, but now, it felt like the boot had been red from the very beginning.

“Move out of the way. We are not his target.” The weak Zhou Tu lifted his head to glance at the Red Specter; there was no uncertainty in his eyes. “This monster stayed here for this day. He wishes to be the first to see inside the art room because he is the custodian and also a participant.”

“He’s the creator of the sixth painting, the monster that connected the two inverted worlds!”

While Zhou Tu said that, he kept his eyes on the Red Specter. His memory had awakened. Even though he was still weak, there was an extra presence about him. The Red Specter at the door did not get mad from being called a monster. If anything, he seemed to like that. The sound of footsteps echoed inside the art room. The Red Specter walked past Chen Ge, leaving a trail of blood behind as he headed to the middle of the room. He finally stopped beside the sixth painting and looked at the painting that had already morphed into something unrecognizable.

Chen Ge could remember part of the sixth painting. There was someone carrying a big mirror, but he tripped, and the mirror was shattered. The ground was littered with glass shards, and each shard reflected a blood red human face.

“Ignore him, we’ll leave now.” Zhou Tu was being supported by Wang Yicheng as they headed toward the door. Chen Ge also did not want to mess with the monster at that moment, so he followed the other members out of the building. “Are we still going through the window?”

Wang Yicheng pulled open the door of the classroom next door. The mannequin that was covered under the white cloth started to change. Blood stains silently appeared under the cloth.

“Most of the painting ingredients and props inside this building were made by that monster.” Zhou Tu still looked weak. He did not look better even after they had left the art room. “Including the red paint and those foul-smelling painting canvases.”

Zhou Tu did not need to go into details, and everyone already knew what had gone into making of these materials.

“So many people died at this abandoned school?” Chen Ge was confused. “I saw several storage rooms on the fourth floor, and they are filled with painting materials.”

“I know many things but not everything.” Zhou Tu treated Chen Ge strangely. Compared to before, it was not better or worse, but there was a trace of caution in his tone. Suddenly, a loud crash came from the art room. The group turned to look. The red monster’s back was split open, and his back expanded. His spine expanded outward, and tools meant for cruelty dangled from each bone. He stood facing away from the door. He appeared to be using those tools to edit the painting.

“Stay away from him.” Zhou Tu had Wang Yicheng open the window. The glass window was opened, and Zhou Tu and Wang Yicheng left first. Chen Ge followed close behind, but he paused when he stood beside the window. There was someone standing in the shadow at the north western corner of the building. He was wearing a pair of black leather shoes, and his face was pale while his gaze was dim. He was hugging a little girl’s pajamas and a dog collar.

Mr. Bai?

With his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge caught sight of Mr. Bai easily. He also saw the blood stains on the pajamas.

Has something happened to his daughter?

Mr. Bai, who hid in the shadow, spotted Chen Ge as well. He had been lying in wait for a long time. He had not made his move probably because he did not expect Chen Ge to be in the company of so many people.

This is the real Mr. Bai. I stole his identification and his identity. I don't think that will make a good impression on the members if I'm found out.

Chen Ge felt like Zhang Ju and the rest should have already guessed by now that he was not a member of staff there, but no one had torn down this lie. At least on the surface, everyone tried to maintain this disguise.

I'll have to find a reason to get rid of him first. Destroying evidence should be something familiar to many around me.

There was another Specter hiding in Chen Ge's shadow. He was the one who had set the curse on Chen Ge, but now he had become one of Chen Ge's chess pieces. With the decision made, the way Chen Ge looked at Mr. Bai softened. He moved faster and only took one minute to get to the bottom of the building.

Where is he?

When he landed, Chen Ge looked toward the corner again, but Mr. Bai was already gone.

"What are you doing?" Zhou Tu's voice dwindled like he was going to disappear at any moment. "I don't have much time left. I have something to tell all of you. This is not only related to whether I can find myself but also related to all of your survival."

"Do tell, we're listening." Zhang Ju and Zhu Long stood adjacent to Chen Ge. They were huddled together.

"The thirteen paintings in the art room represent thirteen people. Each of them are like the Red Specter we just encountered, incredibly scary." Zhou Tu gasped for air. After Wang Yicheng carried him into the brush and away from the lab, he continued. "The order has nothing to do with their strength. It's completely randomized, but there is an exception."

"An exception?"

"Number One is an exception. I have no memory of Number One; I only know that he likes painting and is a painter."

“Number One is unique. He is different from everyone else; he was the first student at this school.” Zhou Tu’s eyes scanned the other members. “In other words, he is a big reason the school is what it is now.”

“When you mentioned the painter, I felt a natural sense of fear. Just the word caused fear to grip my heart.” Zhang Ju’s body was almost dyed red. His face was like melted wax, looking very scary.

“That is a normal response because before you became a monster, you would have met him. You are one of his creations.” Zhou Tu revealed another secret. “Everything that you’ve experienced after you entered the door was personally arranged by the painter, but there was a little accident in your case.”

“How do you know about these things? Didn’t you say earlier that you do not know anything about the painter?”

“Because I am like you. To be more precise, other than the painter himself, everyone is his creation!” Zhou Tu’s words belied his deep-seated fear. “You, me, Lin Sisi, Wang Yicheng, and everyone at this school, we are all the painter’s creations. Ever since we entered the door, we started our lives inside the painter’s script.”

“If it is as you say, then what is the explanation behind the accident that happened to Zhang Ju?” Chen Ge did not fully believe in Zhou Tu yet. This was not because he suspected that Zhou Tu was lying to him, but there were certain things that Zhou Tu would not know about either like Zhang Ya’s existence. The door pusher in Western Jiujiang Private Academy was Zhang Ya, so no matter the case with other people, of the fourteen paintings, at least one would not be the painter’s creation.

“The painter was too careless. He didn’t expect someone to betray him.” Zhou Tu sucked in a deep breath and turned his neck around with difficulty to look at Zhang Ju. "You should have heard of the name Chang Wenyu."

"Of course, she betrayed her promise and stole my left eye and made me her scapegoat." Zhang Ju had a bad impression of Chang Wenyu.

"Who she betrayed wasn't you but the painter." Zhou Tu's voice hastened like he was using his last breath to defend Chang Wenyu. "Chang Wenyu was the second person to enter this school and the only person who has successfully escaped this place!"

"What are you trying to say?"

"She used actual action to tell us one thing. Other than following the painter's script, there are other choices for us to pick. We need to obey not the painter but the real owner of this school." Veins popped around Zhou Tu's neck. His physical condition was getting worse.

Since the beginning, Chen Ge had been curious about the school's owner. After all, they might be a Greater Red Specter. "Can you tell me who the real owner of this school is?"

Zhou Tu looked at Chen Ge deeply and uttered, "We are."

"We?"

"Yes, all the despair of the bullied is forged into the school's foundations. After a lost and young soul enters the door, they are combined into a monster that keeps growing." Zhou Tu pointed at himself and the people around him. "We are inside this monster's body; we are part of this monster. This place has our memory, but it is also our home and our body."

Chen Ge understood what Zhou Tu was trying to express. The owner of the School of the Afterlife was not one person but a kind of spirit. After the door-pusher died, there was no new door-pusher who came to support the negative emotions behind the door. The door kept searching for despair and led these despairing souls behind the door. Chen Ge suddenly understood why the black phone would name this place the School of the Afterlife.

The school was a normal scenario, but under the influence of despair and negative emotion, the scenario itself gained some kind of consciousness, and thus, a door that could move on its own was born. Other doors were pushed open by people in despair and were frozen inside a part of the blood world, but this door would voluntarily show up next to victims in despair. It offered an escape to those people and provided a home for wandering souls, but at the same time, it deprived them of their lives.

“No, something’s wrong,” Chen Ge suddenly said. “If there is no way to leave this school, how did Chang Wenyu manage to do so? The children who enter the school should be given some kind of choice, and each choice made corresponds to a type of ending!”

“Even though I have no idea why you would suddenly bring that up, you’re right.” Zhou Tu followed Chen Ge’s lead. “The school has its own consciousness, and everyone who enters the school will be given a choice. Different choices lead to different outcomes. Some choose to go back to real life after experiencing despair; some embrace the despair and become part of the school; some choose to give up, forget everything, and close their eyes. There are many choices. At least, that’s what Chang Wenyu told me.”

“If what you’re saying is true, then the school is not a bad place, at least not for these despairing children.”

“The school itself is not wrong; the one who’s wrong is the painter. He has changed the rules and cut off the way out, forcing everyone to stay here.” Zhou Tu’s voice was getting louder, but his body was getting weaker.

“Why would he do that?” Zhang Ju could not understand.

“I have no idea what he’s planning. I only know that there was someone who tried to challenge the painter. Chang Wenyu was successful while the others and I failed.” The weak Zhou Tu leaned on Zhang Ju. “Whenever there’s a problem in the art room, the painter will show up. He will be here soon. If you do not wish to have your memory erased and turn back into a mindless puppet, you have to figure out a way to leave.”

“Do we still have time?” Zhang Ju was pessimistic. “We are facing the painter. The few of us do not even stand a chance against him.”

“On me?” Chen Ge was shocked. “Are you sure it’s Chang Wenyu? Not another person?”

“I am sure.” Zhou Tu did not catch the other meaning that Chen Ge was trying to hint at. He nodded affirmatively.

“But I haven’t met Chang Wenyu. How could I have her presence?” Chen Ge shook his hands.

“Perhaps you have something of hers on you or are related to her. Maybe you two are lovers.”

“Stop right there.” Chen Ge gritted his teeth. “It sounds like you’re trying to set me up.”

Zhou Tu did not think it was that big of a deal to sense Chang Wenyu on Chen Ge. He kept persuading Chen Ge. “We’ve all forgotten part of our memory. Perhaps among that missing memory is the secret. There’s no need to worry. My hunches have always been accurate.”

Chapter 830 - Chen Ge's Choice

Chapter 830: Chen Ge's Choice

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

"I'm not worried about your hunch but something else." Chen Ge could not explain the exact situation to the students; he could only think about it on his own.

Why would Chang Wenyu's presence linger around me? Is it because I've spent an extended period of time with her brother or because Chang Gu has left something of Chang Wenyu's with me?

"There's no need to panic. You'll eventually recover your memory; I have faith in you." Zhou Tu did not quite understand Chen Ge's circumstances. "Don't waste your energy in inconsequential places. What I'm going to tell you next is very important.

"Every student that enters the school will be given a choice. Each choice leads to different results. The standard of judgement is not with the painter but is based on the school's own consciousness. The monster that has collected everyone's despairing school is the real owner of this school; the painter is at most his spokesperson.

"What we need to do is get the school's approval and follow through one of the choices to the very end before embracing the corresponding outcome with open arms." Zhou Tu thought about it. "The painter's choice is probably to escape from reality and create a home for all the lost souls behind the door; Chang Wenyu's choice should be to find a way to escape from the school to return to the real world. We should follow the path left behind by Chang Wenyu, but the prerequisite is that we have to get the school's approval."

"How you do suggest we go about doing that?"

"Do not think of this school as a detached scenario. Think of it as a person, a person who was bullied and filled with despair." When Zhou Tu said that, he lowered his voice to the minimum. He had a strange expression. With each word, his face darkened like saying that in the school would get him cursed. "To get the school's approval, you have to elicit its resonance. The painter, for example, creates a home to console the loneliness inside the school's consciousness and allow it a place to stay, or like Chang Wenyu, we can choose to escape."

"I understand what you mean, but from how I see it, be it to escape or to build a fake home, neither will solve the problem." Chen Ge had his own idea. "My decision might not be correct, but if I am bullied, I will use the most direct method to fight back."

"What do you plan to do? Chang Wenyu and the painter have already provided us with two shortcuts. We only need to follow one of them." Zhou Tu frowned slightly. He saw the fire burning in Chen Ge's eyes, and that kind of fire was very rare in this eerie school.

"No one is willing to be bullied. As long as there's a chance to fight back, they will grab it." Chen Ge stood at the edge of the brush and looked at the large school compound. "The basic rule of this world is still survival of the fittest. The weak like to follow the strong or stick close to the strong, and the easiest way for the strong to showcase their strength is to control the weak and express their dominance over the weak. This is so juvenile and yet so realistic. Since we are now inside this school, we should follow its rules."

"The rules?"

"It's the bullied victims' souls that make the consciousness of the school, so to get their approval, there is another way to go." Chen Ge took a big step out of the brush. "That is to reinstate one's spot in the cycle and bully back those who dare bully us."

Chen Ge had a real leap in his thoughts. The members were surprised by his statement. "Are you sure you want to do that? Not only might that fail to get the school's approval, it might cause them to be reminded of their weak past selves and turn hostile toward us."

"Human beings are strange creatures. Only when pain is inflicted on them would they understand how painful certain things can be. My choice might not be the best choice, but it is my favorite choice." He waited for a long time, but there was no reply, so Chen Ge turned around to look at his members. "Why are you all looking at me like that?"

"What you said is different from how you usually act," Zhang Ju said. "I mean, that does not sound like what a teacher should say."

"Then it only shows that you do not know me well enough." Chen Ge placed his hand on Zhang Ju's shoulder with a smile. "Most people have a demon and an angel in their heart. Whenever they wish to do something, there will be a heated discussion between the two parties, and that will cause hesitation, but it is different for me."

"You wish to say there is only a demon left in your heart?" Zhang Ju's ugly pupils stared at Chen Ge. He tried to find the answer from Chen Ge's expression.

"It's the exact opposite. The demon in my heart has been locked behind the door; the only remaining one is the angel that is always with me. She will always support me. No matter what kind of decision I've made, she will stand behind me."

"In that case... your angel must have her hands covered in blood, wearing a bloody red dress." Zhou Tu chuckled. He seemed to have misunderstood something.

"I'm too lazy to explain the details. You only need to know that I have my own way of doing things. And I have no regrets." Chen Ge stood in the middle of the group. "It's time to depart. We're heading to the second floor of the library next. There should be another answer to be found hidden in the mirror left behind by Chang Wenyu."

"That's right. Your instincts are very sharp. We can't stay here too long." Zhou Tu leaned on Zhang Ju's back. "The world on the other side of the mirror is the real world behind the door. This place is manufactured by the painter, a home that he created for the homeless children. Of course, you can also see it as a cage."

Zhou Tu's body was weakening; he was fading.

"We'll continue this conversation after we find the mirror. Let's go." Chen Ge felt like Zhou Tu's soul should have been destroyed already. The one leaning against Zhang Ju was just a lingering spirit. When he uttered everything that was captured in his memory, that would be the time he disappeared. There would no longer be Zhou Tu in this world; he would disappear without a trace. Zhou Tu was trapped in the war between Chang Wenyu and the painter, and his body and soul were one of their battlefields. From the ending, it seemed like the painter had won. He had destroyed Zhou Tu, but Chang Wenyu had not lost. After all, she had managed to reveal so many secrets about the painter through Zhou Tu.

There is not one character at this school who is simple, but that is a good thing because the muddier the water, the greater the chance of me being successful.

Chen Ge led the members to the library, and they moved through the brush carefully. They noticed that the doors of the buildings on both sides were all open, like ‘people’ had been going through them.

Chapter 831 - Encounter

Chapter 831: Encounter

The School of the Afterlife had changed; those hiding in the dark had surfaced as if sensing that their chance had arrived.

“Mr. Bai, do you mind if I ask you a question? The woman who left her presence on you, has she told you anything?” Zhou Tu’s face was the color of chalk. He needed to rest with every sentence.

“I do not even know Chang Wenyu; I have no idea how she left her presence on me.” Chen Ge did not wish to continue this conversation and rushed toward the library.

“So, you wish to keep it a secret?” Zhang Ju carried Zhou Tu, whose body was disappearing. He probably would not hold on until they reached the library.

“I can’t control how you think...” Chen Ge ignored him and continued on his way. After taking several steps, he suddenly frowned. He really did not know Chang Wenyu. He was not trying to hide anything from the others, but Zhou Tu made it sound like Chen Ge had a secret to hide. Zhou Tu had been revealing information to Chen Ge. This was his first question, and the question was related to Chang Wenyu. This might have appeared normal to others, and Chen Ge did not mind it that much initially, but the more he thought about it, the stranger he felt.

Coincidence on top of coincidence, forming an accident. Looking at the whole process, it might appear like there’s no problem, but something feels off, Chen Ge thought to himself. There are still many secrets surrounding Zhou Tu, but based on his condition, it doesn’t look like he has the time to touch on those things.

The painter was entity who had harmed Zhou Tu, so if he hated the painter that much, he would try his best to tell them everything about the painter and not waste time asking questions. Perhaps this was really just a coincidence, but Chen Ge could not shake his mind off it.

The library was close to the lab. Chen Ge's group arrived there without any incidents. They followed the trail and reached the entrance.

"I've been to this place before; the door is always locked. We'll need to jump through the window or use the side door if we wish to gain entry. Damn it, I am reminded of that bad memory again." Zhang Ju had a bad impression of Chang Wenyu. After all, it was Chang Wenyu who had betrayed him and shattered his only hope. With Zhang Ju leading the way, the group easily cracked open the side door and entered the library. The library on the eastern campus looked dated. The building felt more like a decoration. Students and staff rarely visited this place.

"It feels like a lot of time has passed, but nothing has changed here. It feels just like yesterday when she gouged my left eye out." Zhang Ju walked in front. By now, his jacket was already completely red. "I've walked down this path with her before. Technically speaking, she was my first love, and this is where we had our dates."

With a bitter smile on his face, Zhang Ju's fingers caressed the bookshelves that they passed. "Why would one pick a library at midnight to have their dates? I should have known it then. She never did like me; she was merely using me."

"That might not be a hundred percent true. The date's location doesn't necessarily mean anything." Chen Ge walked beside Zhang Ju at the front. "I've been in your shoes before. I've dated at an abandoned school, a mental asylum, and an underground morgue. Until now, she still loves me deeply."

"Is your date also Chang Wenyu?" There was a question in Zhou Tu's eyes. His eyes moved between Chen Ge and Zhang Ju. "Other than her, I can't imagine anyone else going to places like that to have their dates."

Everything was going fine, but with this observation from Zhou Tu, Zhang Ju stopped moving. He looked Chen Ge up and down and then shook his head. "That's impossible. That woman doesn't have the power and capability to love. She's a monster."

Annoyed, Zhang Ju walked ahead on his own. The library at midnight was very quiet, and the only sound was their heartbeats and footsteps. The whole building was sealed. The doors and windows were barred, but there was no strange smell, which was different from the other places that they had visited.

“By walking past this shelf, climbing to the top, and stepping on the fence next to it, we can reach the second floor without using the stairs.” Zhang Ju remembered what had happened that night so clearly. Not one detail escaped his mind—everything was forever seared in his brain.

Zhu Long felt like Zhang Ju was in a bad mood, and he asked in a polite tone, “Why can’t we use the stairs?”

“I asked her the same question. She said that a steel door was installed on the staircase, and the door is blocked with trash; there is no way we can get up the stairs that way.” Zhang Ju was the first to climb up the racks. “I never doubted her words, so I didn’t go up the stairwell. Shall we go and check it this time?”

“Let’s find the mirror first.” Chen Ge did not want to attract unnecessary attention. The group followed Zhang Ju’s instructions and reached the second floor of the library. They only took several steps when they heard footsteps coming from the end of the second-floor corridor.

“That’s familiar. I also heard footsteps when I came last time. Back then, Chang Wenyu told me a ghost story about the spirit in the library, and it gave me quite a scare. Now that I think about it, the footsteps should belong to the librarian.” Zhang Ju signaled for the others to stay behind him. “Stick close and don’t fall off. Follow my orders and try to avoid conflict with the other party.”

“What should we do? The sound is getting close!”

“See the door to the second reading room?” Zhang Ju pointed at a door not far away. “From now on, close your eyes and walk that way. No matter what you touch or hear, do not open your eyes until we’re through the door.”

“Will that work? How’s that different from lying to ourselves?”

“Just listen to him. The librarian is a member of the art club members. He will paint everyone who sees him into his painting.” Zhou Tu was the first to close his eyes, and the rest followed suit. The last to close his eyes was Chen Ge. He listened to the approaching footsteps, signaled to his shadow, and then closed his eyes.

The footsteps came closer and closer. Chen Ge’s group searched their way along the wall with their hands. It felt like they would run into someone anytime soon. The footsteps got closer. The person did not seem to notice Zhang Ju and Zhou Tu, keeping up his speed, but when he passed Chen Ge, the sound of footsteps suddenly disappeared.

Has it stopped next to me? Chen Ge did not open his eyes. He kept his hands on the wall and moved forward. Several seconds later, the footsteps continued toward the end of the corridor. Opening the door of the second reading room, Chen Ge sucked in a deep breath.

“I experienced all we’ve experienced earlier that night; this is such a déjà vu feeling.” Zhang Ju closed the door after everyone got into the reading room. “If there’s nothing wrong, the mirror should be hidden behind the last row of bookshelf.”

The truth was about to be revealed, but before Chen Ge could approach, a familiar figure walked out from the last row of shelves.

“I knew you’d find your way here eventually.” The figure was holding a large, tattered backpack. His head was lowered, and he was stooped like a hunchback.

The sudden appearance of the man turned the situation tense. Chen Ge's group stood where they were, and no one dared take another step.

"You are more willing to trust the ghosts behind the door than the living human from outside the door?" The figure slowly lifted his head to reveal a pair of curious eyes. His right eye was no different from that of a normal person, but his left eye was red like an eye ball soaked in a can of red paint.

...

"Chang Gu." Chen Ge's lips moved to utter the name of the person whom he had never expected to show up there.

"I know you have many questions now, but I do not have the time to explain them to you. You only need to understand that I am on your side." Chang Gu raised the backpack that he was holding. "I believe this is yours."

Chang Gu was holding the backpack that Chen Ge had taken with him from the haunted house. The zipper had been opened, but everything was inside where it should be.

"Why would you have my backpack?" Chen Ge took one step forward.

"Don't go over there!" Zhang Ju stopped Chen Ge. "He is not part of my memory; things have changed."

Chang Gu heard Zhang Ju's voice as well, and his lips curled into a smile. "You sure are popular. You can make friends no matter where you go."

Stepping aside to let them pass, Chang Gu glanced outside the reading room, and he spoke faster. "It was my sister who gave me your backpack. She told me you would come here eventually."

“Chang Wenyu?”

“Yes, she will help you escape the school, but the premise is that you have to promise to work with her.” Chang Gu put down the backpack. “That is why you have shown up here, is it not?”

“It was Chang Wenyu who dragged me inside the door? Did the two of you work together to con me?” Chen Ge’s habit was to see things from the worst perspective. He thought back to how he had been dragged into the door at the hospital. The arm that reached out from behind the door had been slender and soft. Indeed, it had looked like the hand of a girl.

“I’ve only just found out many things as well, so technically, I didn’t con you. At least, I didn’t mean to.” Chang Gu looked much better than before, at least one decade younger.

“Tell me, how does she expect me to work together with her?” Chen Ge felt like there was no one that he could trust in the school; everyone was out for themselves.

“There’s no need to use such an unwilling tone. She is trying to save you. This school is far more complicated than you thought. Without her, you will never wake up.” Chang Gu walked toward Chen Ge. “We are friends who share the same goal, friends who know each other.”

Zhang Ju and Zhu Long guarded Chen Ge while studying Chang Gu.

“What do you want me to do?” Chen Ge did not like twists and turns, especially when they were in such a dangerous place.

“The painter is about to become the new door-pusher, and when that happens, all the souls behind the door will be trapped here forever, living in this paradise created by the painter.” Chang Gu did not stop moving; he was very close to Chen Ge.

“Isn’t that a good thing? Giving homeless souls a home to help them forget their pain and despair, to create a blood red paradise.” Chen Ge had noticed the many changes to Chang Gu; he could not sense any life in the man.

“I know a test when I hear one. Actually, you know deep down that there is no paradise in this world. This is all the painter’s daydream. My sister wishes to stop him, but she is not powerful enough to do it alone, so she needs your help.” Chang Gu glanced at the two Half Red Specters beside Chen Ge. His blood red left eye was like a heart, and it kept throbbing in its socket. "There are thirteen Specters who are qualified to become the door-pusher in this school. The painter is the strongest, and my sister is second. Of the remaining eleven, some have sworn obedience to the painter, and others have had their memories removed and turned into puppets."

"There is too big a power gap. Even with my help, we probably can't stop the painter." Chen Ge was not lying to Chang Gu; he was telling the truth. His biggest strength, Zhang Ya, was still hibernating.

"We do not need you to go against the painter directly; you only need to go and awaken all the Specters that the painter has sealed."

"How do I do that?" Chen Ge sighed in relief when he heard that he did not need to face the painter directly.

"You have already been doing that." Chang Gu pointed at the club members. "These three are all on the list."

"Of the four Specters around me, three of them have the qualifications to become the door-pusher?" Chen Ge did not think he would be so lucky. Then again, those few had been ostracized in the western campus where only good memories should remain; that was something abnormal.

Chen Ge was about to ask who did not have the power to become the door-pusher when Chang Gu spoke again. "My sister will try her best to distract the painter, and during that time, you have to try your best to find as many Specters sealed up by the painter as you can and wake them."

"Okay, no problem." It was not like Chen Ge had a choice but to give his promise for now. Neither the painter nor Chang Wenyu was someone he wanted to anger. Furthermore, awakening the Specters and gathering power was what he had been doing.

"I knew you'd say yes." Chang Gu looked at Chen Ge with satisfaction. "Lastly, my sister has a few words she wanted me to tell you."

"Chang Wenyu has something to tell me?" Chen Ge had not met Chang Wenyu before; he had no idea why the girl would value him thusly.

"Yes, she hopes you can also gain the school's approval and obtain the qualification to become the door-pusher." Chang Gu's left eye throbbed as he studied Chen Ge's reaction.

“I do not wish to get trapped behind a door forever.” Chen Ge rejected it outright.

“You only need to get the qualification.” Chang Gu’s expression softened. “Gaining the school’s approval will aid your escape.”

“How am I supposed to do that?” Chen Ge had heard the answer from Zhou Tu already, but he wished to get more confirmation.

“This door is different from others. The scenario behind the door is split by the painter in two—one normal, the other bloody. I believe you’ve noticed it already, just like the western and eastern campuses. Western campus transports all the despair and negative memories to the eastern campus to maintain the cleanliness on the western campus, and then the painter transports the negative emotions gathered in eastern campus to the other blood red scenario. The normal, cleansed part of the world behind the door has been maintained by the painter while the school’s consciousness is hidden inside the blood red scenario.

“It’s hard to explain; it’s easier if you see for yourself, but I hope you’re ready. The gore of this door is much greater than the other scenarios you’ve experienced.”

Chang Gu thought about it and made sure that he had not forgotten anything before taking a step back.

“The entrance is the mirror beside the rack. Try to get the approval as soon as you can. This abandoned school is about to get a lot more anarchic.”

Footsteps came from outside the reading room; the librarian was heading their way. Even though Chen Ge still had many questions, there was no time.

“Chang Gu, I hope you’re not lying to me. I can do my best to help your sister, but you need to guarantee that my friends and I can leave this school safely.” Chen Ge stood together with his club members. He was a man of his word. He had promised to lead Zhang Ju and the rest out, and he planned to keep his promise.

“I can give you my promise, but what use is it? Here, anything can happen; even the painter can give you that guarantee.” Chang Gu’s blood red eye was twitching slightly. No one knew what he was really thinking.

“You’ve changed a lot since entering the door. Looks like I’ll have to reassess our relationship,” Chen Ge said calmly. He was always like that, hard to read. It was unclear whether he was bluffing or not.

“We’re still friends. We both came from outside the door. We know about each other. I will not harm you.” Chang Gu lifted the backpack. “See, I even brought your things for you.”

“We are friends, but I’ve gained some new friends here. We’re all friends, so I hope you won’t put me in a difficult position.” There was one thing that Chen Ge did not tell Chang Gu. He had promised to be someone else’s friend in the toilet on the top floor of the education block. Chen Ge had accepted the invitation, thinking that there was no harm in having more friend, but now that he thought about it, that person was most likely the painter. Many people wanted to make use of Chen Ge, but if they knew him better, they would regret that decision.

“Okay, we’ll do it your way.” Chen Ge led the members to Chang Gu. “Now, can you give me back my stuff?”

“No problem, but you have to wait until you’re inside the mirror before you open the backpack.” Chang Gu did not hand the backpack to Chen Ge but followed him to the last row of the shelves. They worked together to push the shelf aside, and that revealed the mirror hidden under a black cloth.

“There isn’t much use left to this mirror, so you’d better move fast. Get the school’s approval before the painter realizes what you’re doing.” Chang Gu pulled the cloth back and handed the backpack to Chen Ge. “Stand before the mirror and place your hand on it. Look into the mirror with your heart, and you’ll see what’s on the other side.”

Accepting the backpack, Chen Ge did not place his hand on the mirror directly but took a step back.

“What are you doing?” Chang Gu frowned.

“Don’t worry, this is my first time here. I have no experience, so I wish to see other people do it first.” Chen Ge resisted the urge to open the backpack and tossed a look to Zhang Ju. “This should have been a part of your memory.”

Zhang Ju nodded and handed Zhou Tu over to Zhu Long before standing in front of the mirror. “Honestly, I don’t mind living in the painter’s paradise, but if that means I have to trade in my freedom, then I think not.”

The scarred arm landed on the surface of the mirror, and Zhang Ju lifted his head to look at his own reflection in the mirror. Chen Ge had noticed this a long time ago. In the world behind the door, there were few mirrors. It was as if mirrors possessed a special meaning in this blood red world. He stood at the back of the group and patiently observed. If not for the others, he would even have thought about using a pen and paper to record the whole process.

Blood slid down the arm and fell on the mirror. Blood vessels crawled on the surface. It was hard to tell whether they were moving inside or outside the mirror. More blood vessels appeared. In the blink of an eye, the scene inside the mirror shifted. It was still the library, but the library in the mirror turned blood red. Blood flowed, and every book looked like it was written in blood.

“I didn’t expect to one day return. This time, I hope I’ve made the right choice,” Zhang Ju mumbled to himself outside the mirror, but his reflection had not moved. He was like a puppet without a soul, with his head lowered and eyes closed.

“Be careful. Don’t wander about when you’re inside. Wait for us. We’ll move together. That should make things easier.” Chen Ge tried to say something else, but Zhang Ju was not looking so stable. He did not seem to hear Chen Ge. The head that was scorched slowly turned. Zhang Ju’s remaining right eye was red as blood. He stared at Chang Gu as the wounds opened all over his body. Blood vessels crawled on his body. “Your left eye is very beautiful. I... wish to eat it.”

Zhang Ju appeared to be under some kind of influence. His expression turned ugly, and the strange thing was, the expression of his reflection started to change, transforming to match the one outside the mirror. When the two became one, the hand that was pressed on the mirror was pulled forward, and the young man was dragged into the mirror.

“He was dragged by himself into the mirror?” Before Chen Ge realized it, there was only a pool of blood left behind the mirror. Zhang Ju had disappeared like he had never been there in the first place.

“The mirror reflects your appearance, but it can’t reflect your soul. On one side of the mirror, it’s your shell, and the other side is your desire. When you look inside the mirror, you’ll see your ugliest and sometimes your most dangerous self.” After Zhang Ju left, Chang Gu’s tone lightened. “Mirrors inside the School of the Afterlife are different from those in real life. The painter moved everything beautiful inside the mirror, and all the ugly, desperate, and scary things have been left outside the mirror. So, when you stand before the mirror, you’ll see a different version of yourself.”

While Chang Gu spoke, Zhou Tu passed through the mirror. He was so fast that none of the members, not even Chang Gu or Chen Ge, noticed it.

“Mr. Bai, I know you have many things that you haven’t told us.” Zhu Long felt like he had many things to say, but considering that there were outsiders there, he did not voice those thoughts. “I rarely place my trust in others, so I hope you won’t disappoint us.”

His palm on the mirror, Zhu Long looked at his reflection. The tall body was reconstructed, and the reflection in the mirror could not be called a person, more like a rag doll sewn together by a demented child.

The blood traces before the mirror thickened. After all the members had departed, Chen Ge stood before the mirror with two bags.

“After gaining the school’s approval, you will also gain the qualification to become the door pusher, but I know that you just want to leave and won’t do something so irrational.” Now that only Chang Gu and Chen Ge were left in the reading room, Chang Gu stopped talking in riddles and warned Chen Ge directly.

His eyes staring at the mirror silently, Chen Ge said without turning around, “Chang Gu, what kind of person do you think I am?”

After what happened in Li Wan City, Chen Ge knew that he had lost a part of his memory, so like Zhang Ju and the rest, he would sometimes get trapped in a sense of loss.

“The mirror behind the door reflects your real self, and you will see a different version of yourself.” Chang Gu was not interested in Chen Ge’s life story; he was merely completing the mission given to him by Chang Wenyu.

“Is that so?” Chen Ge placed his palm on the mirror, and the chill travelled to his brain. He could not help but be reminded of his first nightmare mission when he had just acquired the black phone. The mission had required him to stand before a mirror at midnight and look at his own reflection.

A mirror was the start of everything, and now I’ve found myself standing before one again. I wonder, what will I see this time?

Closing his eyes, just like when he did his first nightmare mission, Chen Ge started to count his heartbeat. Several seconds later, Chen Ge’s palm was pulled, and his eyes flew open. His reflection stood dumbly next to the bookshelf. Loneliness and despair were clear on his pale face, and his body was shaking. His eyes were not focused, and they were empty. The reflection was like a mannequin in his haunted house.

This is the other me?

Someone gripped his fingers, and Chen Ge could feel the power coming from the other side of the mirror. He saw the shadow of his reflection changing. Black hair flowed down Chen Ge's reflection like a river. His shadow slowly stood up and guarded him from behind.

Zhang Ya?

The shadow's face slowly clarified. When he placed all of his focus on the shadow, the black hair in the mirror suddenly lashed toward his arm and pulled him into the mirror. Chen Ge disappeared, and the reading room returned to silence.

"Something doesn't seem right." Chang Gu did not leave immediately. His expression was one of surprise. "When he stood before the mirror, why did his reflection appear so unrealistic?"

Rushing to stand before the mirror, Chang Gu looked at his own reflection. The Chang Gu in the mirror was not a person but an ugly monster.

"The other side of the mirror is the blood red world. This mirror can show the ugliness inside everyone's heart, but when that man stood before the mirror, the mirror showed the man himself! Doesn't he possess any sins inside his heart, or is his evil hidden so deep within his heart that it can't be reflected by the mirror at all?"

Chang Gu could not figure out the answer. He looked at his ugly reflection with confusion. His fingers reached toward the mirror and stopped before it.

"Everyone has a monster in their heart, an ugly, ruthless creature that cannot bear living under the sun..."

...

The thick stench of blood rushed into his nostrils, and a sticky feeling stuck to his skin. His eyelids fluttered as Chen Ge sucked in a deep breath. It felt as if he had just broken through the surface of water. Peeling open his eyes, the world that Chen Ge saw was one of red.

"This is the world behind the door. It feels suffocating, filled with anxiety and despair." Chen Ge stood where he was and carefully surveyed his surroundings. He was standing before a cracked mirror, and around him were bloody bookshelves, tables, and chairs.

“This is the second reading room. Now I’ve really entered the world behind the door.” Chen Ge hurried to hide by a corner. His footsteps were light and did not make any noise. “Zhang Ju and Zhu Long came here earlier than I did. Where are they?”

To prevent everyone from getting lost, before entering the mirror, Chen Ge had even told them specifically to wait after going through the mirror.

Squatting down, Chen Ge used his Yin Yang Vision to look around. He did not see any signs of a fight or any footprints.

“Have Zhang Ju and the rest left, or was something guarding the other side of the mirror and they had to escape once they arrived?” Chen Ge was very careful. Before exploring a new environment, he had to ensure that he was safe.

Putting down Lin Sisi’s backpack, Chen Ge pulled open the zipper of his own backpack. He could not wait to reunite with his own workers.

“Recorder, doll, comic... everything is here...” Chen Ge rummaged through the backpack, and his face slowly darkened. There was one thing in there that should not have been there and another that should have been there that was missing.

“The black phone is not here!” He looked through the backpack but still could not find the black phone. However, he found something new inside the layer where he normally kept important stuff. It was a bloody student ID. It had his name and his picture, but strangely enough, the picture was one of him when he was a child. Staring at the picture, Chen Ge was reminded of the shadow in Li Wan City and the ghost fetus behind it. “Was it Chang Wenyu who gave me this id? How does she know what I looked like when I was small?”

Putting the ID away, Chen Ge took out the recorder and pressed the start button. The sound of static was laced with screams and an undercurrent of a man’s whispering. His lips curled upward. This scary sound was one hundred times more melodious than the most beautiful tune in the world.

“Xu Yin.” Blood dripped, and the pale arms reached out from underneath the blood red shirt. Chen Ge did not turn around and placed the recorder back into the backpack.

“Even though I didn’t wish for Chang Wenyu to become the new door-pusher, she did help me escape that conundrum. I’ll have to repay her favor somehow. However, with what kind of method is still undecided.” Chen Ge had never wanted to help Chang Wenyu become the new door pusher from the beginning. No matter who controlled this four-star scenario, it would not be good for him. He wished the place would maintain its chaotic nature until Zhang Ya became a Greater Red Specter, and then he would select a suitable door pusher from his employees.

“That is the perfect solution. This way, the painter won’t need to fight with Chang Wenyu. Everyone can still be friends.”

With his employees at his side, Chen Ge felt much better. He looked at the bloody surroundings and felt quite at home.

“Chang Wenyu is distracting the painter. The two scariest existences here are busy with each other, and no one has time to pay attention to me.” Chen Ge revealed a sincere smile. “Chang Gu said that this place is about to turn upside down and told me to be careful. To see it from another perspective, since this place is going to get chaotic anyway, why don’t I give it a push and get the chaos to come earlier?”

Looking at the information on the ID one last time, Chen Ge memorized his class and student number. He shoved the ID inside his pocket and placed it next to Mr. Bai’s documentation. He held one bag in each hand. Listening to the static from the recorder, he strode confidently out of the reading room.

Footsteps echoed inside the quiet library. The broken door was pushed open, and a man walked out. "There is no one in the library at all. Do the students behind the door not like to read?"

Carrying two bags, Chen Ge stood in the corridor outside the library. The reunion that he had anticipated did not happen; there was no one at the library. Thus, he could not get some information even if he wanted to. "Where have they all disappeared to?"

...

Walking down the corridor, Chen Ge sauntered about aimlessly. The campus behind the door appeared to be a completely enclosed building, and it was isolated from the rest of the world. All the windows were barred with wooden planks, and Chen Ge walked for a long time, but he still could not find the way out.

"Hey! Which class are you from?" A stern voice came from behind Chen Ge. He turned to look and realized that one of the doors that he had passed earlier had been opened, and a rotund, middle-aged man stood at the door.

"Not a Red Specter..." Chen Ge glanced at the sign of the door where the man stood, which read "Discipline Head's Office".

"It's time for class. Do not loiter in the corridors." The man noticed that Chen Ge did not show him any respect at all, so he instantly firmed up his attitude. "Which class are you from? Let me take a look at your student ID?"

"Student ID?" Chen Ge reached his hand into his pocket but kept his eyes on the man before him. There was a dangerous glow well hidden in his gaze. When he first saw the man, Chen Ge had used his Yin Yang Vision to scan the man. He had no idea about the man's identity, but he knew that he was not a Red Specter.

"A new student from the first year?" The man took the student ID to take a look, and his tone turned sterner. "Truancy when you've just started school? A student like you needs to be harshly educated!"

He walked out from the office and reached out to grab Chen Ge's arm.

"What do you want to do?" Chen Ge subconsciously avoided him. This was the world behind the door; he would not allow anyone to grab him just like that.

"Take you back to your class, and I'll warn the teacher that allowed you to traipse around like this during class!" The man was mad. His eyes were bulging, like if Chen Ge did not follow his words, there would serious consequences.

"Fine, I'll follow you back to the class." Chen Ge still remembered the mission handed to him by Chang Gu; he could make use of this chance to find those students. Chen Ge stopped moving as if waiting for the man to lead the way. Seeing how flippant Chen Ge was acting, the man's already lacking hair was standing on end from anger.

"Students these days are getting worse and worse." The man shoved the ID back to Chen Ge and led Chen Ge down the corridor. The school was much bigger than Chen Ge thought. They walked for a long time and went down a floor before stopping beside one of the classrooms.

BANG BANG BANG!

The man knocked, and moments later, a thin man wearing black-rimmed glasses walked out. "Mr. Lei? How can I help you?"

"Didn't you notice one student is missing from your own class?" The man grabbed Chen Ge's shoulder. "He is from your class, so take charge of him! If I discover him wandering about again, be prepared to get punished alongside him! Even the teachers are becoming unreliable..."

The man left Chen Ge at the door. He seemed to have something else to attend to and left in a huff.

"Mr. Lei?" The thin teacher was confused. He pushed his glasses up and studied Chen Ge through his thick lens. "Are you a new student?"

"Mr. Lei brought me here. This is my student ID." Chen Ge pointed at the man who had walked away. His expression and his tone gave an impression that he was familiar with Mr. Lei.

“Oh, come in then. There are a few empty seats in my class.” The thin teacher nodded and was about to bring Chen Ge into class when he suddenly stopped. “I do not like naughty students. I hope you can get along with everyone and join our big family as fast as you can.”

“Okay.”

“One more thing, my name is Lui. You can call me Mr. Lui.”

Pushing open the door, Mr. Lui brought Chen Ge to the podium. The class was very quiet, and it was conducive for studying, but there were many who were really studying. When they saw someone new walk into the room, many students lifted their heads.

“This will only take a minute. We have a new student who will be joining us today. Now, I’ll have him introduce himself.” Mr. Lui signaled for Chen Ge to walk over. Walking up the podium, Chen Ge looked down at the students in class. On the surface, the class looked fine, but he knew that the only beauty behind the door had already been taken away by the painter. The only things left in this world were various negative emotions suppressed in people’s hearts.

“My name is Chen Ge.” After a very short self-introduction, Chen Ge carried his bags and stepped down from the podium.

“Don’t you have anything else to say?” Mr. Lui coughed drily. “Your seat will be on the third last row. The seating in this class is arranged according to results. After midterms, if you have a good score, I’ll rearrange your seat.”

Mr. Lui’s words seemed to possess a different meaning. Chen Ge did not think that it would be that bad sitting at the back of the class. When he attended university, he had always taken the last row. Carrying his bags, Chen Ge walked to the back of the class with the whole class looking at him. Gazes fell upon him; some were gleeful, some were filled with malice, and some were dull. Chen Ge stopped next to his seat.

The student in the seat behind him placed his dirty shoes on Chen Ge’s chair. As the student’s body moved, his chair creaked noisily like it was about to crumble any time soon.

“I’m sorry, I didn’t mean to. I didn’t think we would have a new student joining us.” The boy slowly took his shoes away, leaving two dark-claret shoe prints on Chen Ge’s chair.

“Alright, quickly get to your seat. We’re going to continue the class.” Mr. Lui’s thick glasses seemed to have obscured his vision. It was as if he did not notice the bullying happening before his eyes, and he continued speaking. “Chen Ge, don’t just stand there. Take your seat.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge’s expression did not change. He took out a clean piece of paper from Lin Sisi’s bag and placed it on the table. Just as everyone thought that he was about to swallow everything and wipe the shoe print off, he reached out to grab the back of the chair, raised it up, and threw it right at the boy who sat behind him!

BANG!

The old chair burst into pieces right above the boy’s head. The class was quiet; even Mr. Lui was stunned into silence.

“I’m sorry, I didn’t mean it either.” Picking up the clean piece of paper from the table, Chen Ge wiped the blood from his hands and then grabbed the chair of the boy from the seat behind him and moved it to his desk.

“You, you, you come out here!” Mr. Lui’s hands were shaking. It was unclear whether that was from shock or from fear.

“Okay.” Chen Ge activated the recorder, placed Lin Sisi’s bag on the table, and scanned the whole class again.

The previously-white paper was dropped on the table. On it lingered the blood that Chen Ge had wiped off his hands. It had only taken a few minutes from Chen Ge walking into the classroom to the student collapsing on the ground. No one expected something like this to happen; everything had occurred too quickly. Holding his bags with one hand, Chen Ge did not even glance at the student who had fallen on the back row and walked directly toward Mr. Lui.

“You go and stand outside the classroom!” This was the first time that Mr. Lui had encountered a student like this. He was too brave and too mad. He had completely ignored the presence of the teacher and openly used brute force against others in class.

“Sir, you can punish me however you wish, but you have to understand that it was he who started it. He said that he had no idea where he should put his feet, so I was merely teaching him a lesson.”

Chen Ge had just entered the classroom and had not even found his seat, yet he had already been chased out of the classroom. Holding his bags, Chen Ge opened the classroom door.

When he walked out of the room, he saw the boy on the back row climb up from the ground. Blood leaked out from the top of his head, and it slid down his nose to the corner of his lips. Venom was swirling in the boy's eyes. His expression was twisted, but as Mr. Lui turned his face toward him, the venom in his eyes disappeared completely, and in its place were a few forced tears and a face of innocence.

Hell, he sure knows how to act. These are a bunch of wise guys. They have two different faces before their victims and the authority figures. On one hand, they are sunny, hardworking, and friendly while on the other side, they vent all their negative emotions and hatred on their victims.

Walking out of the classroom, the gazes of the students in class flashed across his mind.

I've memorized the faces of the people who wished for me to make a fool of myself before everyone—these people will most likely fail to get the school's approval.

The School of the Afterlife's consciousness was built from the spirit of endless despairing children. The people who had the qualifications to become the door pushers were most likely victims of bullying at the school. Chen Ge wished to complete the mission given to him by Chang Wenyu and strengthen his forces. To do that, he had to find the other remaining door pusher candidates sealed up by the painter.

By helping the victims and using my own method to educate the bullies, perhaps I will gain the school's approval.

There were many benefits to gaining the school's approval. Chen Ge knew that he had not experienced these painful things before, so he switched to use another method to try to gain the approval.

The school behind the door is very large, and there are many students here. It is not going to be easy to find the few who are qualified to become the door pusher among all these people.

Standing in the corridor, Chen Ge glanced into the classroom through the window. His gaze scanned the students one by one.

The third row from the back. The student who would sit next to me has dirt on his clothes, and his textbooks look ruffled like they have been messed with by others. This child should be one of the victims.

The seating in class was arranged according to their results. The child was sitting on the third row from the back, so it meant that his results were not that good but also not that bad.

Mr. Lui was continuing his lecture in class. Suddenly, he realized none of his students' attention was on him, but they were looking outside the window. He turned around with confusion and met Chen Ge's gaze from outside the window.

"This is ridiculous!" The more Mr. Lui thought about it, the more angered he became. He strode out of the classroom. "What are you looking at? I had you come here to think about what you've done! Stand there quietly and stop looking around!"

"Sir, I have been thinking, but there is a question that I simply could not solve." Chen Ge looked Mr. Lui in the eye. "Just what kind of mistake could a teacher have made to be sent to a world filled with negative emotions and despair? Is it because he ignored the bullying that is happening before his eyes, or did the teacher himself use certain ways to join in with the bullying?"

"That is not the question that you should be thinking about!"

"Earlier inside the classroom, you also saw what happened. It was he who first placed his shoes on my chair. I wished to rationally reason with him, but my hands slipped. The chair fell from my hands, and it accidentally injured that student. I admit that I have done something wrong, but does that mean that he has done nothing wrong?" Chen Ge spoke very fast. "Actually, this whole thing could have been totally avoided, as long as you said something when you notice the problem. The boy appears to be very obedient when he is facing you, so he should listen to your words quite easily."

Mr. Lui wished to argue, but he was interrupted by Chen Ge.

"But you did not do that. Perhaps you thought it too troublesome, or perhaps you did not think much of it. What the boy did, you perhaps thought, was some kind of joke between students. You already have too many things to think about in your life, so why look for unnecessary trouble for yourself? Perhaps there is even a possibility that there is a grotesque joy that was born in your heart when you saw that I was being bullied."

"Preposterous! What are you talking about?"

"Human nature is a flower blooming inside an abyss. Everyone yearns for sunlight, but who knows what is hidden underneath your roots?" Chen Ge's eyes were whirlpools of darkness, and Mr. Lui found himself unable to look Chen Ge into those dark eyes. The two had more to say, but at that moment, the bell for the end of class came from further down the corridor. It sounded different from a normal bell. It was mixed with many different sounds, and it sounded strange to Chen Ge.

"Young man, you have to check your attitude! Give me a three thousand words essay on why you should not have done what you did before the end of school, or else I will go and get Mr. Lei. Think about your problem." Mr. Lui returned to the classroom and announced that class was over. He did not pick up the teaching material from the podium and left in a hurry.

“This teacher sure is a bit irresponsible.” Chen Ge carried his bags and returned to the classroom. When the students who took the first row saw him walk in, they very naturally put their textbooks and water bottles away and ran out. They seemed to understand what was supposed to happen next. The classroom appeared to be emptier than before. Chen Ge did not mind it and walked to the side of his seat. He looked at his deskmate and showed a friendly smile. “Hi, my name is Chen Ge. I’m your new deskmate.”

Chen Ge’s deskmate heard Chen Ge’s voice, but he did not dare answer. He kept his eyes on the textbook, and his legs started to shake.

“Da Bing, someone is talking to you. Can’t you hear?” From the last row, a student who had his uniform tied around his waist stood up to shout. Four students were gathered around him, and the five surrounded Chen Ge and his deskmate in the middle. Hearing this boy’s voice, Chen Ge’s deskmate lowered his head even more. His eyes were staring so deep at the textbook, and his hand grabbed the strap of his schoolbag.

“Are you deaf? I’m talking to you!” The student grabbed the textbook from Chen Ge’s deskmate’s hands. The book was torn, and the sound was sharp. Chen Ge’s deskmate still did not say a word. He stood up with his head lowered and prepared to head out of the classroom, but his shirt was dragged back by one of the students.

“Why are you running? Can’t you see that the newcomer wants to be your friend?” The boy called Da Bing stood where he was. He did not dare resist; he did not even dare speak.

“Such a wooden brain. No wonder your parents are divorced and none of them want you.” The leading boy grabbed the deskmate by his neck. “But that’s fine. You will stick with us from now on, and I assure you that we will have a lot of fun together.”

When he finished, the students around him all started to laugh. It was a laugh filled with evil and deep sarcasm.

Da Bing wilted under the collected laughter. His head fell even lower, and he allowed the boy to grab him by the neck. “No, wait, I seem to have forgotten something. Da Bing, just now, your deskmate was asking you something. Now, tell him whether you wish to play with him or with the rest of us.”

These students were waiting for Da Bang to make a fool of himself. Their gazes were like sharp blades falling on Da Bing's body. His neck being captured, his shirt pulled, his textbook taken away and torn, Da Bing stood by the table, and there was no glow of life in his eyes. His lips slowly opened, and just as he was about to say something, Chen Ge suddenly spoke. "Deskmate, there's no need for you to make a choice. Actually, after you agree to be my friend, I will be everyone else's friend, and then we will be friends with the whole class."

Chen Ge actively stretched out his hand toward Da Bing. There was no one who had spoken like that with Da Bing before, and his subconscious caused him to raise his arm in return.

"You f*cker!" The leader pushed Da Bing back by his neck. Before he could say anything else, there came a loud boom from beside him. Turning to look, they saw Chen Ge kick down the table and pick up the chair that was unharmed. Without any other words or a warning, the heavy chair fell on the head of the leader.

BANG!

One of the wooden legs fell off. Chen Ge was about to summon Xu Yin to clear the scene when a scream came from the entrance.

"Chen Ge!"

Mr. Lui had finally realized that he had forgotten his teaching material, so he had come back to retrieve it. When he walked into the classroom, he was shocked by what he saw. Just half a minute ago, he had warned this man. He had walked out to take a spin, and yet another student had fallen victim to his attack.

"What, what, what are you doing?"

Seeing the teacher's return, the students who were originally gathered together quickly shifted their expressions and rushed to get the student up from the ground. Chen Ge did not hold back earlier because he knew that if the boy could still stand up, then he would have one more problem to face.

"Sir, he knocked Long Yuan out!"

"I know, I don't need you to describe what I can see! Get him to the nurse's office immediately!" Mr. Lui rushed into the classroom and kept his death glare at Chen Ge. "Why did you get into another fight with a classmate? This time, I saw it very clearly; it was you who started the fight! You'd better give me an explanation that I can accept!"

"How shall I put this?" Chen Ge put down the chair that was crumbling in his hands. He tilted his head to point at the fainted student. "I was merely defending myself. I saw from his gaze that he intended to bully me. If you do not believe me, you can ask him about it when he wakes up later."

"You are a walking tragedy! My perfect class is about to get ruined by you! No, this can't wait anymore. I have to go and get Mr. Lei now!" Mr. Lui was truly angered this time. "The few of you get him to the nurse's office now! Chen Ge, you go and stand outside in the corridor!"

"Okay." Chen Ge's reply was a simple word. It was calm and easy.

After Mr. Lui left, the student from the last row stood up. He glared at Chen Ge with gritted teeth. "You're lucky Mr. Lui came to your aid this time. We will finish this business after school."

Hearing the threat from the boy, Chen Ge stood where he was in shock. "That's what I wanted to say. If not for Mr. Lui, you would have ended your life as a ghost."

Waving his hand, Chen Ge picked up his bags with a warm smile. "I will see you after school, and that's a promise."

Being punished twice on his first day of school, Chen Ge's name soon spread throughout the school. He carried his bags and stood at the entrance to the class. The passing students looked at him, and he studied them in return.

The mission given to me by Chang Wenyu is not easy. Every student looks like they have an abnormal side to them.

The class bell rang. Mr. Lui had not returned, but Chen Ge walked into the classroom on his own. He moved the chair of the second student that he knocked out to his seat and sat down comfortably. The new teacher started the class, and of course, Chen Ge was not paying attention. He took out a pen and paper from his bag and started to consider how to search for the children with the qualifications to become the door pushers. He was deep in his thought when a small paper note came from beside him. There were two simple words on it—Thank you.

Seeing this, Chen Ge was surprised. He had thought there was only despair and negative emotions in the blood red world behind the door; the people should not have been able to show appreciation.

“Why are you thanking me? They targeted you because of me, so naturally, I have step forward. That’s what I’m supposed to do.” Chen Ge said to his deskmate, Da Bing, but Da Bing did not dare reply. He sat in his rigid posture like Chen Ge was talking to himself. He had no interaction with Chen Ge.

“Are you afraid?” Chen Ge knew about the worry in Da Bing’s heart.

After some time, Da Bing passed him another note. “Sorry.”

This time, Chen Ge learned his lesson. He used the pen to write something back on the back of the note. “It’s fine. They crossed the line. I can’t allow that to happen.”

Passing the note back, after Da Bing read it, he continued to write. "Me too, but I don't dare resist. I have no friends, no one to stand up for me. The teacher only sees our results, and I'm dumb."

Helplessness was heavy in Da Bing's reply.

"You have a friend now. My name is Chen Ge. What's yours?"

"Lee Bing, but since I have a big and round face, they all call me Da ¹ Bing."

"Got it, at least that's easy to remember."

"Chen Ge, I'm sorry. I should have said something, but I was really scared. Do you think I'm too weak?"

"No one is born a hero. Furthermore, a person's personality can always be changed. This is an adaptability to the society and living environment. I know you've been trying your best." Chen Ge passed the note to Da Bing, and then he took out more paper. "Can you tell me more about your past?"

Chen Ge suspected that Lee Bing was one of the people whom he was looking for, so he started to probe.

"What do you mean?"

"Things about you, and the other people in this class, when did they start bullying you?"

Looking at the content on the paper, Lee Bing hesitated for a long time before picking up his pen. He wrote a long passage and slid it back to Chen Ge.

"My actual situation is different from the rest. My parents love me a lot, so their words don't hurt me. From how I see it, they are a bunch of demons who like to pour salt on other people's wounds. They get their joy from other people's misery, but it'll pass soon enough. After all, there are teachers here, and they don't dare do anything too serious to me. Chen Ge, I advise you to stop getting into altercations with them. They have their little gang. The guy that you knocked out earlier, I think, knows gangsters outside of the school."

The content on the paper made Chen Ge feel uncomfortable. The bullied had lost their will to fight, and they only cared about escaping. Perhaps, in their hearts, they believed that they would one day grow old and leave this place, so a little patience was all they needed. They did not know that the experience would be carved into their bones and become a shadow that they could not wave away. Whenever they thought about it, their heart might deny it, but they would still feel uncomfortable. Seeing the silence from Chen Ge, Lee Bing passed a second note. "Just be patient, and it'll be over. If you resist, you might end up just like Yan Fei."

"Who is Yan Fei?"

"He was the student who sat where you are now."

"Where is he now?"

"After that incident, Yan Fei dropped out."

"He left the school?"

"No, he's still in the nurse's office, but it was his parents who helped him do the dropping out process." Lee Bing hurriedly passed another note to Chen Ge. "He has already found his escape. Please don't disturb him."

Chen Ge put his notes away, his eyes wandering between Lee Bing and his own seat. When he first entered the classroom, his own chair had been stepped on, and it was already crumbling. There were many carvings on the table, and the drawer was sticky like it had been used to house trash. These were things that had happened to Yan Fei. Compared to Yan Fei, Lee Bing had gotten the better deal. Those b*stards' target was Yan Fei; Lee Bing was just the replacement after Yan Fei fell. Evil deeds would be amplified behind the door, and the ugliness in the human heart would be fully exposed. Just from looking at Yan Fei's old seat, he could understand what had once befallen the poor man.

"Is he at the nurse's office because he was injured by those people?" A fire was burning in Chen Ge's heart. He had no idea why he was getting so angry. The school probably did not do anything, or perhaps it was the bullies who lacked education.

"No." Lee Bing shook his head. He tore out another piece of paper, wrote on it, and quickly passed it to Chen Ge. "They have been bullying Yan Fei, targeting him, tossing his textbooks away, breaking his chairs, and doodling on his school bags and clothes."

"Why would they bully Yan Fei?" Chen Ge had a feeling that Yan Fei was the person whom he was looking for, and he wanted to know more about Yan Fei's past.

"I have no idea. Yan Fei comes from a normal family just like you and me. The only difference is, he has quite a bit of pride; he doesn't like to have others joke at his expense and likes to be alone. Perhaps those guys found it fun to trample on his pride. That must satisfy some kind of sick satisfaction in their heart.

"Yan Fei used to be a good student. He was above average, but due to what happened, his result became worse and worse.

"His parents were anxious, and the teachers ignored him more and more.

"One day, when someone was trying to grab his textbook, he got into a fight with them. Yan Fei had been holding in it, but he was only one person, and he was soon pressed down on the floor. Because it was in the classroom, the teacher hurried over to pull the bullies away.

"When the teacher asked what had happened, many people were silent. Those who finally spoke were part of the bullies. They said that they were just joking. It was because of Yan Fei's prideful nature that he couldn't handle the joke and threw the first punch."

Chapter 838: Flower of Sin

“You’re not wrong. The teacher had everyone write an essay to reflect on what they’d done. This was nothing new for the bullies, but that was the first time that Yan Fei had done something like that. He was my deskmate, and I saw that he was crying. When we were back the next day, Yan Fei’s clothes were rumpled. I heard he was accosted by the gangsters on the way to school. The bullying only escalated after that. His results became worse and worse. He moved from the second row to the third last row, sitting just in front of his bullies. He had no friends, and no one was willing to help him because they were afraid of being targeted.

“One afternoon, I saw that Yan Fei had bought a pencil sharpener, and that afternoon, he was sharpening some pencils. When the last class of the day was about to end, the student behind him stepped on the back of his chair. They had started to bully Yan Fei again, but this time, Yan Fei reacted calmly. When the bell rang and the teacher left, the group of people surrounded him. They pretended it was an accident as they splashed their water on Yan Fei’s school bag and textbook. They laughed among themselves as they prepared to leave. Then I saw Yan Fei take out the sharpened pencil from his pencil case and barrel toward the person who bullied him.

“The boy’s face was heavily scratched; they needed several people to help pull the crazed Yan Fei back and pin him to the ground. This incident quickly reached the headmaster’s ears. The parents of the bullies came to school to apply pressure. The bullies brought masks with them, showing where they were attacked. They cried to the adults. If they didn’t avoid it swift enough, they would be blind.

“This was serious. Yan Fei’s parents were called into school. The honest father apologized to everyone. He bowed down to the bullies’ parents and begged the school not to expel Yan Fei. With everyone watching, the father slapped Yan Fei. It was a loud slap. When that slap fell on Yan Fei’s face, it shattered the last shred of his pride. From that day onward, Yan Fei stopped resisting; he became silent like a soulless doll. When the bullying escalated to a point, Yan Fei would choose to escape and run alone to the toilet. No one knew what he did there, but when the bell for class rang, he would return. No one understood the severity of the situation. Then again, no one really cared about Yan Fei before. This passed for some time until Yan Fei was one day bullied after class again. He escaped to the toilet but didn't come out.

"The teacher and students went to find him. When they did, Yan Fei had fainted inside the last cubicle of the toilet with a face like alabaster. Next to him was the blade that he had taken out from the pencil sharpener. They picked Yan Fei up. A student accidentally saw the arm under Yan Fei's long sleeve. He was so shocked that he let out a scream. At that moment, everyone understood why Yan Fei was always wearing long pants and sleeves no matter how hot the weather was."

Regarding Yan Fei's past, Lee Bing had explained everything. Chen Ge had a hard time calming down. This child was just a normal person. Perhaps he might have brushed shoulders with Chen Ge when he was walking down the street. Yet, a child like this had been forced to self-mutilation.

"Self-mutilation is a way to vent pressure. The physical pain helps lower the psychological pain, but this is not a correct method to deal with pressure." Chen Ge's fists tightened. He stood up from his seat. "Lee Bing, do you know where the nurse's office is?"

"What do you wish to do?"

"I wish to meet Yan Fei. Can you lead the way?" Hearing Yan Fei's story, Chen Ge's desire to meet him increased. He had a feeling that Yan Fei was one of the students that he was looking for. Compared to other students, Yan Fei did not come from a sad background. He was just like any other person, but he was flushed by the torrents of life to its edge.

"No." Lee Bing shook his head. Actually, he had been avoiding Chen Ge, and the conversation was carried out through passing of notes. Even if he had to speak, he kept his head lowered, and his reply was a whisper. He pitied Chen Ge and hated those bullies, but more than that, he was afraid of being seen interacting with Chen Ge. He did not want to be ostracized.

Seeing Lee Bing's reply, Chen Ge calmly nodded. He did not blame Lee Bing but understood his situation. The world behind the door would amplify the desires and various thoughts inside one's heart. Negative emotions would not be tied down by morality. They did not need to hide, and people could express their negative emotions without holding back. The bullies enjoyed controlling others, toying with the little pride that the bullied had left. The bystanders looked about from afar with a detached gaze or perhaps sometimes joined in the fun. In the end, only the bullied were left. They would become inured to the pain and even get used to their given identity. Chen Ge scanned the class; everyone was doing their own thing. The fight at the last row was just a show for them. They enjoyed it as bystanders, and no one dared step forward.

"The occurrence of school bullying is not the responsibility of the school but also the other students in class. During an avalanche, there is not a single snowflake that is innocent. Everyone just wishes that the tragedy will not befall them, and that gives the bullies the chance to act freely. When bullying happens and someone dares to stand up and say something or give the bullied some comfort, things might end up differently," Chen Ge said out loud. He had no idea how that would change the school's consciousness, but he felt like the school could sense what he was doing.

"During an avalanche, there is not one snowflake that is innocent. Habitual silence is a sad thing as well."

When Chen Ge spoke, Lee Bing's shoulders shook several times. He seemed to be hesitating as well, but in the end, he did not stand up.

The first door pusher pushed open the door due to school bullying, and the door has been looking for the souls of despaired children since then, creating this sad and scary school.

The painter and Chang Wenyu are both very strong, but they haven't become the new door pusher, which means that even if they have gained the school's approval, they have not ticked all the boxes required by the school.

A question rose in Chen Ge's heart.

If I was a despairing child, what would I hope to see after pushing open the door?

*Red surroundings and the b*stards' escalated bullying—that's obviously not something I'd like to see. No one wished to have their wounds repeatedly* pulled open.

Could this bullying be some sort of test? To get the school's approval, I need to stop all the bullying and stop it from ever happening again?

The deepest despair often buried all hope. After giving it some thought, Chen Ge wrote a note back to Lee Bing. Lee Bing did not take it. Chen Ge did not care. He placed the note on Lee Bing's table and walked out from class to find the nurse's office.

After Chen Ge walked away, Lee Bing silently opened the note. It read, "I will change this school completely."

Chen Ge had his own idea. Using force to stop force was the simplest answer, but to gain the school's approval and to get accepted all the despairing children, using brute force alone was not enough.

It might not work, but there's no harm in trying.

After leaving the classroom, Chen Ge stood at the corridor holding two bags. Two students were hurrying to class, and he was the only one taking his sweet time to take in the scenery.

"Hi, can you tell me where the nurse's office is?"

The students were very unfriendly. Chen Ge asked several students before finally someone was willing to show him the way.

"You're the new student from the fourth class, right? When I was passing the teacher's lounge earlier, I hear the teachers and discipline teacher talking about you. They sounded like they were going to punish you." The girl who led the way looked like a high school student. She had a ponytail and dressed casually.

"They wish to punish me?"

"Sounds like it's because you have been ignoring the school rules and got into fights in class." When the girl said that, she stole a curious look at Chen Ge. "Is that true?"

"If I say it's true, will you be afraid?" Chen Ge maintained the smile on his face. The teachers had their own way of dealing with things; he understood that but did not approve.

"I won't, I think you did a great job. Those people always mix with the gangsters outside school. It's about time someone came to teach them a lesson!" The girl appeared to have been bullied before. She chatted for a long time before silently walking closer to Chen Ge. "I hope nothing will happen to you.”

“This is the first time we’ve met, right?” Chen Ge felt the girl was acting strangely, like she was attempting to get in his good books. “Do you have something else to tell me?”

A flash of panic crossed her eyes, but she soon returned to normal. “Actually, I don’t have many friends. In my class, they all laugh at me and like to prank me, so I wish to be your friend. If they bully me again, at least I will have someone else to talk to.”

The girl was not good at lying. When she said the later words, her eyes subconsciously wandered to other places; deep inside her eyes were a thick pool of venom. That resentment was unrelated to Chen Ge. She probably wanted to find someone to help her take revenge on those who had once bullied her.

“I’m sorry, but I’m used to being alone.” Chen Ge knew that the girl did not really want him as a friend. She merely wanted to find someone to protect her.

“It’s fine then.” The disappointment was clear in the girl’s eyes, but she still kept her promise and took Chen Ge to the nurse’s office.

“This is it. I’m going back to class.” The girl retraced her steps. After taking few steps, she suddenly turned around to look at Chen Ge. “Forgot to mention, my name is Yin Hong, I’ll talk to you later.”

The girl forced a smile and ran away in a jog.

Even though it’s a fake smile, she can make it look so sweet. This girl would be quite suitable to work on the haunted house’s front desk.

As he opened the door to the nurse’s office, the curtains flickered. Blood red fog surrounded his body, and it was a red blur inside the room; he could not see anything.

“Is anyone in?”

The nurse’s office was quite large and was made up of four connecting rooms. The outermost room was the consultation room; it was the smallest, with two sets of tables and chairs and two shelves for the amenities.

The nurse’s office feels like a private clinic. Just how many students come here every day?

The blood red wall had thin vessels that crawled on it like worms. A large white coat hung in the corner, but no doctor was to be seen. Chen Ge walked to the table. A document was placed on the table, and it recorded some students' sicknesses and the corresponding treatments given by the doctor.

Looking through it, Chen Ge found Yan Fei's name on the third last page. Out of Chen Ge's expectation, the doctor merely gave Yan Fei some medicine to stop the bleeding and did not provide any psychological counselling. Just based on this note alone, one would not notice the issue's severity. Those who did not know the truth might think that Yan Fei had just accidentally scratched himself.

Nothing should be assessed from just the surface. According to the note, every student that came here had nothing serious, but they might have been dropped in despair already.

This document was not thick, but each page had the patient's picture.

To be bullied until they needed a trip to the nurse's office, this was some serious bullying. Perhaps I can find other children from this note.

The School of the Afterlife was unique; it combined various memories, and the number of lingering spirits and Specters were enormous. It was hard to find the few children who had the qualification to become door-pushers, but this document provided a shortcut for Chen Ge.

Since Yan Fei's name is here, the other students with the qualification might have their names here as well.

Walking past the consultation room, Chen Ge entered the second room. There were several beds. Other than the slightly bigger space, it was no different from the previous room.

"Sorry, I'm looking for someone." Chen Ge stood at the door, and his pupils throbbed as a bad feeling rose in his heart. There was no answer, like the sickroom was unoccupied. "This is strange."

Reaching his hands into the pocket, Chen Ge took out a nail and hid it in his palm. He could hear the static coming from the tape, and then he mustered the courage to step into the room. He carefully walked to the third room. There were similarly beds in the room, but unlike the second room, the beds were sequestered from each other by white curtains. Probably to protect each patient's privacy, one could not tell who was occupying the bed from outside.

This place is quite dangerous.

After passing many Trial Missions, Chen Ge's sense of danger was sharpened. He moved with his back to the wall as he nudged his foot forward. Pulling open the curtain that was closest to him, a thick stench drifted out. A black, sticky pool was left in the middle of the white sheets. It looked like blood.

The stench is heavy. This bed was probably recently occupied.

After a brief observation, Chen Ge noticed that the pillow was puffy like it was hiding something. He was about to take the pillow when he felt a chill from behind his neck like something was reminding him to look back. Turning around, Chen Ge saw a doctor in a white coat standing not far away from him. The man was plump, and his coat was bursting at the seams. He was well enveloped by his uniform that contained a coat, mask, and hat. Only his thin neck was exposed.

The body is so large, but the neck is so thin. Is it possible that the doctor is wearing several layers of clothes?

Chen Ge stared at the doctor's collar, and he caught glimpse of redness there.

The uniform is pure white, but the clothes inside are dark red. Just what kind of doctor is this?

Chapter 840 - Thin as a Stick

Chapter 840: Thin as a Stick

A nurse's office was essential for a school, but this was the first time that Chen Ge had encountered one that was so large. The man who was weirdly dressed should be the doctor here. He covered himself up as much as he could, but Chen Ge could still see the dark red underneath all the layers.

"Red Specter..." No matter the occasion, a Red Specter was a dangerous existence. They were cunning and cruel. Even with his employee's protection, Chen Ge could still be hurt.

"Hello, I'm here to see a student." Chen Ge was very polite.

"Are you sick?"

"I'm here to look for someone. His name is Yan Fei; he's my classmate."

"Are you sick?" The doctor appeared like he only knew that sentence. He kept repeating it, and with each repetition, he took one step closer to Chen Ge.

A thick stench of disinfectant rushed at Chen Ge. The doctor appeared to have doused himself in the stuff to cover up his original body odor. Although he was unable to communicate, Chen Ge did not dare do anything rash. He gripped the nail in his palm and prepared for the worst.

The doctor walked closer and closer when he suddenly stopped before Chen Ge. The pair of dark red eyes scanned Chen Ge up and down. The doctor stared at Chen Ge for a long time. Just as Chen Ge thought that the man was about to make his move, the doctor suddenly said, "You are seriously ill. I see a broken body. Your soul is like a low-quality toy that has been tampered with. It is filled with cracks and will crumble with a single touch."

“Are... you serious?” Chen Ge realized that the doctor did not sound like he was kidding.

“I can see the flower deep inside everyone’s heart. Some of them are blooming; others are wilting. You only have a grave in your heart and a seed that has been chewed on and will never germinate.” Doctor’s eyes seemed to see through everything. Unfortunately, his mask covered most of his face, so Chen Ge could not read his expression.

“Based on that, doesn’t it mean that I won’t be alive for long?” Chen Ge was unsettled by the doctor’s words. This Red Specter was very weird, but then again, all the Red Specters that he had encountered in the School of the Afterlife were strange. Compared to them, the others that he had met like Men Nan, the woman in the well, and the mother in the tunnel could not have been more normal.

“I don’t have the medicine to save you, and I am unable to save you.” The doctor suddenly turned to the other bed halfway through his sentence. Based on his reaction, the only course of action for Chen Ge appeared to be waiting for death. Even so, the doctor did not want to have anything to do with that process.

“No, wait! Doctor, I think I can still be saved. At least explain the situation to me!” Chen Ge followed behind the doctor, who took a pen and paper as he paused at each bed. The beds were isolated behind the white curtains, so one could not see through, but the doctor kept writing on the paper. He did not chase Chen Ge away; he merely acted like he was not there.

How come I feel like he’s ignoring me? The doctor treated Chen Ge like air, and Chen Ge did not know whether that was a good or a bad thing. It’s rare that I run into a more reasonable Red Specter, but he treats me so coldly. He must have seen something on me that warrant this kind of reaction.

“Doctor, how about you take a look at me again? What does the seed in my heart look like? You said it has been chewed, what does the print look like? What kind of creature has bitten it?” Chen Ge grumbled in the doctor’s ears. Probably because he had interrupted the doctor’s work, the latter sped up to enter the fourth room and closed the door behind him.

“Are you the only doctor here?” Standing outside the door, Chen Ge still had many questions.

Quite a temper he has. When there’s a chance I should take him to the underground morgue so that Dr. Wei can have a chance to chat with him.

The doctor probably saw that there was no malice in Chen Ge, so he did not harm him. Of course, it was like that the doctor had seen something special in Chen Ge so purposely avoided him. No matter what, Chen Ge could now explore the sickroom freely. As long as he did not cross the line, the doctor probably would not stop him.

“Which bed did I look at earlier?”

Chen Ge pulled the white curtains back, the front few beds were unoccupied. As he was about to pull open the fourth curtain, the curtain moved on its own.

“Yan Fei?” His fingers reached toward the white cloth. Before Chen Ge touched the curtain, a pale hand shot out from inside. There was a needle left in the arm. It was thin, pale, and bloodless like the person was suffering from serious malnourishment.

“Hi.” Chen Ge touched the hand lightly. Just as his palm touched the other hand, he could feel the other person shake. The owner did not seem like they were used to physical contact with others. Using his other hand to pull open the curtain, Chen Ge looked at the bed. A girl as thin as a stick was lying in the clean bed. She looked like a wounded swan. Her one hand was held by Chen Ge while her other hugged her knees as she curled up on one side of the bed. The girl realized that it was not the doctor who held her hand, and she looked scared. She tried to pull back her hand but swiftly gave up as if worried that it might make things worse. The child was not Yan Fei, but Chen Ge did not leave immediately because the other children who could become the door pusher might be there.

“What’s your name?”

The girl looked weak, like a beautiful butterfly fluttering in one’s palm. As the palm closed, she would be crushed.

“Yin Bai.” The girl spoke so softly that Chen Ge had to lean in to hear her.

“Yin Bai? I met a girl called Yin Hong outside. Is that your elder sister?” Chen Ge realized that the girl was rather afraid of sunlight. He pulled the curtain back so that only a sliver was left open. Hearing the name Yin Hong, the girl’s body shook even harder. Her lips were clamped shut as if worried that she might say something that she should not.

“How are... you doing?”

“No one bullied me. They were just playing with me. I am fine,” the girl suddenly said in an urgent tone. She kept repeating this like a mantra, but she was on the verge of tears.

“There is no one else here; there’s no need to be afraid.” Chen Ge did not know what the girl had experienced, but her state was very unstable. “Take a good rest. If you need any help, just holler.”

Chen Ge let go of her. He looked at the girl, wishing to get more information. The girl did not have any visible wounds, but she was impossibly thin.

Taking out the document from his backpack, after ensuring that the doctor had not returned, Chen Ge looked through it. He found the information on Yin Bai on the page before Yan Fei. The girl suffered from bulimia. The source of the illness was unknown. The suspicion was that she had been forced to consume something disgusting, and that had left a mental scar on her.

Chen Ge pitied Yin Bai, but if she refused to talk, there was nothing Chen Ge could do. "I'm a new student who just transferred here. I don't know the school that well. I hope you won't be offended if I've said something unkind."

The girl was in an unstable state. Forcing questions on her might cause her mental state to collapse. Chen Ge remembered her bed number; he planned to return as he pulled the curtain back. The thick white curtain closed, segregating the bed from the outside world. Chen Ge walked to the next bed, but before he took a step, he felt a sudden tug on the corner of his shirt. Turning back to look, a pale hand had reached out from under the white curtain to pull on his shirt.

"Run away, do not attend school here, you'll go mad." Yin Bai's voice was low, and Chen Ge had to focus to listen.

"I feel like the atmosphere here is not bad. Everyone wants to be my friend." Chen Ge did not think that the girl would harm him. He was just afraid that she would refuse to communicate. As long as she was willing, everything could be discussed.

"Go back to your old school, please." There was pleading in her voice. She did not give a specific reason, but Chen Ge could hear from her tone that she was really concerned about him and did not want him to be hurt. In the world behind the door, there was such a kind girl; Chen Ge thought that this was rather surreal.

"I can't return." Chen Ge paused, and his brain came up with the explanation in zero point something seconds. "I was bullied at my old school. I have no idea what I did wrong, but those people bullied me every day like it was something fun for them. My parents found the discipline teacher to talk about this, but after they did that, the bullying only got worse. In the end, no one in class was willing to be my friend. I couldn't stay there any longer, so I transferred here."

"You were bullied at your old school, so you transferred here?" The white curtain was pulled back a gap to reveal Yin Bai's palm-sized face. The terror in her eyes had dissipated somewhat, and in its place was shock and worry. "I don't know how to tell you this, but if you do not wish to get hurt again, I advise you to move to another school."

Perhaps this was sympathy between fellow bully victims. Chen Ge felt closer to Yin Bai.

"Why? This is my first day here. Half an hour ago, I just introduced myself to my new classmates. It feels wrong to leave now." Chen Ge was fishing for the truth. He needed more information to provide real help to change this school.

"This school is like a dark whirlpool; you have to leave before you're sucked in. Once you're trapped, you can't escape. You'll be pulled into the depths of hell. Either you're crushed, or you'll join the monsters' ranks." The girl sat in bed. She refused to gain contact with outside world. It appeared to be her limit to reach her hand outside the curtain.

"Is it that scary here?" The world was a stark contrast to the school created by the painter. At that moment, Chen Ge believed that he had gained some understanding of Chang Wenyu and the painter. One accepted beauty and hope and tore away humanity; the other chose to escape to a place where they would no longer be hurt. Their methods to gain the school's approval were interesting. It could not be said that they were wrong, but they never really tackled the root of the problem.

"You will be assimilated. If you don't want to be bullied, in the end, the only way is to turn into a monster." Yin Bai probably had not conversed with others for a long time. Seeing the kindness in Chen Ge and how he was a new student, she chose to talk to him.

"There are only two choices? Then you..." Chen Ge put down his bags and sat next to the bed. The bed was like the girl's closed inner world. Chen Ge slowly entered it with a bit of kindness. "Can you tell me your story?"

The girl did not answer, but she did not chase Chen Ge away or act agitated. She probably hoped deep inside that someone would be by her side, but for various reasons, she had lost the courage to communicate with others. Her world was enveloped by evil intent. Once she took a step, she would fall into the trap filled with venomous snakes and knives.

Looking at the girl closely, Chen Ge noticed that she was quite cute and had a sickly beauty about her. She would arouse other's intention to destroy. The slender arms, white neck, bloodless skin and face. The child hugged her knees, and black hair covered her eyes like she was spacing out. The bed was soft, and Chen Ge noticed that there was a deep impression on the girl's pillow like there was something hidden inside it.

Moving his eyes about, Chen Ge found a picture frame by her pillow. It was a family photo. A slightly large old man was pushing a wheelchair. A young woman in the chair was holding a bouquet of flowers weakly. There were needle marks on the backs of her hands. There were two cute girls next to the wheelchair. They wore pretty dresses and leaned on their mother from each side. The two girls were Yin Hong and Yin Bai, but the real person that captured Chen Ge's attention in the picture was the old man who was pushing the wheelchair.

The man had salt and pepper hair, and he looked just like someone from Chen Ge's memory.

His face and the way he laughs look ninety percent similar to the old headmaster from Mu Yang High School! Chen Ge had seen the old headmaster's picture in his office when he had it taken with the rest of the students. A rotund, smiling old man sat in the middle. But the age doesn't match! Why would the old headmaster be with these two girls?

With a dry cough, Chen Ge softly asked, "Yin Bai, is the old man in the picture your grandfather?"

"Yes." Yin Bai nodded. "He's my only family. He occasionally comes to see me."

"He comes to see you? Your only family?" Yin Bai's answer contained a whole lot of information, and various thoughts filled up Chen Ge's mind.

If the old man was really Mu Yang High School's old headmaster, and Yin Bai said he occasionally came to visit her, it meant that the old headmaster knew about the route to enter and leave the School of the Afterlife!

Furthermore, Yin Bai and Yin Hong were both in the picture, but Yin Bai said that the old man was her only family. This meant that from Yin Bai's perspective, Yin Hong was not family. Something bad must have happened between the girls.

"Yin Bai, can you tell me more about your grandfather?" Chen Ge nudged toward her.

Yin Bai who sat in bed lifted her head and said after a long pause, "My grandfather is infertile. He has no biological children, but he has many children."

Chapter 842: I Will Be That Light

“My mother was one of the children adopted by him.” Yin Bai’s eyes were very pretty and clear. “My mother was an abandoned baby, and she was weak from a young age. Her condition only got better when she was adopted by my grandfather. She was brought up by him and stayed by his side until she was twenty and met my father. They had a simple wedding, and soon, I arrived.

“After she gave birth to me, my mother’s physical condition deteriorated, and my father’s attitude toward her also slowly changed. Then father’s company closed, and he was left with plenty of debt. He was chased by moneylenders and had to leave me and my mother so that he could avoid them. He always told us that the lenders would not trouble a woman and a newborn and only dared to sneak home every few days at midnight. This continued for a few months until father stopped communicating with us and never returned home.

“Caring for a child while being threatened through the closed door, the home being splashed with paint, mother finally collapsed. The doctor called grandfather, and it was only then that he knew how bad the situation was. It was not common at the hospital for the older generation to take care of the younger generation. Mother got worse. Her last wish was to see father one last time. It was not for love, but she wanted to give him a slap and ask him a question. Her wish became her dying wish. The day that she died, it appeared like grandfather grew older before my eyes. Then I started living with grandfather, going to school, studying.”

As she lowered her head, Yin Bai said, “It was not my intention to cause trouble for him. I didn’t mean it.”

From Yin Bai’s story, the old headmaster of Mu Yang High School was a kind person. Evil and desire were not seen in him at all; this strengthened Chen Ge’s need to meet the man.

“Your grandfather is a good person. Do you know where he is now? I wish to meet him.” If he knew how to leave the School of the Afterlife, then Chen Ge would have nothing to lose.

Yin Bai shook her head. “He lives outside the school, but he always shows up when I’m at the edge of my rope, and whenever I see him, I’ll feel much better.”

“Understood.” Chen Ge did not press. Chaos was coming to the school; the old headmaster would come to protect his granddaughter, so all he needed to do was wait. “You’d better get a good rest. I won’t disturb you anymore.”

Closing the curtain, Chen Ge was thinking about the old headmaster. The latter had avoided him several times already, but that should stop soon. Leaving Yin Bai’s bed, Chen Ge suddenly realized something. When the girl was talking about her past, there was no mention of Yin Hong at all. It was as if this person did not exist in her life.

Yin Hong is in the family portrait, so why did the child purposely leave her out? What happened to this pair of sisters?

Chen Ge felt like what had happened to Yin Bai probably had something to do with Yin Hong.

Once the old headmaster is found, everything will be solved. I’ll forget about it for now.

Remembering Yin Bai’s bed, Chen Ge even thought about taking Yin Bai with him so that he could guard her personally. But considering that the doctor might not approve of that, he gave up that thought. He continued to do his round. When Chen Ge passed the last bed, a heavy stench of medicine came from inside. Pulling open the white curtain, Chen Ge looked at the bed; there was a normal looking boy lying in it. All his limbs were bandaged, and his eyes were hollow as he stared at the ceiling. Even when the curtain was pulled back, he did not react. The child seemed to be isolated from the outside world; he was a veritable zombie.

“Yan Fei?” Chen Ge was unsettled, seeing the boy in this state. The child was like a normal person; he was a caricature of the public. “I know that you’re not feeling well, and I’m not here to tell you to get over it. I’m just here to tell you that I’ve helped you get revenge. I taught the bullies a lesson. After school, I will teach them a much deeper lesson.”

He used different method to converse with different people. To get close to Yan Fei, this was the tactic employed by Chen Ge. When he said that, Yan Fei still showed no reaction. It was as if the boy was no longer interested in anything. Chen Ge tried to say something else, but no matter what, Yan Fei did not respond. His body did not even budge. Unable to communicate, the mission given by Chang Wenyu was harder than he had thought.

Standing next to the bed, Chen Ge was about to reach his hand through the bed to check what the real problem with Yan Fei's body was when the door not faraway was opened. The doctor had come out. With limited time, Chen Ge pulled his hand back and looked at Yan Fei with some regret.

"Darkness is there. Even if you ignore it, it will not disappear. If you do not wish to be consumed by darkness, turn yourself into light, and shine on all the darkness. I know that you can hear me, and I know that you once resisted. Now I am taking your former seat. I will help you complete the things that you are unable to do. An eye for an eye—after I've punished those that need it, I will return."

Yan Fei's situation was more serious than Chen Ge had expected. He had completely isolated himself. He refused to speak to communicate. Perhaps only with a knife on his neck would he realize that he was still alive.

"You are not wrong, and I'll prove it to you." Chen Ge wanted to change this school, and for that, he needed to change the students' perspective first. When encountering school bullying, silence was not going to solve anything. Only by stepping forward could one protect oneself and others. If all the students could do that, school bullying would be stopped before it had a chance to grow.

Chen Ge did not think that all the students would be like him. He merely wished to set an example. A man who dared stand up to violence at school. Walking out from the nurse's office, Chen Ge returned to class. The teacher glanced at him but said nothing. When the school bell rang to signify that school was over, the teacher was the first to leave like he had something important to do.

After the teacher left, the few students from the last row rushed out. They pointed at Chen Ge like they were planning something.

Out of kindness, Lee Bing took a big risk to pass a note to Chen Ge. "Do not go home alone today. Tell your parents to come fetch you."

"If my parents really come here, they will level this place, but unfortunately, I haven't seen them for a long time." Chen Ge sat at his table and slowly put the textbooks away.

"I'm not kidding you. There are too many of them! You have broken the game rule, so they will all gang up on you!" Lee Bing was nervous; he could have seen Chen Ge's bad ending.

"Don't worry, I might have more people with me." Chen Ge put the last textbook into his bag and strode out from the classroom.

Chen Ge was there to create trouble, so the more chaotic the School of the Afterlife, the happier he would be.

I have my student ID in the left pocket and teacher's ID in my right. With all the preparation done, I'm ready to rearrange the structure at this school.

Pressing the start button on the recorder, Chen Ge held his two bags and reached the end of the corridor. As if worried about him, Lee Bing followed Chen Ge after he left. He hesitated, like he wanted to tell Chen Ge something but was afraid of being seen by the bullies. Chen Ge strode down the corridor. He did not know his way about and was just wandering about. The number of students in the corridor decreased; the remaining ones appeared to know him. They averted their eyes from him and pointed behind him like they were planning something.

Why haven't they made their move? I've already reached some real secluded parts of the school.

Chen Ge tried his best to cooperate with the bullies. The darker the corridor, the better it was. To lure the bullies to attack him, he was controlling his expression to make himself appear to be confident on the outside but actually shaking like a leaf inside. At that moment, the bullies were perhaps enjoying the thrill of the hunt, playing the game of cat and mouse.

The few buildings at the school seem to be connected. The office and the teacher's dormitory are the eastern part of the school, and in contrast, the western part is the part with the least amount of management. It is filled with empty labs and storerooms. It's rarely visited by teachers and students.

Chen Ge looked more agitated, and he wandered around the school like a headless chicken. Finally, he 'accidentally' entered the most ‘secluded’ storage area in the School of the Afterlife. When he walked into the corridor of the western side of the school, Lee Bing left. In the end, he did not have the courage to tell Chen Ge. There was no one else in the corridor. The thin blood fog surrounded Chen Ge.

It's time for them to make their move, right? I've already voluntarily walked to such an isolated place.

Listening to the static from the recorder, Chen Ge looked out the window. Blood fog enveloped the whole world. Through the fog, one could catch a blurry glimpse of a blood red sun. The thing appeared to be entirely made up of negative emotion.

I've not seen this thing in other places behind the door before.

The sun blinked in and out of the fog. This scene loosened Chen Ge's memory, and it reminded him of something that had happened a long time ago. When he was doing the tunnel nightmare mission, Chen Ge had once entered a hallucination and seen the self that was killed many years ago inside the tunnel. He had been unable to shake loose, and it was Zhang Ya who had reached out to save him. When he saw the death illusion, Zhang Ya's appearance had been like a blood red sun.

It's too similar. It's just like how I saw Zhang Ya when I was lost. Could the sun here be represented by a Specter as well?

Sudden footsteps interrupted Chen Ge's thought. He turned back to look and realized that the doors that were on the two sides of the corridor were all opened, and the fog around him thickened. The footsteps came closer, and the air became more suffocating. There was the sound of metal hitting the ground.

“It's understandable that the new student did not know the rules, but openly breaking the rules and not respecting us, that needs some serious education.” One of the room doors was pushed open, and a muscular man walked out. Three students followed behind him. They were all students from Chen Ge's class, and they sat on the back row.

“Just four of you?” Chen Ge was not satisfied. He had made such a large ruckus, but only four had taken the bait.

“Don't worry, we're all students here, so we won't punish you too much.” The leading and largest student blocked the corridor with a smile. He scanned Chen Ge up and down like he was studying him.

"You dare touch me at the school?" Chen Ge warned the man darkly, but the students did not seem to mind.

"You'd better turn back to look you. There are no cameras here. Normally, no one comes here. Even if they do, they will not tell on us." The few students had probably done this more than once already, and they were fearless.

"Turn back?" Chen Ge turned behind him, and the storeroom door that was not far away was pushed open. A stench drifted out from it.

This smell is very familiar. I smelled it in the painter's reconstructed school before. It's released by those inverted monsters.

The stench thickened, and the students from Chen Ge's class moved backward to block the only exit on the other side. If Chen Ge wished to escape, he could only run deeper into the corridor.

"You can only blame yourself for having run into our territory. Even the teachers don't dare come here often." A middle-aged man walked out from the storeroom. He was wearing a bloody shirt, and his face appeared to have been seared by a fire brand as a scary-looking scar was left there. "Brother Ba, this is the kid. He hit my friend on his first day of school."

"How did he hit him?" The middle-aged man dragged out a new wooden chair from the storeroom. He did not even pay any attention to Chen Ge.

"He used a chair to hit my friend's head."

"That's quite ruthless." The middle-aged man held his chin. "Let me think about this. Even though he doesn't follow the rules, after all, he's new here. How about this? Come over here and take this chair. Then, hit him back like how he hit your friend. Each of you will get to hit him once. If he dares resist, I will call my people. Go ahead."

"We'll do it? That's not that good, right?"

"Stop wasting time." While the middle-aged man was communicating with the students, Chen Ge was observing him. The man was not a student there; he was probably a wandering spirit who had been dragged into the school when the school was expanding, and listening to his words, there appeared to be more people like him.

Consuming the students at the school might earn the school's ire, but these outsiders should not be under the school's protection. If my workers consume them, the school might even appreciate my effort to clean this place out.

The way Chen Ge looked at the middle-aged man changed. He prepared to teach a lesson to all the bullies until they surrendered, but now the plan had changed.

“What is all this noise? If they don’t dare to, we’ll do it. How troublesome is that?” More people walked out from inside the storeroom. They were dressed differently from the students. Each of them had a scar on their bodies and had retained the look during their death. The fight would soon be over. Brother Ba dragged the chair to walk toward Chen Ge. He looked at Chen Ge’s legs, which were shivering, and the scar on his face contorted. “Now you know how to be afraid?”

“No, I’m just curious. Why would all of you listen to those students’ orders? Is it because one of them has something on you, and you are forced to cooperate with them?” Chen Ge had a few guesses in mind.

Chapter 844 - The Counterattack

Chapter 844: The Counterattack

It was clear that the middle-aged man did not intend to answer Chen Ge. From his perspective, Chen Ge was just a new student who did not know his place. “You sure have plenty to say!”

Raising the chair to aim at Chen Ge’s shoulder, the middle-aged man did not want to leave any obvious wound on Chen Ge. They were experienced in beating people up without leaving conspicuous wounds.

Bang!

The chair landed on the wall. Chen Ge had avoided it.

“You dare to resist?” The scar on the man’s face started to twist, and his partners walked toward him.

“Before I came here, I told the teachers. They will be here soon.”

No one believed Chen Ge. His body was shaking, and his eyes were darting about. All those details told them that he was afraid and lying.

“Can you even hear yourself? Who would believe that?” The middle-aged man grabbed another chair and threw it at Chen Ge. Chen Ge wiggled backward, saw the opening, and ran deeper into the storeroom. The deeper he went, the more deserted it was. No one expected Chen Ge to run that way, so they were stunned briefly. When they realized what had happened, Chen Ge was already several meters away.

“Looks like the boy is so scared that he can’t even tell the direction.” The middle-aged man shared a look with others that came out from the storeroom; there were blood vessels in their eyes.

“Go after him! Don’t let him get away!” The students from Chen Ge’s class did not quite get it. They still wished to teach Chen Ge a lesson.

The spirits from outside the school did not make their move immediately. They seemed to wish for Chen Ge to run further.

“Don’t worry, he’s not going to escape.” An old man at the edge of the crowd licked his lips and swallowed the saliva. He pointed his finger at the rest. “I want a piece. The rest of you can share.”

“Old fart, half a piece is enough to choke you.” The middle-aged man tossed the wooden chair before the students. “You people guard this exit. The deeper part of the corridor is very dangerous. We also don’t know how many outsiders are hiding there.”

Seeing Chen Ge almost disappearing from their eyes, the spirits from outside the school finally started to give chase. They purposely maintained a distance from Chen Ge, wishing for him to run deeper. This would make their next move more convenient, and that was exactly what Chen Ge was hoping for. Both parties formed a strange union, one was running, the other chasing. They fled through two corridors, and it was Chen Ge who finally stopped. He acted like he was winded and turned to hide inside an old toilet at the end of the corridor.

The door to the School of the Afterlife was pushed open in a toilet, and now I’ve been forced to hide inside the toilet again. Is this a coincidence, or has everything been ‘planned’?

The door pusher was injured inside the last cubicle, so Chen Ge also hid inside the last cubicle. The corridor was permeated with blood fog. There was no one in the abandoned school; only his own heartbeat and breathing were his company.

Creak...

The door was pushed open, and footsteps echoed in his ears. The other parties’ shoes sounded like they were stepping on blood—there was a squishy sound to it.

Did that child experience this before?

History repeated itself, but this time, the victim was Chen Ge.

“Are you here?” A scratchy male voice came from the toilet entrance. The spirits were toying with Chen Ge.

Creak...

The door of the first cubicle was slowly pushed open, and the footsteps neared. Chen Ge took a deep breath as the images that he had seen on the top floor of the education block in the toilet appeared in his mind. He was experiencing the same thing that was experienced by the child before he died. Fear, anxiety, increased heartbeat. He held his mouth with his hands to make sure that he made no noise. His back against the wall, his strength was gradually slipping as he curled at the corner of the dirty toilet. The slender body kept shivering. His brain was filled with the fear of what they would do to him after he was captured. Many negative emotions tortured his brain and soul. How would one expect a young child to stand up to all that?

Being in their shoes, Chen Ge felt like he had gained a better understanding of those children. The way an adult looked at the world was different from a child. The fear in a child's eyes was different from that of an adult. Rubbing his chilled palms together, Chen Ge stopped his wandering mind.

"Are you in here?" The door of the second cubicle was pushed open. They sounded very strange, like a soul that would not leave, a shadow that was stubborn.

"I saw you. I know you're hiding here." The door of the third cubicle creaked open, and the blood fog thickened. The toilet became more suffocating. The light stench of blood instigated everyone. Their eyes were filled with blood, and many feral faces squeezed into the toilet.

"We are coming to get you."

Blood leaked out from their wounds. The middle-aged man held the rope that he had found in the storeroom. His finger scratched the door of the cubicle. He knocked on it lightly with a graceful touch—he was enjoying this.

"He's not inside the fourth cubicle. Looks like he's in the last one." The nail scratched on the wooden door, creating a spine-tingling sound. The footsteps stopped before the last cubicle.

"Are you in here?" The door wiggled, and the anxious heart jumped. The bullies were ready; the ending had been decided. "It's locked? I know you're in there. Come out! Come out!"

The door was shivering under the heavy, regular knocks. Just how helpless the child would have been... he would have had to face those people alone and suffer the consequence.

“Come out, come out wherever you are!”

The sound outside grew louder. The sound of footsteps, screaming, and knocking were mixed into a cacophony that could push one over the edge.

Bang!

The old lock could not suffer so much banging, and the cubicle door was finally pushed open. The middle-aged man who stood at the front held the rope and squeezed in before the door fully opened.

“Pull him out! Pull him out!” the people behind shouted, but there was no reply from the middle-aged man like he had disappeared.

Creak...

The door whose lock was broken slowly open. The sound of dripping echoed in everyone's ears. Fresh blood leaked out from under the door. The heavy stench of blood rushed at them. There were many people squeezed inside the small cubicle.

“You all wish to bully, but I intend to kill; our goals were different from the beginning.” Chen Ge closed the comic and leaned against the wall. His palm was toying with a stain that looked like a wilted heart.

“After consuming all of you, Bai Qiulin should be able to evolve into a Red Specter...”

The victims ran away in a hurry before hiding inside the last cubicle of the toilet. The bullies closed in on them step by step, inching toward their prey with smiles on their faces, pulling the rope around the victims' neck tighter and tighter. This image appeared in the mind of the old man who guarded outside the toilet, but as he anxiously turned to look inside the toilet, he realized that everything was different from his expectation.

A bloody man with just one hand held the leader by his neck as he slammed the leader against the wall. Various blood vessels curled around the leader's legs. He tried to struggle to escape, his hands leaving scratches on the white wall, but no matter how hard he struggled, he was unable to break free. The horrible stench permeated the toilet. An impossibly large fat man squeezed out from the cubicle. He was more passionate than the other workers, the stench that drifted out from the bullies excited him greatly. More and more shadows walked out from inside the cubicle, and that stunned the old man. He was frozen where he was. Before he realized what had happened, five pale fingers gripped his neck. His breathing was stunted. He wished to see who his aggressor was, but this simplest wish failed to turn into reality.

"Is it painful?" Before dispersing, this was the only question that the old man heard. In less than thirty seconds, silence returned to the toilet. Chen Ge walked out from the cubicle and scanned his employees. Bai Qiulin had consumed Xiong Qing's heart, and after such a feast, he was one step away from becoming a Red Specter. By now, he had mastered some of Xiong Qing's unique skill. The Red Specter created by the ghost stories society had only had half his body; the other half had been constructed completely from negative emotions and blood vessels. During the fight earlier, Chen Ge had noticed that Bai Qiulin also used blood vessel to weave his broken arm. Bai Qiulin was slowly growing stronger, but he was not the one who had the biggest change. That would be the boy with the stench whom he had brought from Western Jiujiang Private Academy.

This boy who had stayed with his father's cadaver for a long time had gotten used to the odorous stench. He had no name, everyone hated him, and the stench was his nickname. To Chen Ge's surprise, in the School of the Afterlife, this Specter that was not even a Half Red Specter found a way to make himself stronger. He sucked away the stench from the wandering spirit, to make himself larger and scarier.

"What is the stench around these spirits? How come I smelled the same stench in the painter's reconstructed school?"

Chen Ge did not think much of the stench initially, but the boy's reaction caused Chen Ge to pay it more attention.

"If there's a chance, perhaps I should take him to the trash collection center between the schools. The recyclable might come in handy."

After his workers had cleaned up the toilet and washed away the evidence, Chen Ge pulled all the workers back into the comic and walked out from the toilet.

"Initially, I thought that my Haunted House was close to becoming a four-star scenario, but reality proves that I was wrong." Chen Ge walked to the window by the corridor. It felt as if the red sun was looking at him. "The School of the Afterlife is filled with many lingering spirits and contains thirteen scary Specters who have the qualification to become door pushers. There's an unknown number of Red Specters, but the safest speculation puts the number at thirteen at the very least. That, combined with the consciousness of the school itself, made this four-star scenario to be very scary.

"Thankfully, the school is not hostile against me and hasn't tried to come after me. But even if I am able to leave the school alive, what about the ghost fetus' scenario? That whole entire four-star scenario is specifically made to kill me!"

A four-star scenario was completely different from a three-star scenario. Chen Ge felt like even if he did not try to go and accept that mission, the mission would find him.

"What will be will be. All I can do now is grow stronger in this school and then wait for the ghost fetus' arrival."

Walking amid Red Specters and ghosts to increase his strength in the face of death, only Chen Ge dared do something like that, but he had no choice. He had been pushing himself forward. When he turned around, he realized that there was already no way back. Standing at the entrance, Chen Ge did not deactivate the recorder but carried his two bags and headed deeper into the storeroom.

“Since I’m already here, I can’t waste my time. Furthermore, the school is a place to learn, but the atmosphere has been ruined by these people. That’s atrocious.”

Chen Ge did not understand why the school would allow these spirits to exist. Perhaps it did not think that it was worth the effort to deal with them. “If it’s too inconvenient for you, I’ll help you do it.”

He had no idea what the benefit was from gaining the school’s approval, but that was one of the steps of his plan. Walking into the storerooms, Chen Ge sent out all his employees, but the spirits seemed to have sensed that something had gone wrong, and they had all disappeared.

The blood in the air thickened, and the blood fog outside the window rolled anxiously. The sun that was shining on the school seemed to be expanding like it was descending upon the place.

“It should be because of me. Looks like the painter and Chang Wenyu are officially at it. I can’t stay here any longer. I need to gather all the students who have the potential to be the door-pushers around me. That is the only way I might survive.”

Chen Ge’s real trump card was Zhang Ya. Perhaps Chang Wenyu saw that and pulled Chen Ge into the School of the Afterlife, but she had no idea how strong Zhang Ya really was. Summoning his employees back, Chen Ge retraced his steps. He needed to get Yin Bai and Yan Fei to side with him before the chaos arrived.

“The old headmaster of Mu Yang High School is worried about Yin Bai’s safety and will probably take her to somewhere safe before the anarchy starts. That will be my chance.” With that in mind, Chen Ge ran faster. He walked out the corridor, and the students from his class were still blocking the way.

“You are still alive?” The few students looked at Chen Ge strangely.

“Almost forgot about you.” Chen Ge flipped through the comic and had Ol’ Bai capture the students. Chen Ge planned to do unto them as they had planned to do unto him earlier.

“Slow down, I need to keep some evidence.” Chen Ge took out Lin Sisi’s phone. “This phone was used to capture the bullied’s painful memories, but from now on, it’s going to record something else.”

A group of people bullying one person, be it verbal abuse or physical abuse, that was bullying, but in contrast, a person chasing after a group of people, that was not bullying. At least from Chen Ge’s perspective, he was helping the school clean up the streets.

Chen Ge saved the video of how he punished the bullies on Lin Sisi's phone; he was not afraid of leaving behind evidence. He wished for everyone to know that there was someone at this school who dared to stand up to school bullying. For that, the video had to be convincing. Chen Ge chose a good angle for the shoot. He did not include his own employees in the video, only himself and the bullies. Those who did not know the truth might think Chen Ge dealt with the numerous bullies alone just from viewing the video. After the video was completed, all the bullies crumpled to the ground. The way they looked at Chen Ge was filled with terror.

"This time, you have all been taught a lesson, right?" Chen Ge stopped interacting with the bullies. He put down the bags and lay down on the ground to cover his body with the dust. Then he tore parts of his shirt and pants out before finally daubing his body with blood. "One has to look heroic."

The employees had already gotten used to his way of thinking. They pitied the bullies for having encountered their boss. Summoning the employees back, Chen Ge moved with one hand on the wall. He needed to return to the nurse's office. Before he got that far, as he was turning a corner, Chen Ge bumped into someone who was rushing his way.

The bullies' helper? No matter who the person was, after Chen Ge was bumped into, he staggered backward to introduce some distance between them.

"Chen Ge!" It was a round face that entered Chen Ge's eyes. The person had an unassuming look with a little baby fat. His eyes were wide with worry.

"Lee Bing?" The boy was Chen Ge's deskmate. When Chen Ge was bullied earlier, he had maintained his silence to prevent himself from being target. Even if he communicated with Chen Ge, it was through paper notes. "Why are you here?"

"I..." Seeing how ruffled Chen Ge was, with the torn clothes, the dusty outfit, and the blood on his body, he panicked. "I'm sorry! I'm sorry!"

"Why are you apologizing? I have no time to talk. If you're not one of the bullies, then move away." The blood sun that was covering the school was changing, Chen Ge was in a hurry to get to the nurse's office.

"I'm here to help you! I've already told the teachers!" Lee Bing said with determination. The change in his attitude was out of Chen Ge's expectations. "That is the only way I can help you. Please stop angering them, they are familiar with ruffians outside of school. There are many of them, and the students with good results are also on their side. If you continue to do this, you'll only hurt yourself."

"I'm thankful that you're willing to stand forth to help me, but in certain matters, I will not compromise." Chen Ge leaned against the wall weakly. "I am a rational person. What's wrong is wrong, and what's right is right. If it's wrong and I have to say that it's right because of social pressure, I can't do something like that."

"That's what I'm asking you to do! I'm just trying to teach you how to survive at this school!" Lee Bing advised. Chen Ge understood that his intentions were kind.

"I know you mean well, but there has to be someone who dares to stand up to the bullies." Chen Ge wiped the blood off his collar, and his tone was harsh. "Facing against the group of bullies and helping the bullied, everyone knows that is hard to do. Why should we sacrifice ourselves for others? But have you considered this? Just because everyone thinks like that, that is why those bullies dare to push so far into their madness!"

Chen Ge's voice was rising. "I have faith that human nature is kind, and most people mean well. If the majority of people are kind, then why should we be bullied by those who are in the minority?"

Lee Bing's lips fell open; he did not know what to say.

"Let me tell you the answer—kindness is easily mistaken as weakness. No one dares speak, no one dares stand up, so those b*stards trample over everyone." Chen Ge grabbed Lee Bing's hand and pressed it against his heart. The spot was wet with the blood of the gangsters. "Kind people like us make up the majority. People just doesn't dare speak up. Thus, we need a person to lead by example.”

Lee Bing finally understood Chen Ge’s intention. “So, you purposely provoked the bullies in class?”

“No matter the time or place, bullying is wrong. They do not realize their mistake, and I will use my own method to remind them.” Chen Ge reached out to grab Lee Bing’s shoulders. “I cannot fall. I have to prove to everyone that the bullies are not impervious; there is no need for us to be afraid of them! Everyone can stand up on their own, criticize them bravely, and look down on their mistakes! If everyone had a consciousness like that, before the bullying even has a chance to occur, it would be stopped!”

To be honest, Lee Bing had stopped listening a while back. He merely felt that Chen Ge was right, and the emotions caused his blood to boil.

“There are only four bullies in total. This time, you came forth to help me. If the other students were like you, just imagine how many would be on our side? Wouldn’t our number be greater than the bullies?”

Lee Bing nodded. Although he probably still would not dare come out to help Chen Ge before the bullies, at least his perspective had started to change.

“Come with me. We’re going somewhere.” Chen Ge wanted to take Lee Bing to the nurse’s office. A plan was forming in his mind.

“Where are we going? The teachers will be here soon, and those who tried to bully you...”

Before Lee Bing finished, Chen Ge passed him Lin Sisi’s phone. “This time, I won. If, one day, I fall down, I hope you will learn not to bow down to them.”

After finishing the video and looking at the dust and blood on Chen Ge’s clothes, Lee Bing’s conviction was shaken. His despair was shattered, and hope bloomed in his heart. The two raced toward the nurse’s office. There were no students in the corridors, but there were staff occasionally bustling about.

“Come in with me.” Chen Ge led Lee Bing into the nurse’s room. They headed right for Yan Fei’s bed. “In this bed lies Yan Fei.”

Lee Bing felt guilty toward Yan Fei. He hesitated a long time before he pulled the white curtain aside. Seeing Yan Fei in bed, Lee Bing apologized several times. What caught Chen Ge's attention was that Yan Fei, who would not respond to him, moved his fingers after seeing Lee Bing, and his eyes slowly wandered to fall on Lee Bing.

They were once good friends.

Chen Ge did not waste time on platitudes. He took out Lin Sisi's phone, opened the video, and showed it to Lee Bing.

"They will not be able to bully you again." Chen Ge repeated what he had told Lee Bing. He hoped that Yan Fei would understand what he had done because this was the path that he had chosen, a path different from the painter and Chang Wenyu.

To Yan Fei, Chen Ge was just an unknown stranger whom he did not know, but it was a different case with Lee Bing; they had once been deskmates and friends. Yan Fei might not believe certain words that Chen Ge said, but it would take on a greater credibility when they came out of Lee Bing's lips. Chen Ge knew that it would be immensely difficult to break down Yan Fei's mental defenses, so he had focused his attack on Yan Fei's close friend first. Lee Bing told Yan Fei many things, and Yan Fei's eyes gradually took on a new shade. His heart and conviction had begun to shake, but Chen Ge had still not gained his full confidence.

This School of the Afterlife has already begun its change. I will transform this school right from its foundation.

Chen Ge took Yan Fei's hand and pulled up his sleeves. The child resisted on instinct; he did not wish for his secret to be openly witnessed by others. The sleeves were hiding a bandage, and the bandage was hiding a slew of wounds.

"The wounds on your body will heal with medicine and rest, but the wounds that are torn on your heart will stay forever. I know you are using physical pain to try to numb the psychological pain, but that is no solution to any problem.

"Why are you using your own pain to punish yourself? Even if you die from the process, those who bullied you will not shed a single tear on your behalf. They will stand by your grave and continue to mock you while looking at your black and white photo."

Folding back the shirt sleeves, Chen Ge held Yan Fei's palm. Human warmth that he had not felt for a long time travelled from Chen Ge to Yan Fei.

"I know you still might not believe me, but I will use actions to prove myself." Chen Ge stood at the side of the bed. "A giant change is coming to this school. It is far too dangerous for you to stay here alone, so why don't you come with me and Lee Bing? We will protect you."

"That's right, Yan Fei. This time, I won't run away. I will stand by your side." Lee Bing cooperated fully. He persuaded Yan Fei alongside Chen Ge, and Yan Fei's attitude began to shift.

"You, me, and Lee Bing, we have many friends. None of us are willing to suffer the pain silently anymore. I will find them and have them join us!" Chen Ge had rescued some students in the world inside the mirror and in this blood red world. Even though they had separated from Chen Ge, Chen Ge still treated them as partners and friends.

"There are other people on our side?" Lee Bing and Yan Fei turned to Chen Ge simultaneously.

"Yes, we are not alone." Chen Ge slowly picked up Yan Fei. "Kind people are like light, and those who have kindness in their heart attract each other. Just wait and see, I will not disappoint you."

It was about time for the school to adapt and change. Even though it had provided a home for these homeless children, the home was cold and unfeeling; it was not a suitable environment for them. "It is time for the owner of the home to change."

Chen Ge had Lee Bing look after Yan Fei for the time being. He had not decided to leave the nurse's office just yet. He walked to Yin Bai's bedside. This child knew the old headmaster from Mu Yang High School, so Chen Ge would not leave her there. Peeling back the white curtain, Yin Bai sat at the edge of the bed with widened eyes. She had been eavesdropping on Chen Ge and the boy's conversation.

"I... have not been listening to you guys..." She was like a child who was caught with her hand in the cookie jar when her parents were not home. Her expression was cute with guilt. This formed a great contrast to the pain and despair that was predominant in the world behind the door.

"Yin Bai, there is something that I have to tell you." Chen Ge used his coup de grace. He took out the comic from his backpack. "I know your grandfather; he is one of the people that I respect in the world."

"You know my grandpa?" This time, it was Yin Bai's turn to be shocked. Her small lips opened and closed, and her eyes were swirling with surprise.

“Yes, I do not wish to lie to you anymore. The old man once operated a private children’s home and provided a sanctuary to many orphans. Then with the aid of the local government, he turned that organization into a school, and the school is named Mu Yang High School. I have personally been to that school before.” These words that came out of Chen Ge’s lips continued to shock the girl.

“Grandpa indeed operated a children’s home before, but he was not involved in a school. Are you sure you’ve got the right person?” Chen Ge’s words had successfully attracted Yin Bai’s curiosity.

“I am not mistaken. Since you know your grandfather has operated a children’s home before so you should recognize them.” Chen Ge knew his persuasion would be successful. He walked out from the sickroom. He flipped through the comic and summoned out several students from Mu Yang High School. In a few breaths’ time, when Chen Ge returned to the room, there were several students trailing behind him. Their faces were carved with smiles and curiosity. Even though they only had their lingering spirits left, they looked like they were very blissful and happy. For these homeless orphans, achieving societal success was not part of their wish. They were a family, and their wish was simple—it was to stay together as a family. That was bliss enough.

“Yin Bai, I have been looking for you for a long time now.” Chen Ge’s tone was regretful. He stepped to the side. Only then did the students from Mu Yang High School finally see Yin Bai in bed, who was as thin as a stick. Her bones were practically protruding through her skin. The students were stumped; it was as if they could not believe their own eyes.

“You guys...” Tears instantly fell from Yin Bai’s eyes, and her voice was shaking. “Long time no see.”

Chen Ge did not interrupt the reunion. He carried the backpack, walked out, and guarded the door. He found a corner that was rather isolated and took out a ballpoint pen that was covered in tape from his backpack. He dangled it above a piece of white paper and asked, “Pen Spirit, can you tell me the story between that girl and your headmaster? You guys should be old friends, right?”

The pen stopped above the paper for a long time before it started to move. “Thank you.”

That was out of Chen Ge’s expectations; the Pen Spirit, who had a rather unapproachable personality and hard to please attitude, this time, put herself down to thank Chen Ge.

“Please don’t act like that. I might think that you’re possessed by another spirit.”

The Pen Spirit did not mind the mocking from Chen Ge, and she continued to write on the paper. “A charity home and a private school are two wildly different concepts. Even though the old headmaster always had this idea in mind, it was incredibly hard to put into action. That was until the incident that happened to Lee Xueyin, then his intention to create a school for the orphans that he housed was made firm.”

“Her name is Lee Xueyin? Isn’t her name Yin Bai?”

“I am not mistaken; she is Lee Xueyin. She is the child of the first child adopted by the old headmaster.”

“Wait, that is a bit confusing. Can you please be more specific?” Chen Ge held the pen and stared with extreme focus at the white paper.

“Lee Xueyin’s mother was the first child taken in by the old headmaster. Because of her physical deformity, she was unable to do any work, and the old headmaster took care of her until the day she got married. Seeing the girl that he treated as his own walk down the aisle was incredibly touching for the old headmaster. He believed that his daughter had finally found happiness in life and could live a normal life, but who would have thought those horrible incidents would happen later? Lee Xueyin’s mother’s condition deteriorated. Her cold-blooded father made the decision to abandon the mother and daughter who were becoming more of a burden. In the end, it was the old headmaster who sent Lee Xueyin’s mother away on her final journey at the hospital.”

Chen Ge nodded. “I know about all that. You only need to tell me what happened to Yin Bai later.”

“Lee Xueyin’s mother’s passing brought about a huge impact to the old headmaster. He was swallowed by guilt. He felt like it was his fault for failing to pick a good man for his daughter, and it was his own hands that pushed his daughter into the fire pit. The old headmaster adopted Lee Xueyin. He turned the heavy guilt that pressed down on him into love, and he put all his affection and attention into caring for Lee Xueyin.

“Xueyin was a precocious child. She got excellent results at school. To ensure that she would have a bright future, the old headmaster sent her to the best school in the state, but something that no one could have expected happened.

“Halfway through the first semester, the news that Xueyin had left the world came. It was only when it was all too late that the old headmaster knew that Xueyin had been subjected to horrible bullying at her school. The people from her class envied Xueyin because she always scored the best in class. Their envy slowly turned into hatred. In their mind, she was merely an adopted child; she had no father and no mother. During the parent-teacher conference, it was the staff from the children’s home who came to attend on her parent’s behalf.

“The old headmaster cherished Xueyin dearly, so he had no idea that this kind of thing would even happen. The man who had been living for half a century collapsed just like that. He pointed at those students who had on masks of innocence, yelling at them that they were murderers!

“This incident caused a lasting impact on the old headmaster. He adopted all these children because he wanted to give them happiness, not watch them walk step by step into a dark abyss.

“Death is irreversible. To ensure that the same thing would not happen to the rest of his children, to make sure that this kind of tragedy did not reoccur, he stopped at nothing to turn the children’s home into Mu Yang High School.”

The pen in his grasp was still moving. Chen Ge really did not expect there to be such a detailed backstory to Mu Yang High School.

“When Mu Yang High School was completed, the old headmaster’s hair was already all white. He was still so kind and generous, but it was as if a part of his soul was gone. He was not as talkative as before, and the smile on his face became smaller and smaller.

“If my memory serves me right, it was around that time that he often started to go out at night by himself.”

“Wait a minute.” When Chen Ge saw the last sentence that the Pen Spirit wrote, he felt that something was off. “The old headmaster often went out at night on his own?”

“If I’m not mistaken, he took the last bus to Western Jiujiang. The old headmaster was very busy in the day, and his only free time opened up at night.”

“Do you know why he would travel so far to Western Jiujiang?”

“I feel like it was because he had to go and meet up with someone, but one time, I saw the ticket for our Haunted House on his office table.” Even though the Pen Spirit did not admit it directly, she treated herself as part of the Haunted House, and that was quite evident from her choice of words.

“The old headmaster came to Western Jiujiang’s New Century Park’s Haunted House at midnight?” Chen Ge’s eyes widened. He was reminded of something else at that moment. When he entered Mu Yang High School the second time, he had seen a donation record inside the old headmaster’s office, and it had contained both the names of Doctor Gao and his own parents!

“The old headmaster knew my parents!” Chen Ge’s eyes narrowed. He felt like it could have been his parents who acted as the old headmaster’s guide, and that was the reason the old headmaster was able to reach Yin Bai in the School of the Afterlife!

“I get it now; I understand everything now.” Chen Ge took a deep breath. “The old headmaster knew how dangerous the School of the Afterlife was, and he was still worried about the students at Mu Yang High School, so he did not come to the decision to enter the school to rescue Yin Bai. Then, when I came to the school, he knew about my parents’ personality, and he had confidence in me. On the surface, it looked like I had taken the students away from him, but in actuality, he wished for me to find a permanent home for them.”

After getting that all cleared up, Chen Ge did not get angry from being lied to. If anything, his admiration of the old headmaster only increased. Even after death, he still cared so greatly about these kids. After obtaining the black phone, Chen Ge had seen the other world. He had seen the deepest darkness and actual hope, like the old headmaster of Mu Yang High School and Doctor Wei, who donated his body to Jiujiang Medical University for the advancement of medical science.

“With nothing to lose, the old headmaster has entered the School of the Afterlife to try to figure out a way to save Yin Bai. He should be in this school at the moment.” After knowing that the old headmaster was familiar with his parents, Chen Ge’s desperation to find the old headmaster increased. If he could meet him in person, many mysteries about himself would be resolved.

“The old headmaster passed the care of the students from Mu Yang High School to me. Looks like he is determined to even die. But why? We’re all family. I wish he would have come to discuss things with me first.”

Chen Ge had understood the whole story. He was about to put the pen away when he saw suddenly reminded of something. “Pen Spirit, does Lee Xueyin have any siblings? Other than Yin Bai, there is a girl called Yin Hong at this school. She looks almost identical to Yin Bai, but her personality is completely different. She appears to be more cunning and careful with her words.”

“Lee Xueyin does not have any siblings; her only family is the old headmaster,” the Pen Spirit answered honestly on the white paper.

What the Pen Spirit wrote was similar to the story told by Yin Bai. Chen Ge nodded. “Looks like something else happened to Lee Xueyin after she entered the School of the Afterlife. Yin Bai, Yin Hong, Lee Xueyin... Looks like I will have to bring her around with me.”

Chen Ge no longer cared about how complicated this scenario was. With the aid of his own employees, he was confident that he would be able to overcome any trouble. Putting the ballpoint pen away, Chen Ge walked back into the sickroom. Once he did, Lee Bing rushed over to join him. “Chen Ge, are these all people like us? We already have so many friends?”

“Yes, they are all our friends. You should try to communicate with him. In the future, there will be plenty that you need to learn from them.” Chen Ge patted Lee Bing on his shoulder lightly. The child appeared very harmless; he could be considered a unique presence among all the specters and lingering spirits. Many of classmates did not like him, but Chen Ge thought that he was quite a lovable fellow.

“Okay!” Lee Bing did not understand the hidden meaning in Chen Ge’s words. He only felt thankful. He did not expect there were so many people like him at the school. Walking past Lee Bing, Chen Ge came to Yin Bai’s bedside. “Now do you believe me?”

“Yes.” Yin Bai recognized her former friends. She had forgotten many things. Her memory was stopped at the time when she was still at school. For her, this was like many friends coming to visit her at the hospital. She had forgotten about her own death and did not know that her friends were also all dead.

“Please leave for now. I have something that I wish to talk to Yin Bai about in private.” Chen Ge looked at the students from Mu Yang High School. They were merely lingering spirits who refused to leave the school after they died. They were not even Specters. In a real fight, they could perish so easily. Chen Ge was trying to protect them. Following the students out of the room, as the door closed, he summoned all the students back into the comic. When he met the old headmaster, he hoped that these students could put in a good word or two for him.

The sickroom became quiet again. When Chen Ge returned, he noticed that Yin Bai was getting off the bed. She was winded and looked frail, but she tried to get to Chen Ge as if she had treated Chen Ge as part of her family as well.

Chapter 848: Doctor's Secret

"Are you sure you're fine?" Chen Ge hurried to support Yin Bai. The child took an involuntarily step back, but Chen Ge still managed to grab her arm. She did not struggle and stayed by Chen Ge's side like a quiet kitten.

"Before your grandfather arrives, I will take good care of you." Chen Ge ruffled the girl's black hair. "I will show you the world outside. You were unable to experience bliss before death, but at least you'll need to experience the warmth of the world after death."

The girl did not quite understand what Chen Ge meant. She merely nodded obediently and shyly asked, "What... is your name? Are you one of grandpa's children?"

"You can consider me a person whom your grandfather came to for help. I will protect you from further harm." Chen Ge picked up his bags. As he prepared to leave, he turned to look at the furthest room. There were four rooms in total in the School of the Afterlife's nurse's office; Yin Bai and Yan Fei were in the third room. There was another room further inside.

"Yin Bai and Yan Fei should be considered serious cases, but they still do not have the qualification to use the innermost room?" Chen Ge was curious, so he squatted before Yin Bai. "Do you know what kind of students stay in the last sickroom?"

"Only students or staff with serious injuries or those who have gone mad will be sent in there." Yin Bai's eyes were darting about when she said that, like she was afraid of the fourth room. When she spoke, her body naturally leaned away from the room. "Many people have entered that room before, but I rarely see people walk out of it. Perhaps there's another exit."

“There’s only one exit to this place.” Chen Ge guarded Yin Bai behind him. He activated the recorder and slunk over to the entrance of the fourth room. The member of staff responsible for the nurse’s office was a Red Specter; Chen Ge had met him before. The white coat that he was wearing was just a disguise. He gripped the doorknob and turned it slowly. Chen Ge realized that the door was not locked, so he pushed it open slightly. Blood leaked out from the gap. When the door was fully open, Chen Ge narrowed his eyes and used his body to block the rest of the students. The fourth room was not for patients. There were no beds or medical equipment, only many cracked mirrors. Blood-drenched white coats hung on each of the mirrors. They were of different sizes, but they should belong to one person. Chen Ge covered his mouth and carefully entered the fourth room. A sticky warm feeling crawled on every inch of his skin. Walking into the room was like wading into an ocean of blood. The bloody stench overwhelmed and suffocated him.

“Why would there be a room like this in the nurse’s office? I saw these mirrors in the school reconstructed by the painter.” Chen Ge stopped before the mirror closest to him. He pulled off the white coat. The surface of the mirror was blood red and filled the cracks. “This is similar to the mirror I saw in the eastern campus’ staff dormitory’s maintenance room.”

His finger caressed the surface, and it almost cut Chen Ge. “Even though I’m standing before the mirror, I can’t see my reflection only a slate of redness...”

He was about to move to the next mirror when a voice suddenly echoed in his ears.

“Save me... Please don’t go... Save me...” Stopping in his tracks, Chen Ge turned around and realized that the voice was coming from the mirror.

Narrowing his eyes, Chen Ge looked at the cracked mirror. “Is someone trapped inside the mirror?”

“Save me... It’s dark in here. I can’t see anything. Don’t close the window. Help me... please?” The voice became clear like there was someone standing on the other side of the mirror.

“How can I help you?” Chen Ge took one step back. He knew very well that feelings like pity and empathy were lacking in this world cultivated by despair. Being kind to others would often bring tragedy.

“There is a piece that’s misplaced on the top left corner of the mirror. If you find it and replace it as I say, you’ll be able to see me.”

“Is it that simple?” Chen Ge nudged forward. Just as he was about to reach the mirror, he suddenly stopped. “I can help you, but what will I get in return?”

“What do you want? As long as I have it, I will give it to you!”

“How about this? I’ll ask you a few questions first. If your answers are satisfactory, I’ll help you.” Chen Ge pointed at those white coats.

“How much do you know about the doctor here? The man looks quite scary.”

“I am the real doctor. The monster trapped me inside this mirror!” Blood squeezed out from the cracks. The man reacted harshly, and his emotions were fraying. “He is not an employee of our school; he’s an outsider!”

“An outsider?”

“Save me, quick! He’s coming back! I need to tell the headmaster everything that happened here!” More blood appeared on the surface, and each crack were shuddering.

“You said he’s an outsider. What evidence do you have?”

“He comes from a hospital with the name ‘Xin’. I do not know whether he’s a doctor or patient, but I know he’s mad! He’s experimenting with something here; all the teachers have been tricked by him!” The information revealed by the mirror attracted Chen Ge’s attention. He happened to know one hospital with the name ‘Xin’. It was the four-star mission mentioned by the black phone—the Cursed Hospital.

This is getting more interesting.

Chen Ge remembered many details. When he was doing the Trial Mission in Li Wan City. Clues related to the Cursed Hospital had appeared as well. The female patients wearing the patient’s garb had ridden the bus to Li Wan City. The private hospital in Li Wan City had been hiding the patients who had escaped from the Cursed Hospital. Chen Ge remembered the details very clearly. The source of the problem was a little boy, and the boy’s garb had the name ‘Xin’ on it. In the end, the boy had been taken by the red high heels.

The hospital has appeared everywhere. What is its purpose?

When Chen Ge was considering this, the man in the mirror kept pleading.

“I will temporarily trust you,” Chen Ge said. “The doctor is an outsider in disguise, but why would he place so many mirrors here? What is the meaning of a mirror in the School of the Afterlife?”

“Each mirror represents a living person. Save me, let me out! There’s no time! He’ll be back soon! After you let me out, I will tell you everything!” The voice became more desperate, but it did not affect Chen Ge at all. If the doctor returned, then he would take him down. Actually, when he saw the doctor, Chen Ge had already formulated some plans for him. If not for the doctor’s quick escape, things might have been different now.

“Just at the top left side, come closer so you can see better.” The voice in the mirror urged Chen Ge.

“There are many pieces. Which one are you talking about?”

“The small one, come closer.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge took another big step forward until his body was almost stuck to the surface. “Is this it?”

“Yes, that’s it. Right there!” The voice suddenly grew. A scarred hand reached out from inside the mirror to grab at Chen Ge. “You are the missing piece. Get in here! Replace me...”

The monster was halfway through when he noticed that something was wrong. He tried to yank Chen Ge into the mirror, but Chen Ge refused to budge. The scary thing was that he was unable to pull his arm back!

“Don’t worry, I’m going to save you using another method.” Chen Ge stepped back. “Xu Yin, pull him out.”

The monster in the mirror only then realized that his hand was grabbing another’s person’s arm. The person was wearing a red shirt, standing close to Chen Ge.

“Wait! If I can’t find a scapegoat, I will...” He did not get the chance to finish; Xu Yin pulled him directly out from the mirror. The cracks on the mirror were like knives. When the monster was pulled out, the cracks severed his body. He was lacerated, and blood dyed the mirror redder.

Xu Yin held onto the monster's five remaining fingers, but Chen Ge did notice that the monster inside the mirror was wearing a white coat, so at least one thing was not a lie—he was indeed the real doctor.

“I did not wish to harm you, but you harmed yourself. It was not my intention to do things like this, but thankfully...”

Chen Ge looked around.

“...there are plenty of other mirrors here.”

Chapter 849 - Non-Smilers

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The fourth room of the nurse's office was more like a prison where various types of people were imprisoned. Those imprisoned there were all adults; there were no students. "Looks like the fake doctor knows the rules of the school well. He does not go after the students, probably to avoid angering the school's consciousness."

Chen Ge looked at the mirrors, and each of them was trapping a monster. They were fully assimilated by the negative emotions, and they were not possible candidates for friends. He walked through the room, where pools of blood were left on the ground, before finally stopping before the last mirror at the corner of the room.

"This mirror looks different."

The other mirrors were covered with doctor's coats, but this mirror was covered with a patient's garb. It was tattered and bloody, and there was a 'Xin' sewn around the chest area.

"This outfit doesn't come from the School of the Afterlife; it should have been taken by the Red Specter from the cursed hospital!"

Even though Chen Ge had not been to that hospital, he had met its residents more than once already.

"Looks like the doctor is a patient from that hospital in disguise, but the question is, how did the monster from that four-star mission arrive here?"

Chen Ge could not figure it out. He noticed that the monsters at the cursed hospital, be it Red Specters or Lingering Spirits, seemed to be trying their best to escape.

"Only a Greater Red Specter could cause a normal Red Specter to run. The doctor looks like he's much more powerful than a normal Red Specter, so what has really happened at that hospital? Did even a Red Specter have to escape to another four-star scenario to survive?"

There were many questions, but Chen Ge did not mind it. As long as he could find and detain the doctor, most of the questions could be answered.

"Boss, don't get too close to that mirror. It gives me a bad feeling." It was Bai Qiulin who spoke. His eyes were filled with blood, and a dangerous aura wreathed him.

"Can you see the person trapped inside the mirror?" Chen Ge was very careful. Knowing there was danger, he retreated. This was the world behind the door; he could not afford to be too careful. Bai Qiulin, who had his hand in his pocket, stood to the left of the mirror, and Xu Yin, who had his head lowered, stood at the right; the two of them guarded Chen Ge.

"I cannot see it, but I can sense his malice. This person is very powerful." Bai Qiulin glanced at Xu Yin, but the latter did not reply. After a signal from Chen Ge, without saying a word, the bloody palm pressed on the surface of the mirror.

BANG!

The mirror that was already cracked became more splintered like it could not hold the pressure.

"If you refuse to come out, we'll ruin the mirror, and you'll be trapped in there forever. For us, we're losing a not-so-important mirror, but you'll lose your last hope. You should know which choice to make. Other than that, don't think about resisting. There are five Red Specters in this room. I'm not threatening you; I'm trying to help you."

After spending so much time with Chen Ge, Bai Qiulin had learned how to deal with other people from Chen Ge. Chen Ge's sole reflection appeared in the blood mirror. Gradually, the reflection started to shift until the face turned into that of a stranger. This looked very curious. The reflection still had Chen Ge's body, but the face was different.

"You're also outsiders, right?" The man in the mirror had a low voice, and a pool of evil hid in his eyes. But strangely enough, he had a ready smile for the world as if that was the only expression he knew. "Since you have shown up here, it means that the madman has already been killed—he would never allow a living person to enter this room."

The man in the mirror seemed to recognize Chen Ge because his eyes kept falling onto Chen Ge.

“If you wish to capture me as your scapegoat, I advise you to change your mind. The last Specter who planned to do that is still in my shadow, too afraid to face me.” Chen Ge took a step back to maintain a safe distance from the mirror.

“I don’t know why you’d think that. Actually, I mean none of you any harm. You’ve killed the madman, and that has helped me with my revenge. I should be thanking you—why would I harm you?” The man’s smile widened further, turning his face uglier.

“You look like a clever person, so I won’t talk circles around you. Tell me everything about the doctor and this room, or I’ll destroy the mirror.”

“Don’t worry, I will tell you everything. Only after you understand my value will I be able to live.” No matter what he said, the man would have a smile on his face. He only knew how to smile, and this made Chen Ge uncomfortable as it reminded him of someone. When he took the bus to Li Wan City, there had been a passenger who only ever smiled. During the last mission in Li Wan City, the passenger had even helped Chen Ge, but that was for the man’s self-preservation as well. After the mission in Li Wan City ended, the strange man had disappeared. At the time, Chen Ge did not think much of it. So, he was surprised that he had encountered someone similar at the School of the Afterlife. They were always smiling like it was a disease that they could not control.

“Let’s talk about the Red Specter masquerading as the doctor first. How did he get to this school?” Chen Ge was not sure whether the man would lie to him or not, so he decided to ask some unimportant questions first.

“He was a patient that escaped from a certain hospital. I can’t tell which specific hospital it was because once you mention the name, you will be cursed.” The man’s first answer provided an important name for Chen Ge. Be it the black phone or other people, none named the hospital directly, like the name was a curse.

“The cursed hospital?” Chen Ge’s eyes narrowed. After he said that, the brows of the man in the mirror lifted, and the blood in his eyes amplified like his emotions were getting out of control.

“Yes, some do call it that.”

“Why would the fake doctor escape from there?”

“I don’t know. I’m not from there. I was a teacher at this school...”

“You’re lying.” Before the man finished, Chen Ge cut him off. He looked around before grabbing a chair to walk toward the mirror.

“Who are you?”

Seeing the threat that was imminent, the man’s eyes darkened, but his smile brightened. “Fine, actually, I’m like you. I came from outside. You can call me... or people like me, the non-smilers.”

The man would pause with each word like he was saying something important.

The cracked pieces of the mirror fell from the surface, creating a silvery, tingling sound as they hit the ground. Behind the red mirror, the face of the smiling man was twisted. His smile was growing bigger the closer he was to death. It was as if the closer he was to death, the more he was unable to control his urge to laugh and smile.

“We are called non-smilers because father once said that we do not deserve the ability to smile.” The man in the mirror seemed to have remembered something, and his lips curled open. Even through the mirror, one could hear this spine-chilling laugh like the words mentioned by his father were the most humorous joke in the world.

“Father?”

“He was a doctor at the hospital. He was not a good father, but he was the best doctor I have met in the world.” There was a trace of pain in the man’s crazed eyes. Other than that, there was also a trace of terror and passion. “Other doctors only care about treatment, but while he saves people, he has been busy killing them. He believes that both angels and demons are hidden inside the human heart, and for that, he has personally constructed a heaven and a hell.”

“Is the cursed hospital the hell?”

“No, that is the heaven, but it is a heaven that everyone wishes to escape from!” The man in the mirror had exposed his true personality. He looked at Chen Ge and laughed happily. He seemed to enjoy having this conversation with Chen Ge.

“Since it is a heaven, why would people want to escape?” Chen Ge had a simple conclusion regarding the man inside the mirror—a mad man.

“That was my father’s heaven, not our heaven.” The man pressed his face against the mirror. The cracked surface printed on his face like it was cutting his face into pieces, and it looked startlingly scary.

“If the heaven is already so scary, what does the hell built by your father look like?”

“No one has seen the hell. Do you think the people who have entered the hell could stand here and talk to you?” The man’s eyes were as wide as saucers. His mouth was opened to the maximum of a human’s musculature limit. If his smile grew any bigger, it would have torn his face in half. “Hey, why are you so interested in that hospital? You already know some information about the hospital. When I said I was a teacher at this school, you realized immediately that I was lying. Is that because you have encountered other non-smilers before? You have seen my family? Or is it because you have also received an invitation from that school?”

The middle-aged man in the mirror was the epitome of evil, but he was also very clever. From a few details, he deduced a lot of information. Chen Ge normally would not waste time facing this kind of clever person. He silently gave a sign to Xu Yin so that he could find a chance to kill the man. Whether this man was enemy or friend, after he was killed, he would be turned into feed for the Haunted House. This was the lesson that Chen Ge had learned from his many interactions with Doctor Gao.

“Never mind. It doesn’t matter whether it’s because you have seen my family or you have received the invitation from that hospital. Once you are connected to that hospital, you are unable to escape. He will continue to appear beside you in various forms. Until one day, when you peel open your eyes, you will suddenly realize you are lying on top of a cold slab of operating table and starting a cursed game that is uniquely yours.” The man’s tone did not sound like he was threatening Chen Ge; he was merely stating an inevitable truth.

“I don’t need you to worry about me.” Chen Ge stared at the mirror. “You just mentioned that you have other family?”

“What? Can’t you see it? Like you, I was once a living person. However, the things that accompanied you are friendship and family, but the things that accompanied us are pain and hatred. We spent our days in the eerie, despairing hospital, watching the spread of death and disease until they one day decided to crawl all over us.”

Pa!

The man slapped his palm heavily on the surface on the mirror. His body was pressed hard against the many splintery gaps. "Father does not appreciate it when we cry, so we can only smile and laugh. When we are not feeling well, we need to smile; when we are sick, we need to laugh; the greater the pain in our heart, the harder we need to laugh! But no matter how hard we smile, he still does not like us. He said we have a horrible-looking smile, and he said that our smiles are not sincere!"

The man's laughter came from inside the mirror. His face was leaning close to the surface, knocking against it repeatedly. "But look, look at me! I am laughing so happily. Can't you see that I am laughing so happily?"

Blood slid down the wounds. The man's face was cut by the sharp edges. He touched the blood on the corner of his lips. "We are smiling at every single moment, but we are called the non-smilers. Isn't that the most hilarious thing you have heard?"

"Perhaps I have a high laughing point, or maybe we are in a different mental space, but I can't see how is that funny. If you tell me more information about the hospital and the school, I can consider helping you." Chen Ge had interacted with many mad people before. He was not a doctor and was unable to cure these people. The only thing he could do was filter through these people's words, maintain his own determination, and prevent himself from being assimilated by the madness.

Actually, it was pretty hard to persuade Chen Ge away from his conviction. He had seen a completely different world before. In a deep conversation, it would be hard to tell who was being convinced. Chen Ge could trade ideas with certain people, but this man was definitely not one of them.

"Looks like my guess was correct. You have seen my family before! Who could it be? My poorest big brother? The youngest, dumbest little brother? Or my big sister who still has her complete body? Or could it be my other sister? No, wait, that's impossible. If she has seen you, she would have fallen in love with you and would stop at nothing to kill you."

"Can you please shut up for a moment?" Chen Ge realized that when the man shed his disguise and exposed his true self, the true self was a very chatty person. "From now on, I will do the questioning, and you only need to answer."

“Okay, I will tell you everything that I know. You have met my family before. I believe it won’t be some kind of happy memory. I...” The man leaned closer to the surface until his body was almost forcing its way through. Blood flowed on the surface on the mirror, but the man did not appear to be in any pain. Madness and illness were not adequate terms to describe this man anymore.

However, once the man did this, Chen Ge noticed something else. This man who called himself a non-smiler was dressed fully in red. He was a bona fide Red Specter!

Chen Ge thought back to the non-smiler from Li Wan City. He realized that this whole family of mad people appeared to be Red Specters.

“What is your relationship with the patient that’s escaped from the cursed hospital? Why did he end up trapping you inside the mirror?” Chen Ge got straight to the point, but internally, he was thinking about something else. This Red Specter appears to be in his weakest moment. After killing and consuming him, perhaps there will be a new Half Red Specter amid my rank of employees.

“We were in a cooperative relationship. With my power alone, I was unable to escape from the hospital, so I needed a helper.”

“How did you end up being trapped by him behind the mirror?”

“After escaping from the hospital, our goal was achieved. Both of us wanted to kill the other, so that was normal.”

“That’s normal?” Chen Ge still had a hard time placing himself in the shoes of a mad person. “And then what? You were apprehended by him and got sent inside a mirror?”

“Neither of us could really harm the other. The plan we had was to hide behind another door after we escaped from the hospital, but to our surprise, there was a very scary presence behind this door. It is on the same level as the hospital.” The man in the mirror pointed at the top of his head. “Have you seen the eye outside the window?”

“The eye outside the window?” Chen Ge frowned. “You mean the blood red sun that has been shining on the entire School of the Afterlife?”

“Yes, it is the real owner here. The few fights between me and my partner attracted its attention, so we wished to find a back-up plan for ourselves.” The man seemed to have read Chen Ge’s mind already.

“We wished to find a path that we could use to enter and leave the school. We put aside our differences and went into another cooperation. We noticed one peculiarity about this place—you could not find a normal mirror in the entirety of this school.”

“You noticed that as well?”

“The owner of the school appears to have difficulty facing its reflection. It hates itself, and it has given up on itself. It refuses to see itself.” The man’s words caused Chen Ge’s eyes to grow large. He had realized something important.

“Go on.”

“So, we started to look for mirrors. Then we came to a startling discovery. In this school, every single mirror is made from a memory. The mirrors are hiding someone who hates themselves. Looking at our previous selves is not dissimilar to thinking about the past. We have looked through many mirrors, but an accident happened during our search. This mirror that I am in is different from other mirrors. I found myself trapped in here after entering it.” The smile on the man’s face sent chills down Chen Ge’s spine. “After my partner noticed the strangeness, he did not follow me in here. That was truly sad. I should have acted more authentically back then to trick him.”

“Even in that situation, you wished to entrap your friend? You are truly a sick person that has no cure.” Chen Ge studied the mirror with a new eye. He also slowly discovered the difference between this mirror and the other mirrors. The blood on the surface was all inside the mirror, and there was a layer of dust that could not be rubbed away on the surface. The edge of the mirror had signs of being charred.

This has been burned before. Whose memory could this mirror be carrying? The painter’s or the first ‘door-pusher’ that entered the School of the Afterlife?

Chen Ge’s original plan was to kill the man inside the mirror, but now, he started to have second thoughts. If he wanted to kill the man, he would need to destroy the mirror or enter the mirror directly. Destroying the mirror meant destroying a valuable clue, and he might be trapped inside the mirror if he entered it. Chen Ge realized that the non-smiler in the mirror had altered the situation in a significant way without even realizing it. If he was not telling the truth and had created all these details to lie to himself, then this man was madder than Chen Ge thought.

It would be less worrying if such a clever and mad person was made into nutrients, Chen Ge thought, but the expression on his face did not change. “Other than the mirrors, what else did you find out?”

For the time being, Chen Ge did not plan to enter the mirror. He wanted to obtain as much information as he could.

“This school is far more dangerous than we predicted. Do not be fooled by the appearance. Other than that, I have seen many interesting things inside the mirror, but I am unable to tell you now because I am still inside the mirror. If I said those things, I might be eaten by the things inside the mirror.” The man could not have been franker. He possessed a lot of information, but he would only tell Chen Ge after he was rescued from inside the mirror.

“I know what to do now. Ol’ Bai, carry this mirror with you. We will leave the nurse’s office first.” Chen Ge wanted to wait for Zhang Ya to wake up before he continued dealing with the non-smilers. The best solution was to ignore him for now. “Find some abandoned clothes or something to wrap around the mirror; I do not wish to see the man’s face.”

Chen Ge was the first to walk out from the room. When Yin Bai and Lee Bing saw them, they were relieved and quickly hurried over. But once they saw Bai Qiulin and Xu Yin, who were following behind Chen Ge, they stopped where they were.

I need to find the patient that disguised himself as the doctor. Only by capturing him can I confirm the statements given by the non-smiler.

Chen Ge was concerned about the hospital. The non-smiler was right. He did not receive any mission related to the hospital from the black phone, but the things related to the hospital had already started to show up intermittently around him. He did not know how this would continue to progress, and that unsettled him somewhat.

I should focus on what is in front of me for now. When that day arrives that I have nowhere to turn, if worst comes to worst, I will lead the ghost fetus to the cursed hospital, and we will all perish together.

That was a good idea, but Chen Ge knew that the chance of that succeeding would be infinitesimally small.

For now, the only good news is that I still have time. Clearing this School of the Afterlife's mission will be the key.

Chen Ge glanced at Yin Bai and Yan Fei. The two children were weak and needed other people's support to help them walk. The fact that they were the people who were qualified to be the 'door-pushers' was probably very hard to believe.

"Zhu Long, Wang Yicheng, and the rest regained their power slowly after their memories were awakened. Does this mean I need to help Yan Fei and Yin Bai remember their past? But hasn't Yin Bai already remembered many things on her own? She has even met her old friends from Mu Yang High School... No wait! There is no mention of Yin Hong at all in her memory! The key to her missing memory lies with Yin Hong. Only by finding that girl will Yin Bai's memory be complete!"

To Chen Ge, Yin Bai was different from the other candidates due to the layer of relationship between the old headmaster of Mu Yang High School. He treated Yin Bai as someone that he could depend on.

"I seem to remember Yin Hong's class was not that far from the nurse's office." Chen Ge returned to the spot where he had run into Yin Hong. "The old headmaster has come to the school many times, so he should know about the presence of Yin Hong. Does that mean, in his heart, he treats Yin Hong as one of his family as well?"

Quickening his steps, Chen Ge was about to push open the door to Yin Hong's classroom when an announcement was suddenly broadcast in the corridor. "Emergency, emergency! All the students, please stay in your classrooms and do not wander about aimlessly! Emergency emergency..."

The broadcast was repeating the same thing. The tone was very serious like something harrowing had happened at the School of the Afterlife.

"The more dangerous the situation, the simpler and more succinct the emergency broadcast. Have the painter and Chang Wenyu started to move?" Chen Ge quickly walked to the window. He realized that the blood fog had thickened greatly, and there was something banging itself against the school madly in the fog.

Chapter 851 - Yin Hong's Personality

“What is that?” There were red human shadows showing in the blood fog. Because they were of the same color as the fog, Chen Ge could not see them clearly. “Oh well. Even if the sky falls, there’s someone taller to hold it.”

Chen Ge turned his gaze away and opened the door. The students were studying on their own. Since they heard the door open, they all turned to look at the door.

“Carry on. We’re here for one person.” Chen Ge walked to the podium. His eyes scanned the class but could not find Yin Hong. “Where is she?”

He walked to an empty seat at the third row. “Is this Yin Hong’s seat?”

The nearby students did not appear like they were familiar with the girl, and no one spoke.

“Aren’t you guys classmates?” Chen Ge looked through the girl’s textbook. It had Yin Hong’s name in it. “That’s right. This is her seat, but where is she?”

Chen Ge turned to Yin Hong’s deskmate with a scary expression.

“Just now, an old man came to fetch her. He said he was Yin Hong’s grandfather.”

“Do you know where they’ve gone?”

“He said that he has something to tell her, but they have been gone for quite some time already. I believe she will be back soon.” Yin Hong’s deskmate was a bit scared of Chen Ge, or rather, he was more scared of Xu Yin and Bai Qiulin, who carried the mirror behind Chen Ge. Those two did not appear normal.

“The old headmaster has led Yin Hong away. He sure moves fast, but today, I'm not going to let him escape from me." Chen Ge shoved Yin Hong's stuff into his backpack and then passed it to Xu Yin. He stood before Yin Hong's deskmate. "Which way did they go?"

"The western corridor..."

"Okay, I won't disturb your class anymore. It's very dangerous outside. You might survive this ordeal if you stay obediently in the classroom." Chen Ge led his people out of the room. They stopped at the corner of the corridor. "Yin Bai, your grandfather is now in the school."

Chen Ge did not know how to break the news about Yin Hong to Yin Bai. The girl looked kind, but she seemed to have purposely forgotten every memory that was related to Yin Hong. Perhaps those memories were too painful, and this was the body's defense mechanism.

"Grandpa is here? Why hasn't he come to see me?"

"He would have gone to you first since he loves you that much. This only proves that something has happened to him." Chen Ge had Xu Yin search through Yin Hong's bag to look for clues. At the same time, he took out the comic and told Yin Bai, "Your grandfather is the kindest person I've met. We can't let him suffer this danger alone. Everyone wishes for a reunion. Only with him present will the family be complete."

In few sentences, Chen Ge had convinced Yin Bai.

"I understand your grandfather's personality. Even if he's in danger, he'll try not to get us involved. He'll take it on alone, so our only option is to go find him." Chen Ge grabbed Yin Bai's cold hand. "Yin Bai, you are the only one who can help your grandfather."

When Chen Ge said that, Yin Bai understood the severity of the situation. She bit on her thin lips and whispered, "I made a promise with grandpa before. If, one day, I was very afraid and helpless and felt like I could not hold on anymore, I should go to the old campus on the western side of school..."

"Wait." Chen Ge shushed Yin Bai and had Bai Qiulin carry the mirror away. He led Yin Bai and Xu Yin away from the mirror. "Continue, what about the old campus?"

"He told me to look for a burned building. There is a red door hidden inside the ruin. I was to find it and then push it open." Yin Bai was the kind that would not lie to others.

It can't be that simple. If one could leave by pushing open that door, the old headmaster would have escaped with Yin Bai a long time ago instead of waiting for so long.

Chen Ge looked into Yin Bai's eyes. The latter's eyes were clear and clean, and they had nothing to hide. "Is that all?"

"Yes."

"Okay, we'll head there now. Perhaps we might run into your grandfather on the way." Chen Ge got everyone to rush to the western side of campus. As they moved, he accepted the backpack from Xu Yin. This was a normal school bag used by a girl, but Chen Ge found many doodling in Yin Hong's textbooks and study materials. There were patches here and there. They looked ugly and unsightly, unlike a girl's books.

"Why does she like doodling so much? Is it to cover up something?" Chen Ge looked through the books and finally found some spots that had not been fully doodled over. He held the page up to the light and managed to see some faint writing.

"Why hasn't she died? Why isn't she dead?"

"All the doodles are covering the curses toward someone?" Chen Ge put the textbook back. He picked out several balls of paper at the bottom of the bag. These had been discovered inside Yin Hong's drawer. At the time, Chen Ge did not want to miss anything, so he had shoved them into the bag as well. Opening the crumpled paper, the front side had some math formula, but the back was covered in tiny lines of words.

"I am unable to control myself any longer. I can always see her, but she has forgotten about me. That shouldn't be.

"Blood fell on my eyes. It was not a happy experience. I have helped her so many times. Why couldn't she help me once?"

"How hard is it to die? Just like what I did to them. She has forgotten the promise she made me. It is because of me that she is alive.

"Those who loved her have never appeared, and those who said they will take care of her disappeared at the most crucial moment. I am the only who stayed. She should be the most thankful toward me.

“Again and again, why can’t she see what I have sacrificed for her?”

“I have done so much, and I ask for nothing but for her to die. I just need her to die, but don’t worry, I will live on her behalf.

“Why does she refuse to die? In this world, no one will love her other than me. What else is she hoping for?”

“I think I understand it now. That fake person with a mouth full of lies is here.

“A liar who has never fulfilled any of his promises. Is that the reason she refuses to die? I understand what to do now.

“Just like those who have bullied her. Hahaha!”

The handwriting on the paper was hard to read. When Chen Ge reached the end, he sucked in a cold breath. “I’m afraid we have to move faster; the old headmaster is in real trouble.”

The old headmaster was a truly kind person. With Chen Ge’s understanding of him, even if Yin Hong wanted to kill him, he would not fight back.

That was because Yin Hong possessed Yin Bai’s appearance, and the old headmaster had always felt guilty toward her.

Chapter 852: Outline of the Blood Red City

To find the old headmaster, Chen Ge had visited Mu Yang High School several times. This would be the first time that he had come so close to the old headmaster, so whoever stood in his way would be his enemy.

From Chen Ge's perspective, bumping into each other would only happen in dramas; he had already decided to do everything in his power to find the old headmaster. It was not only because the old headmaster knew how to leave the School of the Afterlife; it was also because he knew plenty about his parents, and that would help in Chen Ge's understanding of the Haunted House, the black phone, and even himself.

...

Abandoning everyone and risking his life at a four-star scenario, does he even place the students in his class in his heart?

Chen Ge wished to know the answer, so he needed to meet the old headmaster in person.

The situation at the school turned creepier. Slapping sounds echoed on the windows, red fog stuck to the glass, and he could see cracks starting to form.

Most of three-star scenarios are an enclosed scenario like Third Sick Hall. Due to the uniqueness of Li Wan City, the black phone determined it as a 3.5-star scenario...

Chen Ge looked at the window, and a question bubbled up.

I saw a broken window in the Third Sick Hall before, and Men Nan has been trying to fix it. According to him, if the broken window is not fixed and is seen by other dirty things, it might attract things that are very dangerous. The Third Sick Hall is closed upon itself. Due to his weakness, Men Nan never thought of leaving the scenario, so he did not dare imagine what the outside of Third Sick Hall looks like.

Looking at the rolling red fog outside the window, Chen Ge was reminded of the Coffin Village.

The world behind the door in that village was also red, but the ghost in the well was far more powerful than Men Nan. She was as powerful as Zhang Ya before consuming the shadow's heart, so she had the power to protect that little village. But she has been trying to research the methods to reincarnate, to shake off the identity of a ghost. She should have seen something very scary behind the door, and that's the reason behind her desperation. To be able to make a Red Specter so scared, that has to be the real terror behind the door.

His duel with Doctor Gao in the underground morgue flashed across his mind. Doctor Gao had chosen to suffer all the sin behind the door on his own. He had buried the door and personally ruined the door that he had opened. After the door collapsed, the ceiling made from blood vessels and organs had crumbled, and the glow of the blood red moon had filtered down from above. Chen Ge remembered clearly what he had seen. From the opening in the underground morgue, he had looked out and seen a red city.

It was an endless, red city, that is what is beyond these scary scenarios? Or rather, no matter how many stars the scenarios have, are they all part of this red city?

Chen Ge felt like he was getting closer to the truth, but at the same time, he grew more worried. Doctor Gao was the scariest enemy that he had ever faced; he was cautious, powerful, and had many helpers. Chen Ge even suspected that the suicide was part of his plan. However, an existence like that had become a madman entangled in chains after leaving his original scenario for a few days.

Moreover, Doctor Gao loved his wife; that was the single conviction keeping him alive. Chen Ge knew that even if Doctor Gao's soul got destroyed, he would not allow anyone to hurt his wife, not even her dead body. But in reality, when they met again, Doctor Gao only had his wife's skull left. Chen Ge could not imagine what had happened to Doctor Gao behind the door and what kind of terror he had encountered. He had decided to cooperate with Doctor Gao in Li Wan City because he wanted to know everything he could about the world behind the door. This was because he suspected that his parents had entered that red city.

I've been to many three-star scenarios. They are all closed off, so four-star scenarios...

Chen Ge was thinking when he heard something next to him.

Pa!

The window next to him suddenly shattered. Numerous glass shard sprayed at him, but thankfully, Xu Yin helped to block them all.

“The glass cracked?” The school window was broken. This scenario was connected to the outside world. There were outlines of buildings in the fog, and bizarrely, the distance between the school and those buildings was decreasing like they were moving.

“This way!” Screams and footsteps came from the end of the corridor. Chen Ge hurried and had everyone hide inside one of the classrooms. Blood fog slithered in through the broken window like a red python seeking its pray.

Moments later, seven men in staff uniforms and the teachers hurried over. The leader was Mr. Lei, whom Chen Ge had met earlier. They were carrying tools and fixed the windows in several seconds. But to Chen Ge’s surprise, although seven people came to fix the window, six left.

One had disappeared.

Does each window represents a soul or lingering spirit? thought Chen Ge. The door pusher opened the door at their most desperate moment, so their despair can be counted as a kind of lingering spirit. It is because they are unable to resolve it that they sink ever deeper. This despair isolated their heart from the world, and it is the despair that prevented their scenario from interacting with the red city, which is how a fully enclosed scenario is born.

For three-star scenarios, a broken window is something dangerous. They have never interacted with the red city before, but it is different for four-star scenario. Based on Mr. Lei’s reaction, they appear to encounter this often. They have already gotten used to the red city outside the school.

The more Chen Ge thought about it, the more sense it made. The original door pusher at the school had already been consumed. The door had weakened greatly, but it had not been destroyed. After surviving the hardest period, the door had become something else.

The strange phenomenon happening now probably has something to do with the painter or Chang Wenyu. I cannot predict what those two mad people will do.

After Mr. Lei's group left, Chen Ge led his people out of the classroom and rushed toward the western side of the school. The alarm had stopped, and there was no one in the corridor, only a death-like stillness.

Chapter 853 - I've Been Searching so Long for You

Chapter 853: I've Been Searching so Long for You

The library was at the center of the School of the Afterlife. After Chen Ge left the mirror in the library, he was given a glimpse of the real School of the Afterlife. But as he walked toward the edge of the school, more strange things started to appear around him. The school was huge, but the students and staff mostly gathered at the center of the school; the classrooms and rooms at outer edges of the school were mostly empty.

If they were just empty rooms, it would have been fine, but upon a closer inspection, Chen Ge realized that there were various stains left in those classrooms. Some of the classrooms appeared to have been soaked in water. The wooden tables and chairs were sodden, and they gave off a strange smell. Some of the classrooms were barred with wooden boards. Looking through the gaps, he saw that all the drawers were pinned down with nails as if someone was afraid that the things inside the drawers might escape.

That was not the strangest part. When Chen Ge walked down a corridor that was far away from the center of the school, he saw an abandoned hall. The decoration of the hall was similar to the hall that he had seen when he went to challenge Xin Hai's Haunted House. The Haunted House in Xin Hai was replicated according to the diary, so the real owner of the diary had spent their life at this hall before.

Chen Ge had read the diary himself, but he realized that the description inside the diary and the real School of the Afterlife did not match up. A banner that welcomed new students hung on the wall, and several mannequins stood on the cement stage. They had cheery expressions, and stuck on their backs were pieces of paper with various negative emotions like anger and envy written on them.

These mannequins are smiling so happily when facing the students, but the words on their backs are negative emotions. Is this some kind of hint?

When Chen Ge passed the hall, he clearly saw the mannequins on stage moved their heads toward him, and the expressions on their faces changed. There was something special about this hall—a scary presence should preside there.

“What are you looking at? Look some more and I’ll consume all of you.”

Through the window, Chen Ge yelled threats at the mannequins like a big bully. The mannequins reacted cleverly. They swiftly turned their heads back as if everything that Chen Ge had seen earlier was just an illusion.

“If I was not in a hurry to find the old headmaster, do you think I would let you go so easily?” Chen Ge stared at the mannequin that had glanced at him earlier. “It’s pointless to hide. I’ve remembered you.”

There were many strange rooms at the School of the Afterlife. It was like a box of chocolate with different flavors for Chen Ge; he had no idea what he would encounter next.

I’ve only checked the western side of the school. If the other parts of the school are also like this, then this scenario is enormous.

The thought that he had a chance to move such a scenario to his Haunted House caused Chen Ge’s eyes to turn red. To be able to possess such a large, complicated, and scary scenario should be the life-long dream of every Haunted House owner.

Just the School of the Afterlife alone covers all the scary scenarios related to schools. There are numerous classrooms and rooms for me to transform. I can even replicate all the stories I heard at the Ghost Stories Society here!

Unfortunately, the scenario unlocked by the black phone is only a shell. I will need to find the employees and stories to fill it up myself.

The thought of the black phone made Chen Ge calm down again. It was as if he was being splashed by a pail of cold water while standing next to a fireplace in winter. The backpack had been found, and everything but the black phone had been there. Based on current information, the most likely scenario was that it had been taken away by Chang Wenyu.

I was too careless. I shan’t let this happen again.

Chen Ge was good at analyzing the situation. He would take note of everything that he had experienced so that he could correct issues little by little. Finally, he would burn the records. It was this caution that allowed him to survive until now.

After leaving this place, I should make a few customized phones that looks similar to the black phone and hide a Specter inside each of them.

A while of running later, the white painted walls started to have the doodling of children. The amount of litter on the ground increased, and trash appeared around the corner. The stench of blood in the air lightened, and in its place was the smell of burning. “We’re almost there. Be careful of the surroundings.”

Chen Ge opened the comic to release the smelly boy from Western Jiujiang Private Academy. He was a special Specter. He had no shape or form and was made up of a bad smell. That meant that he was not easily injured and could protect his teammates from a large area. Walking forward, the paint on the wall started to peel to reveal the black and red bricks behind it. Signs of a fire started to appear.

“This should be the place.” Chen Ge got Yin Bai to stand beside him. “Your grandfather is in a dangerous situation now. Someone is trying to harm him, and only we can save him.”

Yin Bai’s only family was the old headmaster. Hearing the stern warning from Chen Ge, she was rightfully frightened.

“Are you sure he hasn’t told you any other information?”

“Yes, there’s nothing else.”

“Then, we’ll have to look through the place ourselves.” Chen Ge tried to see things from the old headmaster’s perspective. Both Yin Hong and Yin Bai were part of Lee Xueyin. He would not just escape with Yin Hong and abandon Yin Bai. Chen Ge had no idea what was at the end of the School of the Afterlife. The closer he was to the edge, the greater the anxiety in his heart. After walking down two corridors, the scene before him changed completely. Signs of a fire were all over the walls, and rubble littered the ground.

“This place looks familiar.” Chen Ge walked to one of the classrooms. He pushed lightly on the charred wooden door, and it collapsed easily. He looked at the tables and chairs in the rooms. His fingers touched them gingerly. “I’ve seen these arrangements in Mu Yang High School before. This classroom...”

A pinprick of pain came from his fingertip. Chen Ge then noticed that there were lines of words carved into the surface of the table, and he had seen the exact writing when he first explored Mu Yang High School.

Why would Mu Yang High School's classroom appear in the old section of the School of the Afterlife? Is this just a coincidence, or is the entire School of the Afterlife made up of various abandoned schools?

Chen Ge wanted to confirm the thought, so he hurried to the last classroom of the corridor. Walking down the corridor, when Chen Ge pushed open the door of the last classroom, he was baffled.

Each of the chairs in the classrooms had a burned school uniform on it, and in the middle of the room sat a cute, obedient girl. She looked eighty percent identical to Yin Bai.

Just across the girl stood a rotund old man. He was facing away from Chen Ge, but even from the back, Chen Ge felt he looked very familiar.

“Similar to the person from my memory, do you know how hard I’ve been looking for you?” Chen Ge remembered it very clearly. It was a night of heavy rain, and the clock on the phone showed it was 2 am. He was rampaging down the corridors of the abandoned school. When he passed the last classroom, that was the first time that he had encountered the old headmaster. The kind, rotund old man stood at the podium. His eyes met Chen Ge’s, and their paths crossed for less than a second. Now, their paths were crossing again at the School of the Afterlife. The old headmaster probably did not expect that brief encounter to be something that would change his life forever.

His scalp turned numb, and a chill crawled down his spine. The figure who stood before Yin Hong’s desk slowly turned around. When he saw Chen Ge, his expression was very unnatural.

“Chen Ge.” Chen Ge took large strides toward the old man. “We have met in Mu Yang High School before. If you cannot remember it, I can show you the video because I was in the middle of a livestream back then.”

“I believe I have an impression of you, but now I have something else to do. After I’m done, we can catch up and talk.” The old headmaster seemed to know Chen Ge’s secrets. He knew that he was different from his students’ lingering spirits. Once his life entangled with Chen Ge, there would be endless problems, so he made up his decision instantly as he grabbed Yin Hong’s arm and prepared to leave.

“What is more important than the children at Mu Yang High School?” Chen Ge took out the comic from his backpack. “Headmaster, everyone misses you. When you are away, the students lose their smiles. You are the backbone of Mu Yang High School. Without you, the home is not complete.”

Be it from his expression or voice, the content or tone, Chen Ge was the epitome of sincerity. Seeing that his students were all on Chen Ge’s side, there was a change to the old headmaster’s gaze. His lips opened, but nothing came out instantly. Even though he had been alive for a long time, the old headmaster had not learned how to say no.

“Headmaster, I know that you have your difficulties, and I understand you have your own considerations, but think about this. You believe that you have given a safe home for the students and entered such a dangerous place alone. But do you think the students can rest easy not knowing how their beloved headmaster is doing? If they know their current lives are in exchange for everything you have, do you think they can continue to enjoy that life? You know your students best. If you do not wish for them to wallow in guilt, please tell us everything so that we can discuss it together.” Chen Ge’s every word crawled into the old headmaster’s heart. He did not care about his own safety, but he cared deeply about those students. Those students were the old headmaster’s weakness, so of course, they were also his best helper.

Without giving the old headmaster more time to consider, Chen Ge took out a ballpoint pen. He handed the pen to the old man and then got a piece of paper from Yin Hong’s bag. “I’m not lying to you. I hope you can listen to their opinion.”

The old headmaster held the taped pen in his grasp. The pen shuddered, and when the tip of the pen touched the paper, it started to move on its own. “No matter what other people think, I am willing to help you.”

Chen Ge sighed under his breath when he saw the words on the paper. When the Pen Spirit found out Chen Ge was going to the School of the Afterlife, she had sworn to commit suicide if she was brought along, but now she had changed her statement after meeting the old headmaster. The old headmaster shook his head. He held the pen gingerly like he was afraid of damaging it. He looked at it like he was looking at his granddaughter.

“Not only her, there’s everybody else.” Chen Ge flipped through the comic and summoned all the students from Mu Yang High School. “They are all orphans, and you have given them a home. After they died, their lingering spirits remained in Mu yang High School because, for them, no matter how big the world is, Mu Yang High School will always be home.”

Seeing the familiar figures, the old headmaster was silent.

About ten seconds later, he turned to Chen Ge. “I am going to do something very dangerous. You shouldn’t have come, and you shouldn’t have brought them with you.”

“You have seen my parents and know about them. Since you are willing to leave the students to me, it means that you understand my personality.” Chen Ge stood before the old headmaster. “The Haunted House is my home, and the people who stay there are naturally my family. How can I let my family suffer every day with guilt?”

Be it the lingering spirits from Mu Yang High School or Bai Qiulin who was carrying the mirror, when they heard Chen Ge, they were moved. Their sense of belonging to the Haunted House grew. This was not something that Chen Ge repeated daily, but it was a feeling that had slowly been impressed upon them day after day by the way Chen Ge acted around them.

“The thing that I’m going to do is very dangerous; it’ll put you in danger, and it’ll harm them.” The headmaster’s hair was white. He stood inside the burned classroom and looked at the familiar figures. He had not thought that he would see the children again in his life.

“I have spent so much time trying to get into this school. One of the reasons behind it is to help you.” Chen Ge summoned the spirits back into the comic. They were just lingering spirits, thus very weak. If there was an accident, their souls would disperse, and their last trace on earth would be wiped out. Seeing the disappearance of his students, the headmaster had a complicated expression before he sighed in relief. “You are just like your father, meddling in other people’s business, prone to causing trouble, and don’t like to consider the consequences. However, you have a bottom line that you will not cross and a heart of kindness that glows in the dark.”

This was the first time that Chen Ge had heard a comment about his father. It was completely different from his impression of his father. Afraid of stopping the old headmaster, he did not say anything to retort him.

“Looks like you’re familiar with them,” Chen Ge commented.

“Yes, it was your father who told me that Xueyin is trapped inside the School of the Afterlife. Without asking for anything in return, he helped me find a way to get in here. He helped me so much, and now you have personally entered the school to look for me... I owe your family too much.”

Chen Ge’s father was built up in the headmaster’s words, but Chen Ge felt a bit unsettled hearing that. It was an accident that he had taken over the Haunted House, and he did not even consider that his life would be entwined with the old headmaster before this. Before, he had thought that everything was too coincidental, but now that the old headmaster mentioned it, Chen Ge suddenly realized that the headmaster appeared to have been scammed.

“Perhaps I am acting too selfishly, just thinking about myself and not anyone else.” The old headmaster was reflecting, and Chen Ge did not know what to say.

“Sir, don’t say that. That is all in the past, and we need to live in the present.” Chen Ge coughed. He really did not expect to run into the old headmaster in the School of the Afterlife. It was an accident that he had entered the school. Thankfully, he retained his habit of bringing all his employees with him no matter where he went. With numbers came power. It was hard to tell when a worker’s special power would be useful. Even if they had no special power, they would be good company. Due to various coincidences, this situation was formed. It felt coincidental but inevitable. It caused his head to go numb.

“One is prone to look back into the past when one is old. Seeing you reminded me of your parents. They have helped me a lot,” the old headmaster said with guilt. “Actually, when you first entered Mu Yang High School, I noticed you. It was then that I came up with the plan to enter this school to come and save Xueyin.”

“Don’t mind all that.” Chen Ge was worried that Yin Hong might harm the old headmaster, so he took several steps forward.

“Let me talk. I’ve been holding these things in for so long, and I wish to share them.” The old headmaster shook his head. “The School of the Afterlife is very dangerous, and I know the chance of saving Xueyin is not high. If I was not able to return, the students back in the class would get into trouble without anyone looking after them. I didn’t feel good leaving them behind, so I left them with you.

“Your parents have helped me, but I’ve made use of you, and now to find me, you have voluntarily come to somewhere so dangerous. I don’t know what to say.”

“Sir, even though this place is dangerous, there’s no need to despair.” Chen Ge’s eyes skipped over the headmaster to look at Yin Hong, who was hiding behind the old man. “I came here fully prepared.”

He flipped through the comic, and the yellowed pages ruffled in the night. Fresh blood leaked out from it. This comic that looked normal had a page that was fully red.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

The sound of knocking echoed around them. A pale hand reached out from inside the book. There was a curl of black hair wound around her wrist. The smell of blood thickened. Fingers, arm, shoulder, finally a headless woman crawled out from the comic. That was not all. She reached into the pages to search for a long time before pulling out a woman’s head. The blood red dress swung in the wind. The ghost held her head and stood next to Chen Ge quietly.

“Don’t be afraid. They’re all allies.” Chen Ge pulled open the backpack, put the comic away, and took out a blood red high heels from the deepest part of the bag. He placed the heels on the nearby table, and a clicking sound echoed in the room. Red footprints appeared on the ground before stopping right next to Chen Ge.

“Xu Yin.” Chen Ge called after Xu Yin lightly. The stench of blood rushed at them. Xu Yin, who stopped hiding himself, tilted his head to look at the old headmaster. The whole classroom felt like it was submerged in a red sea!

Not including Bai Qiulin, Chen Ge was surrounded by three Red Specters!

“Are these enough?”

The old headmaster had no idea that Chen Ge would bring so many Red Specters into the school with him. His eyes were round. “That’s enough. As long as we’re careful, we...”

“I know it’s not enough.” Before the headmaster finished, Chen Ge continued. “So before I entered this world, I discussed cooperating with three other Red Specters in this school. We have the same goal, so they have agreed to cooperate with me.”

“In other words, there will be six... six Red Specters who will help us?” The old headmaster was familiar with how scary Red Specters were. They were the representation of despair and cruelty. If he ran into one alone, other than being consumed, he could see no other ending.

“The six Specters are chess pieces that I might use to distract the enemy.” Chen Ge turned to look at his shadow, and his gaze softened. “My real trump card is a Greater Red Specter!”

Hearing those few words from Chen Ge’s lips, the old headmaster started to doubt his hearing, but he did not dare ask him to repeat those words. This young man before him was too scary. If he did not see the three Red Specters with his own eyes, he would have thought that Chen Ge was kidding. He was just a Half Red Specter; they were not on the same level.

“Now, what are our odds of success?” Chen Ge stood before the old man. His expression was serious, not kidding at all.

“If what you’re saying is true, we have a ninety-percent chance of leaving the school safely.”

“Only ninety percent? And that’s just escaping from the school?” Chen Ge frowned slightly. Counting the hibernating Zhang Ya, they only had a ninety-percent chance of escaping. It seemed like they would still need to follow the school’s consciousness if they wanted to prevail.

“I will share my plan with you.” The old headmaster treated Chen Ge as one of his own. “Your father didn’t tell me why this school would appear—he only told me that the door of this school had been looking for children who were bullied and helpless. Because of that, Xueyin was pulled behind the door. He had studied this door closely before and noticed something special. The school inside this door was actually made up from different schools, and it was a mixture of all the bullied kids’ memories.”

“But what does that have to do with your plan?” Chen Ge was confused.

“Of course, the link is huge. One of these places in their memory is Mu Yang High School.” The old headmaster sighed. “It was my irresponsibility. There was a sad thing that happened at Mu Yang High School. A student was expelled because of it. Later, his adopted father sent him back to the countryside. The child was an honest one. Even though his results were not good, he is very talented at painting.”

“Painting?”

“Yes, what’s wrong?”

“Nothing, go on.” Chen Ge waved his hands.

“It is a coincidence that Mu Yang High School in the School of the Afterlife is like an opening, a wound that the owner of the memory was unable to heal.”

“Where is this opening?”

“The abandoned well behind the field. The well is directly connected to the world outside the School of the Afterlife.” What the old headmaster said was surprising to Chen Ge. “After leaving the school, we will enter a city covered in red fog. We need to continue to head west. No matter what we see, do not turn back. No matter who calls your name, do not respond. Keep walking until you enter an abandoned mental asylum. There is a broken window in the third block of the mental asylum. After crawling through that window, we’ll be safe.”

“Third block of an abandoned mental asylum?” That sounded familiar to Chen Ge. The headmaster was describing Men Nan’s Third Sick Hall!

“Yes, that’s what your father told me. When I first came to visit Xueyin, it was with your father’s company. We sneaked into the school through that window. Unfortunately, your parents disappeared after that, and the door was taken over by some menacing ghosts. I went back with the determination to die but realized that there was already no one there.” The old headmaster sighed. “Perhaps even God wishes for me to go and accompany Xueyin.”

There is no such coincidence in the world. Chen Ge’s brain was spinning. After entering the blood city, Doctor Gao lost his mind in a week, so the old headmaster could not have passed through the blood city alone from the Third Sick Hall to School of the Afterlife unscathed!

Someone or something had to be protecting him from behind!

With his eyes red, an answer floated up in Chen Ge’s heart. He gritted his teeth to stop himself from voicing it out loud.

It was Chen Ge’s father who had passed on all the information about the school to the old headmaster, and it was Chen Ge’s father who had broken the window in the Third Sick Hall!

Why would he waste so much energy to send the old headmaster to the School of the Afterlife?

Chen Ge clenched his fists, and his eyes accidentally scanned the red sun outside the window. The consciousness made from despair was boiling. These children sought no escape; they were crying in pain, but no one could hear their voice, no one would understand them, and no one was willing to accompany them.

His eyes narrowed as a possibility suddenly came to Chen Ge.

Did he want to have the headmaster from Mu Yang High School come and take over as the headmaster for School of the Afterlife?

His heart was thumping. Chen Ge held the edge of the table and took a deep breath before he could calm down.

Chapter 856 - I Have Another Solution

Chapter 856: I Have Another Solution

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The owner of the door at Third Sick Hall is Men Nan. There are not many with the surname Men ¹ . Perhaps the child's name is a hint left for me.

Door represented the unknown, but it also represented the exit.

...

Now that I think about it, there have been plenty of clues. What kind of trouble have my parents gotten themselves into? Why is it that I must use this method to approach the truth?

Certain questions needed more probing. After the conversation with the old headmaster, Chen Ge knew that his parents were hiding many things; they were not as simple as they appeared. Problems that even Doctor Gao could not solve, Chen Ge's parents could resolve easily, but even so, they did not dare to tell Chen Ge the truth. They only kept releasing hints and clues for him. This reaction caused unease in Chen Ge.

I have no idea what I need to be careful of, but now I can be certain my family has encountered something incredibly troublesome.

Chen Ge stood next to the table. His brain was spinning; every word mentioned by the old headmaster was important to him.

"Chen Ge, are you alright?" Seeing how frozen Chen Ge was, he wanted to go over to the young man but was afraid of the Red Specters surrounding him.

"I'm fine." Chen Ge waved his hands. "The path you mentioned is too dangerous. I am not confident about leaving this place. The red city is filled with all sorts of monster."

The happenstance of Doctor Gao had greatly impacted Chen Ge. A perfectly fine person became insane in a week—that was too much of an ordeal.

"I cannot risk my workers' lives." Chen Ge sat at the table. Perhaps due to the overthinking, his face was pale.

"But that is the only exit!" The headmaster did not expect Chen Ge to reject his idea.

"I actually know there's another exit." Chen Ge slowly raised his head to look at the old headmaster. "Every scenario has a door. We can leave from the School of the Afterlife's door."

"That's impossible. The school will not allow any students to leave. It has provided the children a home, and the children have become a part to the scenario; there is not one without the other." The headmaster pointed out the window. "Do you see the red eye out there? All the students' negative emotions are gathered there. Once it realizes someone is trying to escape, they will be stopped by the school. It will not allow any students to leave, much less open the door for Xueyin to exit."

"You don't know this door well enough. Based on my knowledge, a girl managed to leave this school from that door a long time ago. Her name is Chang Wenyu." Chen Ge was knowledgeable about the school's limitations.

"Are you sure? How did she manage that?" The headmaster was shocked. This was the first time that he had heard something like that.

"Currently, this school is controlled by the consciousness of the collective student body. The despairing students will not let us leave, but if one of us replaces the school's consciousness to become the new owner of the school, we will be able to control the whole school and open the door." When Chen Ge spoke, his eyes were kept on the old headmaster, marking every single change to his expression.

"We?" The headmaster looked at Chen Ge like he was mad. "That's impossible. Over the past few years, the school's consciousness has kept growing; it has become a monster. Even a Red Specter is no match for it..."

The old headmaster added to stress as if worried that he had not gotten his point across, "Even if there are six Red Specters!"

He wanted Chen Ge to abandon that dangerous thought in his mind. From his perspective, trying to replace the school's consciousness was a dead end.

“Aren’t you curious why I’d rather challenge the school than venture into the blood red city?” Chen Ge’s father’s shadow appeared in Chen Ge’s mind, but the image that he had of his father was completely different from the man whom the old headmaster had described. He had trouble seeing things from his father’s perspective. Honestly, he had no idea what his family was thinking—he merely believed that they would not harm him.

“Why?” The old headmaster was confused. He had come from that way. In his mind, that was a perfectly safe path.

“You have greatly underestimated the danger level of the city.” Chen Ge told the headmaster about Doctor Gao, not hiding anything. “I have many witnesses with me, like Xu Yin,; Bai Qiulin; and your student, the Pen Spirit. The past has stuck to us like a nightmare. Even now, when I close my eyes, I can still see myself back there.”

To prove that he was not exaggerating, Chen Ge summoned the Pen Spirit. She had been there when Doctor Gao showed up in Li Wan City. She had experienced everything that Chen Ge had. The Pen Spirit had a unique talent when it came to describing something. She drew on the paper, and the content was enough to scar the old headmaster for life.

“The city is so dangerous?” The old headmaster was shocked.

“Yes, I was surprised when I heard you managed to get here through the city. But perhaps it’s because you have done a lot of good things in your life, and a power has been guiding you in the dark.” Chen Ge put it in a subtle way.

“I was just lucky.”

“Luck is part of one’s power. I plan to treat the abandoned well behind the field as our back-up. If my plan fails, we will leave that way. With insurance like this, this should be the safest way.” Chen Ge was not prepared to enter the red city; the place was filled with too many unknowns. He did not take much time to convince the old headmaster, and the latter soon promised to follow Chen Ge.

“Sir, now that we’re a team, we have to clear up all the inconsistencies within us to prevent future misunderstanding.” Chen Ge pulled over Yin Bai, who was hiding among the ‘people’. “You are looking for Lee Xueyin, but why are there two ‘Lee Xueyin’s in this school? Which of them is real? Which one is fake?”

Yin Bai did not expect herself to be named. She was happy when she saw the old headmaster, but when her eyes landed on Yin Hong behind the headmaster, her heart became congested like the thing most precious to her had been stolen. When Yin Hong saw Yin Bai, her expression became nervous. She gripped the old man's shirt from behind and did not dare breathe a word.

To prevent an accident, Chen Ge summoned all the Red Specters. This was to stun Yin Hong into submission. He did not wish to get into an altercation with the old headmaster for something small, so he used his landslide advantage to bulldoze the possible conflict from forming.

Yin Hong hid behind the old headmaster, unwilling to come out. She looked very nervous, but Chen Ge did not see too much fear on her face. In other words, even when facing three Red Specters, Yin Hong was confident that she could run away. Chen Ge had no idea where her confidence came from, so he could only approach this carefully.

“Sir?” Seeing the silence from the old headmaster, it appeared like he had something to hide.

“Both of these children are Lee Xueyin; they are one and the same.” The way the headmaster regarded the two girls was filled with love and guilt. “I know one of them is Yin Bai and the other Yin Hong, but no matter what they’re called, they are my family.”

He reached out to touch Yin Hong’s head as he guarded the girl behind him. Being touched by the old headmaster, a trace of disgust crossed Yin Hong’s eyes, but perhaps she knew that the situation put her in too much of a disadvantage, and she knew that she needed the old headmaster’s support, so she did not resist and put forth an obedient persona.

“Actually, if we’re splitting hairs, Yin Hong is more like Xueyin. Facing the drunk father and a mother who was too weak to leave the wheelchair, she only had herself to rely on.” The old headmaster put the blame on himself. “This is all my fault. It was me who had the blind trust in Xueyin’s father, and it was me who pushed them into the fire pit.”

What the old headmaster said sounded new to Yin Bai; she looked at the old headmaster blankly. Her beautiful and clear eyes were filled with confusion, and her lips kept mumbling the word, “Grandpa.”

Yin Hong’s reaction was completely different from Yin Bai’s. She was trying her best to suppress the anger in her heart. There was no visible change to her expression, but a flash of red had already appeared in her eyes. The past memory hurt her, and her body was slowly changing.

“Sir, I’m afraid things are not as simple as you think.” Chen Ge did not want to hide anything from the old headmaster. He opened Yin Hong’s bag and took out the crumpled papers that he had found in Yin Hong’s drawer. Seeing those crumpled papers, the calm on Yin Hong’s face was shattered. She looked like a murderer whose victim had just been found. The papers were filled with Yin Hong’s dissatisfaction with the world and the desire to kill the old headmaster. Holding the papers in his hand, Chen Ge looked at the old headmaster, who would give everything to shelter Yin Hong, and Yin Hong, who was holding onto the old headmaster with tears in her eyes. He started to hesitate.

Shaking his head slightly, Chen Ge placed the papers back into the bag. “Sir, can you tell me in detail what really happened to Xueyin?”

After putting the papers filled with maddened claims away, Chen Ge noticed both Yin Hong and the old headmaster sigh in relief. It was then that Chen Ge realized that perhaps the old headmaster already knew everything.

“Yin Bai is the purest side within Xueyin’s heart. She is pure, kind, and innocent, but the only reason she is able to survive like that is because all the anxiety, fear, and hatred has been taken away by Yin Hong.” There was regret and pain in the headmaster’s voice. “Xueyin’s mother is the first child I adopted. Due to her physical limitation, she was unable to be pregnant, so she adopted Xueyin. At the time, it was me who accompanied them during the adoption. Xueyin was still so young. Seeing how happy the family of three was, I was glad. But later, I found out that things were not what they seemed.”

Chen Ge heard an undercurrent of hatred from the old headmaster’s story. It surprised him that such a kind person would feel hatred toward someone.

“You can’t judge a book by its cover. Xueyin’s father was a liar. He approached Xueyin’s mother not because he liked her but because he was after the few estates under my name. He knew that I have no biological children, so he purposely came into our lives. Even adopting Xueyin was just a performance that he did for us.”

If that was everything, the old headmaster might not have been that mad, but what he said next was the real reason behind his anger. “After he found out that I planned to donate all my estates and have already put that in my will with the lawyer's help, he turned into a different person. Every day, he came up with a new reason to find trouble and even beat Xueyin's mother. One time, he tried to turn his anger on Xueyin. Thankfully, she was discovered and rescued by her mother."

The old man's voice was shaking. He was a kind person, but that did not mean that he would not get angry. From another perspective, with the old headmaster's personality, he probably would not consume another ghost, but he was still a Half Red Specter. That could only mean that he had a very deep reason to stay behind, and there was something that he needed to complete.

"I found out all this from Xueyin's diary after she passed away. Do you know how much my heart hurt when I was reading that diary?" The headmaster gently guarded Yin Hong behind him. "Yin Bai would have been unable to survive in that kind of place, so that is why Yin Hong appeared."

After hearing the explanation from the headmaster, Chen Ge was glad that he did not show the papers immediately. He studied Yin Hong and was suddenly reminded of something. Yin Bai had said that her father suddenly left home one day and then did not return. Chen Ge did not think much of it then, but now that he was looking at Yin Hong, he had a feeling that he knew what had happened to the man. He would not return; he would never return.

Yin Hong harbored resentment toward the old headmaster; she even wanted to harm him. But she did not expect what happened next. When facing three Red Specters, the headmaster guarded her and became her savior. This changed her perspective of the old headmaster. Then she saw how regretful the headmaster was. An unsettling feeling rose in her heart, and her cold, hard heart started to crack slightly.

"I didn't expect that she would have such a past. I can understand it, but..." Chen Ge did not finish what he began. He put the headless woman and red high heels away. Those two could not be considered workers yet. The headless woman was there unwillingly, and the red high heels was there because of a contract. Even though the heels were placed inside the backpack, more bloody footprints appeared on the table.

Chen Ge was making a stance by putting the two Red Specters away. Chen Ge decided to hand this over to the old headmaster himself.

Even though Yin Hong was a vessel of negative emotions, she was Yin Bai's essential other half. With his hands on Yin Bai's shoulders, Chen Ge's eyes moved between Yin Bai and Yin Hong. He was about to ask the old headmaster some questions when something suddenly hit him.

How come this feels so familiar? Yin Hong and Yin Bai are just like me and my shadow in Li Wan City!

To be precise, Chen Ge was reminded of himself and the ghost fetus. One was a happy-go-lucky Haunted House owner, while the other carried an entire four-star scenario on his back.

Wait a minute... Chen Ge rubbed his temples. It was my parents who told the old headmaster that Lee Xueyin was in the School of the Afterlife. This means that they know about Xueyin's condition. Could this be another clue left by them?

Chapter 858 - Why Did I Appear?

Chapter 858: Why Did I Appear?

Chen Ge stood in the classroom unmovable like a statue. The old headmaster's appearance left a deep impression on him. A hidden clue had been discovered, and his world was slowly being turned around, which introduced change to his way of thinking.

Mu Yang High School and the Third Sick Hall are among the earliest scenarios I experienced. It has already been so long, and I didn't expect I'll run into things connected to them at a four-star scenario.

No one went to disturb Chen Ge—they stood like guards around him. Mu Yang High School was the first two-star scenario that Chen Ge had experienced, and the Third Sick Hall was the first three-star scenario. Now, the School of the Afterlife was his first four-star scenario. These three scenarios were linked in curious ways, and this surprised Chen Ge. He suspected that none of the missions given by the black phone were random, and each of them served a specific purpose.

All the missions given by the phone have the word trial before them. Could such a difficult mission just be a Trial Mission?

One-star scenarios deal with people, two-star scenarios deal with Specters, three-star scenarios deal with Red Specters, and four-star scenarios deal with Greater Red Specters. Logically speaking, the difference in star level means a difference in difficulty, but actually they are also interconnected. This feels like someone is behind this... They want me to experience certain things through these scenarios to achieve a certain goal.

Chen Ge's brows were creased deeply. It was rare for him to have this kind of expression.

Why would someone do something like that? What is there for me to know, or what exactly have I lost?

Lowering his head to look at Yin Hong and Yin Bai, the two girls looked away in fear.

Could it be that I have lost a version of myself, too?

Chen Ge did not know what kind of expression he should show. His brain was a mess, and for some reason, he was reminded of his Haunted House and the door inside it. When he found out about the blood door in his Haunted House for the first time, he had been really scared. The most unsettling thing was, when the door was opened at midnight, he could hear someone calling his name from inside. He had a fresh memory of that voice. It was very familiar, but he could not pinpoint it. It sounded like himself.

My voice calling my own name?

Thinking back to this strange experience, Chen Ge felt a chill run up his spine.

Perhaps I have lost my real self.

Chen Ge had many secrets that he could not share with others. He had to shoulder them himself. He would not be afraid; he would hold everything in.

When Doctor Gao entered the door in my Haunted House, he was almost scared to death, and he hurriedly escaped. With ghost story society's power at the time, only a four-star scenario would warrant a reaction like that.

The door was in the Haunted House's toilet, so in other words, the world behind the door was a reflection of Chen Ge's Haunted House.

I wonder what the Haunted House behind the door looks like.

Chen Ge was curious, but with his current power, if he went in, he would probably not come out.

Since the person behind the door is calling my name, won't I walk into their trap if I enter the door voluntarily? Before I understand everything, I have to control myself.

Chen Ge decided to add another door to the toilet cubicle after he returned to the Haunted House. Perhaps he might add a cement wall as well, pinning it down with wooden planks now felt too weak.

The door only opens at midnight. If I can deal with this problem, my Haunted House can open at night. That will increase the operating hours and increase income.

Shaking his head, Chen Ge stopped himself from thinking too far ahead. He put down his bag and squatted down between Yin Hong and Yin Bai.

Regardless of whether or not they were a hint left behind by his family, he had some questions for them.

“I will not harm you; I merely see my past self in you. So, I need to understand one thing. When did this happen to you? Or should I say, when did Yin Hong show up?” Chen Ge was getting closer to the truth step by step. It was like he was walking through the fog. Any source of light was something that he needed to hold onto.

“I don’t know.” Yin Bai was helpless. Her hands were gripped together. Of everyone there, she was closest to the old headmaster, but the headmaster was shielding another girl, and the girl looked so much like her. Chen Ge did not force Yin Bai, instead turning to Yin Hong.

Scrutinized by him, Yin Hong was first afraid and nervous, reacting the same way Yin Bai did. But when she realized that this would not work and could not earn her sympathy from Chen Ge, her real self surfaced. The red eyes stared at her own bag on the ground. Yin Hong kept her head lowered so others could not see her expression. “If I tell you the answer, will you return my bag?”

Yin Hong’s schoolbag looked normal; it was very feminine and youthlike. Who would have thought it would be filled with papers reciting curses and murders?

“Okay.” Chen Ge gave his promise.

“It was nighttime when I first opened my eyes, around 2 am. I heard movement from inside the bedroom, and when I turned to look, I saw my adopted father inside my room.” Yin Hong’s voice was eerily calm like she was telling another person’s story. “I was spooked, and a scream escaped. My adopted father opened the door and ran.”

After some pause, she said, “I surfaced on that day. I only appeared after Yin Bai fell asleep. I know everything that she’s experienced, but she never remembers me.

“I do not blame her because I understand her best in this world. I know the kind of hell she lives in, the fears that she must face. I don’t know why I appeared. Perhaps Yin Bai was too scared, too cowardly, but couldn’t seek help, so she created me.” Yin Hong glanced at Yin Bai. “Of course, it could be that I am a ghost who happened to come across her.”

A cruel smile lit up her lips. Yin Hong reached out wanting to touch Yin Bai’s face, but the latter shied away. “In the morning, I was the innocent, cute angel, but I can’t even describe what I am at night. I tried to find meaning to my existence, and I eventually found it.”

Yin Hong pulled back her long sleeves. There were signs of burn on them. “The old dog liked to come into my bedroom at night. I prepared a glass of hot water by my bedside. That was the first time I resisted, but because I was too weak, the result wasn’t perfect. Still, it did give him quite a scare.”

Yin Hong’s term of reference to her adopted father kept changing. The girl had started to slowly shed her disguise.

“From a normal person’s perspective, I might be crazy or at least that was what the old dog kept saying. He even said that he would kill me.” Yin Hong scoffed with condescension. She did not continue like, if she did, it might pull up yet another secret.

“I think I get it. The reason for your appearance is because Yin Bai suffered constant fear, but she had no one to rely on, so a persona that is completely different from her own surfaced within her.” Chen Ge tried looking for similarities between Yin Hong and Yin Bai and himself, but he tried for a long time and still failed to find anything. From a young age, he had been cared for, and he did not have to worry about anything. Other than his parents’ unique parenting style, his childhood had not been that different from that of any other child.

My childhood was very normal. There is no instance of torture. Chen Ge turned to Yin Hong. “So, now the two of you have split? Is it possible that you two can recombine?”

“I don’t know. I haven’t tried it myself. But that should be impossible. She has been avoiding me, so she probably doesn’t wish to be stuck with me.” Yin Hong’s eyes landed on the old headmaster with a trace of envy in them. “It was me who helped her at her lowest point, but look how scared she is of me. In fact, she is still so close to an outsider.”

Yin Hong was very dissatisfied with the old headmaster. Her heart was swirling with negative emotions. The way she saw it, the reason Yin Bai experienced those things was partly due to the old headmaster. She hated everything and wanted to destroy everything, but she was unlimitedly kind toward Yin Bai. However, the kindness had a condition to it. Perhaps one day, when Yin Hong lost herself in the spiral, she would do something irreparable to Yin Bai, to completely take over her body.

“You suddenly woke up one night, without any warning...” Chen Ge was considering another scenario. “Could it be because you were traumatized and the trauma was beyond what you could handle?”

Chen Ge felt like this explanation suited his situation better. They said that a child could see things that normal people could not. Even though the memory back then was already blurry, he suspected that he had seen something beyond his psychological threshold, and an accident had occurred, causing him to split from the ghost fetus.

Before the previous question was answered, another new problem surfaced. What kind of thing can be so scary that a mental breakdown happened from one glance?

“Are you done with your questioning. Can you give my bag back now?” Yin Hong’s tone and expression shifted greatly from before; if he did not see it in person, Chen Ge would have had a hard time imagining how these two people who had the same face could have such wildly different personalities.

“Okay.” Chen Ge passed schoolbag back to Yin Hong. “We’ve stayed here for too long. The school is no longer safe; we need to move.”

After getting all the information that he needed, Chen Ge led the old headmaster and the girls out of the classroom. Turning back to look at Mu Yang High School behind him, a strange feeling arose in his heart. Everything looked like it was a coincidence, but there might be a hand controlling everything behind it.

This is not a good feeling, but there is something about me that cannot be controlled.

Chen Ge moved his gaze to his shadow. An unexpected change had happened to him, and that was Zhang Ya. In Li Wan City, Chen Ge had found out from Xiao Bu that his parents had wanted Xiao Bu to become his shadow. They had even made a contract with Xiao Bu, but even they could not have expected that Chen Ge would have Zhang Ya move into his shadow at the rooftop of a highest building at Li Wan City.

The future is constantly changing; no one can control everything. What I’ve lost will return eventually. The School of the Afterlife, Mu Yang High School, and the Third Sick Hall are related, but no matter how many secrets or unknown things are hidden here, there is one thing that shall never change.

It was Zhang Ya who consumed the original door-pusher for the School of the Afterlife, so she is the most qualified to become the new door-pusher.

When Chen Ge was thinking, he would radiate this special quality without even realizing it. The employees had gotten used to it, but this was the first time for the old headmaster and Yin Hong, and they reacted to it differently. There was surprise in the old headmaster's eyes, but at the same time, it felt like he saw something familiar. Yin Hong had a complicated expression—it felt like she had given up some dangerous thoughts.

“Sir, we shall go and check out the well behind the field first, to ensure that the path is safe.” Chen Ge would be worried if he did not see it for himself.

“Okay.” The old headmaster held Yin Hong's hand and walked ahead. They reached the end of the corridor, and the road ahead was blocked by wooden planks. There was no way forward.

“In a bit, some monsters might be let in here. You'd better be prepared and move fast, or else the school might realize it and send over staff and teachers.” The old headmaster half-squatted on the ground and very easily removed the few planks closest to the wall. As the planks loosened, a large amount of blood fog leaked in from the gap.

“Quick!”

To save time, Chen Ge did not take everyone through. He only brought Xu Yin. Pulling back the planks, the old headmaster, Chen Ge, and Xu Yin crawled through the gap. After they left, the headmaster swiftly replaced the planks.

“I need to nail them back so that it will not be discovered by the school.” The headmaster held the planks and looked for the nails that just fell. “The nails aren't normal nails. They can harm the things outside the school, and they come with curses...”

“Are the nails like these?” Chen Ge sought out some nails from his pocket. When he first entered the school, he had been cursed. His body had been poked with nails at irregular intervals, so he had many such nails.

“Yes.” The way that the headmaster looked at Chen Ge was strange. “Where did you get so many of them?”

“It’s a long story.” Chen Ge did not want to waste time on this subject. He opened his backpack. “Do you need a hammer?”

After dealing with the planks, Chen Ge took his time looking around. Blood fog drifted around them, and there was a stench in the air. The visibility was very poor.

“I wonder if it’s on purpose that the school’s consciousness arranged for Mu Yang High School to be on the most outer layer.” The old headmaster led Chen Ge through the blood fog. “Actually, we are still inside the school. If we walk further, you’ll come across a red wall, and the wall sequesters the school from the outside world.”

“Does that mean that we will be able to leave this school by jumping over the wall? Then why are we wasting time looking for a well?” Chen Ge did not get it.

“When you get close to the wall, you’ll be discovered by the school. Endless souls of despairing children will rush at you and tear you into pieces.” The headmaster shivered. “If you wish to leave the school quietly, the well is the only path.”

Through the veil of the blood fog, Chen Ge could only make out the shape of a field, but the scene before his eyes slowly overlapped with his memory of Mu Yang High School.

“The well is over there.” The old headmaster cared for Chen Ge. He was worried that an accident might happen to Chen Ge, so he guarded Chen Ge behind him and walked ahead. Walking through the field, with the headmaster leading the way, Chen Ge finally found the well. Once he got near, he could hear the many crying sounds coming from inside the well. There were male, female, and children’s—it sounded scary.

“Yes.”

“Is this how you entered the School of the Afterlife?” Chen Ge stood at the edge of the well. Xu Yin reached out to stop him; the well made him uneasy.

“Yes, the blood fog at the bottom is very thick. It is basically palpable. That is probably how the well escaped the school’s detection.” The headmaster signaled for Chen Ge not to stay by the well for too long to prevent attracting the school’s attention. “There is only one way forward when you reach the bottom of the well. Follow that path, and after a three- to fifteen-minute walk, you can leave the School of the Afterlife and enter the blood red city. There, we will need to find a way to go back to the surface.”

The whole process sounded easy, but there were too many uncertainties. Chen Ge held the rim of the well and turned back to look at the headmaster. “After entering the well, you need to walk for three to fifteen minutes? Why the time difference? If the journey is the same, even if you slow down a lot, the time should not be so different!”

“I have no answer to that. Every time the path is the same, but sometimes, it takes longer to travel through it, and sometimes it’s shorter. Do you want to go down to take a look?” The old headmaster did not get it himself. If this was someone else giving the suggestion, not only would Chen Ge not go down, he would suspect that it was a trap. He would toss the person down first. But the old headmaster was different; he trusted this old man implicitly.

With this back-up plan, I will have nothing to lose. I can go on to do things that I might be afraid of, but the condition is that this is not a dead end.

Chen Ge thought for a long time and asked for Xu Yin’s opinion. After getting Xu Yin’s approval, he decided to go down the well with the old headmaster.

“I used this path alone, and there was no one to help me. This time, there’s so many of us, and with the accompaniment of a Red Specter, there won’t be any problems.” To help Chen Ge calm down, the old headmaster was the first to walk into the well. Just as he was going to jump, Chen Ge stopped him.

“Wait a minute.” Chen Ge took out some rope from Lin Sisi’s bag. This was the leftover from when he jumped over the wall between the western and eastern campus. “Tie this to your waist so that we won’t get separated.”

“Why do you have everything?” The old headmaster was no longer that surprised.

“How deep is this well? Will two ropes be enough?”

“Should be.” The headmaster held the rim of the well with both hands. His old jacket slowly bloomed with black-red flowers, and his eyes were slowly consumed by redness.

Seeing the change in the old headmaster, Chen Ge only noticed how different this Half Red Specter was to the other Specters that he had encountered. The old headmaster gave him a strange feeling that was hard to describe. Standing next to the headmaster, he would not treat him like a ghost but a living person.

Even a Red Specter hasn’t given me this kind of feeling before. Is it because the old headmaster has done so much charitable work in his life that even though he turned into a ghost, he doesn’t have the ghost’s cruel nature?

Seeing the old headmaster slowly disappearing into the well, Chen Ge rushed over. He had Xu Yin walk at the back, and he took the middle spot. Once he entered the old well, the smell of blood hit him like a wall. The blood fog inside the well was much thicker than outside. It was unclear why, but the well appeared to be a natural spot for negative emotions to gather, and thus, a thick layer of blood fog was found there. Entering it was like falling into a pool of blood. His clothes stuck to his body, and Chen Ge felt prickling pain coming from his skin like someone was biting him. However, when he looked with his Yin Yang Vision, he could not see anything.

Xu Yin did not give a warning, so it should be safe. Everything is still within control.

Their surroundings were completely enveloped by blood fog. Nothing could be seen clearly. If not for Xu Yin, Chen Ge would not have gone down there no matter what.

“We haven’t reached the bottom?” The well was deeper than he thought. No wonder the school could not detect this loophole. The lower they went, the greater the pressure. Chen Ge was worried that something might happen to the old headmaster. He was afraid that when he reached the bottom, it would not be the old headmaster at the other end of the rope. The rope stopped being pulled taut, and the old headmaster’s figure clarified. They had not reached the bottom of the well, but the headmaster had stopped.

“Why aren’t we moving anymore?” Chen Ge was confused, he noticed something wrong about the old man.

“We can’t go on...” The headmaster’s voice was shaking. Chen Ge moved his body to get close to the headmaster. He followed the man’s gaze, and cold sweat slid down his face. It was no longer a red fog under the headmaster’s feet but a red pool of water, and human faces could be seen poking out from the water!

As the blood fog gathered, the water level inside the well was rising at a visible rate. The monsters hidden in the water had their mouths gaping like they could not wait to sink their teeth into Chen Ge.

“When I came last time, there aren’t these monsters...” The old headmaster was desperate.

“It’s fine.” The reason Chen Ge said that was because Xu Yin showed no reaction. “I saw them in the school in the mirror created by the painter. They have no skin, and they’re covered in blood and guts, surrounded by a horrible stench.”

These monsters were hardly any different from those that Chen Ge had seen. The only difference was that they were not walking upside down.

How did these monsters appear? Did they come from the blood city outside the school, or is this well their place of birth? If the monsters come from the city, why would I encounter them in the painter's school? And are they all upside down, or has the painter been rearing them? Is it because of him that strange things have been happening to the school?

Chen Ge felt like he was getting closer to the center of the secret. He yanked on the rope lightly. “Sir, let’s go back for now.”

“I feel like I’ve seen them somewhere before.” The old headmaster stared at the monster inside the well. “They’re harvesting the blood fog. They survive on human’s negative emotions. I’ve heard about them before! But... this is strange. Why would they show up here, and why are there so many negative emotions gathered here?”

“They survive on human’s negative emotions? Appear inside the well?” Something occurred to Chen Ge. He was reminded of the hint given by the black phone regarding Mu Yang High School.

Everyone has a deep well inside their heart where shameful and unknowable secrets stay buried.

Chapter 861 - Fan Yu!

Chapter 861: Fan Yu!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The old well behind the field is the school's loophole, and the headmaster said that this is a wound that can't heal. If the entire school is compared to a person's heart, this well is the place where the deepest secret is buried.

Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of a detail.

"Sir, you said that the School of the Afterlife is made up of the memories of countless students, and the reason Mu Yang High School showed up here is because there was a student at that school who was bullied, yes?"

"Yes." The old headmaster did not seem willing to answer that question.

"Can you tell me more about the student?" Chen Ge knew that the old headmaster did not wish to bring up that past, but every clue related to that kid from Mu Yang High School would be very crucial!

The only loophole in the School of the Afterlife was in Mu Yang High School's ruin campus. There was another detail worth noting—all the buildings in the School of the Afterlife were arranged randomly, but Mu Yang High School was placed at the fringe, the closest to the blood red city.

"I don't really know the details. I only know that the child's name was Fan Yu. His adopted father was our school's teacher. He used to teach in the city, but for some reason, he was blackballed by the industry, and it was us who accepted him." The headmaster's words rocked Chen Ge's memory.

"Fan Yu? The kid was once a student at Mu Yang High School?"

"Yes, Mu Yang High School might have been small, but we offered primary and secondary school classes.” The old headmaster smiled sadly. “That was something we were forced to do. The countryside has no primary schools, and the children I adopted and the children of the nearby families had nowhere to attend school, so I set up a primary school class.”

“That is not important.” Chen Ge moved his body upward little by little. “How long has Fan Yu spent at Mu Yang High School? Why did he leave?”

“It was because of his adopted father that Fan Yu enrolled at our school—he was our teacher. At the time, Fan Yu was still too young to attend primary school, but under his father’s insistence, we arranged for him to follow Primary One class.”

The old headmaster remembered what happened then. This was where the headmaster was different from other Specters—most Specters could only remember their hatred.

“After a few months, Fan Yu could not keep up with the rest of his class. The child was very clever and talented, but his talent showed only in painting.” The headmaster had a clear memory of this. “The child was a master painter; he could be seen as a genius. At the beginning, the adopted father had nothing against his hobby, but one day, the child drew the face of a person in class, and that caused his father to explode. According to the other students, the father tore up his painting on the spot and gave the child a few harsh slaps. Naturally, it caused a huge commotion, and it was me and a female teacher who pulled him back.”

“If he was just drawing in class and not paying attention, his father wouldn’t have been so furious.” Chen Ge was sharp. “Perhaps it was the painting that had angered his father. Sir, do you remember what he drew?”

“The painting was torn up, but I heard from his deskmate that when Fan Yu was drawing the painting, he borrowed his red crayon. He said that his own red crayon had run out.” The old headmaster tried his best to think, but he could not remember what Fan Yu had drawn.

“Red crayon?” Chen Ge’s eyes narrowed. “To be able to finish all of his red crayon and have to borrow one from his deskmate, that proves that the painting used a lot of red!”

His expression turned serious. Chen Ge slowly turned to look at the headmaster and pointed at the blood fog around them. “Just now, you said that Fan Yu is a talented painter. Then think about it, what kind of painting was he doing that required so much red?"

Initially, the old headmaster did not think much of it, but being reminded by Chen Ge, it hit him. "A murder scene?"

"That's very likely!" Chen Ge slowed down. "That would explain why his adopted father was so angry. I suspect that the killer was Fan Yu's adopted father."

The situation was more complicated than Chen Ge thought. Chen Ge had thought that Fan Yu's adopted father had only killed Fan Yu's mother, but it looked like things were not that simple—his father might have been a complete psycho. In the morning, he was a respected teacher, but at night, he was a crazed murderer who could not control himself.

"That is weirdly sensible. Only someone like that would draw all those eyes in one of Mu Yang High School's toilet cubicles to use it to spy on his students. I underestimated the man's evilness."

After giving it some thought, Chen Ge realized that Fan Yu's experience was far more painful than he had thought.

"Fan Yu's aunt's sister disappeared without reason, but they wandered Mu Yang High School after their death. Could their death be related to Fan Yu's adopted father?"

Chen Ge revealed Fan Yu's father's real persona to the headmaster. The headmaster's eyes were flushed with red. "I thought that Fan Yu was merely bullied at school; I had no idea that it was so serious."

"One cannot judge a book by its cover. The man kept it very well hidden, or else he would have been discovered already." Chen Ge had new perspective on this. "Sir, before Fan Yu left the school, did he do anything strange?"

"I wasn't paying attention. Because Fan Yu was in his adopted father's class, I didn't think his father would do anything to him, so I didn't ask. Oh, but there was something strange. Fan Yu always came to school with wounds on him. His adopted father told me that Fan Yu liked to get into fights due to his personality." The headmaster was deep in guilt. "Now that I think about it, they were probably the work of his father."

"That's all?"

“Fan Yu was isolated in class. For some reason, no one wanted to be his friend. His adopted father forbade him from drawing, and whenever he did, the father would beat and scold him. The child turned into a different person in a few short months.” The headmaster could not bear to continue. “This was my fault. At the time, the school was targeted by the authorities, and I had to go to places to solve that. I was rarely at school and missed out on many things.”

“Even if you asked him, Fan Yu probably wouldn’t tell you anything because, no matter what, he still needed to go home. It was not that he didn’t wish to tell you, but he couldn’t. When other students were bullied at school, at least they can tell their parents. For him, after being bullied at school, he would have to go home to face his adopted father.”

Chen Ge’s heart went out to Fan Yu, and it confirmed his desire to take care of the child. Then another question popped up in his mind.

“If it was because of Fan Yu that Mu Yang High School appeared in the School of the Afterlife, then Fan Yu must have entered the School of the Afterlife before. But the reality is that Fan Yu is now being taken care at Jiujiang Children’s Home. He hasn’t left the place.”

Chen Ge narrowed his eyes, and many things that he had experienced now flashed through his mind. He had a good relationship with Fan Yu and had seen his art. The current Fan Yu had no talent in painting at all. All of his paintings had crude lines, no different from other kindergarteners.

This skill cannot be called a genius at all, or is Fan Yu’s situation similar to that of Lee Xueyin? His despairing side has entered the School of the Afterlife, and only an empty self is left in real life?

His brain was struck by lightning, and Chen Ge bit on his tongue. He realized that someone had noticed the uniqueness about Fan Yu before he did!

After the end of the Coffin Village’s Trial Mission, the ghost in the well who had been in existence for one hundred years gifted a bangle to Fan Yu!

The Greater Red Specter had refused to entertain anyone, but she had been kind toward Fan Yu. It was as if she had purposely approached him to leave a good impression.

“When she possessed the girl’s body and was sent to the Children’s Home. There were so many children there, but she targeted Fan Yu! She stayed by Fan Yu's side. The old ginger is the spiciest. I should have noticed this a long time ago!"

Climbing out from the old well, Chen Ge could no longer see the water at the bottom. Thinking about Fan Yu, he was reminded of the mirrored campuses created by the painter. One was eerie and despairing; the other side was peaceful and nice.

Chapter 862 - Chen Ge's Plan

Chapter 862: Chen Ge's Plan

Flashes of the past appeared in Chen Ge's mind, and the many coincidences now appeared to be linked together. They might not have been as coincidental as Chen Ge had previously thought.

Chang Wenyu and the painter, who should I help?

When he first obtained the black phone, Chen Ge had made a choice, and that choice had changed his life, giving him the right to find the truth.

Even though School of the Afterlife is a four-star scenario, there is no door-pusher. There must be plenty who have their eyes on this piece of meat.

At first, Chen Ge had treated the doors as some kind of burden, but under Doctor Gao's 'influence' and 'teaching', he had slowly come to understand the doors' importance. If used well, the doors could do many things. Viewed from this angle, Doctor Gao was both Chen Ge's enemy and guide. Doctor Gao wanted to absorb Chen Ge into the ghost story society and make Chen Ge his assistant; that was a fair plan, but there were too many accidents during the process. Even though, in the end, Chen Ge did join the society, by then, he was the only member left.

If Fan Yu is really the painter, this will be very interesting.

Chen Ge did not hate the painter. He did not have a good impression of him—he merely thought that the painter was different than any of the other Red Specters that he had met. There were so many powerful Specters and ghosts behind the door, but the painter was the only Specter who wished to use his own power to change the world behind the door. This idea was crazy. Some Specters wanted revenge, others wanted rebirth, but the painter was different. He did not wish to return to the real world, instead wishing to create a different ‘reality’ behind the door. If he succeeded, the line between the world behind the door and the real world would become even blurrier. Chen Ge had no idea what that meant, only thinking that would be very dangerous.

There are too many people who have their eyes on the School of the Afterlife. The blood red city that is expanding, the cursed hospital that is seen everywhere, and not to mention Chang Wenyu. If he wishes to succeed in this condition, he will need the help of a powerful Greater Red Specter.

Chen Ge’s heart skipped a beat when this thought crossed his mind.

If Zhang Ya becomes a Greater Red Specter, does that mean I can help him complete his wish?

Shaking his head, Chen Ge soon vetoed this idea. The more chaotic the school was, the better it was for him.

I am friends with Xiao Fan outside the door, but I have had no interaction with the painter inside the door. Even if I help him, he might not appreciate the help. If anything, he might harm me after the fact.

Chen Ge knew that the Fan Yu outside the door was an innocent child, but he was very cautious toward the painter inside the door. After he completed the Trial Mission at Mu Yang High School, the police had come to the scene and dug up Fan Yu’s parents’ bodies from inside the well. Then Fan Yu’s aunt had been swift to admit that she had killed Fan Yu’s adopted father. She had claimed that it was an accident. She had wanted to stop tragedy from happening but failed. There was a giant loophole in her claim. She was just a fragile woman, so how did she ‘accidentally’ kill a murderer who was extremely experienced?

The police at the time had thought that it was a strange claim as well, but other than Fan Yu’s aunt, there were no other survivors who were related to this case, so in the end, they had to accept her claim, ending the case that had happened years prior. Now that he thought about it, however, there was another surviving victim of this case, and that was Fan Yu.

The deepest secret on his heart is hidden in this well. Perhaps it was then that he entered the door.

Chen Ge would never forget Fan Yu because he was his haunted house’s first special visitor.

The old headmaster knew about the fact that Fan Yu entered the school and knew that Mu Yang High School's appearance in the School of the Afterlife is due to Fan Yu's memory. He would not have found out all that alone, so the biggest possibility is that someone told him about this.

At the place, the only people who would help the old headmaster are my parents. First Yin Hong and then Fan Yu. Are they trying to tell me something through the old headmaster?

Chen Ge could not guess his parent's thoughts.

Are they trying to tell me something through my interaction with Yin Hong and Fan Yu? After this mission is over, the ghost fetus might come to find me. I don't have much time left. Is it because they are worried about me and wish for me to know about the fetus' weakness through the painter? After all, the ghost fetus is my shadow, and in a way, he is my darker self.

After knowing certain things, Chen Ge slowly calmed down. He pulled the headmaster out from the well. "We will go back to the school."

"Okay." The only escape had become a dead end, but the headmaster felt lucky in a way. "Thankfully, you found me, or else I really wouldn't know how to leave."

"There's no need for that." Chen Ge led the old headmaster and retraced their steps. When they removed the wooden plank, there was a small accident. The blood sun that covered the school kept dropping, and it dispersed the blood fog around Chen Ge and almost discovered them. Returning safely to the school, Chen Ge took out the tools to pin the boards back up. That way, it would be hard to tell that someone had tampered with the school.

"Where should we go next? Are you trying to get the school's approval?" The old headmaster took Yin Hong's hand and followed behind Chen Ge. Yin Bai looked at the headmaster innocently, as if wondering what kind of mistake she had made.

"Other than myself, you also need to get the school's approval." Chen Ge's reply stunned the old headmaster.

"Me? Why?"

"You are the key to everything," Chen Ge said seriously. "Even though the school has consumed many souls, it was because it wished to provide a home for these despairing children. Currently, this home is very chaotic as it lacks a qualified manager.”

The headmaster nodded subconsciously. “Yes, the world behind a door that has lost control is very scary.”

Chen Ge did not pick up on what the headmaster said but continued on his own. “From how I see it, no one is more suitable to manage this school than you.”

“Me?” The old headmaster, who was lamenting the state of the school, was baffled, and he quickly shook his hands. “Stop kidding...”

“Don’t hurry to deny it. We can talk about this after gaining the school’s approval.” Chen Ge looked confident.

“Fine, what is your plan?” The old headmaster could only follow Chen Ge; he had no other choice.

“Simple, Yin Hong has lived here for so long, so she should know who people normally shy from. Later, we’ll bulldoze over all of them.”

Chen Ge looked at the headmaster with a smile. “I will be the bad cop, and you’ll be the good cop. I’ll use force to correct force, and you only need to be yourself.”

“I only need to be myself?” The old headmaster felt that Chen Ge’s plan was not that reliable. Rather than a plan, it was more like a direct taunt. He had been an honest man his whole life, a man of charity, so it was natural that he felt awkward about this plan.

“Yes, do what you wish to do and say what you wish to say—there shan’t be any hesitation.” Chen Ge opened his backpack to look for tools. “We cannot give up on any child, so I will be the bad guy this time. We will make them know their mistake ‘physically’ and then rescue them psychologically.”

Chen Ge was all prepared. He had been meaning to do since the beginning.

“Yin Hong, can you help me with one thing?” Chen Ge squatted down before Yin Hong. “You have been living here for so long, so you should know where the scary places and people at the school are, right?”

“Why would you ask me?” Yin Hong’s cute brows frowned.

“Because you are a scary student yourself. At least, that is how your classmates see you. They seem to be afraid of you.”

“I...” Yin Hong glared heavily at Chen Ge. She was powerless before him. “There are indeed many ghosts and mad people at this school. If you wish to seek death, I will take you to them.”

“We have limited time, so we’ll start with the bad students. Since the staff won’t take care of them, we will.”

Chen Ge was firm, but Yin Hong regarded him with condescension.

“Even if you punish those students, there will be new students to replace them... unless you plan to stay at this place and repeat that forever. But have you considered that if you really do that, will you be any different from the bullies themselves?” Yin Hong appeared like she knew some hidden secrets about this school. “Other than the small number of students whose memory was sealed, most of the bullies here were once victims. In the world behind the door, their consciousness has been altered by the school. They are not bullying but venting. Because of that, the school’s staff ignore most of their actions. This is permitted by the school’s consciousness, so how dare they intervene?”

“It’s permitted by the school’s consciousness? Isn’t the school’s consciousness a collection consciousnesses? Does it know how to speak?” Chen Ge kind of understood why the staff would ignore the bullying—they did not want to get involved.

“Even though it is not stated explicitly by the school’s consciousness, it is the public consensus.”

“I’m afraid that is not the case. The School of the Afterlife has been in existence for years already, and it hasn’t selected a new door-pusher. That is probably because you guys have misinterpreted its real purpose.”

Chen Ge had been through many dark experiences himself, but he had never surrendered himself to them. Even when he was hiding in the darkest spot of the night, he would be anticipating the arrival of dawn.

“It wasn’t the school’s consciousness that altered those children but the children themselves. Hatred and resentment were evoked by negative emotions, and they became their most hated self.” Chen Ge sighed lightly. “Before this, I had some hesitation, but after hearing what you’ve said, my desire to help them has increased. Bullying those weaker will never lead to salvation; it’ll only make them sink deeper.”

“I agree with that.” The headmaster suddenly spoke. His eyes that fell on Chen Ge were shining with approval.

“We have limited time, let’s go.” The mission given to Chen Ge by Chang Wenyu was to find all the specters who had the qualifications to become ‘door-pushers’. Chen Ge planned to do go one step further—he planned to pull all those ‘people’ to his side. Chang Wenyu and the painter were fighting for the control of the school’s consciousness, but Chen Ge placed his target on the students themselves.

The school's consciousness is made up of the collective consciousness of the numerous students. In other words, any of the students could affect the final result. This one thing, the painter has done right, but his method of providing another false reality is no different from giving up on most of the students with heavy resentment.

After walking for several minutes toward the center of the school, Yin Hong stopped outside one of the classrooms. She pointed at the door. "The teachers normally don't come here. Whether you wish to enter or not, it's on you."

The wall outside the classroom looked normal, but there was a white piece of paper pasted on the glass window. It had uneven handwriting on it—"Preparing for the test, please do not disturb."

"It feels normal." Right after Chen Ge said that, there was a loud boom inside the room. It sounded like someone had been shoved, and a table had been toppled. "Are they fighting?"

The paper blocked most of the window. Chen Ge tried to look through the gap before turning back to tell the old headmaster. "Sir, you come in later."

"How long should I wait?" The headmaster had no idea what Chen Ge was up to, but he was worried.

"Gauge the situation yourself. As long as their soul is still intact." Before the headmaster understood Chen Ge, the latter summoned Xu Yin and the headless woman.

"Yin Hong, give me some help." Without waiting for the agreement from Yin Hong, Chen Ge kicked the door down.

Bang!

The glass on the door was shattered, and the paper fell with the splinters.

"Is someone in?" Chen Ge stepped on the papers as he walked into the room. There were seven male students in the room who were playing cards, and another three were punching a student wearing a Taekwondo outfit in the corner. Once he entered the room, everyone stopped what they were doing to look at him.

“Yin Hong, did they bully you?” Chen Ge picked up Yin Hong’s small hand and pulled the girl who planned to witness the show outside into the room. The girl’s gleeful smirk froze on her face. “Don’t be scared. With your big brother here, no one will bully you again.”

Chen Ge pinched Yin Hong’s cheek. Due to anger, not only her face, even her eyes were red.

“F*ck, what is wrong with you?” The students who were playing cards stood up. One of them was about 1.9 meters tall, and he looked muscular. All this while, it had been them bullying others—they did not expect someone to voluntarily walk into their den. Blood stains that gave out a great stench appeared on the tallest student’s shirt.

“A Half Red Specter? No wonder the teachers refuse to come here.” It was as if Chen Ge could not see the anger on Yin Hong’s face. He very naturally guarded her and said deeply, “Yin Hong, with your big brother here, I will protect you.”

Then, the headless woman and Xu Yin entered the room, and the scene turned incredibly gory. Chen Ge closed the door behind him and helped the beaten boy up. “Are you alright?”

The boy was wearing practice-use cushions over his arms, but his face was covered with wounds. The people did not aim at the cushions but at his body. The boy was bullied until he did not dare speak. Finally, he looked at Yin Hong with envy and said softly, “I’m fine.”

Yin Hong shivered from the boy’s look. She wished to fling Chen Ge’s hand away, but she was reminded of what Chen Ge had said. Even though she knew that was just acting, it felt strangely comforting.

Chapter 864 - Han Song

Chapter 864: Han Song

How could Yin Hong's current feeling toward Chen Ge be described? She wanted to hit him, but she did not dislike him.

While Yin Hong was caught in this conundrum, Chen Ge had already taken her hand and started to talk with the boy who was bullied. Perhaps it was the cute Yin Hong who had lowered the student's alertness, or perhaps he realized that Chen Ge was scarier than the bullies in the classroom, but no matter the reason, his attitude toward Chen Ge was very kind.

"Why did they bully you?" Chen Ge reached out to support the student in Taekwondo outfit. "Don't hesitate to tell us anything."

"We wanted to start a Taekwondo club, but the school would not allow it, so we started one ourselves."

"Wait, so the club is having the other kids beat you up?" Chen Ge felt like the child was not telling the truth.

"I am the training partner—that's how all the newcomers started. There were a few others before me, they were unable to hold on, so it was my turn..." As the student explained, his tear fell. His body was fragile, like his soul was about to disperse.

"Don't be so hard on him." Yin Hong walked out from behind Chen Ge. "That big fellow is a Red Specter."

She pulled on Chen Ge's shirt to signal him to walk toward the door to prevent him from falling into an accidental death.

"A Red Specter?" Chen Ge had thought that the student was just a Half Red Specter; he trusted Yin Yang Vision too much.

"Yes, and he's a very scary Red Specter." A cute canine tooth showed when Yin Hong's lips curled into a smile. "His name is Han Song, and he suffers from giantism. He has been gawked at since he was young, and everyone is afraid of him. Afterward, when people notice that he's not that clever and is an honest person, many boring people started to play pranks on him. Those people call themselves his friends, but in reality, they were merely ordering him around and treating him as a tool... or perhaps more like an animal. The saddest thing was all this happened at school, so his family had no idea. He was so happy to have found some friends, and his parents even invited his bullies to his home as guests."

"Then how did he enter the door? If it was just physical bullying, with his physical condition, he could have easily pushed back against those who bullied him." Ol' Bai was worried about Chen Ge, so he followed them in. When he saw the Half Red Specter, he thought that he could take him down.

"This is the harshest form of bullying, emotional abuse. No one bullied him physically. They isolated him, verbally attacked him, and ostracized him, making him feel like a monster." Chen Ge was familiar with all that. "There are worthless creatures who like to put others down to satisfy themselves. They are filled with malice. The more the kid wants to make others think that he is not a monster, the more they will make him feel that way."

"Yes, that was the type of bullying Han Song ran into. One time, they pushed him to the edge, and they got into an argument. As a result, Han Song was punished; it was Han Song who was injured, but the parents came at him madly. They wanted Han Song expelled because they felt like it was too dangerous for their students to be around someone who was so violent and dumb." There was a cold smirk on Yin Hong's lips. Her eyes were red like she was planning to destroy all life forms.

"And then what happened?"

"The school did not punish anyone, but the emotional abuse on Han Song worsened. Their actions toward Han Song slowly crossed the line. Their school once had a Taekwondo club. None of the other clubs were willing to accept Han Song—the Taekwondo club was the only exception. But afraid of him acting out, they only gave him the role of a training partner, or more precisely, a human punching bag. Han Song valued this chance a lot. But people refused to let him be and joined the club as well. You can imagine what happened next." Yin Hong pointed at the male student next to Chen Ge. "That was what he experienced; outside the door, he was bullied, but here, he became a bully.”

“Why do you know so much about Han Song?” Chen Ge was curious.

“We came from the same school.” Yin Hong did not continue. She seemed to have been reminded of something unhappy.

“Okay, I know what to do now.” Chen Ge looked at the students in the room and took out the red high heels. “Han Song probably thought that, by bullying others and instilling fear in them, no one would dare bully him again.”

“What do you plan to do?” Yin Hong always had trouble understanding Chen Ge.

“I wish to tell him that is a bad idea.” Before Chen Ge finished, a roar echoed through the ground. Han Song, who had been pressed onto the ground earlier, slowly stood up with his hands on the wall. His coat was drenched in blood, and his body was expanding. A horrible stench filled the room, and worm-like wounds could be seen on his exposed skin.

“How did those wound from?”

“I have no idea. I only know about what happened to him at school. Perhaps he ran into something else outside of school.” This was the first time that Yin Hong had seen Han Song being pushed into such a corner.

“The reason he is behind the door probably has to do with his family.” Chen Ge looked at the maddened Han Song, and he was surprised. Facing the attacks from the headless woman and Xu Yin, he did not get injured too much. “The guy has a single attack style but can sure take a beating.”

Chen Ge could not waste too much time there. He said something to the heels he was holding, but the heels did not react. He had no other option but to toss the heels right at Han Song. “Big Sister, please help. If I can’t leave this place, you can’t either. I give you a verbal promise now. If I can leave this school alive, I will give you freedom, and we will not owe each other anything.”

Yin Hong looked at Chen Ge like he was dumb, but she did not expect what would happen next. The sound of heels clicking echoed in the room, and red footprints appeared on tables and chair before finally appearing on Han Song's body. Soon, the footprints turned into small black lines and crawled into Han Song's body. This was the curse that the heels was most familiar with. After consuming the ghost fetus' curse, the heels' power seemed to have grown. The three Red Specters cooperated to pin Han Song down, but even until the stage of almost being dispersed, he refused to surrender.

The color on his coat faded, and his actions slowed down. The red in Han Song's eyes slowly disappeared—he seemed to have seen his old self.

Nothing had changed...

The wounds on his body increased. Seeing as Han Song was about to be consumed by the three Red Specters, the door opened, and a fat old man rushed in.

“Stop!”

The headmaster's heart wrenched just from hearing the sounds from outside the door. After he came in, he was given a shock. Wherever he looked, there was red.

Chen Ge signaled for them to stop and turned to the old headmaster. “They bullied others first. When I came in, they were hitting that child. I did nothing wrong.”

“Really? But I only see you bullying others!” The old headmaster looked at the student on the floor. The student in Taekwondo gear did not seem like he wanted to get into trouble, so he stammered through gibberish.

Han Song was collapsed on the ground. The scene before his eyes felt familiar.

Chapter 865 - Teaching Methods

Chapter 865: Teaching Methods

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Sir, these people were bullying other students, so I had to intervene.” Chen Ge picked up the student by his collar. “When I walked in, he was being punched by the few students. I was just helping him.”

“But I only saw you beating them up!” The old headmaster looked very angry, and disappointment was clear on his face. He walked to the student’s side. “The people lying on the floor were beating you earlier?”

...

“We were just practicing with him. Shen Qing, you have to answer that!” The bullies finally found a savior, and they pleaded loudly. The student in the Taekwondo outfit’s lips fell open, but he did not say anything.

After a long time, it appeared like he had come to a decision. He pointed at the other students. “They said every new member has to go through this process. When the first student was beaten up by them, I didn’t say anything, and under their urging, I even delivered a few punches. When the second student was bullied, I still remained silent, but now it’s my turn.”

Shen Qing was not scared into silence; he chose to tell the truth.

“I have made a mistake in the past, but I will not repeat that mistake.”

Everyone in the classroom stared at Shen Qing. He was very afraid. His shoulders and legs were shaking, and his voice was unnatural.

“Sir, you heard it yourself. They deserved it. I was not bullying them; I was merely helping the bullied students.” Chen Ge waved his hands and signaled for Xu Yin and the headless woman to continue. Han Song, who was collapsed in the middle of the classroom, had wounds all over his body, and he looked like he was perishing. But strangely enough, the boy kept his eyes on Shen Qing. There were complicated emotions in his eyes. Things did not go as Han Song expected. When he was blamed, no one stood forth to help him. Even if he had protected others, they would not appreciate it but would stay away from him due to various reasons.

“Perhaps it’s because I really am a monster...”

To give Han Song a memorable lesson, Chen Ge did not tell his employees to hold back. Being attacked by three Red Specters, it was surprising that Han Song could hold on for so long. His physical body wavered, and the blood on his shirt faded. The memory in his mind blurred, and his lingering spirit surfaced. His red eyes were filled with negative emotions, and there was no hope.

“I have turned into the type of person I hate the most, but it does not bring me happiness even though no one dares bully me anymore.”

The enlarged body slowly returned to normal, but the stench on his body did not disappear. If anything, it only thickened like the despair curled around his heart was slowly deepening.

“If only I was not a monster, people would not hate me, and dad would not have abandoned me.”

Something pressed down on his mind, and curses crawled over his body like snakes. The longer this carried on, the worse his situation got. Han Song wished to run, but all the exits had been blocked. He could feel his body slowly disappearing, his flesh being cut down little by little.

“I’m so tired...” He felt an indescribable drowsiness come from everywhere. Just as he was about to close his eyes, an old man appeared before him. The old man was not tall, and his face looked kind, but his expression was serious.

“Chen Ge, perhaps you think that it doesn’t matter if you kill him, but I wish for you to remember this—this child was once a victim. You hate school bullying, but using force to press down against force is not going to work because one day you’ll meet someone stronger than you.” The old headmaster had probably guessed Chen Ge’s plan before entering the door, but when he walked to Han Song’s side, he was still shocked. Fights between Red Specters were much crueler than he had thought. He noticed that Chen Ge’s Red Specters truly wanted to kill and consume the boy’s heart!

“I will not allow you to do that.” The old headmaster refused to budge. Actually, he had the wrong idea about Chen Ge. Of the three Red Specters, other than Xu Yin who would follow Chen Ge’s orders, the other two were not under his control, and they would not listen to his orders.

“Sir, are you sure you want to help them?”

“Human nature is kindness. Even in the darkest abyss, one can find a blooming flower.” The headmaster looked at Chen Ge for a long time. “Do you mind if I talk to him in private?”

“But he’s a Red Specter.”

“I know.”

The old headmaster was a stubborn person. To prevent an accident from happening, Chen Ge had the red high heels stay back.

“Please leave. Right, have that lady pull the curse away. It’s too dangerous.” The old headmaster saw through Chen Ge’s plan. He tossed Chen Ge a look to tell him not to worry. After everyone left, he personally closed the door. Chen Ge was worried about the headmaster. He leaned against the door to look through the gap. If any danger came to the headmaster, he would rush in immediately. Through the gap, Chen Ge saw the headmaster pick up Han Song and whisper something to him. Initially, he was the one speaking, but eventually, Han Song started to reply. They chatted for ten minutes before Han Song suddenly went berserk. Yet, the old headmaster did not run. He stood squarely before Han Song and raised his voice.

Chen Ge heard the following terms outside the door—monster, parents, and so on.

Han Song, who had gone mad, did not hurt the headmaster, and he followed the old man out of the classroom.

“The child has agreed to join us. He has already received enough punishment for his mistake. I hope you’ll give him one more chance.” The headmaster looked at Chen Ge with sincerity. “Actually, he hates bullies more than we do, but he fell into a maze and found the wrong way out.”

Han Song, who stood behind the headmaster, was still afraid of Chen Ge. He stooped and lowered his head, trying to make himself look as small as he could.

“Sir, he’s not one of us. The most appropriate way is to have him join us in another manner.” Chen Ge pointed at Bai Qiulin’s stomach. He ignored Han Song. Since he was to portray the bad cop, he went all the way.

“Chen Ge, I’m begging you.” Since the headmaster said that, Chen Ge did not insist. He agreed with Han Song joining them and pulled the headmaster to the side.

“Sir, I’m curious, how did you persuade him? Can you talk me through the whole process?” Chen Ge wished to learn from the headmaster. He would be able to use this skill of persuasion in the future.

“I can’t tell you. He chose to trust me, so I have to keep his secret.” The headmaster always treated others with sincerity. He had been tricked many times because of it, but that did not change his nature. After experiencing many things, he had finally found people who could understand him, and they had been accompanying and protecting him. “But I still need to thank you. If you didn’t beat some sense into him, my persuasion would have been pointless, but try to hold back a little next time.”

The headmaster was scared, too. If he had walked in a little bit later, Han Song would have departed already.

“I have my plan ready. All the students at this school are special, so I have to use special methods to educate them. I suppose you can call this modifying one’s way of teaching to suit the special requirements of each class or case.” Chen Ge stole a glance at Han Song. “Find their goodness, but do not ignore their weakness. Then I will use my method to help them breakthrough their mold and find a new path in life!”

The actual method of educating based on cases was not to praise the good and ignore the bad but to face the problem head on and come up with a suitable solution. Even though Chen Ge did not have any children, from a certain perspective, he was the leader of an entire Haunted House. Using different methods of communication with different employees to elicit their greatest passion was an ability possessed by a successful boss. After the Taekwondo member and Han Song joined the club, Chen Ge's group grew larger.

"Sir, actually, I didn't plan to kill Han Song. I merely wanted him to feel the pain of the victim to evoke the memory of his past self." Chen Ge did not want there to be a misunderstanding between him and the headmaster. "Our ultimate goal is to earn the school's approval; killing the students will obviously go against it.

"Other than the school's consciousness itself, the strongest Specter here should be someone called the painter. He is a ghost with a clear goal. He used his power to turn the school into a heaven without any fighting, but he ran into trouble with another Greater Red Specter. I have no idea what happened next, but those who offended or stood in the painter's way would have their memory wiped out."

"The painter didn't kill them?" The headmaster cut straight to the point.

"Yes, even if those ghosts kept creating problems, the painter didn't kill them," Chen Ge whispered. "Consuming Red Specters could greatly improve his own and his allies' power; it is impossible for the painter to not understand something as simple as that. So, it is not that he doesn't want to kill, but he cannot. Don't forget, before the new door-pusher appears, the real owner of this place is the school's consciousness. The painter is very powerful, but he still needs to act within the school's limits."

"Why didn't you tell me that earlier?"

“If I told you the truth, would you still have reacted the same way? When you came to save Han Song, you really wanted to help him without consideration for the consequences. This cannot be faked. I could see that; I believe that Han Song could see that as well.” A smile hung on Chen Ge’s lips. “Sir, you are the kindest person I’ve ever met; I do not mean to lie to you, but I wish to do more, and some things in this world cannot be achieved with kindness alone.”

The smile on his face faded. “Negative emotions and despair permeate the world behind the door, but these emotions come from outside the door. I have no idea how they appear here, but I know that if everyone was like you behind the door, the world behind the door would be a paradise.”

Turning to look out the window, Chen Ge looked at the thick blood fog. “Perhaps that way, we might be able to see the stars in the sky.”

This was the first time that the headmaster had seen Chen Ge show an expression like that. “Is there something on your mind?”

“I would never tell this to others—you’re the first one to hear it. Perhaps it’s because you know my parents and I’m certain you will not harm me.” Chen Ge and the headmaster walked at the front of the group. “In such a big school, standing amid ghosts and Specters, I am the only living person. Sometimes I am afraid, but I know that I cannot show that. I am just a normal person, but I am also the owner of a Haunted House, the backbone of all my employees and the students we’ve found. If I lose my stability, everyone will panic, so I do not dare be afraid, do not even dare attempt to entertain the possibility of fear.”

When Chen Ge said that, the old headmaster took a good look at Chen Ge. If he was still alive, his grandson would probably be as old as Chen Ge. Chen Ge presented himself so powerfully that even the headmaster had forgotten the simplest issue; he was the only living person in a veritable hell. In this dark abyss, he was like a flickering candlelight, and the smallest wind could take him out. This should be difficult for him as well.

These thoughts appeared in the headmaster’s mind. “If you wish to talk to someone in the future, feel free to come to me. I’ve lived for so long, even though there’s nothing to my name, I am qualified enough to be a good listener.”

“Thank you,” Chen Ge said. “Actually, I wish to know more about my parents. They haven't told me anything. Sir, can you describe them for me?"

"I only know that they are a passionate couple. They did not ask for any compensation but had helped me a lot. Based on what I heard, they helped many others in Western Jiujiang. They would donate most of their income from their Haunted House, and they have done far more than I do." The headmaster held Chen Ge's parents in high regard.

"Did they ever mention me? I wish to know how they looked at me." Chen Ge slowed down. He wanted to know what had happened between himself and his shadow.

The headmaster did not answer instantly. After a long pause, he said, "I've been to your home before—it was at midnight. Your parents were heading out. I have no idea where they were going, but I saw that they stood at your bedroom door for a very long time."

"You've been to my house?" To maintain the Haunted House, Chen Ge had already sold the old home. He did not wish to return to be reminded of the past.

"Chen Ge, no matter what, I hope you understand that your parents really did love you. Perhaps they have done stuff that you do not understand now, but I hope you won't be angry at them." The old headmaster seemed to know some things, but he was unable to tell Chen Ge.

"I haven't seen them for so long already." Chen Ge's voice cut at the headmaster's heart.

Stopping, Chen Ge suddenly asked, "Can you tell me where they have gone?"

The headmaster's lips opened to say something, but at the last moment, he closed them again.

"You can't tell me?" Chen Ge stopped and looked at the headmaster like a helpless child in the wind.

The old headmaster hesitated before finally shaking his head. "They will come back to find you."

"It's alright. I also believe that they will return." Chen Ge sucked in a breath and reverted to his usual self. "Come on, let's keep moving."

After getting approval from enough Specters, the school will approve of us. Then, we will lay our cards on the table. I don't want to drag this on anymore."

Sunny, tough, kind—there was a hard determination in his bones. Sometimes, he was so calm that people would be afraid, but other times, he was like a child.

The old headmaster looked at Chen Ge. His impression of Chen Ge changed again. If, before this, they were in a cooperative relationship, now, he treated Chen Ge as his junior.

The headmaster himself did not notice this change. Perhaps it was due to guilt or something else.

"Sir, what I told you today, I hope you won't tell anyone else."

Forbidden Zones

Chapter 867: Thirteen Forbidden Zones

“Don’t worry, I will not tell anyone,” the headmaster replied softly. Chen Ge nodded lightly. He walked at the front of the pack, so no one could see his expression. Bai Qiulin, who followed closely behind Chen Ge and the headmaster, did not dare intervene. This was the first time that he had seen this demeanor from his boss. He did not know whether Chen Ge was doing this on purpose to gain the old headmaster’s trust or really did trust the old headmaster.

“Boss...” In his mind, Chen Ge was a person who was not afraid of anything. In fact, he would often forget that Chen Ge was a living person. It felt nice staying next to Chen Ge, and it would sometimes create the impression that he had already long left the world. Perhaps because Chen Ge had never treated them as ghosts, they liked the Haunted House and chose it as their new home.

We have been so caught up in ourselves and our past that we have forgotten about the boss. He has been considerate toward us, but we have never once placed ourselves in his shoes.

Bai Qiulin carried the mirror. A terrible life gave him the chance to experience the many facets of life, so he had an appreciation for his current position. Bai Qiulin silently tilted his head to glance at Xu Yin. He wanted to get Xu Yin’s opinion, but he realized with a shock that Xu Yin was looking at Chen Ge, who walked ahead. The depression and pain in his eyes lessened greatly, and blood flowed. Xu Yin’s lips moved like he wanted to console Chen Ge, but once his mouth opened, he realized that he had forgotten how to do that.

“Yin Hong, is there any place scarier than that classroom in our school? Bring me there now.” Chen Ge’s tone did not change much, but there was an unsettling undercurrent to it. The man seemed to be angry, and he planned to vent that anger on other Specters.

“There are thirteen forbidden zones in our school. The crying well behind the field, the classroom whose door is always closed, and the nurse's office that one will enter but never leave—we have been to these three places already.” Yin Hong counted on her fingers. “There are a few other places that are dangerous. Normally, the teachers warned us against going there. Are you sure you want to go there?”

“There are as many as thirteen such places? The students at this school sure are living in a dangerous place.” Chen Ge smiled. It was simple for a normal person to maintain a smile, but to maintain a smile behind the door while being surrounded by Specters and ghosts, this smile took on a different meaning. “Let's not stand around—we'll walk and talk.”

Chen Ge gripped Yin Hong's wrist like he was not holding a Red Specter but a problematic girl who had just gotten into an argument with her parents. He was in a hurry to get to these places, so he did not mind the details. “What are the remaining forbidden zones?”

“The fourth zone is the specimen room with hidden window. This room is on the western side of school as well. The room has many specimens. Due to the uniqueness of the collection, the room does not have a window, but when students pass by the room, they occasionally see a window and a smiling face behind it.” Yin Hong stared at the hand that held her wrist. She wanted to beat the man, but she knew that he was not being malicious toward her, so she did not mind it. This was the first time that she had felt this kind of conflicted emotion.

“They probably put the specimen of a smiling face behind the window.” Chen Ge's tone was no different from normal. “If he shares our values, once we get home, I can even build a wall for him.”

“The fifth zone is the inverted education block's stairs. The education block is at the center of the school, and on the fourth floor, if you look up when you go down the stairs, you'll see someone going down the stairs above you as well. No one knows why.

“The sixth zone is the security booth where the door can't close. After the door is closed, it will open on its own. It's very strange; even the Red Specters can't understand it.

“The seventh zone is the chairs in the female dormitory. This is one of the few dangerous locations.” Yin Hong paid this place special attention. “The fourth floor of the female dormitory is abandoned. There is a red chair placed in the middle of the corridor. There was a girl's name written on it. According to rumors, there was serious bullying in this dormitory, and during dance practice, a few girls forced another girl to jump down the building.”

“Wait a minute.” Chen Ge felt this sounded familiar. “Do you know the name of the girl who jumped?”

“I don’t. I only know that there is a bedroom on the fourth floor to which entry is forbidden. I hear it is stuffed with red chairs and shoes. And the cruelest and scariest Red Specter at this school resides there. Until now, no one has seen her because everyone who did has disappeared. Their hearts were made into candy and their souls into stuffed dolls. Their lingering souls were trapped inside the chairs, and they would never escape.” Just the mention of this Red Specter caused Yin Hong to be afraid as if afraid that she might really appear.

“Is... she that scary?” Chen Ge’s forehead was soaked in sweat. He silently let go of Yin Hong. “Continue.”

“The eighth zone is the deepest room in the male dormitory. The room is locked, and a deep stench comes out from it. According to rumors, a father’s body and a smelly heart are locked inside.

“The ninth zone is also in the male dormitory. I can’t remember the room, but there are hanging carcasses inside the room. They are all hanged while standing. Apparently, that is the punishment for deceit.

“The tenth zone is in the library. When you get close to one of the bookshelves, both Red Specters and ghosts would disappear.

“The eleventh zone is a mirror; bad things will happen when you look at this mirror.

“The twelfth zone is actually just a name and a file. No one knows what the name represents—we only know it’s a male name. All the ghosts that say that name will disappear, so until now, no one has been able to tell what the name represents.

“The last zone is the headmaster’s office. No one knows where this is, and no one has seen the headmaster. All the staff operate on the school’s consciousness, but according to rumors, we used to have a headmaster.”

Yin Hong told Chen Ge the thirteen most dangerous places in the School of the Afterlife. Some were really dangerous, and some Chen Ge did not know how to comment. Because of Zhang Ya, he did not do any missions related to Western Jiujiang Private Academy, but he now suspected that the three-star scenario without a door might be the former self of the School of the Afterlife.

Chapter 868 - Red Spectre Stench!

Chapter 868: Red Spectre Stench!

Yin Hong revealed a lot of information to Chen Ge and confirmed some of his speculation. These thirteen forbidden zones should be the School of the Afterlife's last secrets.

The few overlapping scenarios between School of the Afterlife and Western Jiujiang Private Academy confirmed my previous speculation. The few forbidden zones did not have the presence of Specters because they left with Zhang Ya.

Chen Ge's brain was spinning.

Just now Yin Hong said that a room in the male dormitory was rife with a horrible stench; that room should be the place where my worker once stayed. The room is locked with a father's body and a smelly heart. This description is quite interesting. Could it be that the 'stench' currently with me is still not complete? He has locked his heart together with his father's body?

Only a Red Specter would have their own 'heart'. Yin Hong's words had aroused Chen Ge's attention. In Chen Ge's mind, even though Western Jiujiang Private Academy was deemed a three-star scenario, it was categorized that way because of Zhang Ya.

Looks like I underestimated that scenario.

Chen Ge was reminded of his fight with the gangsters outside the school. The gangsters had a stench stuck to them, and other Specters stayed away from them, but the boy with the horrible smell seemed to enjoy them.

No wonder he is so comfortable at this school. Previously, in Coffin Village and Li Wan City, other Specters evolved through the consumption of ghosts, but he was the only exception.

Chen Ge anticipated the surprise that the boy could bring him. The male dormitory was a forbidden zone for others, but for him, it was like a visit to his employee's house.

The School of the Afterlife keeps changing. If the boy's heart is really locked in the deepest part of the dormitory, I shall help him get it back. But the premise is that he is willing to take his own heart back.

The boy had locked his heart up with his father's body. Chen Ge had no idea why he did that. If the boy wished to forget about the past and live as a happy fatty, then Chen Ge would not force him. Chen Ge ran to the center of the school with Yin Hong leading the place. The closer they got to the center, the more students they saw.

Most students followed the warning in the announcement and stayed quietly in the classrooms, but there were some that were wandering about as well, and they were mostly troublemakers. That might not be completely true, but that was what Chen Ge believed. Whenever he ran into these students, he would go talk to them. Sometimes one had to admit Chen Ge was a good persuader. After a series of 'heart-to-heart' exchanges, many students would have tears of regret, and most of them chose to join Chen Ge's group.

There was a small group who said that they supported Chen Ge verbally but since they had something else to do, that it was not convenient for them to follow Chen Ge. They left in a hurry.

Travelling from the western part of the school to the center, the group behind Chen Ge grew, and he successfully gained the school's attention. The blood sun burst through the fog and pressed down on the school. As the distance closed, this was the first time Chen Ge saw the sun for what it was. It was actually a giant red eye, the bloodshot pupil had blood vessels running through it, and the eye was reflecting many despairing faces.

Each human face should represent a despairing lingering spirit, but there are so many of them.

Chen Ge felt like Jiujiang city should not have so many spirits—this monster had perhaps lured in spirits from other place like the cursed hospital. It was situated in the middle of the two cities but was categorized by the black phone as part of Jiujiang.

The four-star scenarios have shown signs that they influence the areas around them, so just how scary will five-star scenarios be?

Outside the window, the eye above the school was huge. The human faces in it were howling and screeching, like they were afraid of something.

The school's consciousness keeps staring at the blood city. What kind of monster is hiding there? What is it afraid of?

The blood city slowly approached. It appeared like it wished to swallow the School of the Afterlife like a red wave.

This is strange. I feel like the city is alive...

"Here we are." When Chen Ge was thinking, Yin Hong had led them to the vicinity of the student dormitory. She pulled on Chen Ge's sleeve and said, "All the buildings in the school are joined together to form a large block. The left side is the education block, and the right is the dormitories. If you look closer, you should notice the difference from the color on the walls."

"Since we're here, let's go take a look." Other than Chang Wenyu and the painter, Chen Ge was not afraid of anyone. He had completed the mission given by Chang Wenyu and more. There were so many people gathered around him, and it was only time he gained the school's approval. "We will go take a look at the male dormitory first, the room that you mentioned gave off a horrible smell."

"You sure have a strange request. Initially I thought you were acting, like you were pretending not to be afraid, but I now realize how wrong I was. You are enjoying this too much." Yin Hong had a strange expression like a sick person meeting a madman.

"The adult world is complicated—you won't understand it if I try to explain. Please lead the way."

Chen Ge summoned the boy with the smell. This large boy who had an air of stench around him narrowed his eyes. He hugged his belly and looked for all the world to be a harmless person.

Ever since he showed up at Chen Ge's Haunted House, he had been very tame. Chen Ge knew that the term tame did not suit a Specter, but that was how he felt. He worked without complaint, and even when he was bullied, he would smile. He rushed ahead whenever there was trouble even though his kindness might sometimes turn into trouble.

Afraid of being the source of visitors' complaints, he often hid at the corners, and whenever the visitors appeared, he would go and hide, afraid that his smell might chase them away. Who would have thought such a kind employee might be a hidden Red Specter who had locked up his real heart with his father's body?

"The boy has no corporeal form; this kind of Specter can become a Red Specter, huh? Oh well, we'll know when we get there." Chen Ge and Yin Hong turned into the male dormitory. Probably because it was still time for class, there were no students around, and a thin layer of blood fog permeated the area. It felt like a window had been broken, and it had not been fixed. They walked down the corridor and walked down the stairs to the fourth floor before stopping before a door that was sealed by wooden beams.

"The school sealed up this place, and no one has entered since. No one knows what is behind this. If you open this door recklessly, you might release something incredibly horrifying." Even Yin Hong gave Chen Ge a warning, which proved that this place was very dangerous to the students.

"It'll be fine, trust me." Chen Ge glanced at the 'boy' who was still spacing out and signaled for his employees to take down the wooden planks.

Chapter 869 - Who Will Be Next?

Chapter 869: Who Will Be Next?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

As the wooden boards fell off one by one, the boy who stood next to Chen Ge slowly transformed. The large head slowly turned, and the small eyes that were squeezed behind the folds of fat stared straight down the corridor. The corridor sealed by the wooden boards was different from the other corridors in the School of the Afterlife. There was no blood fog, and the walls and cement floor looked no different from a normal corridor in real life.

Yin Hong saw the shift in Chen Ge's eyes and whispered to explain, "All the students here know that this place is forbidden, so they do not come here. Therefore, it's only natural for this corridor to have retained its previous state."

...

"The world behind the door is all red, so how could there be somewhere that is similar to real life? The only explanation is the school meant to keep it this way." Removing the last board, the fog dispersed. Chen Ge and the others rushed in, but only the boy with the smell stood where he was.

"Have you been reminded of something?" Chen Ge wanted to tap the boy's shoulder, but his hand phased through his body. The honest fatty was just a ball of smelly air, unlike other Specters. The boy did not answer. His round body slowly moved down the corridor. He walked very slowly like he was afraid.

Why would he be afraid? Does he not wish to see his real self, or is he unwilling to face the memory in his heart?

Chen Ge did not know how to console the boy. He did not urge him. If the boy showed any clear sign of resistance, he would take him out of there immediately. There was no light in the corridor, and all the windows were sealed. This place was completely isolated from the rest of the school. The school did not seem like it liked other people going there—this was his private place.

"I've only heard of this place from the teachers. I didn't expect things here to appear so normal." Yin Hong was curious and walked at the front. After a small jog, she stopped. "This room is the dormitory that I mentioned earlier. The students who stayed here all said that they would see something standing next to their bed at midnight. His feet stepped on the ground, but there was a noose around his neck. His face was green as he stared at one of the beds. If you met his gaze, you would disappear."

"Is the door locked?" Chen Ge reached out to push at the door.

"Hey! Did you not hear me? Can you give me some reaction? I'm telling you something scary!" Yin Hong was not satisfied with Chen Ge's attitude. "I know you are brave, but these few forbidden zones are the places where the teachers forbade the students from coming. For all newcomers, the first day of class is for getting to know where they can go and where they can't go."

"The door isn't locked. Xu Yin, come with me." Chen Ge completely ignored Yin Hong. While the girl was speaking, he had pushed the door open a sliver.

"You really want to die, don't you! Listen to me, there are things more painful than death in this world, so don't think that..." Yin Hong was the coagulation of negative emotions in Yin Bai. She had to face all the negative emotions and cruel memories. Therefore, she had slowly turned into a monster, but due to what had happened earlier, she had stopped hiding herself before Chen Ge. She probably felt close to Chen Ge, believing they were the same type of person.

Chen Ge noticed the change in Yin Hong, too, but he did not pay it any attention. Yin Hong was the negative memory of Lee Xueyin. He thought that he would be closer to Yin Bai unless the ghost fetus was the carrier of the good memories and he was the one who shouldered all the pain. But that was clearly impossible. He did not think much of it and attributed Yin Hong's change to his sparkling personality.

With Xu Yin's agreement, Chen Ge pushed the bedroom door open. A faded smell of mildew drifted out. Having gotten used to the smell of blood, this smell of mildew felt strangely familiar.

"This place is so messy." Dirty clothes and trash littered the room. The luggage and blankets were strewn everywhere like a tornado had just hit the place.

"Did you discover anything?" The headmaster had been following behind Chen Ge like he was worried Chen Ge might do something crazy. “Shall we leave? This is the school’s forbidden zone; we’d better not stay here for too long.”

“Wait a minute.” Chen Ge stood in the middle of the room and lifted his head to look at the roof. There were nails pinned to the ceiling painted white. From each nail, a tattered cloth was dangling. The cloths of many colors dangled downward. The ceiling was like a white sea, and the red cloths were like corals living on the sea floor. Reaching out to pull at one of them, Chen Ge tugged at it lightly. “This cloth is unable to support a person’s weight. They can’t be used to hang a person.”

“I feel more like they are used to fix mosquito nets. How come your mind goes straight to hanging?” The old headmaster stood at the door. “This room is not big; there probably aren’t any secrets here. The school’s consciousness has preserved this place probably because this place is meaningful to it.”

“Boss, look at this.” Bai Qiulin held the mirror with one hand, and his other pointed at the edge of the iron bedframe. The bed had a rope tied to it, and at the other end of the rope was a doll with black hair and a name.

“This looks like the doll that Zhang Ya once gifted me. Has Zhang Ya been here to help the hanging student before?” Looking at the items in the room, Chen Ge could not find the answer. Chen Ge opened the comic and summoned the hanging student. Normally, in the haunted house, the hanging man would hide in the mannequin that Chen Ge had specially made for him. He was a normal Specter, not even as unique as the stench.

The pages turned, and a thin boy appeared in the room. There was an obvious rope mark around his neck, and his neck was dislocated from his shoulders, giving him a strange look.

“You remember this room, yes?” Chen Ge asked softly. The confusion in the student’s eyes slowly disappeared—he was like a spooked kitten. He rushed toward one of the beds and tossed all the trash away. He found a black envelope under the mattress, and on it, a sentence was written.

‘Who will be next?’

The envelope was puffy like it was stuffed with something. The boy held the envelope tightly with both hands. Fear rose in his heart; he was still very afraid.

“Can I talk a look at that letter?” Chen Ge wondered what the hanging man had experienced, why their dormitory room was filled with dolls crafted by Zhang Ya.

The boy shook his head with determination. He put the black envelope away and rushed back into the comic.

“The envelope looks like a curse, but there is nothing that scares me.” Since his worker refused to share, Chen Ge would not force it. He inspected the room again and then replaced everything before leading everyone deeper into the male dormitory.

The further they went into the dormitory, the thicker the stench in the air. It was like trash had been piled inside for years without anyone to deal with it. Xu Yin and Yin Hong walked at the front while Chen Ge and the boy with the stench walked in the middle. The boy tried his best to hold in the smell like he was worried that it might push Chen Ge away from him. This boy had always been like this; he had a body that would naturally give off a bad stench, but his heart was unimaginably pure.

“If you don’t feel well, we can stop here,” Chen Ge said softly. He kept interacting with the boy. He rarely forced his workers to do things that they did not want to do. The cheeks with folds of fat swung left and right. The boy rejected Chen Ge, but the further they went down the corridor, the more nervous the expression on his face became.

“Don’t force yourself. Compared to the truth, I’d rather you live a happy life. You didn’t feel much happiness when you were alive, and I don’t want you to get tortured after death. That would just be too sad.”

Several minutes later, they reached the end of the corridor. Many students held their noses—this place was too smelly. The stench was hard to describe. It was no longer the decaying smell of trash. It seemed like it would permeate through people’s skin to make people feel disgusted from within. None of the ‘people’ could stand this; only the boy with the stench did not feel uncomfortable. His wavering body even coagulated like the stench there was originally part of his body. He had once abandoned it, but now the smell was gathering around him. The smell around the boy was heaviest, and the students stayed away from him. This was like when he was still at school; no one was willing to be his friend, and everyone stayed away from him. He was made a laughingstock, a walking joke.

“Are you alright?” Chen Ge’s hand landed lightly on the boy’s shoulder. As the body materialized, Chen Ge’s hand did not phase through the boy’s body anymore. This was the first time that he had felt the boy’s body temperature—it was bone-chillingly cold, completely different from his appearance. No matter where the others chose to hide, Chen Ge would stand beside the boy. The reason was simple—he was his worker. Chen Ge actually had many workers, but he did not ignore their personal feelings even though there were so many of them. Every worker was important to Chen Ge because he knew, no matter what happened, those specters treated the Haunted House as their home, and it was the only place they belonged.

“Don’t be afraid. No matter what happens, I will face it with you. You have many friends now. We will be by your side, so you don’t need to face these things alone anymore.” Chen Ge wanted to touch the boy’s head, but he realized that the boy was too tall, and he could not reach it. Just as he was about to pull away, the large and tall boy took great difficulty to bend over, and the small eyes hidden in his face blinked several times.

Chen Ge smiled. He just wanted to console him. He patted the boy on his shoulders, stood beside him, and did not move away.

“There is a reason this place is forbidden. If we unleash the thing inside it, all of us will be in trouble.” A student that had joined them later whispered some advice. Many people were talking, and even the old headmaster came over to tell Chen Ge to be careful. Everyone saw Chen Ge as the center of the team, and they would listen to his command. But to everyone’s surprise, Chen Ge finally led the boy with the stench to the door and handed the choice over to him. “Whether we open the door or leave, it’s your choice.”

Many students were speculating about the two’s relationship. Only Bai Qiulin and Xu Yin were different; they felt touched.

Standing at the end of the corridor, the boy with the ugly appearance stood where he was like he was petrified. He raised his arm to grab the doorknob, but he lacked the courage to turn it. Turning back to look, he was standing at the darkest part of the corridor. This brought some memories. Many times in the past, he had wished to escape this room, but whenever he saw the long corridor leading away from it and the gauntlet of faces that would be staring at him, he would lose his courage. This small room was a place that belonged to him fully; it was the place that had made him feel the safest until his respected father died in the room.

The stench in the air thickened a lot. The boy hesitated for a long time before tightening his grip to push the door open. A stinging stench rushed out from the room, and many people subconsciously stepped away. Only Chen Ge, Xu Yin, and the boy were left at the door. Trash littered the room, much of which had decayed until its shape could not be recognized. Once the door opened, the trash spilled out into the corridor. There was not even a spot for them to stand inside the room.

The boy walked into the room. He stepped on the trash with his eyes glued to the armoire in the corner of the room. Chen Ge knew what was inside it. He blocked the people behind him so that they would not disturb the boy.

The room was familiar to the boy. He stopped next to his bed. He waved his arms to clear away the trash that sat on the bedsheet and look at the mattress that hid underneath it. The broken mattress was covered with dark red stains. With a shaking body, the thing that he had been avoiding suddenly appeared before him.

The red on the mattress reflected in his eyes, causing the red in his eyes to deepen. Strange noises elicited from his throat. It was as if he had not spoken for a long time and had forgotten how to phrase a sentence. In the end, he gripped the mattress with both hands as he tried to tear it open. Pieces of mattress with stains fluttered around the room like dark snow. The boy stood next to the bed as memories flashed within his mind. The voice in his throat grew louder, and it sounded like both anger and helpless pleading.

Seeing the helpless boy in the room, Chen Ge slowly closed the door. The boy probably did not want others to see him like that.

In the dirty and cramped room, only the boy and Chen Ge were left. Standing quietly beside the door, Chen Ge allowed the boy to vent his emotions. He felt like he should be there to accompany him. The stench in the room could make a person go mad. The boy calmed down after a long time, but there was change to his little eyes. They were filled with black and red blood vessels.

Pudgy hands gripped the armoire, and he slowly opened the door.

To Chen Ge's surprise, the stench in the room did not increase, and an adult body wrapped in cling wrap did not fall out.

The boy with the smell stood before the armoire and stared at it dumbly. Chen Ge was curious. He slowly approached the armoire, but when he saw the thing inside it, shock appeared on his face. There was a short, fat, ugly boy curled up in the corner. The boy was covered in plastic wrap, and there was a clear wound around his heart and a faded mark around the neck.

Is this the boy from back then?

The boy's fists were clenched tight, and they did not release after death. His left hand was holding a picture, and the right hand was holding a piece of someone's shirt. The shirt was an adult's shirt. The appearance of the boy meant that the diary that could be found in Chen Ge's Haunted House was false.

The truth is not what I expected. What really happened here?

The boy stood quietly before the armoire. He looked at the boy inside the armoire, and a bitter smile appeared on his round face. He pulled back the plastic wrap on the child's arm and took the picture in the child's palm. It was the picture of a father and his son. In the picture, everyone smiled brightly. Who would have thought that things would end up like this?

A roar erupted from his throat. The boy's hands hardened, and he tore the picture that he had held until death into small pieces. As the picture was torn, wounds started to surface on the body of the boy in the armoire that were caused by domestic violence.

Blood leaked under the plastic wrap. The adult in the picture was crying, but the boy was clapping and laughing. When the picture was completely torn, the boy in the armoire had turned fully red, and the layers of plastic wrap over him started to crack.

“Wu...” The boy with the smell sounded like he was calling someone’s name. It sounded like a goodbye and a summon. He scattered the torn picture on the ground. With red in his eyes, he turned to look at Chen Ge before whispering something. Chen Ge could not hear him clearly.

As he was about to ask the boy to repeat himself, the boy with the smell stepped into the armoire. The smell lightened, blood fog flowed into the room, and blood vessels grew and spread through the room with the armoire as the center. This room had originally looked like real life, but in just few minutes, blood vessels crawled all over the wall. This was how a place should look like behind the door.

“All the smell has gathered inside the armoire?” The boy squeezed his large body inside the armoire—accompanying him was the roomful of stench. When the stench disappeared fully, a strange sound came from the armoire. Chen Ge turned toward it, and a small fatty in red looked back at him.

“Are you the boy with the smell?” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes to study the boy. “What’s your name?”

Chen Ge did not know what had happened to him. The boy had probably put down his past and found his heart. Everything began anew, and Chen Ge felt like he could not refer to the boy as the one with the smell anymore—he should have his own name. The fatty in the armoire did not speak. He was ugly but not inapproachable.

“Don’t you remember me? I am our Haunted House’s boss—Chen Ge!”

The boy still did not speak. He just continued to stare at Chen Ge like he was trying to imprint his face in his mind. The communication failed. Chen Ge reached out to pull the boy out of the armoire, but the boy showed no reaction.

“Alright, one should pick their own road. I will not force you to do anything. I am glad to have known you. If you run into any problems that you can’t solve in the future, come and find me in Western Jiujiang’s Haunted House.” Chen Ge had enough power to give a Red Specter such a promise. He said that and turned to walk out the room. But as he did so, there came another sound from the armoire. Chen Ge turned back to look. The fatty boy jumped out from the armoire. The plastic wrap clung to him as he followed closely behind Chen Ge, like he was afraid of staying in the room alone.

“No matter what you choose, I will understand. If you are willing to return, the door to the Haunted House is always open. But you will have to retake the employee exam. Those who fail cannot interact with the visitors.” Chen Ge had actually given up a moment earlier, but to his surprise, the boy who found his heart was still willing to follow him. They walked out of the room. The people outside were still curious about the sudden disappearance of the smell until they saw the red fatty behind Chen Ge.

“Another Red Specter?” Everyone including the headmaster was shocked.

“Do you know this boy?” Yin Hong nudged Bai Qiulin lightly and showed a cute, innocent face.

“He does look familiar...” Bai Qiulin had no idea what was going on, but if it was related to his boss, he did not think that anything could be shocking anymore. The stench turned into a red fatty, and he was so much more powerful than before, but he refused to communicate with anyone. It was unclear whether he had lost his ability to speak or was too afraid to speak.

“Come, we’ve explored the male dormitory, so we should go to the female dormitory.” Chen Ge’s eyes moved away from the boy, thinking about something else. There had once been a door pusher in Western Jiujiang Private Academy, which explained why the school would appear behind the door, and the male dormitory that he was in should be the reflection of the Private Academy when the door pusher died. The School of the Afterlife expanded madly but chose to retain the few important locales. This should be the result of the lingering consciousness of the door pusher.

Western Jiujiang Private Academy has a serious management problem. No wonder it was abandoned in the end. Other than the stench, the hanging man, and Zhang Ya, there was a door pusher who was cornered. Many students were bullied here, so for them, this school was already hell.

As Chen Ge looked at the corridor that was slowly dyed red, a thought appeared in his mind.

To gain the school’s approval, I must change the school itself because this entire school is a nightmare for all the despairing children.

Chen Ge shook his head. He decided to take it slow.

The scenario related to the stench has been preserved, so the scenario related to Zhang Ya might be preserved behind the door as well. As the boy entered his corresponding scenario behind the door, his power grew tremendously. If I return to Zhang Ya's scenario, will that help her?

Chen Ge knew very well that Zhang Ya was caught in a crucial moment, and he needed to try his best to help her.

Chapter 872: I Was the First to Step Forward

Blood fog rushed into the male dormitory. The forbidden zone that was isolated by the school's consciousness was heavily damaged. The forgotten memory was regained, blood vessels climbed all over the old walls, and this place turned into just like everywhere else in the school.

"The other side is the female dormitory; the place was made forbidden by the school, and no one has been in there." Yin Hong stood one meter away from Chen Ge. "I'd advise you not to go there. The legend about the female dormitory and the headmaster's story are the two big forbidden taboos in the school. Even the school has chosen to forget about them."

"It's okay. I have confidence." Chen Ge's voice was scarily calm.

"You are just an outsider; do you think that you know the school better than me? You were lucky in the male dormitory, but your luck won't last forever. Your actions in the male dormitory have caused some changes. The school's consciousness is slowly being influenced. If you enter the forbidden zone in the female dormitory, it might trigger the school's consciousness and turn the entire school against you," Yin Hong advised quietly.

She was originally the kind who preferred things to be as chaotic as possible, but she was completely different in front of Chen Ge. This man did not need any 'probing' to head toward the most dangerous and scariest 'endless abyss'. If she did not stop him, she would be dragged down into it as well.

"You think you understand the school's consciousness, but after so many years, there has not been a new door pusher. This proves that you have misunderstood the school,” Chen Ge said.

“We don’t understand the school?” Yin Hong pouted. “The school’s consciousness is made up of the students’ collective consciousness. We are a part of the school, and the school is us; how can we not understand ourselves?”

“Sometimes the person that understand you the most is not yourself.” Chen Ge’s eyes moved between Yin Hong and Yin Bai.

“Chen Ge, we have created such a big commotion, which will attract the school’s attention. If you continue like this, it will be hard for us to escape unnoticed.” The old headmaster was worried. He felt like the lower profile they kept, the better, but obviously, Chen Ge thought differently.

“Soon, the school will be very busy. Furthermore, everything that we’ve done is to help it. It will understand soon enough.” Chen Ge said something that surprised everyone and headed down the other direction without turning back.

Compared to the male dormitory, he anticipated the female dormitory more. The reason was simple, because it might contain something that Zhang Ya lost. At the corner of the corridor, before Chen Ge stepped into the female dormitory, footsteps came from the other side of the corridor, and from upstairs, many people seemed to be hurrying their way. The influence caused by the opening of the male dormitory was far bigger than Chen Ge had expected.

The blood fog expanded, and shadows appeared in the fog.

“Xu Yin.” Chen Ge took a step back to stand next to Xu Yin and the headless woman. “So many people want to stop me? Is the female dormitory that important?”

The bigger the school’s reaction, the greater the possibility there was something wrong with the female dormitory. Zhang Ya’s secret might be hidden there. This extraordinary Greater Red Specter seemed to have a special connection with the School of the Afterlife. Standing at the crossroads between two corridors, Chen Ge lifted his head to look. From the left side, the staff were rushing over, and from the right were the senior students who were dressed in deep-colored uniform. From the front, normal students were coming from the normal classrooms.

“Are you the one who took down the wooden boards to the male dormitory?" one of the teachers demanded harshly.

"Yes." Chen Ge did not deny it.

"Don't you know the place is forbidden? Students are not allowed to enter it; not even the teachers are allowed entry."

"I do." Chen Ge's disregard for the rules completely angered the teacher.

"You know the rules, yet you..."

"I only went there to claim the thing that my friend lost. You said I have broken the rules, but who made the rule that no one can enter the forbidden zone, and who decided that the place is forbidden?" From the beginning, Chen Ge did not think that he had done anything wrong. He planned to turn this whole school from its basis. In comparison, the painter and Chang Wenyu were making small skirmishes, but for now, no one could tell what Chen Ge was planning. Even if someone did, they would not have believed it.

"You are speculating about the school's consciousness?" The second person who spoke Chen Ge recognized; it was Mr. Lei.

"If it is wrong, why can't I be suspicious about it? The school's consciousness is the collective consciousness of all the students here, but sometimes, the majority is not right. Since none of you dare question it, I will do it." Chen Ge was like a traveler who lit a candle in the dark. He was about to pave a new road for others to follow.

"Do you know what you're talking about?" Mr. Lei and the other teachers slowly approached Chen Ge, and the atmosphere turned heavy.

"I know what I am talking about, and I know what I'm doing. I just wish to create a path of change for the rest of you before I end up broken." Chen Ge looked at the students who hurried over. "Are you really happy here? At this school made from despairing students, do you feel any warmth from the strength of numbers? You are merely pushing yourselves deeper into the abyss! I see some of you have turned from victims into bullies. You have done what you hated the most; you are slowly turning into the person that once disgusted you the most. The scariest thing is, if you dare step forth to say no, that is seen as a resistance against the whole school, and that brave person will be bulldozed until he disappears."

“You make this sound too serious.” Mr. Lei frowned. He felt like Chen Ge was different from the other students and would be hard to educate.

“As the teachers here, you don’t realize the gravity of the situation. That proves how serious the situation is.” Being protected by two Red Specters, Chen Ge was not afraid to speak. He ignored Mr. Lei and turned to the students. “No matter what you remember of your lives, every one of you has a gray past; only those with despair can enter this world behind the door. I do not know the meaning of the door’s presence, but the door-pusher opened the door because he is looking for salvation behind the door.”

Chen Ge did not raise his voice, but he made sure everyone could listen to his words. “This school was not meant to turn into something like it. It is a home for you, a place to help you walk out from despair. But take a look for yourselves. Does this place look like a sanctuary that calms one’s soul?”

The students did not expect Chen Ge to say something like that. Many of them had missing memories; they were like walking zombies at the school.

“You can take your time to digest what I said. I know that changing everyone’s mind will be difficult, but I will not give up.” Chen Ge did not know what fear was. From the beginning, he never did plan to obtain the school’s approval but rather change the school’s consciousness.

Chapter 873 - Entering the Female Dormitory

Chapter 873: Entering the Female Dormitory

Chen Ge's eyes swept over every student's face before he raised his student ID above his head. "I am also a member of this school, but I have limited power alone. I can't change all of you, but I will try my best to gain the approval from even one more person."

What he said had never been heard from the staff of the school before. At this school, students were slowly getting numb—they had no idea what they wanted. The school's consciousness was made up from every one of them, but for the consciousness, each one of them was so insignificant. Unable to change, powerless to struggle, they could only assimilate to survive under the school's consciousness. Chen Ge said a lot, but it was impossible to change everyone's mind with a few words. Still, it was not all for naught. Some of the students were thinking; some of their expressions changed like they were reminded of something painful.

"People often warn us against becoming complacent. Warmth comes from hiding in one's shell. No one cares what the shell is because, no matter what, with the protection of the shell, the person inside will not be harmed, but is that true?" Chen Ge pointed at the blood fog that travelled down the corridor. "While you've been hiding inside the shell in silence, the poison outside has already leaked into the shell and permeated into your body. When you realized it, it was already too late. It is too late for salvation, and hope has become despair. You can only watch your body being consumed little by little, and the shell that you are unwilling to walk out of will become your tomb."

Taking a step forward, Chen Ge walked toward the female dormitory. The long team behind him comprised the people that supported him. Even Mr. Lei did not dare take them too lightly. If they fought head on, their chance of victory was small. After all, the real owner of this school was the despairing students.

There are still many secrets hidden at this school, but I don't have time to explore them anymore. Before the fight between Chang Wenyu and the painter reaches the end, I have to gather more power.

Chen Ge did not care about the forbidden zones; he knew that the place was hiding Zhang Ya's past. Perhaps when the door at Western Jiujiang Private Academy was pushed open, Zhang Ya had already been there, and she had stayed in the female dormitory.

Turning souls into candy, spirits into dolls, and trapping Specters inside chair, that does sound like Zhang Ya, but I believe she had her reasons.

Chen Ge led Xu Yin and the headless woman and stopped before the students who blocked his way.

"I do not ask that you support me, but if you think I do make sense, if you don't feel happiness at this school and have been bullied, please do not stop me."

These people heard what Chen Ge said for the first time in their lives. After all, in this school, it was rare for someone to hold onto hope. Yet, this man wanted the despairing souls to feel happiness and find salvation? That was preposterous in their mind. These seniors in dark-colored uniforms had given up such thoughts a long time ago. The longer they stayed at the school, the more they understood that there was no hope there. This was a nightmare filled with despair that they could not escape from.

It was unclear who first took a step to the side, but more people followed, moving to open a path. It was unclear whether they believed him or were afraid of the Red Specters behind Chen Ge—perhaps it was both. When the seniors retreated, something that sounded like thunder came from outside the school. The surrounding fog gathered around Chen Ge and stuck to his body. It seemed to wish to consume him but realized that Chen Ge was not a Specter, so it could not enter his body.

"Something has changed with the school's consciousness. Is it because I have gained more of the students' approval?" Chen Ge knew full well that the school's consciousness was made up from the students, and changing the students' mind was changing the school's mind.

The students did not stop Chen Ge, and that was outside Mr. Lei's expectation. Seeing that Chen Ge was about to leave, he yelled, "The female dormitory is a forbidden zone. Since you said that you are doing this for the students, trespassing into the forbidden zone is your way of doing that, is it? Trespassing will lead to salvation?"

Chen Ge ignored him, and that caused Mr. Lei to get angrier. "The scariest monsters and the strongest curses are hiding in the forbidden zones. Not only will trespassing into them harm you, it will harm everyone! They trust you that much, but you're leading them to their death!"

The staff were the school's consciousness' executioner. They would stop Chen Ge, which was within Chen Ge's expectations.

Chen Ge stopped and turned to look at Mr. Lei. "Then, do you dare to make a bet with me? If I can walk out of this forbidden zone safely, do not come and block me anymore and say things like I will harm the others."

"What if you lose?" Mr. Lei had a fiery temper, but he had toned down a lot before Chen Ge.

"If I lose, it means that I will have died inside the forbidden zone; the bet would be null and void." Chen Ge made sense. Before Mr. Lei answered, he walked away.

Walking past the seniors, Chen Ge entered the female dormitory and walked to the fourth floor. The road ahead was blocked by a bunch of trash, and a wooden board stood next to it, barring people from entry. Looking through the gap, Chen Ge saw a faded red chair placed in the middle of the corridor. The chair was placed there like there was someone sitting there.

"Come, let's go take a look." The scene that he saw was similar to the scenario in Western Jiujiang Private Academy.

"Looks like I've come to the right place." Everyone had their secrets, including Zhang Ya. There were many secrets around her, and the more Chen Ge interacted with her, the more curious he became. "Arrestingly beautiful and impossibly strong with a mysterious past, such a girl has found me..."

Chen Ge had Xu Yin and Bai Qiulin clear away the trash, and they entered the fourth floor of the female dormitory.

They only took a few steps when Chen Ge felt a tug on his shoulder.

He turned back to see Xu Yin looking at him.

“What’s wrong?” After finding his heart, Xu Yin had become more expressive, and he moved to stand before Chen Ge. Without saying a word, Chen Ge could understand what he meant. This place made him feel danger, so he volunteered to lead the way.

Chapter 874: What Did the Girl See?

Thick blood fog rolled into the corridor following Chen Ge. The red chair in the distance flickered in and out of existence, and they could hear pleading and cries in their ears.

“How many people have died in this corridor? Just walking down it feel so creepy,” the headmaster said softly. Once he opened his mouth, cold air rushed into his throat.

“I have no idea.” Chen Ge shook his head. He was slowly getting close to Zhang Ya’s secret. “Just how did an innocent girl turn into a Greater Red Specter? The answer to that should be found here.”

The pleading in their ears grew. Blood dripped, and small blood vessels surfaced on the walls. This corridor felt like the intestine of a beast.

“Chen Ge, something feels off.” The old headmaster guarded Yin Hong and Yin Bai. He wanted to say something more, but Yin Hong got to it first.

“This place makes me feel uncomfortable. There’s a jolt in my heart. We’d better stop here.”

A Red Specter’s heart was different from that of a normal person. Their heart was their deepest resentment. If there was shaking to their heart, it meant that their existence was threatened, and they were inside a very dangerous situation.

“Boss, I also feel a numbness coming over me.” Bai Qiulin’s hand that placed in his pocket was shaking. The last time that he had experienced this was when he was with the shadow in Li Wan City.

“Don’t panic.” Of everyone there, only Chen Ge managed to keep his calm. His eyes stared at the chair down the hall. Every time he blinked, the distance between him and the chair seemed to close. This felt so familiar, just like the first time he went to Western Jiujiang Private Academy.

“Be careful of that chair!” Yin Hong warned again. The chair was not that scary, but it seemed to represent something that could elicit the fear in people’s heart.

“The pleading sounds like it comes from the chair. Is the rumor at this school real?” The seniors and staff waited at the entrance to the female dormitory, and they saw this. Blood fog drifted, and the red chair was slowly approaching. No one had been inside there before, and all their hearts were jumping. The scariest legend at the school was before them. No one knew what would happen next—everyone held their breath.

“Save me... Save me...” A girl’s voice became clearer. As the chair grew close, the people saw the faded image of a girl sitting on the chair with venom in her eyes.

“She seems to be looking for a scapegoat.” Even Red Specters did not scare the girl on the chair. Her expression kept twisting as she came at the group.

“What is it? We can see it but can’t sense it. She doesn’t look like a Specter or a lingering spirit. This is strange.” Not only did Chen Ge feel that, all the Red Specters around him felt it. The girl on the chair seemed to melt into the corridor. As the girl got closer, the corridor felt as if it was shortening like a mouth that was trying to consume everyone.

“Be careful!” Cries for help mixed in the thick blood. Everyone had a bad feeling.

“Mr. Lei, are we going to just stand here?” a female teacher asked. “What if something happens to them? Many students follow him.”

“Then you go in and get them to come out. I won’t stop you.” Mr. Lei glared at her. “Before I joined this school, the forbidden zones were here. These are where the most dangerous secrets at this school are hidden. Do you know why they are secrets?”

The female teacher did not look that relaxed. She shook her head.

“They are secrets because once you know what they are, you have to pay something back in return, something like death or becoming part of the secret yourself.” Mr. Lei was a clever person, or else he would not have survived for so long at the school. “Go and call for help. Get some bricks and be prepared to seal up this place.”

“Sir, something is banging against the school from outside. There are openings everywhere. We don’t have enough manpower to order around anymore.”

“There is no other option. Just follow my order.”

“There is no need to disperse the students here?”

“No, I want them to see for themselves the death of that Chen Ge inside the forbidden zone. That way, no one will go against the school anymore, and no one will believe him.” Mr. Lei retreated to the crowd. “There are too many difficult students at this school. It is time for a wake-up call.”

“But is this really the correct thing to do?” The female teacher wanted to change his mind.

“It’s too late to anything else. When they saw the chair, the ending was decided. Be it Specters or Red Specters, once they are targeted by the monsters locked in the chair, unless they can escape from this school, the only ending is death.” Mr. Lei obviously knew something, but he did not elaborate. However, there was a pain in his eyes like he had once lost someone important to this. “This female dormitory is a man-eating monster. No one who has entered it has left.”

Through the crowd, Mr. Lei looked down the corridor. The red chair was rapidly moving toward Chen Ge.

“Resistance will lead to more change, and there are monsters inside the rooms along the corridor. Once he makes his move, everyone will be eaten until there is nothing left.” Mr. Lei’s eyes had seen the result. He yelled to the students behind him, “Get back! This place will soon...”

He had not finished when Mr. Lei saw the strange expression on the female teacher beside him. He turned and saw the chair finally appear before Chen Ge. But then, the girl on the chair suddenly screamed and ran down the corridor faster than the speed she came.

“That’s impossible!” Mr. Lei’s hand froze in midair. He walked to the female dormitory entrance and moved the trash away to see. The scream of the girl alerted all the monsters in the corridor, but unlike what Mr. Lei expected, the scene where Chen Ge's group was torn into pieces did not happen. Instead, the doors along the corridor slammed shut, and he even heard some being locked.

"What did the girl on the chair see?" Mr. Lei did not get it, nor did the others following Chen Ge. However, Chen Ge himself knew what had happened after several seconds.

"The girl on the chair probably sensed Zhang Ya's presence. That is the only explanation." Chen Ge turned to look at his shadow. "Only the lingering scent on me can scare her away like that. Will Zhang Ya awaken soon?"

Chapter 875 - Zhang Ya's Present

Chapter 875: Zhang Ya's Present

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge firmly believed that there was something important to Zhang Ya hidden in this school. The boy with the stench was a good example. After he found his heart in the male dormitory, he had drastically changed. If Chen Ge could find the thing Zhang Ya had lost, perhaps she would wake up, and then he would have the support to do the things he really wanted to.

“Chen Ge, why did the girl leave just like that?” The old headmaster was confused. The atmosphere in the corridor was strange, but the suffocating presence had lessened a lot.

“Because she was afraid,” Chen Ge said. He was calm like everything was within his control. Seeing that, the students around him felt that they had made the right choice.

“I will lead the way.” Yin Hong was more curious about Chen Ge. Just now, she had been very close to Chen Ge, so she had clearly seen the girl on the chair suddenly retreat after seeing Chen Ge. In other words, the girl was not afraid of Xu Yin who guarded Chen Ge but Chen Ge himself.

“Just stand beside me. From the monsters’ reaction, they don’t seem to be afraid of Red Specters.” Chen Ge volunteered to stay in front. Yin Hong was trying to analyze the meaning behind Chen Ge’s words.

They are not afraid of Red Specters, so this man had me stand beside him. Does that mean that he is more powerful than a Red Specter?

Yin Hong looked Chen Ge, who appeared calm, and a beautiful misunderstanding was formed.

In my eyes, he is just a normal person. Could I be wrong? Is he not weak, but I simply can't see through him?

Chen Ge had been to this place before. He knew where Zhang Ya's room was, so he did not need Yin Hong to lead the way. The chair in the corridor had disappeared and gone into hiding. Chen Ge ignored it and walked to the deepest part of the fourth floor.

"Is your secret hidden behind this door?" Standing at the door, Chen Ge mumbled to himself before pushing the door open.

The wooden door cracked into splinters when it was pushed. When Chen Ge pushed it fully open, the old door shattered like it had been under a great deal of pressure, and the light push from Chen Ge was the straw that broke its back. Wooden splinters and blood vessels rained down, and endless malice rushed out from inside the room!

This was the first time that Chen Ge had seen the evil in someone's heart so clearly. Negative emotions materialized, and in the world behind the door, they coagulated to form black tentacles. Instantly, the walls around the room were dyed black.

"Stand behind me!" When the malice rushed out, Chen Ge was standing in their way, but the black tendrils purposely avoided him like they had no interest in him.

"What have you released?" The black malice spread down the corridor. When Mr. Lei saw this, he had the students retreat. "Do not touch those things! Move back! Get everyone here! Quick! Seal up this place!"

It was chaos on the fourth floor, but Chen Ge stood at the doorway, unaffected.

"Zhang Ya once suffered this malice before?" Chen Ge seemed to have opened Pandora's box. Commotion came from outside the school like the consciousness had gone insane.

"You seem to have gotten into real trouble." Yin Hong was shocked by the wave of malice. The girl who was not afraid of anything realized how obedient she had been before meeting Chen Ge.

"It's fine."

"This is still fine? Can't you hear what's outside? The school's consciousness..."

“Shush. I told you it’s fine. Everything is under control.” Chen Ge put down the backpack and removed all the items that he had on him.

“What are you doing?”

“I want to go in to take a look. This malice has purposely avoided me, but I fear it might harm my friends inside the bag.” Chen Ge knew that everything in the room was afraid of Zhang Ya in his shadow. He did not know if Zhang Ya could protect the others in his backpack. For safety’s sake, he decided to enter the lair alone.

“Xu Yin, don’t stay too far away from me. If there’s a problem, yank me out and run.” After that, Chen Ge looked inside the room. The malice had dispersed a lot, and using his Yin Yang Vision, he could see clearly inside it. Broken chairs were piled inside the room, and each chair was imprinted with a face and a name. Before Chen Ge appeared, they had pleaded for mercy, but after Chen Ge entered the room, all the voices disappeared. The human faces on the chairs turned to look behind Chen Ge, and their faces showed fear.

“What have you done to them?” The room was not big. Other than the chairs, there were pairs of female shoes. There were different styles, but it was missing a pair of red ballet shoes. “She is missing a pair of shoes, so she has been searching for them?”

If Chen Ge looked at this objectively and combined it with the legend, then Zhang Ya was the scariest Specter that he had ever met!

His body was shaking. Chen Ge had known that Zhang Ya was scary, but in reality, Zhang Ya was scarier than he had thought.

The ‘person’ who accompanied him always had such a past. Anyone else would have panicked, but Chen Ge only took a deep breath and then appeared to say instinctually, “In the future, I will face these malicious things on your behalf.”

Chen Ge did not move the wooden chairs. He called Zhang Ya’s name patiently. He wanted to use this familiar room to rouse her, but there was no response.

“Looks like I have to move in deeper.” The thick malice was unable to get close to Chen Ge, but the students nearest to him started to have black spots show on their bodies. It seemed their minds were affected.

“Leave this place. Only the Red Specters and Half Red Specters should stay.” When Chen Ge first got the black phone, he did not expect that he would someday say something like that. He looked at the chairs. Chen Ge saw that all the girls' beds had a doll placed on them. The dolls were sewn with black hair, and some of them wore bloody clothes, like they had been Half Red Specters before they were turned into dolls.

Scanning over these dolls, Chen Ge turned to the last bed in the room. It was also the only clean bed. The sheet did not even have a crease, and there was a bag of delicate sweets placed next to the pillow. Each candy was a terrified soul. The different wrappers seemed to signify different flavors.

"She likes to handmade dolls and prefers sweets. This girl... is quite cute if you think about it." Chen Ge walked to the inner part of the room. He placed the bag of sweets in his hands and was about to turn when he saw a blood red present box sitting on the bed.

The box was crumpled, incongruous with the well-kept bed.

Chen Ge had seen many present boxes in his life, but this was the first time that he had seen one that appeared like it had been soaked in blood.

“Did Zhang Ya want to give this to someone, or did someone want to give this to her?” A dirty box was placed on the clean bed. It was clear that the owner cared about this present. Standing in the scariest forbidden zone at the school, with screaming monsters everywhere, Chen Ge did not feel afraid but had a special feeling. “Before this, when Zhang Ya gave me a bloody love letter, a candy made from a soul, and dolls sewn from hair, I felt that they were hard to accept, but seeing this box on Zhang Ya’s bed, I feel weirdly envious.”

Malice surrounded him, and Chen Ge stood inside the room alone. The people outside were highly tense as they kept their gazes on Chen Ge. They would rush in to save him if there was something wrong, but who would have thought that Chen Ge was thinking about something else? From their perspective, Chen Ge’s usually calm face suddenly turned serious with a frown like something unexpected had happened.

Should I open it? But it’s not good to go through people’s stuff like that. But Zhang Ya is not a stranger, and she is still hibernating, so it should be fine if I help her take a look at it.

Chen Ge felt conflicted. His hands just touched the box, and the bow at the top of the box undid itself.

“I didn’t touch anything...” Chen Ge turned to the shadow behind him and then slowly opened the box lid.

Nothing changed inside the room. The sound of a heart beating came from the box. Chen Ge leaned closer to look and saw the red ballet dress that sat inside the box.

"This is the present?" There was a card on top of the dress. Chen Ge picked up the dress, and a simple wish was written on it.

"Merry Christmas, my dear daughter. Me and your mother miss you a lot, so we prepared a new dress for you."

The present seemed to come from Zhang Ya's parents. In this room filled with malice and despair, this small box was the most precious thing to Zhang Ya. Seeing the dress inside the box, Chen Ge felt like he was looking at Zhang Ya's beating heart. Under the cold exterior, there was warmth.

This is the most important thing to Zhang Ya, but how come I feel so sad looking at it?

Chen Ge put the card down. His fingers caressed the dress. The dress was soaked in blood, and the stains were uneven—some deep, some light. There was sign of wearing at the edges of the box.

The box was placed on the clean bed neatly, so she wasn't the one who did this. In real life, when Zhang Ya saw the box for the first time, it was probably already like this, soaked in blood and ruined.

Chen Ge did not know what had happened to Zhang Ya's parents, but since this box was Zhang Ya's deepest secret, it explained many things. There appeared to be something else inside the box, under the dress, but Chen Ge did not go through it.

He replaced the box and turned to his shadow. "Sorry, I'm not good with wish words, so I don't know what to say. I can't promise you anything, but I can tell you, as long as I am around, you won't be alone; I will be by your side."

Carrying the box carefully in his arms, Chen Ge wanted to hand it over to Zhang Ya personally, but he noticed that the bottom of the box was stuck to the bedsheet. Upon closer inspection, he found that the bottom of the box was tied with long hair. The hair appeared to be alive as it fixed the box to the bed. Other than Chen Ge, anything that came close to the box would be pierced by the hair.

I was too careless; I didn't even see this. Thankfully, she has no malice toward me.

Chen Ge was not going to force things. He placed the box back and allowed Zhang Ya to make the decision herself after she woke up. Strangely enough, when he placed the box back on the bed, a sound came from the cupboard next to him like someone was trying to get his attention.

“Is there something inside the cupboard?” This was the scariest forbidden zone, so Chen Ge did not dare lower his guard. He slowly pulled the door open. As the door opened, a doll fell out from inside. This was an ugly doll. Instead of saying it was made from cloth, it was more like it was patched up with hair.

“What is this?”

The doll’s eyes were glinting. It could not control its body and could only move one finger.

“What are you trying to tell me?” Chen Ge felt like the doll wanted to express something. He did not get too close but dragged the doll by its leg to the door to meet up with Xu Yin before squatting down next to it. After leaving Zhang Ya’s room, the doll seemed to come to life. The eyes became more brilliant, and it used its remaining finger to point about.

“Boss, you took this from inside the room?” Bai Qiulin and Xu Yin guarded beside Chen Ge. They looked at the doll on the ground strangely. It was the first time that they had seen something like this.

“I think it’s someone who has bullied Zhang Ya before.” Once Chen Ge said that, the finger of the doll moved wildly like it had been wronged. Seeing this reaction, Chen Ge was curious. He pointed at the ground next to the doll. “Use the blood on the ground to write. I can read.”

The doll hesitated. It did not seem to wish for too many people to know what he wanted to say. Under the doll’s insistence, Chen Ge and Xu Yin moved to block the other people’s view. “Now, you can write.”

The doll’s finger moved quickly. Chen Ge tried to understand its handwriting.

“Take me away from here. I know her secret.”

“You wish to talk terms with me?” Chen Ge scoffed. This doll wanted to use Zhang Ya’s secret to negotiate with him. He was about to remove one of the doll’s arms to make it come to its senses when the doll started to write again.

“I can sense her presence on you, but I’ve been watching since you enter the door—she appears to be sleeping. If she knew that I’m still conscious, she would kill me!

“Everyone that gets too close to her dies; you are no exception! I know you are afraid! Take me away! I know her very well, and I know how to get rid of her!

“You might not sense it now, but she is using you. After you’ve lost your value, she will not hesitate to kill you! Those dolls are your future!

“Do not be tricked by her appearance; she is the scariest Specter, a nightmare you can’t shake, completely mad!

“Trust me! I was this school’s first headmaster; the woman killed the real door-pusher! She is the school’s consciousness’ real enemy!”

The doll’s eyes were glinting. After he wrote everything, he glanced at Chen Ge. The shocked expression that he expected from Chen Ge did not appear, but the atmosphere was rather strange.

Chapter 877 - Zhang Ya's Secret

Chapter 877: Zhang Ya's Secret

"I'm not lying to you! Everything I wrote is true!" The doll's finger was almost broken, but there was no reaction from the people around it. This made him feel mad and awkward.

Naturally, Chen Ge knew that the doll was not lying, but the problem was that he was not being used by Zhang Ya. If he really analyzed it, it was Zhang Ya who had saved him many times. Without this Specter who stuck to him like a nightmare, he would have died under a chop from an axe during his first Trial Mission. The doll lay on the ground, his feet being pulled by Chen Ge. It was hard to believe that this was the most mysterious headmaster in the School of the Afterlife.

"Ever since she left, no one has entered this forbidden zone. I know she will return. If she realizes that I still have my consciousness, I will die, so you are my only hope!" The doll could not speak. His finger wrote madly as his eyes stared at Chen Ge. There were complicated emotions in them. No one in the corridor spoke. Chen Ge did not know what to say as this was his first time encountering such a situation.

"You will die. The Specters trapped in here are your ending. Do not fall for her lies!"

After a long time, Chen Ge asked, "What has she done to you?"

"Can't you see? I've been changed into this form; do you need me to fill you in on the details?" The doll was shamed, and his eyes were red.

"The person that you mentioned is different from the person that I know, Zhang Ya..."

"No, do not say that name! Do not mention it!" Chen Ge was only halfway through when the doll started to madly write.

“Alright, from how I see it, the girl...”

“Girl? Wake up please! Look at these pleading people behind the door. Do you think she deserves to be called a girl?” The doll snapped. He had turned into a specter due to a lingering obsession after his death, and now it appeared like Zhang Ya was that obsession.

“I can’t do this. I can’t say that. You are quite interesting.” Chen Ge looked into the doll’s red eyes, and his tone changed. “You must have done something to make her unhappy to deserve an ending like this.”

The doll’s finger suddenly stopped like he was considering Chen Ge’s question.

“I will only help you if you tell me the truth.” Chen Ge had a warm smile on his face. “After all, I have to take a big risk to help you.”

“Fine.” The doll was convinced by Chen Ge. There was sound coming from his throat and stomach. Small blood vessels tore open the patch, and they formed a bloody sentence on his tattered outfit. “The school appeared due to the fact that a child pushed open the door. The child was once the student here, and due to a misunderstanding, after he pushed open the door, I accidentally entered it as well.”

“Only when one is at the deepest point of despair can one push open the door. It has to be more than a misunderstanding that the door-pusher yanked you into the door.” Chen Ge saw through the lie immediately. “If you’re going to lie to me, there is no need to continue this conversation.”

“I am not lying to you! The door pusher studied at Western Jiujiang Private Academy, and I was the headmaster there. The student was bullied and died in the crematorium due to many reasons. I admit that I had problems managing the school, but I was really unrelated to his death!”

“You are the headmaster of Western Jiujiang Private Academy?” Not many people knew about the place, so the fact that the doll could say that meant that he really did know something.

“Yes, I was led behind the door by the door pusher. I know that the child was pitiable, so no matter what he’s done to me, I do not resent him. If anything, I feel guilty. At the time, we were the only two behind the door. Perhaps my accompaniment touched him because I gradually gained his understanding and forgiveness.”

“Don’t place yourself on such a moral high ground.” Chen Ge had a feeling that he was lying, but there were some truths in it.

“As the door grew stronger, more people and Specters entered, and she was one of them.” The doll finally reached the place where Chen Ge was interested in. “The door pusher and I never harmed her, and she initially appeared to be quite harmless. But later we found out that was just a disguise. After she entered the school, the outsiders and Specters from the school started to mysteriously disappear. The door pusher and I suspected that they had been consumed.

“The school behind the door became different after that. After some investigation, we realized that the killer was that woman.”

Chen Ge did not fully trust what the doll said. He was not one to believe others so easily. “The door pusher found out that Zhang Ya was the killer, but in the end, the door pusher was killed by Zhang Ya. Don’t you find that ironic?

“The woman has consumed many Specters, including Red Specters. The door pusher was not a match for her...”

“You are lying.” Chen Ge held the doll’s legs and looked into its eyes. “After pushing open the door, the door pusher’s power will at least double. As long as he did not leave this scenario, he wouldn’t lose to Zhang Ya.”

Chen Ge had experience with this and knew the difference in power between Red Specters. When he first met Zhang Ya, she had already consumed a door pusher, a feat that was nigh on impossible.

“But it was she who killed the door pusher. Perhaps I have missed some details since it has been so long...”

“If you can’t remember clearly, don’t start spinning tales. You have to pay for your lies.” Chen Ge gripped the legs and pulled, but he could not hurt the man. “Xu Yin, help me break one of his legs.”

Xu Yin reached out his pale hand. Before the doll could write anything, he grabbed the doll’s body and yanked one leg off. It was just a doll, but blood leaked out from the wounds. The doll’s eyes bulged with redness. Xu Yin tossed the broken leg aside and retreated silently.

Actually, Chen Ge did not expect Xu Yin to be so ruthless. He only wanted to break the leg, not tear it completely away from the body. Of course, he would not say that to anyone. With the smile on his face, he neared the doll. “Now, can you think clearer? If not, I can help you.”

The doll struggled on the ground, but other than his eyes and fingers, he could not move the rest of his body. So, he crumbled. “I am telling you the truth! It was the door pusher who consumed the Specters and outsiders that came to the school; there was an accident when he was hunting the woman. They entered a blood red city. In the end, the door pusher died in that city, but the woman returned.”

“In other words, the reason Zhang Ya could kill the door pusher is because of that red city, meaning her secret is hidden inside the city?” Chen Ge looked at the doll who had learned his lesson.

“Yes, she found something in the city. She knows a path that leads to the center of the city.”

“Path that leads to the center of the city? Zhang Ya has been there before?” Chen Ge looked at the bloody words on the doll and narrowed his eyes. In his mind, the city was very dangerous, even more dangerous than the forbidden zones, so he did not expect Zhang Ya to have already been there.

“Yes, she knew the path from the beginning. When the door pusher pursued her, she ran out of the school.” The doll did not sound like he was lying, but Chen Ge did not feel like fully trusting him yet.

“The door pusher has complete control over the door that he pushed; he knew about every corner of this place because the whole scenario is built upon the basis of his memory.” Chen Ge pulled on the doll’s other leg. “Are you lying to me?”

“No!” The color of the blood on the doll deepened. He was really afraid of Chen Ge. “Every Half Red Specter or ghosts that have the potential to become a Red Specter have a special power. Do you know what that woman’s special power is?”

“Stop changing the topic.” Chen Ge did not know what Zhang Ya’s special power was because she had too many special powers.

“I don’t know the details of her power, but from the door-pusher, I found out that she can obtain other Specters’ powers through some means.” The doll’s statement confirmed some of Chen Ge’s previous suspicions. “This is the scariest and most special power I’ve seen, so even now, no one knows what she can do because she possesses too many powers.”

Reading the words on the doll’s body, Chen Ge did not react instantly. Zhang Ya was the only Specter that possessed her own special page in the black phone. Initially, Chen Ge had thought that every Red Specter would have that, but after Xu Yin evolved into a Red Specter, Chen Ge had realized that things were not that simple. Xu Yin, who was already quite strong among Red Specters, only had his name turn red in the black phone, and the introduction added the identity of Red Specter to his name.

Zhang Ya is unique even among Red Specters—that is confirmed by the black phone.

Chen Ge thought back to Zhang Ya's fight with the shadow in Li Wan City. The shadow had listed several of Zhang Ya's powers at once, and coincidentally, he had seen other Specters use those powers before.

There should be a real limitation to her power, and that should be her only weakness.

Chen Ge grumbled to himself before picking up the doll. "I don't need you to explain how scary Zhang Ya is—rescuing you is making her my enemy. Why would I anger a powerful Greater Red Specter for someone who I don't really know?"

The words on the doll had not changed for a long time. Chen Ge's tone changed as he leaned closer to the doll so that his words could only be heard by the two of them. "Unless you tell me her weakness so that I have a chance of winning against her."

Chen Ge's voice was like a demon's whisper. He was probably the first living person to trick a Specter. "You have no other choice. Either tell me everything, or I'll hand you over to Zhang Ya myself."

The doll's red eyes stared at Chen Ge like he was considering whether to trust him.

"I have limited time. If you can't agree with me, there's no need for me to take the risk for you."

"Her weakness is her heart; I overheard something from the door pusher. Every Red Specter has their own heart. It is made from their obsession. It is the key for them to become a Red Specter and their weakest spot." The doll did not realize that the way Chen Ge looked at him had slowly changed. "To kill that woman is not easy unless you ruin her heart. The door pusher thought that her obsession was the people who once hurt her at the school, but that was not the case. When he changed his mind, the woman noticed it and hid her heart."

"Hid her heart? The heart can be hidden?" Chen Ge remembered what the doll said clearly. If he encountered the other world under the black phone's guidance, what the doll had said now could help him understand it further.

“The Red Specter’s heart is formed from some obsession. If she placed that obsession on some place or someone, if nothing happens to that person, no matter how seriously injured she is, she will not disappear.” The blood vessels on the doll wavered. After he left the room, the limitation on him was slowly weakening.

“Do you have any clues about that after the door pusher has done so much investigation?” Chen Ge asked casually.

“There are two possibilities. First, she hid her heart deep inside the red city, but the chances of that are not great because the city is very dangerous, too dangerous for her to predict. The second possibility is that she has placed her heart somewhere outside the door. The place could be a person or an object...”

The words stopped there. He reserved a secret for himself. If he told Chen Ge everything, there was no guarantee to his safety. Actually, when the doll mentioned an object, something crossed Chen Ge’s mind—Zhang Ya’s love letter. Zhang Ya had placed her heart in the love letter. In Li Wan City, Chen Ge had torn the letter and had Zhang Ya move into his shadow. Being each other’s companion forever was not just a phrase of speech; Zhang Ya’s new sanctuary was Chen Ge’s shadow. Thus, based on what the doll had said, Chen Ge was Zhang Ya’s weakness.

“Take me with you, and I’ll tell you everything.” The doll’s eyes were bloodshot. “You have her presence on you, so she will not let you go. She will stick to you forever. Only I can help you.”

“Let me think about it.” Chen Ge smiled and looked at the doll’s face. He was thinking about how to make a Specter disappear completely, without leaving a trace in the world.

“She might come back at any moment. Please, make it quick.”

“Okay, I will give you an answer as soon as I can. Before that, I’d better bring you with me.” Now Chen Ge had another thing important to him, the doll. He had given it much consideration and decided to hand the doll to Zhang Ya. The girl should have a better way to deal with him. After all, she had literally made him this way. Before Zhang Ya awakened, he could keep the doll safe.

He picked up the backpack, had Xu Yin carry the doll, and walked out of the female dormitory.

Chapter 879 - Headmaster's Office

Chapter 879: Headmaster's Office

After dealing with the doll, no one would know Zhang Ya's weakness, and a weakness no one knew about was not a weakness. Walking out from the female dormitory, Chen Ge noticed a lot of changes to the School of the Afterlife. The red fog mixed together with the black malice. If there was hell on earth, this was probably it.

The visibility has lowered again. Whenever I breathe, there is this horrible stench like I am choking on blood.

Chen Ge had stayed too long behind the door; his body could not support him any much longer. More blood vessels stuck to his skin. If this continued, he worried that he would be assimilated by the door and stuck behind it forever.

I need to hurry. At most, I can stay for one night.

Chen Ge waved his arms about trying to shake away the resentment and negative emotions that formed the vessels, but it was not much use. The scary thing was that part of them had crawled under his skin. From afar, they looked like small wounds on his arms. Walking in the red fog and black malice, the number of students that followed behind Chen Ge grew.

"Where is Mr. Lei? Didn't he say I would not walk of there alive?"

"The outside of the school was seriously damaged, so Mr. Lei had to leave." One of the female teachers were shocked to see Chen Ge alive. "Walking out of the forbidden zone alive is nothing to be proud of. In contrast, you have made such a huge scene; you'll only get targeted more by the school's consciousness."

"Everything you say revolves around the school's consciousness, but how can you know it is always right?" Chen Ge rubbed the blood on his arms. He realized that he could not rub it off, so he left it be.

"I know I can't argue with you. The school's consciousness might not be right. But the consciousness is the collection of most of the students. Here, they are the real owner." The teacher sound helpless. As a member of staff, even though the students referred to her as a teacher, in reality, she was greatly limited. She was more like a low-level administrator hired by the school's consciousness.

"The world behind the door belongs to the door pusher. Whoever pushed open the door, the door will listen to them," Chen Ge said. "Unless someone killed the door pusher, in that case, it will listen to them."

"You're mad." The teacher moved closer to the other teachers. She did not want to stay too close to Chen Ge.

"After I leave, you'd better seal up this place. Even though it does not have what I'm looking for, it is still very dangerous. It won't be good if a student accidentally wanders in."

"We don't need you to teach us what to do."

Chen Ge led the others to the center of the school. He had gained more student followers, but the number was not enough. He needed to gain more approval to have them trust in him.

I need to gain more students' support before Chang Wenyu and the painter know what I'm doing.

Because they both believed he was harmless, the two had been ignoring him. If they found out Chen Ge's real aim was for the old headmaster to take over the school, they would definitely come for him.

"Chen Ge, where are we going now?" Yin Hong's impression of Chen Ge had greatly changed. She now hesitated when she called his full name.

"The students are mostly gathered at the center of the school. We will go there. Other than that, isn't there a forbidden zone related to the headmaster? I heard the headmaster's office is at the center. We will go there as well." Chen Ge had everything planned. He had limited time. He could not explore all thirteen forbidden zones, so he only focused on the key ones.

“The headmaster’s office and the fourth floor of the female dormitory are the most dangerous forbidden zones. You just came out from the female dormitory, so don’t you want to rest first?”

“We have no time.” Chen Ge and Xu Yin walked at the front. He leaned closer to the doll on Xu Yin’s shoulders to whisper, “It’s time for you to prove yourself.”

The doll’s red eyes rolled about. He instinctually wanted to lean away from Chen Ge. Actually, he was forced to have Chen Ge bring him out of the female dormitory. After leaving that place, he had a chance to escape.

“Didn’t you say that you were this school’s first headmaster? Tell me the headmaster’s office’s location. I need something that can prove your identity.” If there was enough time, Chen Ge would visit all the forbidden zones and recreate the thirteen zones at his own Haunted House.

“Too much time has gone, and many things have happened. This school has changed too much. It might be difficult for you to get to the headmaster’s office now.” The blood crawled out from the wound near its chest to form those words.

“You are not willing to show the way?” Chen Ge grabbed the doll’s only leg. “Or are you not even the headmaster at all and were lying to me?”

“I will take you there!” The doll’s eyes bulged. “There are two offices. One is the headmaster’s office from Western Jiujiang Private Academy. It’s on the top floor. There’s nothing there, just an empty shell. The other headmaster’s office was the door pusher’s living space. He liked to hide there to spy on the lives of the other specters and monsters.”

“The door pusher once lived there?”

“Yes, this room is hidden, and very few people know about it...”

“Take me there.” Chen Ge could barely hold in the anticipation. Under his many urges, the doll led him to the center of the school.

“This is it.” The doll used his remaining moveable finger to point at the sign before them. “There are many hidden rooms in this school, and every room has its secrets. If you promise to get me out of here, I can tell you the location of all the hidden rooms.”

Chen Ge stopped before the board. The wall was filled with various reports and self-criticism. It came with many students’ pictures. This was not a hall of fame but a hall of shame. All the ugliness of the school was portrayed there.

“You’ll see the room after you pull away all the reports.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge signaled for the students behind him to move, but no one dared step forward. He even saw the picture of one of the students before him. The child looked at his own picture and stood frozen.

“What are you afraid of?”

“You’ll be punished if you make a mistake; that is the school’s rule. If we tear down these reports, we’ll be going against the school’s consciousness,” Han Song said softly.

“No wonder no one has ever found this room.” Chen Ge heard that and looked out the window. The red eye appeared to be pressing down on them. However, the eye appeared to be under great pressure; it was filled with pulsing blood vessels.

“Criticism is to improve, not humiliate.” Chen Ge pulled down the first report. “Make a move on! Stop hesitating!”

With him and his employees leading the way, more students slowly joined. The layers of the reports had accumulated over many years. They kept pulling for a long time before the bloodied wall showed. The wall under the reports and pictures was like a bruised skin. There were cracks everywhere, and they were leaking blood.

“The entrance is on the left side. The wall was originally only one meter wide. It absorbed resentment and then continued to grow.”

Chen Ge kept searching on the wall before locating the door that appeared to have melted into the wall.

“This is the door pusher’s room?”

Shoving the door open, Chen Ge looked inside. The whole room was filled with mirrors of varying kinds.

Chapter 880 - Sudden Change!

Chapter 880: Sudden Change!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

At the School of the Afterlife, mirrors had a special meaning; each mirror represented a person and hid a memory. The scene before him shocked Chen Ge. He had been at the school for so long and had not seen much mirrors. It turned out that all of them had been hidden there. "Mirrors represent memories, and memories hide one's secrets. The door pusher has been spying on everyone's past."

The door had the same color as the wall; they practically were one and the same. With the reports covering the outer wall, after the death of the door pusher, no one would expect such a room to exist behind the wall of shame.

...

"This door pusher had a unique hobby. The despair behind the door twisted him, or he gave up on himself and opened his arms to embrace the abyss." Chen Ge was curious about every door pusher, and the School of the Afterlife's door pusher was the only dead door pusher, so he was worth studying.

"Keep close to me." Chen Ge dragged Xu Yin into the hidden room.

"I'm not lying to you. This is the headmaster's office that you wished to come to. The door pusher is the school's owner, and this room is the most hidden room in the school." The doll argued for his innocence, but Chen Ge's attention was distracted by the things inside the room. He did not notice the doll's change. The room was not big. It had no windows, and the only point of connection to the outside world was the door.

"This is the most suffocating room I've ever been in." Bai Qiulin carried the mirror, but he did not follow Chen Ge. He only took a glance and shook his head. "Trapping oneself inside a room filled with mirrors, looking at one's reflection always, even a Specter would rarely decide to do something like that."

“Don’t underestimate these mirrors.” Chen Ge picked up the broken mirrors on the ground carefully. He held the piece before his eyes, but the reflection was not his own. The mirror was empty; it looked strange and rather pitiful. “The School of the Afterlife is different from other scenarios, and one of the reasons is the existence of these mirrors. Regardless, the secret behind them should be found in this room.”

There was barely anywhere to stand in the room; the mirrors and their pieces overlapped over each other, reflecting one another. It was like the school’s consciousness above their head, everyone’s memory and consciousness overlapping together.

“I’ve led you to the headmaster’s office, so that should prove to you my sincerity.” The doll pulled on Chen Ge’s clothes to have Chen Ge look at him.

“Hmm.” That was Chen Ge’s only reply. He was attracted by one of the mirrors in the corner of the room. Most of the mirrors in the room were broken, with irregular edges and blood or stain on their surfaces, but the mirror at the edge was perfectly preserved. It gave off a faded red light, and blood streamed down its surface like something was trying to come out.

“Whose mirror could this be? From the appearance, it looks like a girl’s mirror. Could it be Chang Wenyu’s?” Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of a problem. If there was a mirror that corresponded to every student in the school, was it possible that Zhang Ya’s mirror was there as well?

Shaking his head, Chen Ge pushed this thought out of his mind. Zhang Ya had already killed the door pusher, so why would she leave her mirror behind? With that in mind, Chen Ge’s curiosity grew. “Xu Yin, go and get that mirror.”

Chen Ge caught the doll, afraid that this was part of his conspiracy. So, to be careful, he would not have the doll have any contact with anything in the room. Listening to Chen Ge’s order, Xu Yin walked to the corner, but once he stepped on the mirrors on the ground, all the mirrors started to bleed. Cracks formed, and the mirrors were like mouths that opened up to consume Xu Yin.

“Come back!” Chen Ge yelled. Once Xu Yin stopped, the mirrors in the room slowly returned to normal. Chen Ge felt a tug on his shirt, he turned back to see a new line had appeared on the doll.

“Once you touch the mirrors, the school’s consciousness will target you. What happened earlier was a warning.”

“I can only look at them but not touch them?”

“Not really. The warning should only work on Red Specters. If it’s just a normal lingering spirit, the reaction won’t be so intense.”

“What if it’s a living person?” Chen Ge returned the doll to Xu Yin.

“The door pusher and the school’s consciousness would not have expected a living person to enter this room. When I picked up a broken mirror earlier, it did not react at all.”

“I have no clue...”

Chen Ge stopped asking for the doll’s opinion. With a careful step, he moved into the room. Like he expected, nothing changed.

“Xu Yin, guard right there, and don’t move.”

Moving slowly forward, Chen Ge was stepping on the pile of broken mirrors. “Sorry for the offense.” Every mirror held a memory, so Chen Ge apologized in advance to make himself feel better. Lowering his head to look, this place was like a mirror cemetery.

“Only the mirror in the corner has blood flowing on its surface. Whose mirror could it be?” Chen Ge already possessed the painter’s mirror, but that information came from a non-smiler, so it could not be trusted fully. Chen Ge could trip easily from the pieces underneath his feet. Being injured was a small thing; Chen Ge did not wish to break the mirrors. He slowly moved his body, and it took him a minute to reach the corner. He squatted down to study the mirror before him. This mirror was different from the others. When he saw the mirror, more blood appeared on the surface like this was not a mirror but a beating heart.

“There is something inside the mirror.” Chen Ge used his Yin Yang Vision and realized that the mirror covered in blood was reflecting the room that he was in. Inside the enclosed place littered with broken mirrors, a man in a red shirt was squatting in the corner looking at a girl’s mirror with extreme focus.

“Wait a minute! This scene is similar to what...” Chen Ge prepared to retreat when the man in the corner suddenly turned around. The man looked eighty percent like Chen Ge, and the scary thing was that his facial features were still changing, becoming more and more like Chen

Ge's.

"A scapegoat?" Chen Ge was still moving back when the man in the mirror screamed. He pulled madly at his face, until he dug pieces of flesh out like the face represented extreme tragedy.

As the man in the mirror went mad, a loud voice came from outside the corridor. Then Chen Ge heard the old headmaster. "Chen Ge! Something is wrong with the school's consciousness! The eye is bleeding!"

“There’s a problem with the school’s consciousness?” Chen Ge was standing on a pile of broken mirrors. If he moved too much, he would break them into pieces.

“Stay alert! Do not get close to the window!” the old headmaster screamed. Without thinking about it, he had the students run to safety. This was something implanted in his body, and his body moved faster than his mind.

...

“What’s going on outside?” There was chaos in the corridor. Before Chen Ge could get an answer, there came a loud crash from the corridor. All the windows in the school shattered!

The thick fog rolled into the corridor. Chen Ge looked out the door. The sound of screaming and glass shattering echoed nonstop. The only thing that calmed him down was that no matter what happened, Xu Yin was dragging the doll with one hand, guarding the door like nothing could shake him.

“When the man in the red shirt inside the mirror screamed, something happened to the school’s consciousness. Could they be related?” Chen Ge pulled back his gaze to turn and look at the blood red mirror before him. Cracks appeared on the mirror, and blood leaked out from it like a heart that was pierced by knives. The small man in the mirror kept tearing at his face like he desperately needed to tear Chen Ge’s face away.

“What is this?” Chen Ge was very brave. He knew that Red Specters and ghosts had a hard time getting close to this place. Gritting his teeth, he extended his hand to the mirror in the corner. When his fingertips touched the edge of the mirror, Chen Ge heard a yell coming from inside the mirror. The torn, bloodied face turned to scream at Chen Ge. He was like a patient with a seriousness inclination for cleanliness, and someone had just touched his face with a muddy hand.

The man inside the mirror was screaming, and the consciousness above the school was rampaging. The sound of shattering continued, and the fog rushed into the rooms like a wave. But the room that Chen Ge was in was not affected. Xu Yin stood at the door, holding the doll with one hand, and his other hand held the door. Trails of blood curled around his body. The pale hand gripped the door tightly, barring any fog from entering the room. The red shirt was fluttering, and he was under immense pressure, but the expression on Xu Yin's face did not change.

"Are you the one who summoned the school's consciousness? You can affect it?" Chen Ge gripped the edges of the mirror with both hands. He shook it heavily as he tried to pick it up. The mirror was much heavier than he had anticipated. Even with all the force in his body, he was unable to lift the mirror up. To make matters worse, as he attempted to do that, the other pieces of mirrors in the room started to change. They were like wounds on a person's body as they leaked blood. Chen Ge felt like he was being observed by numerous bleeding eyes. They came from different people, and they were staring at him with different emotions.

Bang!

A loud boom came from the corridor; it was very close to them. It sounded like someone had come and was fighting the old headmaster.

"Is it one of the staff or another Red Specter at the school?" Chen Ge was anxious. The man inside the mirror could directly influence the school's consciousness and seemed to know the secret about his face. The man must have realized something, and that was why he would stop at nothing to tear down the face that was changing.

This mirror is probably the mirror of the door pusher from Western Jiujiang Private Academy! His memory is left inside this mirror! Chen Ge remembered that the first thing that had caught his attention when he entered the room was the mirror and the young man in red shirt inside the mirror.

If it was really Zhang Ya who killed the door pusher, this mirror cannot remain; it might harm Zhang Ya.

Considering the fact that the doll was just next to him, Chen Ge did not say this out loud. His desire to take the mirror out of the room deepened. Chen Ge was more alert than before. Only by claiming this mirror could he prevent others from influencing the school's consciousness.

"The door pusher is already dead; now, the School of the Afterlife belongs to everyone, so you have no reason to exist." Chen Ge was unable to remove the mirror, so he launched a kick at it instead, but nothing happened to the mirror.

Instead, the young man in the mirror slowly calmed down. The man hid inside the mirror to study Chen Ge, and he slowly realized that perhaps he had mistaken Chen Ge for someone else. The face looked like another person, but there was a crucial difference between them!

Chen Ge also noticed the change to the young man. After experiencing so much, his senses were sharp. Without hesitation, he ordered, "Xu Yin! Take out this mirror!"

The mirrors on the floor cracked. Xu Yin darted to Chen Ge's side, and his pale hands reached for the mirror's edge. The man inside the mirror screamed. More blood gushed out from the cracks on the surface, and the blood pierced into Xu Yin's palm like they were sharp needles. Small wounds appeared on the pale arms. Xu Yin's red pupils were pulsing, and the familiar pain caused him to open his lips. Blood vessels rushed out from his wounds. Xu Yin let go of the doll and gripped the mirror with both of his hands.

Crack!

The blood red mirror that was buried inside a pile of broken mirrors was snapped in half; this was something that no one expected. The half that Xu Yin held exploded into splinters. The lower half lost its luster of blood and shrank amid the cemetery of mirrors.

"Do you think you can escape?" Chen Ge gritted his teeth. He had already noticed something from the young man's strange reaction. Assuming that the man was the door pusher's remaining memory, this would explain why the school had not accepted a new door pusher because the real door pusher had not fully 'died'.

The second and most important point was, if the young man was the real door pusher, based on what the doll had said, he had entered the red city before. When he changed into Chen Ge's face, his reaction could only be described as madness, like he had opened a present and found a bomb inside it. This man had probably seen someone with a face similar to Chen Ge's!

“Just how deep was the trauma that even the school’s consciousness was turned mad? Could he have run into the ghost fetus in the red city and mistaken me for him?” Earlier, in Li Wan City, the dog kept by the shadow had also made that mistake.

“Chen Ge, have you gotten what you need? We can’t stay here any longer!” the old headmaster reminded Chen Ge. The latter rushed out the room with Xu Yin and the doll. “I plan to inspect every broken mirror in this room, so for now, I can’t leave...”

The rest of the sentence was stuck in his throat because when Chen Ge saw the school’s consciousness outside the window, his words were stuck. The large eyeball reflected the entire school in its eyes, and the strange thing was... the eye was still expanding like it could burst at any moment.

The red eyeball that loomed over the school was like the mirror that Chen Ge had just seen. The surface was running with blood, and there was a black gap in the middle of the pupil.

“This has never happened to the school’s consciousness before...” Yin Hong held Yin Bai’s hand as they stood at the door. Her mad expression had already disappeared; what was left was anxiety and shock. The windows at the school were seriously damaged, and it would be hard to repair all of them. Without the windows guarding them, the students at the school realized how close the red city was.

...

“Sir, gather all the students immediately. Do not let them near the window. It’s too dangerous outside.” The closer the red city was, the easier Chen Ge could make out the buildings in the city with his Yin Yang Vision. “Very scary existences are hiding inside the blood fog, things that even Red Specters are afraid of.”

Doctor Gao had been made mad by the red city—Chen Ge was trying to protect the children. The mirror in the hidden room snapped in half, and the eyeball in the sky had the same change. Chen Ge refused to believe there was no connection between the two.

“Quick, look! There is someone in the fog!” someone in the corridor shouted, and everyone looked out the window. There were glimpses of shadows on the field outside of the school; they all ran from inside the school!

“What are they doing?” Before Chen Ge could get the answer, the school’s consciousness had already reacted. Many screaming shadows crawled out from the eyeball and tore the people who ran out of the school into pieces. The first batch was soon taken care of, but more people ran out from the building, and most of them were students. It was unclear whether they had been tricked or this was planned, but everyone rushed toward the front gate. When the school's consciousness tore into the adults, it did not hesitate, but when facing the students, it did. Even though it had power stronger than a Red Specter, it was made up from numerous consciousnesses and was different to an actual Red Specter.

In this moment of hesitance, there was a small number of students who got to the front gate. It looked like a normal large gate, but there appeared to be a curse on it. Once the student touched it, they would explode in a shower of blood, and their blood would turn into the school's nutrients.

"Entering the school is easy, but it'll be hard to leave the school. The desperate consciousness will stop anyone who tries to do so. It will not allow others to have salvation while it is trapped in hell." Yin Hong looked at those students with pity. "They won't be able to escape. No one can leave this school."

"That is not true. I know someone who has escaped from this school." Chen Ge kept his eyes on the front gate, searching for something. Not long after that, when most students turned into blood flowers and returned to the school's consciousness, there was a barely discernible figure that neared the gate. The man appeared to have practiced this many times. He held something in his hand and whacked it heavily on the gate. The gate budged, and a man's voice came out from the large eyeball in the sky. Many shadows rushed at the strange man near the gate. The school uniform was torn apart by blood vessels, and the white coat underneath was revealed. It was the school's 'doctor' who was banging against the front door. His real identity was an escaped patient from the cursed hospital.

"Why is this guy there? Hasn't he come here to escape from the cursed hospital? Why is he purposely taunting the school's consciousness?" Chen Ge had a feeling that things were not that simple. The school's consciousness was held back by something and could not unleash its real power, but it should be powerful enough to stop a Red Specter. The 'doctor' attracted the school's attention. He suffered all the pressure. The white coat became tattered, and the blood red patient's outfit underneath was slowly revealed.

"Something's wrong." In Chen Ge's mind, most Red Specters were cunning and selfish. This patient would cooperate with a non-smiler to escape from the hospital, so he was not a gullible person. Why would he show up at a time like this?

“Someone is targeting the school’s consciousness. This is a plan targeting the Greater Red Specter!” Chen Ge had an answer that floated up in his mind. When the school doctor took all the attacks, from the back of the crowd, a small man with a hunchback walked toward the gate. He kept his head lowered. When his body touched the gate, he raised his face. It was a normal, weathered face. His right eye was murky, and his left eye was just a dark hollow!

“Chang Gu?”

Without any hesitation, when he raised his head, he pressed something in his palm on the lock of the gate.

BANG!

A boom resounded through the school like something was smashed. It was hard to tell where the source came from. It appeared to come from the large eyeball and the left eye of every student at the school. The black gate was pushed open a fraction, and then blood fog blasted through the gate from outside like a wave, swallowing up everything in its way!

At the same time, all the students at the school felt a pain that came from the darkest part of their heart like a piece of their soul had been forcibly yanked out. Many strange yet familiar memories rushed into their minds. The students around Chen Ge collapsed to the ground, wailing in pain.

Lightning flashed across the sky. The eyeball made up from the student’s consciousness split apart from the middle. The large eyeball was like a melting iceberg, and various rolling blood vessels weaved out a large ‘mirror’ in the sky.

There was another ‘school’ inside the mirror. Many students raised their heads to look at this inverted blood red world!

“That is the campus constructed by the painter!” Chen Ge’s eyes widened. Everything looked so familiar. He looked at the sky above his head, and he was shocked beyond words. As the eyeball cracked, the blood vessels crumbled, and the large mirror that loomed over the school slowly collapsed.

The seemingly normal students in the mirror were slowly changing into blood vessels that carried memories, and at the center of the school on the side of the mirror, a boy and a girl stood at the roof of the lab building. They were closest to the blood red world. A broken canvas was left next to the boy, and one could not see the expression on his face.

The girl sat at the edge of the building as she looked at the blood red sky above them with admiration.

“Painter, you lost.”

The blood eye that dangled above the school split open from the middle and turned into a giant mirror that loomed over the entire school. The surface of the mirror was red. On this side of the mirror was the blood red world behind the door while on the other side was the campus constructed by the painter.

“The painter used the students’ memories to create two campuses, so when the school consciousness is injured, the campuses that he built are naturally influenced.”

Chen Ge lifted his head to look at the mirror in the sky. The girl who sat on the rooftop of the lab building on the other side was doing the same.

“Chang Wenyu?” The name crossed Chen Ge’s mind. The girl was completely different from what Chen Ge had imagined. In Chang Gu’s movies, Chang Wenyu possessed many personalities, but generally, she was a cute, quiet girl. This should be how Chang Gu imagined his sister to be, but the big brother did not really know his sister well, and because of that, Chen Ge’s impression of her had been misguided as well.

The real Chang Wenyu was an inapproachable person. Her left eye was dug out, and a hollow hole remained. There appeared to be fire blazing in her right eye, where extreme maddened was hidden. This kind of ‘person’ would do anything; there was nothing that would limit them in the world. Even they would have difficulty controlling themselves. In comparison, the painter was another extreme. He did not say a word. He was as quiet as death. Even though the canvas lay broken, even though the campuses that he had spent so many years constructing were crumbling, even when the school’s consciousness was seriously injured, his expression did not change.

The painter and Chang Wenyu were two extremes. When a huge problem occurred, when the school was exposed before the red city, of these two ‘people’, one was lowering his head to look at his canvas like he was remembering the paintings that he had made with it, while the other sat at the edge of the building, looking up at the sky, as if admiring the chaos on the other side.

“Two madmen.” Chen Ge’s eyes moved from the girl to the boy. Now he could confirm that there was a connection between the painter and Fan Yu. They had the same face but different bodies. Probably due to low confidence, Fan Yu kept his head lowered and had a slight stoop while the painter looked more normal.

“I’ve met Fan Yu outside the door and spent some time with him. I really did not expect this to happen.” Chen Ge found that he was unable to move his eyes away from the painter. He could not understand why there was a ‘Fan Yu’ behind the door when the Fan Yu outside the door was still alive. The two had different personalities and completely different abilities.

“It is really that child.” The old headmaster recognized Fan Yu as well. Other than surprise, there was guilt on his face.

“Sir, are you sure the incident where Fan Yu was bullied at school had nothing to do with you?” Chen Ge pulled the headmaster to his side.

“I am the headmaster at Mu Yang High School. Anything that happened at the school had everything to do with me, so of course I am responsible if he was bullied at school.” He did not understand Chen Ge.

“I mean, did you do anything directly or indirectly to harm him. Like you were too busy to care about him when he came to you for help...”

“If he came to me, then this tragedy wouldn’t have happened.” The old headmaster looked at Fan Yu. “He is a good kid.”

“Since you have nothing to do with his bullying, then our plan is not affected.” Chen Ge’s eyes were firm. “I will try my best to make you the headmaster here, to help you control the school’s consciousness. You can see the situation for yourself. None of the people here can bring salvation and release to the students here—only you can.”

“I’m afraid I can’t do that. Every child has their own mind, and it’s not easy to seek salvation.”

“At least you can lead them on the right path and prevent them from more suffering,” Chen Ge said seriously. “There is no one more suitable, sir. You can treat this place as a second Mu Yang High School.”

“Alright, I will try.” A bitter smile hung on the old headmaster’s face. He was just a Half Red Specter, and his competition consisted solely of Greater Red Specters.

“There are thirteen paintings in the art room. They represent thirteen people with the qualification to become the door pushers. We can ignore most of them. We only need to pay attention to the painter and Chang Wenyu.” The plan had started when Chen Ge entered the School of the Afterlife, and now it had reached the climax.

“What should we do next?” the old headmaster asked nervously.

“We will find a safe place to hide for him. Since Chang Wenyu dared come for the school’s consciousness, there’s a great chance she has made some kind of deal with a monster in the red city. When the school descends into chaos, we have to maintain our power.”

Chen Ge had the students that followed him stay together. They walked down the corridor to search for a safe place. The blood fog rushed at the school. The mirror covered the school and was trying hard to prevent the monsters from entering the school. However, the mirror was made up from the students’ consciousness. When their spirit was broken, the collapse was only a matter of time. The mirror was something from the two campuses. As more people regained their lost memories, more negative emotions rushed in. Bloody handprints appeared on the wall between western and eastern campuses, and many strange things were happening.

“This is their real appearance. There is endless pain and despair behind every beautiful memory. Destiny is that fair and cruel.” Cheng Wenyu swung her legs back and forth, enjoying all this.

“Destiny?” The painter slowly lifted his head. “Do you know what color destiny is?”

“I don’t know, probably red, I like red.” Chang Wenyu turned to look at the painter. From the way they spoke, those who did not know would assume that they were friends.

“Destiny is white in color. It will take on the color that you decide to paint on it.” The painter’s voice was calm.

“Therefore, you borrowed the power from the school’s consciousness to change their memory? To retain the only good thing about their lives? How do you know that is what they want? Who gave you the right to change the things most valuable to others?" The painter appeared to have tweaked Chang Wenyu's memory before. This should be one of the reasons behind their conflict. "Do not assume you are the person most approved by the school and can make yourself out to be the school's god!"

Facing Chang Wenyu's interrogation, the painter did not deny it. He merely picked up the broken canvas. "There is no god behind the door. Even if there is, it is just a devil who decided to perform an occasional kindness."

When he said the last word, a horrible stench drifted out from the canvas.

Chapter 884 - Red

Chapter 884: Red

The rooftop of the lab building was closest to the sky; it was somewhere you could touch the other world with your hand. The normal school had started to change. More students turned into blood vessels and ugly monsters. They wailed at the once quiet school. They, who had gotten used to the beauty, did not expect the pain that they had once been through.

Every second the blood mirror loomed over the school, there would be more crumbling blood vessels. The memory that it contained would disappear, and the trace of its owner would be wiped away. Irreversible collapse was occurring on the two campuses. As the owner of these campuses, the painter was standing on the rooftop of the lab building. He picked up the canvas, and instantly, black-reddish blood appeared on it.

“You wish to kill me?” Chang Wenyu dangled her legs at the edge of the building. “You have gained the approval of half of the students at the school, but you have no control over the other half. If you kill me, the school’s consciousness will be swallowed by that city.”

“I have never killed anyone, but many have died because of me. I used this canvas to record their last moments and occasionally took it out to admire it.” The painter gripped the edge of the canvas, and his pale fingers were covered in undried blood. He did not seem to care what Chang Wenyu said. He was talking to himself, saying what was on his mind.

“You have not killed anymore?” Chang Wenyu opened her arms and crossed her hands. “You will always find excuses for your actions—that is what I hate most about you.”

The stench of blood thickened on the rooftop and Chang Wenyu stood up. Fire burned in her eyes. “Do you know why I returned after successfully escaping from this place?”

The painter shook his head lightly.

“I saw the family of the students outside the door. They were guarding beside the unconscious students, waiting for them to come home.” Chang Wenyu stood at the edge of the building. The reflection of the blood world was above her, and the crumbling campuses were below her. “But I know that’s impossible. The door has bound them. It looks like salvation, but in reality, it has only pushed them into deeper despair.”

The black hair was lifted by the bloody wind. Chang Wenyu’s right eye was pulsing with a red light, and her hollow left eye socket had black blood leaking out from it. “So, I returned. I can’t save all the students here, but I can ruin the door and bury all of you with it. I do not wish for what happened to us to happen to anyone else.”

Blood bloomed on her dress, and the expression on Chang Wenyu’s face turned maddened. “I will stop at nothing to destroy this place.”

“But can you do it? After losing the school’s approval, you will weaken. What you have learned at the school will be returned to it.” The painter’s voice was even like he was asking whether she had eaten her breakfast or not.

“I do not need the school’s approval, as long as someone approves of me at the school.” The atmosphere tensed. Chang Wenyu was prepared to fight the painter.

“It’s a good thing to have your own persistence, but why would you attract the ghosts from the city?” The painter looked past Chang Wenyu at the red city beyond the school. “Fighting for the school’s approval to become the new door pusher is something between us. Why would you drag them into it, or are you still afraid of me?”

“I know that you will not make the same mistake again, so I only have this chance. Before you become the new door pusher, I have to destroy this place.”

“Destroying the school’s door, attracting the ghosts from the red city, contacting every Red Specter who has once resisted me and has the qualification to become the door pusher, is that the entirety of your plan?” The painter’s finger nudged the canvas. “Actually, I’m curious, how did you open the school’s front gate? All the Specters are limited by the school’s consciousness. No one should be able to get close to the gate; that is one thing that I do not understand.”

“Specters will be targeted, but the living will not.” Chang Wenyu wiped away the blood that flowed out of her left eye. “I’ve been looking for the door pusher’s left eye—it has been hiding outside the door. I’ve waited so long for this day. After all, it was he who pushed open the door. Only his eye can trick the school’s consciousness. So, I had a living person possess the door pusher’s left eye and push open the door.”

Blood flowers were blossoming on Chang Wenyu’s dress. This Greater Red Specter was showing her true form. But probably because she was inside the campus created by the painter, her power was limited.

“It’s taken several years to build this heaven on top of a cemetery, but you have used several years to figure out a way to destroy everything.” The painter sighed. “Looks like I shan’t have any hope in any of you. To focus on what I need to do, the only way is for all of you to shut up.”

“Stop lying to yourself. No one will be able to create heaven. You are merely decorating hell.” Chang Wenyu stood at the spot closest to the sky. Her dress had changed almost fully red. “Painter, when I first met you, I knew that the school’s consciousness would approve of you because, in this school, only you believe that it is not a cage of despair behind the door. But I did not anticipate the day when you would have control over almost everything.”

This time the painter did not reply. His pale fingers were moving on the canvas.

“What are you doing?” Only Chang Wenyu’s heart had not turned red.

“I am painting.” The painter raised the broken canvas. “I like to paint how they look like before they die.”

On the broken canvas, there was a woman in a red dress. One of her eyes was ruby red while the other had been dug away, leaving behind a black hole.

“How do you think she wants to die?”

The painter used his bloody hand to pierce at the woman’s heart in the painting. Chang Wenyu collapsed backward at the same time, laughing madly.

“Then, why do you think I came here to waste time with you?”

In the laughter, Chang Wenyu morphed into a blood flower. Her body collapsed into numerous blood vessels. The spot of her heart remained in the air, and the rest of her body was dyed red.

“You know my power, so you’ve hidden your heart away?” The painter looked at the painted Chang Wenyu. “She lost her body but has wasted one of my paintings...”

The painter ignored the bloody dress in the air and turned to the front gate. In the blood fog, a new threat was approaching from the red city.

Chapter 885 - My Canvas Broke

Chapter 885: My Canvas Broke

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

A heart raced, and the sound of beating came from the chest. It was cold, painful, and hard to breathe. The mouth opened, and the smell of blood was solidly stuck in the throat. "This is the memory I've lost? This is the taste of memory?"

Voices like this echoed around the school. Broken monsters came out from all corners of the school. Their eyes were filled with venom as they cried and roared. The mirror that loomed over the school had more cracks. As more students regained their memory, the mirror got more out of control.

The mirror was made from the students' memories and consciousness. A human's negative emotion and forgotten memories became the ghosts' power behind the door, and it was them who made up the school's consciousness, something that was beyond a Red Specter. The school's consciousness had been protecting the school, but that day, due to Chang Wenyu's betrayal and many other reasons, it suffered unprecedented damage.

"Everything has returned to the beginning." The painter held the broken canvas with one hand, and his other hand slowly rose to reach toward the crumbling blood red mirror above him. "My canvas... broke."

It did not feel good to have one's memory stolen. How innocent the students on the eastern campus had been was how ferocious they were now. Slowly, some of the blood vessels left the mirror, the buildings in the campuses became blurry, and the dream that the painter weaved was slowly dispersing. The blood curtain dropped, and the inverted campuses were slowly overlapping.

The point of overlap was the lab building where the painter was. He was standing in the middle point of the mirror world and real life; that was his current situation. The red world was filled with students who rejected him and the threat from the red city while the campuses from the mirror had students who slowly had their memories returned and were trying to find the culprit. Both worlds were pressing against the painter, but his expression did not change too much.

“If the canvas broke, I’ll just get a new one. The world will never lack paint and canvases, just painters.”

When the blood mirror was about to crumble, the canvas that the painter was holding dissolved into dust. This appeared to be a signal, and blood leaked out from the buildings around the campuses. A monster with blinded eyes walked out from the eastern campus’ library, and a bloated carcass floated out of the manmade lake at western campus. One of the doors in the eastern campus’ male dormitory was pushed open. A small boy pulled off the nails pinned on the back of his arm. There was a student ID left next to him, and it had the name ‘Lin Sisi’. The last building was the trash collection center between the two campuses. One of the closed doors was opened by a monster crawling on the ground with four limbs. A horrible stench rushed out, and endless negative emotions crashed forward. The four buildings were like four supporting points. The mirror was still crumbling, but the four temporarily stopped the two worlds from recombining.

“It’s pointless. The basis of the campuses is the school’s consciousness. Once the mirror is attacked by the ghosts outside of the school, it will still collapse.” Yin Hong looked at the mirror in the sky, and her eyes were scarily red. “The school’s consciousness can resist a Greater Red Specter, and that is why the School of the Afterlife hasn’t been consumed by the red city. Now the two who have the biggest approval from the school have fallen out. The reality and dream are being cut into two; this place is over.”

BANG!

The school’s front gate was blasted open. Black vines appeared in the fog. They looked like plants or the limbs of zombies. Anyone who touched them would be dragged into the fog and disappeared.

“Chen Ge, shall we leave through the well? The school is now being targeted by the red city; they probably won’t expect there to be another exit in the school.” It was not that the old headmaster was cowardly. However, this was a situation that a Half Red Specter like him could not change. The old headmaster was kind, but after experiencing so much, he was not blindly kind anymore.

“If we leave, this school will really be over.” Chen Ge gritted his teeth and looked at the painter and Chang Wenyu’s red dress on the rooftop. “Everyone is saying their own thing. Who do you think opened the door?”

“Chen Ge?” The old headmaster noticed the strangeness in Chen Ge’s tone. “Are you alright?”

“Of course, I’m alright. I am much better than I’ve ever been.” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes, and his pupils shrunk. “It’s still the same. The scenario behind the door belongs to the door pusher, and the person who killed the door pusher will be the new owner here.”

The old headmaster did not know what Chen Ge meant. He knew that Chen Ge was one child that would always make people worry, so he did not think much of it, but he softly suggested, “Shall we head toward the well for now?”

“Sure, with backup, things should be easier,” Chen Ge said, his eyes fixated on the lab building. “Many clues in my mind have been linked together. It is not an accident that I entered the School of the Afterlife. I still have something to discuss with the person who’s used me.”

“Then... shall we move toward Mu Yang High School now?” The old headmaster was afraid that Chen Ge might do something rash. He hoped that Chen Ge would be honest, but he soon realized how wrong he was.

“It’s no problem to go there, but before that, I have to capture that person.” Chen Ge pointed at Chang Gu who was running at the field. The school’s consciousness was collapsing. The painter was held back by Chang Wenyu, and Chang Gu, who had opened the gate, was rushing toward the education block with the ‘doctor’s’ help. The doctor had a wicked plan of his own as well. He had formed some kind of contract with Chang Wenyu, but he was worried about Chang Wenyu turning on him, so Chang Gu was his hostage.

“I will leave after I’m done. I will try to avoid a direct conflict.” Chen Ge had a reason he needed to capture Chang Gu. He could not tell anyone else about the real reason because the black phone was his biggest secret, and that secret was probably with Chang Wenyu now. Opening the comic, Chen Ge summoned all the Red Specters. “Find a chance to strike. Anyone who blocks your way is our enemy!”

At the same time, Chang Gu and the doctor escaped back to the education block. As they planned, once they ran back to this place, harrowing cries came from the gate. The cries were louder than the wails of the students, and they drifted into everyone’s ears. A figure appeared in the fog. She stood at the front gate, but she did not enter it. The fog that rolled into the school thickened, and more monsters were mixed in it.

That was not all. Not long after, the sound of munching could be heard mixed in the crying, and a large shadow appeared next to the first figure.

The fog blocked everything. The people in the buildings only saw a rough outline, but just from that, it was enough to strike fear and helplessness in their hearts.

“That is the thing from the red city?” Using ‘thing’ to refer to ‘someone’ whom he had just met was very impolite, but after meeting Doctor Gao who had entered the red city, he no longer viewed the monsters from the city as ‘people’ that he could communicate with. Crying and munching echoed in many people’s ears. Before seeing them in person, many students were already afraid.

“Chen Ge, this is not good—the school’s consciousness is split. These students won’t hold on for too long.” Yin Hong knew the school very well. “The door attracted the spirits and souls of despairing children. Some of them are wandering souls while others have their physical bodies in real life—only their spirit is trapped behind the door. Those students are very weak, and they are the basis and foundation of the school.”

Chen Ge understood what Yin Hong meant. The foundation of the school was actually very weak. It was simply not noticeable normally, but now that there was this chaos, the school’s consciousness had revealed its own weakness revealed. That would attract more monsters.

“After all, the school’s consciousness is a Greater Red Specter. There are many things we do not understand about that. We can’t underestimate the red city, but that doesn’t mean we should underestimate the school’s consciousness.”

A Top Red Specter was already very scary, much less a Greater Red Specter. He felt like even though the school’s consciousness had collapsed due to the internal fighting between the painter and Chang Wenyu, there was still something that it had held back.

“The door’s managed to grow to such a size without a door pusher, so it won’t have placed all its hope on the children.” Bai Qiulin was always in support of Chen Ge. It was not that he did not want to help the students, but from his perspective, other than his fellow employees, any other people there could turn out to be an enemy, so there was no reason to risk their lives for those people.

“But...”

“We have to find Chang Gu first. We’ll discuss the rest later.” Chen Ge had Xu Yin guard beside him as everyone headed toward the education block where Chang Gu and the doctor were. “To hold the painter back, Chang Wenyu has paid a heavy price. Even though her heart is still there, she will need some time to recover to her prime form. This is my chance.”

Red fog rolled into the school. The black plants that looked like dried arms crawled into the buildings through the broken windows. The school looked like a heart with shriveled capillaries. The students ran for their lives down the corridors. The students who hid in the classrooms were not doing so well either. The black things knocked against the windows, and more cracks appeared on the glass.

“If you do not wish to die, come with me!” Chen Ge saved as many students as he could. Lingering spirits and Specters wailed around the school. The sanctuary that had once provided a haven for ghosts now turned into a cage covered in briar. With three Red Specters opening the path, Chen Ge’s group reached the first floor of education block in record time. The blood fog rushed in from the broken gate, and the thickness was even heavier there.

“A living person has opened the door. Even if he does not die, he will be in serious trouble.” Chen Ge stared at Chang Gu in the doctor’s arms. “Leave us Chang Wenyu’s brother and go.”

Chen Ge did not dawdle and specified his reason for being there.

“Are you guys the other trump card she’s prepared?” The doctor was fully red. He had resisted the attack from the school, and he was not in a good condition.

“If you are not willing to go, you can stay as well.” Chen Ge’s stance was clear; he would stop at nothing to have Chang Gu.

“Don’t mind me. I hope Chang Wenyu can fulfil her promise.” Doctor dropped Chang Gu on the floor, but his eyes wandered to Bai Qiulin, who was standing behind Chen Ge. "The mirror that your friend is carrying looks very familiar."

"Do you want to take a look at it?"

"Nah, I just want to remind you, there is a mirror just like that in the last room of the nurse's office. There is a demon trapped inside that mirror. He is filled with lies and is very scary. He is a madman that escaped from a certain hospital." The doctor slowly retreated. "If you do not want anyone around you to be harmed, it is best to not believe anything he says."

The doctor was referring to the non-smiler inside the mirror. After he said his piece, he disappeared down the corridor.

"Such a dangerous character." Seeing the doctor depart, Yin Hong sighed in relief. She did not wish to fight the doctor. As one of the earliest students at the school, she was familiar with how scary the doctor was.

"The man made you feel unsafe?" Chen Ge realized the problem with the doctor too. When he got close, Xu Yin and the headless woman had both stopped him.

"Who can guarantee they won't be sick forever? Plus, he is the school's only doctor." Yin Hong seemed to be hinting at something. "Who is this man? He is still alive after opening the school gate."

"He is one of my friends." Chen Ge squatted down before Chang Gu. "I have done everything you siblings asked me to. Now, can you tell me where Chang Wenyu is?"

The dying Chang Gu saw Chen Ge. He opened his lips, but nothing came out. Black blood leaked out from his lips. His body temperature was scarily low. Using all the energy he had left, he only managed to raise his hand to point at the painter behind the mirror.

"She hid her heart in the campuses constructed by the painter?" When Chang Gu heard Chen Ge, he shook his head and kept pointing at the painter.

"Only the painter knows? Or..." Chen Ge's eyes twitched. "She hid her heart on the painter?"

Chang Gu still shook his head, and his finger was on the painter until he lost consciousness.

“Boss, what should we do now?” Bai Qiulin looked at Chang Gu on the ground and hesitated. He worried that Chen Ge might do something dangerous.

“We will go back to Mu Yang High School to ensure that the well is working fine, and then we’ll wait.” Chen Ge gripped his fists. “Now is not the most dangerous hour; there is no hurry to leave.”

As Chen Ge’s group retreated to Mu Yang High School, the crying and munching from the gate disappeared. A third figure appeared in the fog. From afar, there was nothing special about him, but this last figure stood between the other two.

“There is really an ownerless door.” The man’s coarse voice appeared from the gate. When he spoke, even the wind stopped blowing, and everyone at the school could hear him clearly. After watching it for some time, the man took a step into the School of the Afterlife.

Once he took that first step, it was as if some kind of seal had been broken. The gate slammed against the wall. The man moved into the school. Many harried screams appeared, and the blood mirror that corresponded with the front gate collapsed at an incredible speed.

Chapter 887 - You Can Call Me Painter

Chapter 887: You Can Call Me Painter

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The students in the school ran like crazy, but where could they run?

Hiding was merely delaying the final ending. The monsters from the red city did not need the school's consciousness, so everything was nutrients for them to consume. The school gate slammed against the walls, which collapsed under the weight of the briars. The man's left foot stepped into the school, and the blood fog pooled behind him like a wave.

...

"This is much simpler than anticipated." Fog covered his entire body so that only a blurry figure could be seen. His head slowly moved before turning to look at the blood mirror above his head.

"Every Specter behind the door is creating hell; only you would create a heaven." There was a trace of mockery in the man's voice. "But if you'd seen true heaven, you wouldn't be abandoned behind the door."

He raised his feet and continued forward. There was no one in the school who dared stop him, be it the Specters collected by the school or the Red Specters born at the school. More cracks appeared on the mirror in the sky, and the buildings in the mirror kept crumbling. Lin Sisi's group could not hold on any longer.

"Looks like there is no need to keep holding on." The painter stood on the roof of the lab building. He looked at the crumbling campuses and lifted his hand. One of his fingertips touched the sky. It was a mirror, a mirror made from endless memories and consciousnesses. "This is not heaven. This is merely a painting, a painting that I haven't named."

The fingertip phased through the mirror, and blood vessels rushed toward the painter. When his finger extended through the mirror, it was stained with blood.

"Since this painting is ruined, I'll just draw a new one. I need a new canvas and new paint.” His body passed through the mirror, and his shirt was dyed fully red. The painter on the campuses was as quiet as the ocean, calm and silent, but the painter who passed through the mirror gave off another feeling. It was hard to describe. His every move pushed people away. After the painter left the mirror world, the mirror in the sky started to peel in large flakes like it was raining blood.

“Have you given up?” The person in the blood fog did not rush forward. He lifted his head to the sky like he was trying to sniff something out. The painter on the rooftop had disappeared, but every mirror that fell from the sky was reflecting his image. When the first mirror landed on the ground, it shattered into small vessels that eventually coagulated into the shape of the painter. He stood alone in the field before the school. The blood fog curled around his body, and black briars grew around him, but he did not evade like the other Specters.

“The school’s consciousness has split, and you have personally ruined your last hope. Chang Wenyu is seriously injured. How do you expect to stop a whole city alone?” The man in the fog stopped moving. “You could have learned from Chang Wenyu and run from this place. I know there has to be other exits inside the school.”

“Exit?” The painter’s shirt was dyed red. The blood vessels weaved around his body, covering his heart. “You are standing at the exit, aren’t you?”

The broken mirror fell on the painter’s body, cutting out wounds. The distance between the sky and the ground seemed so short that there was only a person between them.

“I am the Specter that is feared by everyone at this school, so when everyone is afraid, I will stand at the forefront.” He opened his arms, and many arms weaved from blood shot out from behind him. They pushed back the fog and lifted the mirror above him!

“Come at once, I will use your blood to finish my new painting.” Without saying anything else, the painter who held up the sky rushed at the gate. Countless consciousnesses were screaming alongside the painting. The mirrored world was howling, and endless negative emotions drained into the painter’s body like a waterfall!

“I do not like how I look now, but who in this world will ever love themselves?” Cruel faces appeared on the painter’s body. They tore at him, injecting their pain and hatred into his body! Read the next chapter on our vipnovel.com

“Who’s never absorbed nutrients at a grave? Who’s never grown from flesh? I have seen plenty of hells, and because of that, I have to find heaven!” Black trails appeared on the red shirt. The faces munched on the Red Specter’s body. Each wound was nurturing a deep despair, and faces grew out from every wound!

“What kind of power is this? How come it’s different from what Chang Wenyu said?” The man’s voice changed. Things went out of his expectations. “You painted the dead people on your own body? You can obtain their power? No, you are suffering their pain and despair! They are consuming your body!”

There was no answer to his question; the painter had already charged into the blood fog.

“I only want that ownerless door. Why do you have to stop me?” The man in the fog waved his arms, and the two figures beside him stepped forward.

Wherever the painter passed, the fog would roll back, and thus, the two monsters from the red city showed their true form.

One of them was wearing a goat mask. She had a perfect body, and her skin was painted in red lines. She looked so weak, and tears flowed out of her mask. The woman did not seem to have her own face, and the mask had become part of her.

The other monster was large. It was like the combination of a human and a boar. He was walking on four legs and looked roughly human. He had a boar mask on. The scariest thing was that the man’s body was split open by a mouth about one meter long, and the mouth was filled with sharp teeth.

“Kindness and Evil, hold him back. I will go look for that door.” The man was confident in the two monsters, but before he started to move, the woman in the goat mask suddenly stopped crying, and the tears turned into blood tears.

“Kindness?” The man turned back to look and saw the woman being exposed before the painter. Her goat mask was slowly being removed, and her head fell down, her body with it.

“Kindness!” The blood fog rushed in from all sides to protect Evil. The man ensured that he would not be seen by the painter before coming to get Kindness, but it was already too late.

“I do not like Kindness because my kindness has never been treated kindly before.” The painter peeled off a piece of skin near his heart. It had the goat head woman painted on it!

“Now there are two left.”

Chapter 888 - Black

Chapter 888: Black

The man in the fog did not expect that the underling he valued the most would be killed with one glance. He thought back to what Chang Wenyu had said. The painter had a very scary power—by giving up a certain sacrifice, he could draw the people or ghosts that he saw into his painting and take everything away from them. There was huge limitation to this power, but Chang Wenyu did not tell him what the limitation was. She did, however, tell him that the painter could only use this power three times in a short amount of time. In other words, he could only paint three people.

“Kindness’ soul didn’t disappear. She only had something taken away from her.” The man checked the condition of the woman with the goat’s mask. He knew very well that after a Red Specter’s soul was destroyed, there would be nothing left, but Kindness’ body had remained.

“If Chang Wenyu wasn’t lying, then there is nothing to be afraid of since the painter can only use this power thrice.” The man put down Kindness’ body. “To stop the painter, Chang Wenyu has wasted one time of the painter’s power, so now he only has one chance left.”

The fog blocked the visibility. The leading man hid in the fog and did not show his face. “This is a scary power, but it is useless since we have the advantage in numbers. When he completes the third painting, it is the time for him to die.”

The fog that surrounded Evil slowly dispersed. The leading man practically gifted Evil to the painter. For him, using Evil’s life to trade for a painting was valuable. “When I open the ownerless door and become something greater than a Red Specter, I will find the thing that you have lost and help you recover.”

The man said these things to Evil. After hearing that, the boar-man creature charged at the painter like crazy. Blood fog tremored. Black liquid came out of Evil’s mouth. Unlike Kindness, there was nothing that was likeable about this monster.

“The painter’s special power is very strong, but the man himself isn’t that strong. Evil is his natural enemy. If only Kindness was here. With Kindness’ help, they would hold even a Red Specter back for a while.”

The man appeared like he could control the fog behind the door. Just this power made him quite mysterious.

“Unfortunately, he probably saw this problem, so he chose to waste one painting to deliver a heavy blow to Kindness.”

Blood fog gathered around him. The man was like the eye of the storm. He gathered all the fog before entering the school. Black plants grew underneath him, and the man and Evil headed toward the education block from two different directions. The man purposely avoided the painter, but to his surprise, the painter whose body was changing moved to stand between him and Evil.

“You think you can take on the two of us at once?” The man in the fog was very strong. Until now, he had not shown his face. His identity and power were a mystery. If he had not been worried about the painter’s power, this battle might have ended already. The painter used his actions to prove everything. The arms behind him bulged with black capillaries under the influence of negative emotions; the painter’s presence was getting stronger. He wanted to collect the entire school’s consciousness, to turn the negative emotions of all the students into his weapon. There was a magical power in people’s emotions. Specters were born because of this, and doors were formed because of this.

“A Red Specter can only support a limited amount of negative emotions. Without getting the door’s approval, you won’t be able to support the entire school’s negative emotions. You will lose your mind and explode.” The man in the fog waved his hand again, and more shadows appeared outside the school. “There are plenty of monsters in the city. They are mad and twisted. They have their eyes on this school. So what if you can stop me and Evil? As long as you are held back, the school’s consciousness will be consumed by them, and the more consciousness that disappears, the weaker you will be.”

The man in the fog did not want to fight, but the painter did not give him the chance.

BANG!

A large mirror fragment above them broke, and an arm behind the painter grabbed the broken mirror and stabbed at Evil. When the mirror peeled off, it instantly turned into screaming consciousness. It became the blade in the painter's hand and cut open a blood glow in the air. The mirror cut through Evil and tore open the boar mask and Evil's large mouth. However, just as the mirror was about to cut through the body, a sound came out from Evil's mouth. Many small teeth bit on the mirror. Black liquid dropped on the mirror. The mirror formed by the students' memories shattered, and the lingering spirits of the students were swallowed by the giant mouth.

"Greed is one of the forms of Evil. It can consume many things, and the more it consumes, the stronger it becomes." The giant mouth was rapidly recovering. It consumed the mirror and then bit at the painter's arm.

"He wants to consume me as well?" The mirror in the sky was already in pieces. The buildings turned blurry. Only four places were not affected. The painter's hands reached toward one of these places—the trash collection center.

"True Evil is not ugliness or lack in human nature but an innocence without purpose. Pure evil is the darkness on my canvas. It has no thought. It is cold and dark simply because it is black."

The arm grabbed the trash collection center in the mirror. The monster with four limbs on the ground destroyed the door of the last room and then ran away in a hurry. The mirror broke. One of the support points had been destroyed. The sin collected by the campuses rushed into the painter's body. Using his body as medium, he transferred the sin and curse into Evil's mouth. The sinning souls were cursing. They did not expect their final destination to be an ugly mouth. The screaming, pleading, cursing, and begging did not change the painter's mind.

"I am the painter; I need white, and I need black. To complete the final painting, either color will suffice."

Evil's body became bloated, and the painter's expression was getting uglier. The calm on his face slowly disappeared. He had personally trapped the sin in the last room of the trash collection center. It was trash that could not be reused, the darkest part of the human heart.

"If you want to eat, then I will prepare a feast for you!"

Chapter 889 - Let Me Paint for You

Chapter 889: Let Me Paint for You

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Even behind the door, there were not many Specters as mad as the painter. He was different from the other monsters; he could not be judged by conventional standard of good and evil. No one could tell what he was thinking, and no one could predict what he could do next, but one thing was for sure—this Red Specter was very scary. He would stop at nothing to reach his goal. He did not care about what other people thought, and he was not bound by morality. He did everything according to his own rules. This kind of person was very scary, and the man in the fog knew that.

Wind with the smell of blood swept across the sky, and screams echoed around the school. Be it the painter or Evil, no one had surrendered. Evil bit the painter's arm, his stomach bulging. Blood vessels appeared on Evil's face, and his body started to become uneven. The painter was not looking very well either. He turned his body into a medium as he poured the sin that had gathered on the campuses into Evil's mouth. He wished to fill Evil up to its death and clear away the school's sin at the same time.

That was a good idea, but the problem was that he had to be the medium. The sin would have to enter the painter's body before being poured into Evil's lips. This was a battle of determination. The first who crumbled would have a worse ending. Black capillaries appeared on the face, and they crawled around like little venomous snake. They pulsed like they could burst at any moment. Even under such circumstances, the painter turned to the man in the fog. Due to the layer of fog, the man knew that the painter could not take a good look at him, but he still wavered slightly. He was fearful of the painter's power.

“Are the dirty things in the city all like you?” The painter's expression was scary. Savage was not enough to describe it anymore. “You only know how to hide inside the fog. Do you not even have the courage to face me?”

“You have become more chatty. It means that you have weakened.” The man in the fog did not care about what the painter said. He controlled the fog to wrap around him. “I only need the door...”

“You will never find that door. Even if it was before you now, you wouldn’t be able to see it.” The painter appeared to say that to maintain his own rationality. His face had completely twisted, and he was scarier than any monster that he had painted. Endless sin and negative emotion rushed into his body. The pain that every student had experienced appeared in his mind.

There were many things that could pierce one’s heart. It could be a single sentence or a single event. Either way, they jabbed one’s heart like needles. One could be smiling, but as long as the heart was still beating, the wound would be torn open, bleeding black blood. It was not hard to remove the needles, but even so, an ugly wound would remain. The deeper the pain, the deeper the wound. The painter could not undo the wound in everyone’s heart; he could only first remove the needles and then wipe away the memories that were related to them.

If they did not think about it, the pain would not come. That was how the painter helped the students on the campuses; he left them with good memories and transferred the needles that represented pain to the trash collection center. The harsher the pain, the deeper they were buried. These needles would not disappear even after their owner had forgotten about them. After all, they were part of one’s memory. One’s life was only complete with pain and sadness. The painter had lacked a way to deal with such ‘trash’ until the appearance of Evil.

“I have been doing something wrong. It is not that there is no sin in heaven; with the sun, there is bound to be shadow. Perhaps I can build a heaven in darkness,” the painter mumbled of himself, like only by thinking that would he not lose himself. He was at the edge of a breakdown. When Doctor Gao suffered all the sin behind a three-star scenario, he also almost broke down even if he was a Top Red Specter. Currently, the painter was dealing with the sin from a four-star scenario. It had not been easy for him to have held on until now. This was a battle of conviction. The painter was at the edge of madness, and things were not going well for Evil.

He could consume negative emotions, but he needed time to process them. He had never experienced something like this before. Before the painter, no one would spend several years to collect the sins from a four-star scenario. Evil had a huge appetite, but even he could not swallow the sins of an entire school.

The monster from the red city had underestimated the School of the Afterlife. Even though there was no presence of something beyond a Red Specter there, this was a scenario that was deemed four-star by the black phone!

Sin poured into Evil like a black waterfall. Time lost all meaning behind the door. After who knew how long, Evil's body started to change. His boar mask was stuffed, and his body grew for several times its original size.

"The mouth is not the ending. If you want to have freedom, fight for it. Expand and make it burst, then you will have everything you want." The painter knew what he had trapped at the trash collection center—it was the darkest side of the school. The pressure that Evil was under was much bigger than the painter, and he had no time to take a breath. Before he could digest the sin in his stomach, more evil spirits crawled into his throat. The pupils in the boar mask darted with anxiety, a horrible noise came out from his throat, like someone who loved fish had a fish bone stuck in his throat. The man in the fog had a bad feeling. He needed to do something to help Evil buy some time.

"You are an anomaly behind the door." The man finally made his move. The blood fog turned into a storm, and the man stood in the middle. "Let me tell you how idiotic it is to build a heaven behind the door."

Once the man made his move, the painter reacted. The other arm behind him reached toward Lin Sisi's dormitory building. On the side of the mirror, Lin Sisi appeared like he knew this day would come. He turned to look at his bedroom before swiftly leaving. The arm cracked through the window, and the second support point was broken. The mirror pieces made from dreams and memories shattered and fell, each of them showing the painter's reflection. His body was cut by the sharp pieces. The arms that reached out from the wounds were stained black, and they waved lazily, "Every mirror here is my eyes. If I see you, I will take everything away from you."

The painter was not afraid of anyone. His madness was far beyond everyone's expectations.

The arms grabbed Evil and pierced into his body. The painter did not care about the man in the fog but focused on pushing all the sin into Evil's body. The black waterfall roared, and after Evil's body expanded to its maximum capacity, it exploded!

Many evil spirits crawled out from the body, and the whole school was covered in negative emotions. Pressured, the painter who was covered in black blood abandoned Evil's carcass, standing in the middle of the school.

"I have ruined Kindness and abandoned Evil—now you are the only one left. Come, let me paint for you!"

Chapter 890 - I Can See You

Chapter 890: I Can See You

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The broken mirrors fell like heavy rain, and above them, the sky was missing. The blood fog pooled around them, and underneath them was black briar. Behind them was the School of the Afterlife, and before them was the red city. All the scenarios that were only visible in nightmares turned into reality behind the door. The end of the world was not enough to describe the tragedy at the school; perhaps this was what hell looked like. Evil's body grew until it burst, and many evil spirits ran out from its stomach before circling around the school. They cursed the remaining Specters and everything that they saw.

The heaven that was constructed by the painter had completely crumbled. The sins that were buried in the trash collection center regained their freedom, and the thing buried in the deepest part of each people's heart gained release. Their cursing and joy told others with their actions how far could the sins in people's hearts went. They were once things that the painter tried to deny, but now they were personally let out by the painter. They took revenge on any Specters and people that they met, be it the students or outsiders.

The monsters that came from the city were dangerous, but the most dangerous party had been neutralized by the painter. He had used his special power to destroy Kindness and the negative emotions that had been collected over the years to incapacitate Evil. Only one enemy remained.

The arms were connected to the blood mirror. The painter possessed the approval of half of the students and it was the reason why he was able to hold on until now. As long as the painter did not step out from the school, he would possess incredibly powerful abilities. This was possible for Chang Wenyu as well. Because the painter knew that, he had been trying to kill her.

Dangers were everywhere behind the door, and the smallest mistake could cause one's soul to disappear. The man in the fog had underestimated the painter, and that was why he had lost his advantage. Kindness and Evil had lost, but the man in the fog did not surrender; this was a chance that he could not miss. He had been able to reach the school in such a short amount of time, which meant that he was living in the area that was close to the school. There were monsters that were several times scarier than he was. If he was unable to take down the school, once it attracted the attention of the other monster in the city, the door might be taken away by some other ‘people’.

The storm formed by the blood fog was slowly approaching. The wounded painter looked at the center of the storm silently. His eyes were slowly changing. Blood vessels pulled on his pupils, and his dark pupils were slowly dissolving, leaving behind only black eyes.

“Do you think I won’t be able to see you if you’re hiding?” Every mirror that fell from the sky had the painter’s reflection on it, and his black eyes were staring in a certain direction. The storm was approaching, but the painter did not go into hiding. He had no idea what the enemy’s power was, and he did not know how the enemy would attack. In such circumstances, the best defense was to keep attacking, to pressure the enemy so that they would not have the time to use their power. The painter did not defend; he was trying to look for a chance, but the man in the fog did not give him any opportunity. The mirrors that fell from the sky were unable to reach him. If he could not see the target, he could not paint them, which should be one of the painter’s weaknesses.

“Your power comes from the school’s consciousness. When you fought Evil, you were borrowing power from the mirror in the sky. Your power comes from that place—looks like the thing that I’m looking for is also there.”

The man in the fog was extremely cunning. He had not shown himself while gathering more and more information in the darkness. He would only make his move when he had full confidence. The storm touched the mirror in the sky. The man did not fight the painter head on—instead, he hid behind the storm to look for the door.

“You are very clever yet also very stupid; your greed is far beyond your ability.” The painter moved the arms on his back, and the broken arm that had been bitten by Evil earlier reached toward the mirror. This time, his arm reached toward the manmade lake on the western campus. The dead body floating on the surface was facing down, but when the painter’s arm phased through the mirror and reached into the water, the body turned around to show its face. The face shocked everyone because it was completely identical to Fan Yu!

“Everyone’s mirror is floating in the sea of mind. That lake is the sea of memories at the school. It is filled with all the students’ memories, including the thing that I have forgotten.” The painter had a similar face to Fan Yu, but due to their different presence, no one would put them together. The arm that had been bitten by Evil earlier grabbed at the body in the lake. The painter paused before slowly tightening his fingers. The body dissolved into blood in the painter’s palm, and the blood dripped into the lake. The memory was unlocked, and the normal lake turned into something else. First, there were ripples, and then it turned murky. Red bubbles appeared on the surface, and the lake was slowly turning red.

“Since this is my painting, I shall destroy it myself.” The painter’s arm yanked back, and the mirror burst. The bloody lake water leaked out. Many voices rang in the school. The memories seemed to come alive, and the distance between the sky and the ground was their whole life. In this short amount of time, the past turned into heavy rain, passing through the storm, covering the entire school. The painter had stolen everyone’s memories, and now he was personally returning the memories to them.

The students at the school remembered many things that they had lost. Those boring moments from they were alive turned into memories that could not be cut off after death. After all, it was those normal moments that formed the different version of oneself.

The blood on the surface of the mirror started to peel off again. The students’ conviction was shaken. The mirror shook, and there were three relatively stable places left on the campuses. One was the lab building where the painter was, the other was the library where the blind person was, and the last place was the broken education block on the eastern campus. Lin Sisi and the four-legged monster had both run to the library. There was no one at the education block on the eastern campus, but that place was not affected. That was not normal.

“The door is hidden in the education block?” The man in the fog headed toward it immediately. This time, the painter did not stop him.

The rain of memories dropped in the blood storm. No one noticed this but the painter—every drop of rain was reflecting pain. His dark eyes looked right at the middle of the storm, and the wounded lips slowly opened to say, “I can see you.”

The sea of memories washed about. Every raindrop was the painter's eye. Combined with the painter's special power, he had absolute advantage in the School of the Afterlife. No wonder even Chang Wenyu did not dare tackle the painter head on. The man in the fog hurried quickly toward the education block in the mirror. The painter stood where he was. He stared at the eye of the storm, and the black arms that reached out from his wounds extended, forming a piece of perfect skin on his chest.

The battle earlier had been so intense, but the painter had used all of the arms to shield this part of his body; he had hidden that secret from many people. This was the only part of his body that was not injured. This went to show the intensity of the battle between Red Specters. The man hiding in the storm easily came to the mirror. With no one stopping him, things went a bit too smoothly. He felt a trace of anxiety in his heart. He turned back to look and saw the painter removing the last piece of 'canvas' from his body.

Has he seen me?

The seed of anxiety grew in his heart, and it soon grew to crawl over his entire body. The moment the 'canvas' was torn out, the man's body swiftly turned into a shadow. He was like a nightmare. There was no definite shape, and he looked different to different people. The painter's bloody hand dangled over the 'canvas'. His black eyes stared ahead, and he did not start to paint for a long time. "You are not a ghost?"

The heavy rain continued to fall. The painter's eyes seemed to see something, and he said something weird from his lips.

When he said that, the man in the center of the storm became more desperate. He stopped maintaining the form of a living person and completely melted into the storm. He raised the blood fog and used the most brutal method to rush at the surface of the mirror. When the painter saw that, he knew that the man had guessed the location of the door.

“You are wearing a mask and using another person’s body—what exactly’s hiding under your skin?” The painter’s eyes turned completely dark. The white of his eyes disappeared fully, and he looked scary. Things had gotten out of control. No one knew what the painter saw that he was so shocked.

Endless blood fog drifted out from the red city—that was the source of the fog. The man’s power had everything to do with the fog. Of course, that could be how he hid his real identity, so he was only using this power. The fog on the ground rumbled, and the memories in the sky rained. A storm ravaged the school. Everyone was dragged into it, and there was no place to hide. As the mirror in the sky kept collapsing, the school itself was affected. The stain on the walls lightened, the windows were shattered, the doors were brutally shoved open, endless students found their lost memories, and they were consumed by the storm of confusion and bitterness.

With their memory awakened, to save themselves, more and more students chose to join Chen Ge, and a few of them were Red Specters. In the blood storm, the school was shaking. Other than Top Red Specters, no one could guarantee that they would be safe. It was dangerous to be in the school alone—only by gathering together and combining their strength would they have a higher chance of survival. Other than Chen Ge’s group, there were a few places where many students were gathered.

One was the lab building. It was the tallest building in the school, dominated by the seniors. They had deep colored uniforms and could be seen at the native residents of the school. Some of them might have been living there when the door pusher opened the door. In terms of power, they might not be the first, but in terms of familiarity with the school, they were the best.

The other place with many students was the center of the school. That was the place where most students were. With the help of the teachers, they were barely hanging on.

The third part was the northern part of the school. Chen Ge had not explored that place before. It mainly consisted of classrooms and some strange buildings of unknown uses. It was worth noting that there were several Red Specters gathered there, and some of them were Chen Ge's old friends like Zhu Long, Zhou Tu, Wang Yicheng, and Zhang Ju. The four of them had been led there by Chen Ge from the campuses. After they split up at the library, they had not seen each other. Chen Ge had no idea why they would gather at the northern side of the school. Currently, all four of them were injured, and that was probably because they were trying to protect the students who were following them.

At this juncture, any student would be able to give them power. Everyone used their body to resist the storm, but as Red Specters, they were under the most pressure. The blood fog carried with it monsters that attacked the students, and the students moved to gather at those few places.

Chen Ge's group saw this when they were leaving Mu Yang High School. The storm was insane, and each Red Specter was like a lighthouse. The red made people cautious, but at the same time, it gave people hope.

They are all on the northern side?

The conflict was endless. Chen Ge used Yin Yang Vision and saw Zhu Long and Zhang Ju, who were in battle. Zhou Tu and Wang Yicheng were dying. Only the other two Red Specters were fighting the onslaught, so the situation was not positive.

"Sir, I'm afraid we can't leave just yet." Chen Ge looked at the northern side of the school. Zhang Ju and the rest were the members of Chen Ge's supernatural observation club. Even though Chen Ge had created this club randomly, the members did not know that. "I have to meet up with the few Red Specters on the north side. They are my friends."

The old headmaster saw the children being consumed by the blood fog, and he felt so bad. Even if Chen Ge did not say it, he wanted to help more people, but he was powerless. Now that Chen Ge had volunteered to go and save people, the old headmaster agreed without hesitation. "Okay, I will go with you."

"The School of the Afterlife is a four-star scenario. Things have gotten to this stage, but the door still hasn't shown up. It means that this is the not the worst situation. We need to move now. With the addition of those Red Specters, we'll be stronger." Chen Ge did not trust anyone, but he had personally led Zhang Ju and the rest from the campuses and knew about their history.

"You two need to calm down! If we go there now, many people will die. I can feel something in the city awakening. If we do not leave before it awakens, it will be too late!" Yin Hong did not care about others; she only cared about herself and the people who loved her. Next to her, Xu Yin nodded. His body was wounded as his eyes stared at the red city.

"We should have enough time." No one knew how things would develop, but Chen Ge did not hesitate. "The earlier we move, the better."

The group turned around. When they passed the female dormitory, Chen Ge entered it to grab Zhang Ya's present box and the bag of candy. He had to prepare for the worst. If he was forced to leave the school, he would take care of Zhang Ya's items; he would not leave them behind at the school.

Chapter 892 - Black Blood

Chapter 892: Black Blood

At the School of the Afterlife, everyone had their own aims and would make different choices for their own target and benefit. When tragedy struck, Chang Wenyu disappeared, the painter fought the monsters from the red city, the Top Red Specters did not have time to care about others, and that gave Chen Ge the perfect chance. However, danger came along with this chance.

Yin Hong and Xu Yin felt something awakening in the red city. If they did not leave in a short amount of time, when more monsters came from the red city and the school was sealed, the well might be discovered.

“Quick!” To reach the northern side of the school, they had to pass through the center of the school. That was where all the staff and teachers of the school were gathered, and that included Mr. Lei, whom Chen Ge had met before.

“Everyone, do not panic! Stay in your room!” Mr. Lei and the other teachers tried their best to maintain the order. Actually, they were happy when they saw Chen Ge. In this kind of chaotic situation, they would welcome powerful people to join them. “You have arrived! I’ll leave the few classrooms on the western side to you. If all of us work together, we will be able to survive...”

Before the teacher could finish, he saw Chen Ge and the other Red Specters walk past him, heading toward the northern side of the school.

“Hey, where are you going? Do not waste your energy blindly! Relying on the school’s original defense is the best solution!” Mr. Lei’s voice was harsh. Even though he looked down on Chen Ge, he was saying this for Chen Ge’s own good.

“I have to go and save the others!” Chen Ge’s eyes scanned the students in the classroom. “My friends are on the northern side of the school. I cannot watch and allow them to be consumed by the fog!”

“Have you lost your mind? There are who knows how many monsters in the school now. Even if there are Red Specters among you, you will be surrounded. They are not afraid of Red Specters!” The teacher next to Mr. Lei tried his best to stop them. They did not want Chen Ge to leave. From their perspective, that was too risky and unnecessary.

“I know it is dangerous.” Chen Ge’s eyes swept the classroom and the students inside looked back at him. They were curious what kind of person would choose to go and save others in this situation. “But that is the difference between you and me.”

Then, Chen Ge did not stay any longer. “If you want to, you can follow behind me. If you don’t want to, I won’t force you. Wait here, and we will meet up at the center of the school.”

After leaving behind the group of weaker students, Chen Ge’s group moved faster. Seeing them walk away, the few teachers showed complicated emotions.

“What are you guys standing there for? Is now the time for you to be spacing out?” Mr. Lei roared at the teachers and then continued to repair the windows. With the rush of the blood fog, no one was safe. Everyone was a boat that might tip over any time soon, and saving oneself was nothing to be ashamed of. Cutting through the school was much more difficult than Chen Ge had anticipated. The blood fog caused low visibility, and due to various reasons, the corridors inside the school seemed to have changed.

Seen from the field, Mu Yang High School appeared close to the northern side of school, but one actually had to travel a long distance to get there. All the Red Specter were wounded, but it was still within an acceptable range. Through this experience, the employees of the haunted house grew stronger, especially Bai Qiulin and the boy with the stench. After Bai Qiulin consumed Xiong Qing’s heart, even though he had turned into a Red Specter, he was slightly weaker than Xu Yin who had found his heart. However, through this endless slaughter, things changed. From Li Wan City to the School of the Afterlife, Chen Ge had given him plenty of chances to train, and Ol’ Bai was no longer the same old gambler.

The other employee who gave Chen Ge a surprise was the boy with the bad smell. After he found his Red Specter’s body, he showed his extremely dangerous side. His power was related to the stench.

Without a reminder from Chen Ge, he stayed at the back of the group and blocked down all the monsters that tried to ambush them from behind, and it looked like this posed no trouble for him. The boy seemed to have retained his memory at the haunted house. He was friendly with Chen Ge and the other employees but showed annoyance at the residents of the school, like he had experienced something very harrowing there.

With the Red Specters leading the way, Chen Ge's group moved extremely fast. After some turns, they arrived at the northern side of school. There, they saw another monster from the fog. It was about five meters tall and crawled all over the corridor. Its body was covered with tongues, and the disgusting thing was that each mouth was filled with human teeth. They looked scary.

"What are these?" No one had seen them before. The monster was like something that came out from a child's nightmare. Its body was heavily twisted. It had the appearance of a human, but it could not be called a human.

"If it dares stand in our way, kill it." Chen Ge had nothing to worry about—he did not care as long as it was not a Top Red Specter. Xu Yin, the headless woman, and Yin Hong walked at the front. They worked together to kill the monster. It ended with a horrible death. The Red Specters had not seen this monster before, so they were cautious. They tore it into pieces and then used blood vessels to pierce through every inch of its flesh. After the monster died, its body turned into dry blood capillaries. It was worth noting that even so, its heart was still beating. The heart was much smaller than a normal human heart, and it had strange patterns on it.

Xu Yin removed the heart and passed it to Chen Ge like it was very useful to Specters. Seeing the hunger in the Red Specter's eyes, Chen Ge thought about it and handed it back to Xu Yin. "This is yours. If we encounter another one, you should discuss among yourselves how to share it."

Xu Yin grabbed the strange heart, and excitement crossed his eyes. His pale fingers peeled open the heart, and inside was a drop of black blood that had not congealed. After sucking the blood, Xu Yin's wounds started to heal, and his body turned more real and scary.

When he saw that black blood, Chen Ge thought it look familiar. He believed that he had seen it once in the base of the Ghost Stories Society. It had been kept inside a wooden box, and the box had been taken away by Zhang Ya. After consuming the black blood, Zhang Ya had fallen into hibernation for a while.

“The Ghost Stories Society once hunted this kind of monster? They have entered the red city before?”

As the only member of the society, Chen Ge had many things that he did not understand. These secrets should be in Doctor Gao’s mind, but the man had gone insane, and there was no telling if he would ever snap out of it.

“If there’s a chance, I should return to the society’s old lair. Perhaps I might find some good things that I missed before.”

After the decision had been made, Chen Ge stopped thinking about it. He led the Red Specters toward the northern side of the school. The red city was dangerous, but danger always came with opportunity. There were many things that were helpful to Red Specters in the city, like the monster from earlier, but that kind of monster was not that common.

Outside the education block, the painter and the man in the fog were still fighting. Chen Ge made use of this opportunity to cut through the school to reach the northern side. Zhang Ju and the rest were fighting the monsters, so it was easy to find them.

“Zhang Ju! Zhu Long!” Blood vessels crawled down the corridor, and the pungent smell assaulted their nostrils. Following the dripping sound of blood, Chen Ge came to the door of the one of the classrooms with the accompaniment of several Red Specters.

“Mr. Bai?” When they saw Chen Ge, Zhang Ju and Zhu Long felt tears in their eyes. A friend in need was a friend indeed.

“Don’t be scared, I’m here to save you!” Chen Ge did not say anything else but the simplest truth. “It is not safe here. Bring all the children, and we’ll leave!”

“Okay!” Zhang Ju, Zhu Long, and Zhou Tu were Red Specters, and Wang Yicheng was a Half Red Specter. However, Wang Yicheng and Zhou Tu had lost their fighting ability, and it was Zhu Long and Zhang Ju who were holding up the fight. Both parties met up, and the number of Red Specters around Chen Ge increased again to a startling number.

“Why didn’t you wait for me after arriving at the library? Why did you end up on the northern side of school?” Chen Ge had been curious about that. He did not think that Zhang Ju and the rest would abandon him.

“We were ambushed. Once we left the campuses, we were attacked. It appeared to be the painter’s people, and they were Red Specters, too,” Zhang Ju explained softly. “I couldn’t handle it alone. Thankfully, Zhu Long soon came from the mirror. The person who ambushed me weren’t expecting two Red Specters. After a momentary daze, they started to escape. Then, we chased after them until we reached this place.”

“Then? Where did they go?” There were other Red Specters hidden at the school; this attracted Chen Ge’s attention. If it had not been Zhu Long and Zhang Ju but himself who came out from the mirror first, he would have been in big trouble. The other party was prepared, and he might have killed Chen Ge before he had the chance to summon Xu Yin. Just thinking about that caused Chen Ge shiver.

“Don’t worry about that. That person now is...” Zhang Ju and Zhu Long pointed at their stomachs. “... in here.”

“I’m not worried about that. There was a Red Specter on the route Chang Wenyu arranged for me, so this means that someone has leaked the secret.” Chen Ge stopped thinking about this troublesome problem. “The painter is a difficult person to deal with. Luckily, he is not coming after us now.”

Chen Ge looked out the window. He had another name added to the list of people he did not want to face other than Doctor Gao.

“This kind of person is suitable to be friends with, but it’s not easy to be their friend.” Doctor Gao wanted to revive a dead person, and the painter wanted to build a paradise behind the door—they both had some strange ideals. After saving the trapped students, when Chen Ge led Zhang Ju and Zhu Long to the center of the school, Mr. Lei finally shut up.

“I will not force you to make any choices, and I will try my best to help you. However, I have limited power, and I can’t do so much. I can only save those who are dear to me.” Chen Ge had rescued the people on the northern side—that gave him the approval of many students, and more people wanted to follow him. Compared to the Red Specters around Chen Ge, the staff were on the weaker side.

When Chen Ge prepared to leave to the western side of the school, many students were willing to follow him. Before Chen Ge promised anything, the teachers became worried. They knew very well that the school's consciousness was made up from every student, so the more students they had, the safer they would feel.

"Calm down, look at who is holding back the scariest monster. The fact that you haven't been consumed by the red city is due to the painter. He is the one you should be thanking, not this fella called Chen Ge." Mr. Lei was feeling annoyed. "Only Top Red Specters can be relied on. No matter how good the others did, it is just a futile struggle."

Mr. Lei was telling the truth, and it was something Chen Ge could not deny. He asked the teachers to look after the students, but at the moment, Chen Ge stopped moving.

"How did you know I don't have any Top Red Specters with me?" When he said that, the surroundings became quiet.

"You have a Top Red Specter with you?" Mr. Lei scanned the ghosts around Chen Ge. He did not believe this.

"Why do you think they are gathered around me?" Chen Ge showed a winning smile.

"Are you talking about Chang Wenyu?" Mr. Lei was reminding of something, and he frowned.

"Not her. Technically speaking, this Top Red Specter that I have is the real owner of this school. I came here to recover her stuff." Chen Ge was not lying, and his expression was calm.

Under Chen Ge's cold gaze, Mr. Lei suddenly shuddered. He saw the present box that Chen Ge was holding, and he remembered that the box was taken from one of the rooms in the female dormitory. A scary thought crossed his mind. Mr. Lei sucked in a cold breath, and the way he looked at Chen Ge changed. "It's her?"

Chen Ge did not waste time answering—he just smiled. He hugged the box and ran to the western side.

Many students wanted to follow Chen Ge, and this time, Mr. Lei did not stop them.

"Sir, what should we do?" There were fewer and fewer students in the classrooms; the surrounding teachers were anxious. “We have promised the painter, no matter what happens, we wouldn’t have the students’ conviction shaken.”

“If that woman has really returned, where would she hide?” Mr. Lei did not appear to hear the other teachers as he kept his eyes on Chen Ge’s back.

“Mr. Lei?”

“Shush! Something big is about to happen!”

More students left the center of the school. The painter outside the building felt this, and his black eyes turned away from the man in the fog for the first time to look at the school. Chen Ge, who was running down the corridor, felt a chill run down his spine, and then he could not stop sweating. He turned to look out the window and happened to meet the painter’s gaze.

The painter’s dark eyes did not seem to have any life, but Chen Ge’s eyes reflected a blood red world. The painter was reflected in Chen Ge’s eyes, and he saw himself clearly.

Chapter 894 - Broken Door

Chapter 894: Broken Door

As he stopped to help his friends, more and more students chose to follow behind Chen Ge. Most of them were doing it to save themselves, but from the moment they made that choice, something changed.

“So, this is the school’s approval?” The gaze from the painter made Chen Ge feel like he had fallen into ice, but a sense of warmth exuded from the students around him. It was a strange feeling, like he was wrapped in warm blood. It did not feel bad. “There is no telling what will happen when a living human like myself gains the school’s approval, but there is no better choice at the moment.”

...

Chen Ge turned his head around and forced himself to look away from the painter, and the chill slowly disappeared.

“He didn’t notice anything, did he?”

After running several meters away, Chen Ge looked out the window again. To his consternation, the painter’s black eyes were still looking his way, but not at him but at this shadow. The mirror in the sky was ravaged by the blood storm, but the painter did not move his brush. He could only paint a ghost, and the man in the storm was not a ghost. He had not told anyone about that before, not even Chang Wenyu. The mirror was getting more and more unstable. The reason the painter could face three people alone was due to the support from the school’s consciousness. He kept breaking the mirror that represented the school’s consciousness to gain the power approaching a Greater Red Specter.

“This is getting a bit too troublesome.” The painter wrapped the blood vessels around the ‘canvas’ that he had torn from his body. He dragged his wounded body toward the eye of the storm. The man in the storm did not know about what he was planning. When he saw the painter approach him, his attack on the mirror grew more aggressive.

This monster was scarier than anyone had anticipated, but to prevent himself from being seen by the painter, he had been holding back, hiding in the storm. Greedy yet cautious, he always placed his own safety first. That was probably the only way to survive in the blood city. The blood storm continued to blow, and it cut at the painter's body like knives, yet the painter did not care about it. His dark eyes stared into the storm.

Those who were in his gaze would be shaken, and that included the man in the storm. A glance had ruined Kindness—the painter's special power shook the man. Seeing the painter approach, he stopped hiding his real power. An arm crawling with black blood vessels reached out from the storm. The skin of this arm was not that different from a living person, but the black capillaries on it caused people to be cautious. His body was running with black blood, and he looked like a mix of a human and ghost. The arm gave a familiar feeling to everyone there, like they had seen it many years ago in nightmare but now they could not remember the details.

Initially, the man only showed an arm. As the arm reached outward, it also showed his shoulder and the patient's garb that he was wearing. Instead of saying that he was wearing it, it was more like the patient's outfit grew on his skin so that he was unable to take it off. Upon closer inspection, the patient's outfit worn by the man was similar to the one worn by the 'doctor' at the school. They should have come from the same place, but one had run into the red city, and the other had run to the School of the Afterlife.

Chen Ge witnessed the changes outside the building with his own eyes. When the patient's outfit showed itself, he had an ominous feeling. The man had probably come from the cursed hospital, a patient that had escaped. Just an escaped patient was that scary, so how scary could the hospital itself be?

Actually, Chen Ge understood it well. Even though they were both four-star scenarios, the cursed hospital and the School of the Afterlife were not on the same level. Just like how the Third Sick Hall and Underground Morgue were both three-star scenarios, but the underground morgue was much more dangerous than the Third Sick Hall. The door pusher for one was Doctor Gao, and the other was Men Nan. Put Men Nan and Doctor Gao in a match, and the result was clear. That was the case with the School of the Afterlife and the Cursed Hospital; one had a dead door pusher while the other had far reaching influence into every corner of Jiujiang. If Chen Ge arranged the known four-star scenarios on the black phone based on their difficulty, the simplest should be the School of the Afterlife, then the Ghost Fetus, and finally the Cursed Hospital.

I've already interacted with the Cursed Hospital. According to the non-smiler, the hospital will eventually come to get me. The ghost fetus knows that I've killed the shadow, so it will also come find me...

Chen Ge could not share this problem with others. A normal person might not even get a Red Specter's attention, but Chen Ge was being targeted by two four-star scenarios at the same time.

What have I done to deserve this?

While Chen Ge reflected on that, the situation outside the building changed again. The man in the fog reached into the mirror. The black blood appeared to be some kind of toxin that worked on memories and emotions. The blood mirror cracked a lot. The man abandoned his arm, and the mirror almost fully collapsed. The memories fell like rain, and the cries of every students echoed everywhere. It sounded like the school was crying. The mirror shattered, and everything in the mirror crumbled, including the library and the education block.

The buildings collapsed, and the rooms disappeared, with only the last toilet on the fourth floor remaining. The dried blood vessels protected this room heavily. With the infiltration of the black blood, the layer of blood vessels peeled off. The cubicles in the toilet turned illusory, and the doors started to disappear until it reached the last cubicle. Chen Ge had been there before, and he remembered the last cubicle not having a door. When the last blood vessel dropped away, the cubicles that had doors all disappeared, and a door surfaced on the last cubicle that originally did not have a door.

The door appeared like it had always been there. This non-existent door on the western and eastern campus was the only thing that was real on the two campuses. When the illusion fell away, the real door appeared.

The last cubicle in the fourth-floor toilet, that was where the door pusher entered the School of the Afterlife. Without the protection of the mirror, everyone saw the door. It was covered in cracks like it had been broken before and was slowly pieced back together.

Chapter 895 - This Is My Chance

Chapter 895: This Is My Chance

The door to the School of the Afterlife had finally appeared. It was the only real existence in the mirrored paradise, the core of the mirrored world. When the illusion shattered and the heaven constructed by the painter had broken, the only thing that remained of the large western and eastern campuses was this door. It looked unassuming, different from the doors of other scenarios. There were no blood stains on it, like it was just a normal door.

“Quick! Look! There’s something behind the door!” someone in the crowd shouted, and everyone turned to look behind the door. A bloody reflection was shown on the cracked door—there was a woman hiding behind it. She was not that tall and wore a normal dress. The only thing different was that her heart was dyed red. The girl had a bleeding heart.

“Chang Wenyu? She has been hiding at the door?” The most dangerous place was often the safest place. No one would have guessed that Chang Wenyu was hiding by the door, so everyone including the painter was shocked. Of course, the man in the fog was shocked as well. He had done so much to find the door, and just as he was about to gain it, there was already someone standing beside it. He had a bad feeling in his heart, like everything he had done was for someone else.

Chang Wenyu, as if she had known that things would reach this stage, did not panic. When the hand of the man in the fog was about to reach the door, she stood to block it.

“Chang Wenyu!” the man in the fog shouted, but the arm that was made from black blood was unable to get close to the door. Chang Wenyu held her bleeding heart, and she had a smirk on her pale face. Strange patterns appeared on her dress, and as the pattern disappeared, more students collapsed to the ground like their energy was drained.

“This door hasn’t really made any considerations for the people in the school before. It continues to trick lost souls into coming here to strengthen itself so that it will no longer be so lonely. How is that different from a devil?

“It is actually worse than a devil because at least the devil makes use of human greed and desire, but the door uses the weakness and despair in people’s hearts.”

Chang Wenyu was prepared. As someone who could tussle with the painter, she was not a simple character.

“Using hope as bait and having people believe that this was sanctuary that could provide an escape from reality... Once you arrive here, you realize that this is a much deeper layer of hell. There is no salvation, no hope, and no escape.” Chang Wenyu looked at the broken door. “Why should such a door remain?”

She appeared to be asking the painter and conversing with the door at the same time.

“I’ve known about the door’s exact location for a while, but this door hasn’t appeared before me before. If it was not cornered, I would not see this door.” The smile on Chang Wenyu’s face slowly disappeared. She stood before the door, and the pattern on her face slowly leaked into the broken door. The shattered door quivered slightly like it was pleading for mercy.

“Painter, you might not know this, but actually, since I left the school, I have lost the school’s approval. Yet, have you ever wondered why, after losing the school’s approval, so many people at this school are willing to help me?” Chang Wenyu interrogated the painter, with the man in the fog stuck in the middle. He was cornered from both sides, and he was the most desperate person. The painter did not answer Chang Wenyu, instead continuing to attack the man in the fog.

“You know the answer, but you have been running away from it. Not every student here wants to stay; they should have their own choice. A life where you cannot make your choice, no matter where it is, is just another gilded cage.”

Chang Wenyu stood before the door.

She wanted to destroy the door, the man in the fog wanted to claim the door, and the painter wanted to kill. All three of them had different goals. The poorest thing was the man in the fog—he was stuck. He wanted to give up, but he was unwilling because the door was literally right before him.

Some treated the school as a sanctuary, while others saw it as a cage. Some were trying to change the school, to turn the bad into good, while others wanted to ruin all the negative emotions so that they would not harm anyone else. Chen Ge saw the battle above the school clearly. He could not decide who was right or wrong—everyone had their own opinions. The seemingly united school's consciousness was actually very fragile.

"Chen Ge, now is the best chance. We should leave while we can." Yin Hong did not care about the result of the fight. She just wanted to leave. For most of the students, the school did not represent any good memories.

"Now is indeed a good chance." The chance that Chen Ge meant was completely different from what Yin Hong meant. He was truly courageous. He looked at the sky. "Let them fight. The Top Red Specters that we can only look at from below will eventually come down, and that is when we strike."

"You want to go after them?" Yin Hong was shocked by what Chen Ge said. Be it the man in the fog, the painter, or Chang Wenyu, none of them were normal Red Specters. They had reached the top of the range for Red Specters, and with the school's help, they had the power of a Greater Red Specter.

"Do not be scared by their appearance. Take a closer look. Even though the painter and Chang Wenyu have their conflict, they are joining forces to deal with the man in the fog. The man has an advantage when he deals with the painter alone, but when he is attacked by both, it is only a matter of time until he fails.

"The man will either escape from the school or be consumed by the painter and Chang Wenyu. The key thing is that there is another unresolvable conflict between Chang Wenyu and the painter. After the man in the fog leaves, they will fight again."

Chen Ge saw this clearly.

"Chang Wenyu wants to destroy the school's door, and the painter wants to use the door to reconstruct a heaven here. Neither of them will give up this chance."

"A cornered beast is very dangerous. I don't think that we should get ourselves involved. It's lucky that we will be able to escape." Not only Yin Hong, but Han Song and the other students did not want to make the painter or Chang Wenyu their enemy. The employees at the Haunted House said nothing, though; they had full confidence in Chen Ge.

"The scariest thing about the painter is his special power. The reason Chang Wenyu hasn't shown up is because she's waiting for the painter's special power to run out. The fight of both parties will cause them to use everything. After they have fought, we will only face an empty shell."

Chen Ge's tone was calm, like he was describing something that was unimportant. "You have stayed at the school for too long, so it's natural for you to be afraid of the painter and Chang Wenyu, but for myself and other outsiders, they are just normal Top Red Specters."

Hearing the consolation from Chen Ge, Yin Hong and the other students felt worse.

"There are no normal Top Red Specters," Yin Hong grumbled softly. She looked at Chen Ge and was suddenly reminded of what Mr. Lei had said earlier, her gaze wandering to Chen Ge's shadow. She felt like something was hiding in Chen Ge's shadow, but the presence was so weak that she could not identify it.

"Never mind, I'll choose to trust you this one time," Yin Hong said as she ran to Yin Bai, pulling her hand firmly.

"You..."

"No matter what happens later, do not let go of my hand. You have to understand that the only person who treats you with sincerity is me," Yin Hong said like this was their parting words, and that gave Yin Bai quite a shock. The sound of fighting kept coming from outside the school. Chen Ge looked calm on the surface, but internally, he was not that calm. He had called Zhang Ya's name multiple times in his heart, but there was no response. Without Zhang Ya, with the power of the Red Specters around him, he only had the power to resist.

"Mu Yang High School's old well had the painter's secret, so the painter definitely knows about it. That path is no longer safe. Even so, after leaving the school from the well, finding the Third Sick Hall through the red city won't be easy either." Chen Ge had many students gathered around him, but he really had no confidence that he could lead everyone to safety. If they go through the red city, most students would die and be permanently buried in the city.

“The best solution is to wait until we can take control of the situation.” The School of the Afterlife was a four-star scenario, and it was isolated from the red city. With the appearance of the door, the fewer the secrets and the more things that appeared, the better Chen Ge felt.

“Chen Ge, forgive me for asking, but do you really think we can become the new owner here? We can do better than the painter?” The old headmaster was anxious. He was the oldest and the voice of reason. “The painter’s power is close to that of a Greater Red Specter, and he has such a scary special power. Even so, he couldn’t get full control of the school and gain the door’s approval. Why do you think we can do it?”

This question had been in the old headmaster’s heart for a long time—he just had not said it out loud. Chen Ge wanted him to become the new headmaster, but he was just a Half Red Specter. Every single Red Specter there could kill him easily, much less the painter.

“The students entered the door due to despair; they wish for salvation behind the door, not more lies. The painter has good intentions, but he is too extreme. There is no heaven behind the door. Once the fake heaven is exposed, the result will only be worse.” Chen Ge turned to look at the old headmaster, “We do not want lies; we need to provide actual help for these homeless children and turn this place into a home that they can rely on.

“We are not going to fix heaven. We are going to build a sanctuary that they can use to take a break. And no one will stop them from leaving. No one’s life is perfect all the time. Half of the time, it is filled with pain and conflict, but that is a complete life. We are not trying to change their life; we are merely providing them a break whenever they need it.”

This was the first time that the Red Specters behind the door had heard someone say something like that. They felt like Chen Ge had a point, but once they gave it a closer look, they realized that something did not feel so right.

“Okay.” The old headmaster stopped speaking, but there was still concern in his eyes.

While Chen Ge’s group were discussing, the situation outside the school changed again. The man hiding in the storm was attacked from the back. He had a pact with Chang Wenyu, but at the last moment, Chang Wenyu betrayed him. Everyone was out for themselves. They were merely using each other. Trust and friendship were rarer than diamonds behind the door.

“Chang Wenyu!” The door was just before him, but he could not reach it. The man in the storm yelled crazily. He wished to tear Chang Wenyu into pieces.

“We are all one step away from becoming something more than a Red Specter. The person who pushes this door open and becomes the real owner of the school’s consciousness will become a Greater Red Specter.” Chang Wenyu understood that well. “Did you think I would help you become that? If you gain this moveable door, you will use it to trick more students into entering it and use their pain and despair to strengthen yourself.”

“Isn’t that how the door should be used? The world has abandoned you behind the door. They bullied and tortured you. Now you finally have the method to take revenge, to make them feel the same thing—don’t you want that?” The man in the storm kept screaming. He had sacrificed a lot, but he had gotten nothing in return, and he might lose his life.

“Even now I have no understanding why the door appeared. This kind of thing is better destroyed.” The rune behind Chang Wenyu slipped into the door. The door slowly turned red, and blood leaked out from the gap. “Look, no matter how well the door hides it, it is still flowing with human blood. It is a monster that depends on despair and pain to survive.”

The cracks on the door grew bigger, and every student in the school heard the pleading, but the sound was different, like it came from their own hearts. The pleading door influenced all the students, including the painter. Since the mirror broke, the power he could borrow had lessened. His large body was slowly dwindling, and the arms behind him were shriveling as he dragged them weakly behind him.

Perhaps because Chang Wenyu had left the school and did not rely too much on the door, she was not affected that much. If anything, her presence only grew stronger.

“This door accepted you when you were at your most despairing moment, but now you want to destroy it. Without it, where will the other despairing people hide? Do they have the face the cruel world alone?" Even though the painter had greatly weakened, there was a glow in his dark eyes, like everything that had happened was still within his expectations.

The blood vessels that covered his skin revealed a corner, and the painter turned to look at Chang Wenyu.

Chapter 897: Rune on the Door

Chang Wenyu was the most unique presence at the school. She did not follow the rules, did not want to be bound, and purposely tried to undermine it. But a personality like that was loved by many at the school. Perhaps their ‘lives’ were too boring—her appearance was like a light for those despairing students. The light was not bright, but it stood out in the darkness. Her personality was completely different from that of the painter. It was not done on purpose, and the two of them steadily went down opposite paths from each other.

Interestingly enough, the students at the school did not fully support either one of them. The students were quite evenly distributed in support of them. Theoretically speaking, only by vanquishing the other could they claim the entirety of the school’s consciousness and become the new door pusher. That was when their battle started, and it had continued.

The man in the fog suffered attacks from the painter while he attacked Chang Wenyu. The runes on Chang Wenyu’s back were destroying the school’s door and blocking the attack of the man. Of the three, the one who had the prerogative was the painter. He could use one of his powers to deprive a Specter of their everything. This power was useless on the man in the storm, but it was useful on Chang Wenyu. The painter hesitated. After he dealt with Chang Wenyu, he would face the man in the storm alone, but that was not the key. The one closest to the door now was Chang Wenyu, and the second was the patient. When Chang Wenyu could not hold on anymore, the patient would immediately go after the defenseless door. If he became the new door pusher, it was over for the painter.

The vessels wrapped around the ‘canvas’ again—the painter did not use his power on Chang Wenyu. After so many years of battle, he knew her well. Since she dared appear, it meant that she had something else up her sleeves. It was too dangerous to go after her. The painter waited for Chang Wenyu to finish the fight with the man in the storm, and Chen Ge waited for the ‘three’ of them to end their fight.

What are the runes on Chang Wenyu’s back? Why can they make the cracks on the door bigger? When I was interacting with the ghost stories society, I didn’t notice anything that can damage the door unless the door pusher chose to suffer all the sin behind the door.

Chen Ge was curious about the runes on Chang Wenyu’s back, but he couldn’t see it from his angle. Chang Wenyu was leaning against the door, and her body blocked most of the runes.

Those runes appear to be drawn in blood. They don’t look like letters but like patterns that were formed after paintings were torn open.

Time ticked, and the runes on Chang Wenyu’s back slowly lessened. The new runes appeared to come out from her own body. They carried her flesh and blood, and when they printed on the door, they were stuck with her blood. More runes covered the door, and Chen Ge slowly realized that the runes were not formed randomly. They were arranged according to a certain arrangement before forming a bloody painting. It was a Specter with three heads, covered in shackles, and the eyeballs were shining with blood. Bizarrely, the eyeballs looked like they were real, like they had been gouged out from human eyes.

I have seen that somewhere before... Chen Ge used his Yin Yang Vision, and a thought crossed his mind. Before I entered the underground morgue, the ghost story society came to my haunted house! Doctor Gao left such a painting on my door!

Like he was struck by lightning, Chen Ge couldn’t believe his own eyes.

It is the same one!

At the time, Doctor Gao had used the phone spirit to lure him away and then sneaked into the haunted house, but then his ceremony did not seem to have been completed. Before he entered the door, he had been stopped by the guardian spirit of New Century Park.

What is the meaning of this painting? Why does Chang Wenyu believe it can destroy the door? What does the monster represent? It looks like a ghost but is not a ghost, and even ghosts are afraid of it.

The door of the school was moaning. The picture of the three-headed demon became clearer. Every piece of the painting had Chang Wenyu's flesh. It looked gruesome.

Before, Doctor Gao wasn't a Red Specter, and he used a normal person's method to conduct the ceremony. This allowed him to enter the door at my haunted house. Now, Chang Wenyu, as a red Specter, is using her own blood to complete this painting. The effect is definitely different. Looks like she is determined to destroy this door.

Using her flesh to do the painting drained Chang Wenyu a lot. The blood at her heart was fading, and bruises appeared on her limbs. The man in the storm had blood that could poison the ghosts. Chang Wenyu could not resist it anymore, and the poison infiltrated her body. Indescribable pain ravaged her body, but her mouth was slowly blooming. She was familiar with this feeling—the greater the pain, the brighter her smile!

The painting on the door was almost complete, and Chang Wenyu's body was at its limit. The blood at her chest almost disappeared. Without the red dress, Chang Wenyu looked like a normal girl, but there was an indescribable emotion in her remaining eye. The man in the storm could retreat at any moment, and the one in the most dangerous situation was Chang Wenyu. Yet, the girl had madness burning in her eye that made everyone else cautious.

If the painter was a sea of death, Chang Wenyu was a flaming ocean. When she was in deep despair, there was no telling what she would do. In the whole school, the person who knew Chang Wenyu the most was the painter. At this point, the blood on the painter started to attack Chang Wenyu. Once the door was destroyed, the School of the Afterlife would disappear. All of the students would lose their sanctuary and be exposed to the red city. The painter and the monster in the storm joined forces, and that was far beyond what Chang Wenyu could suffer.

The painting on the door was becoming more clarified. It was almost complete, but Chang Wenyu was at her limit. There was no trace of blood in her body, and her body was filled with wounds, but she stood before the door with a smile. Her head swung around. The remaining eye seemed to be looking for something. In such a dangerous moment, Chang Wenyu's strange action drew the painter and the man's attention. They followed her gaze, and then three gazes fell on the western side of the school, on one person.

Chen Ge!

Being scrutinized by three Top Red Specters, Chen Ge was dripping with sweat. Why are they looking at me?

While Chen Ge was confused, Lin Sisi's phone in his pocket suddenly vibrated. He opened it to look, and it was a message from a stranger. 'Have you remembered what you've lost?'

Chapter 898 - No One Can Leave

Chapter 898: No One Can Leave

What have I lost?

When Chen Ge saw this message, he was instantly reminded of the black phone. He had no idea who had sent this message, but it had to do with one of the Top Red Specter, or else the timing was too perfect.

...

So, a threat?

The message was not named, and the sender was unknown, but based on Chen Ge's prediction, the black phone was most likely with Chang Wenyu. It was Chang Gu who had handed him the backpack, and the phone had been the only thing missing.

She wants me to help her? But why would the message be sent to Lin Sisi's phone? Lin Sisi is the painter's partner; he has been helping the painter by protecting the dormitories.

Chen Ge did not get it.

Perhaps Chang Wenyu has approached Lin Sisi before.

The imminent problem was not to see who had sent the message but to get out from his latest conundrum. Being scrutinized by three Top Red Specters, Chen Ge had a déjà vu feeling. It seemed to have happened at Li Wan City before, so he did not panic that much, and that shocked the surrounding students.

Calm down, I have to calm down! The black phone is important to me, but that is a secret known only to me. Neither Chang Wenyu nor the painter know that. If I act strangely, it will expose the importance of the phone. Thus, the best solution is to act normal.

That was what Chen Ge thought and what he did. When he saw the message on Lin Sisi's phone, his expression did not change. Very casually, he placed the phone back in his pocket and turned around to look at the students.

“The well is in the western field. The boards at the end of the corridor can be removed, so we’d better move!”

The reason he had stayed was to grab some benefits, but since the three Red Specters were onto him, the most rational solution was to leave. When Chen Ge saw the message on Lin Sisi’s phone, he did not stay but chose to leave.

When Chang Wenyu saw this, her smile lessened, but the madness in her eyes grew. Her body was consumed by strange runes, and the three headed demon appeared to be branded on the door. The door kept groaning, and every student at the school could feel the pain coming from their heart.

“The movable door has broken the rules. Only the people in despair can push open the door, but the door has no right to trick despairing people. Whether or not to enter the door is the choice only given to the door pusher. That is the last and most saddening choice they have made in their lives!”

Chang Wenyu’s eyes were red. She smiled as she looked down at all the students at the school.

“No one can take away this right.”

After she said that, she gave up defense and allowed the attacks to fall on her. The whole school was echoing with her crazy laugh. The three headed demon fully surfaced. Its eyes rolled about, and it started to consume the already shattered door.

The door was about to collapse. The man in the storm cursed and extended his other arm out of the storm. His attack looked like self-mutilation. Every power used his own flesh as the base; the longer the battle dragged on, the worse state he would be in. The painter looked at the crazed Chang Wenyu and took out the skin hidden in the blood again. His bloody finger was about to land on the canvas when he caught sight of Chen Ge from the corner of his eyes. He had been cautious about something. After some hesitation, he put the canvas away and adjusted the remaining school’s consciousness to stop Chang Wenyu.

Chang Wenyu used everything to summon the three headed demon to destroy the door. The painter and the man in the fog tried everything to stop Chang Wenyu, and the worse thing was, more strange noises were coming from the red city. More monsters were waking up. The battle of the three Top Red Specters had reached its climax. Even Chen Ge, who was far from the battle, faced some trouble.

On the western field, a thin boy and a blindfolded man stood next to the well. There was a four-legged humanoid monster crawling on the mouth of the well. Other than them, endless black briar was coming toward the western side. The monsters in the red city appeared to have received some order and were all gathering this way.

The painter and the patient in the storm did not plan on letting Chen Ge go. The reason was simple. At the last moment, Chang Wenyu had laid her eyes on Chen Ge. They seemed to believe that Chen Ge possessed something of hers, or Chen Ge was one of her trump cards. Initially, Chen Ge had been hiding in the dark. No one had paid him any attention, but due to Chang Wenyu, the spotlight had landed on him. But luckily, the focus of the Top Red Specters was still on Chang Wenyu, and Chen Ge could handle this situation.

“Don’t block our way. I don’t wish to have conflict with you.” Even though Chen Ge said that, he wished for a fight. He had more Red Specters, and if he could consume one Red Specter from the enemy, it was a gain.

“This well is connected to the painter’s heart—it is not the exit on the other side,” the thin boy told Chen Ge. He was kind toward Chen Ge, which was strange. “Please go back. I do not want to fight you.”

“You seem to know me well?” Chen Ge looked at the boy and signaled for everyone to be prepared.

“I am Lin Sisi. You have been using my identity on the eastern campus.” The boy coughed. “The same thing happened to us. Actually, I wish to live like you, but unfortunately, there is no return.”

“It is never too late to make a choice unless there are no more choices.” Chen Ge pointed at the students behind him. “I can stay, but do you wish to these innocent children to get involved? Please, let me take them to a safe place first.”

He would rather stay in danger and not have danger come to any students—his impression of Chen Ge improved a lot.

“We cannot let even one of the students go. They are part of the school’s consciousness. The loss of each student will weaken the school’s consciousness. Now, the painter requires power, so all of you had better stay here.” The blindfolded guy had a chilling tone. “Chang Wenyu wants to ruin the door. She has lost the qualification to become the door pusher. After chasing away the monster that came from the city, the painter will undeniably become the new door pusher of this school, and then he will obtain the power of a Greater Red Specter.”

“The painter will undeniably become the new door pusher at the School of the Afterlife? You guys sure have plenty of confidence in him.”

Due to the different position that they took, they naturally had different ways of dealing with things. In the eyes of Lin Sisi and the rest, the painter was their only hope—he was the one closest to becoming a Greater Red Specter—but Chen Ge did not share their view. Be it the painter or Chang Wenyu, their thoughts were too extreme. No one knew the actual meaning behind the door’s existence, and even the door pusher himself would be unable to explain it. In those circumstances, there was no need to force a change to the world behind the door. There had to be a reason for it to exist. Chen Ge’s thoughts were much more innocent than the rest.

“Please get out of the way. The students are innocent. You all have no right to make them sacrifice themselves.” Chen Ge stood in front of all the students from the school. “It was the door from the School of the Afterlife that lured them into the door; it was not them who opened the door willingly. So, it was the door from the school that needed their help, not the other way around.”

Chen Ge’s very words resonated deeply with the hearts of the students. “None of us wish to fight the painter or Chang Wenyu; we just want to be alive.”

When the students following behind Chen Ge saw Lin Sisi and the man with the blindfold, they started to feel uneasy. It was an everyday affair to feel threatened by the school’s consciousness, and the painter and his people were in a way the representative of the school’s consciousness. Going against them meant that they would be abandoned by the school’s consciousness, and in the world behind the door where danger was lurking everywhere, losing the protection of the school's consciousness was no different from finding death. Before this, they had no choice, so even when the school's consciousness went against their own ideals, they had no choice but to silence their heart and follow.

However, that day, Chen Ge was there.

There were several Red Specters around him, and he had saved many of the students who were trapped in danger. He dared go against the painter's people, and he was not afraid of the teachers who represented the managers. Everything that he did was out of consideration for the students themselves. How could they not follow a person like that?

Why would they find a reason to reject such a person?

The same knife cut bread and flesh—the one thing that might help them could also injure them. The painter's people blocked the exit, and their actions lit a fuse under the resentment that had been curdling in the students' hearts.

One had to understand that not all the students at the school were Specters. A large portion of them were lingering spirits who had been kidnapped by the 'door'. Their souls were hooked inside the door, but their physical bodies were still lying in the hospital in a coma. Before Chen Ge entered the School of the Afterlife to find Chang Gu, he had seen many parents of the students trying to find and corner Chang Gu. Those were the parents of the students whose lingering spirits had been trapped behind the door.

Releasing a small portion of the lingering spirits would not affect the School of the Afterlife, but to let go off all of the students, the foundation of the School of the Afterlife would collapse upon itself. The painter and the school's consciousness would not allow that to happen, so they had no choice but to block Chen Ge's path.

"Chen Ge, I really do not wish to fight you—you will not win." Lin Sisi slowly lowered his head, and the following seemed to subconsciously escape from his lips. "You do not understand how scary the painter can be..."

"Lin!" Before Lin Sisi could finish, the blindfolded man interrupted him harshly. He turned around and pulled off the black cloth that covered his eyes. "Do not forget who it was that pulled you out from the deep water of despair and who it was that used the painting to help you retain the only beautiful memory you had."

After hearing what the blindfolded man said, Lin Sisi's eyes slowly turned cold. It was as if the boy had put his emotions away. It appeared that the boy was not a killer by nature, but for the sake of the painter, he would do what he normally would not.

"Chen Ge, neither I nor Lin hate you. Even the painter places great value upon you, and as a matter of fact, he wishes for you to join us. We should not be fighting each other. Take all the students back to the classrooms, and the painter will forgive all the mistakes that you have previously made."

"Forgive me?" Chen Ge took several steps back. Just as Lin Sisi and the blindfolded man thought that he was about to compromise, Chen Ge opened his mouth to say, "I do not think that I have done anything wrong, so I do not need his forgiveness. In fact, it is you people who need to reflect on what you have done."

There were plenty of students following Chen Ge, and more and more students were being dragged away by the monsters in the blood fog, never to return. The patient in the center of the storm was worried that Chen Ge would be convinced by the painter's people, so he ordered a large number of monsters to attack the students that were following Chen Ge. With every second that dragged on, more and more students would disappear.

"You will regret this." The blindfolded man threw away the black cloth that he was holding. The eyes that he had kept closed were now slowly opening. The left eye was a sea of blood, and the right eye saw the people and monsters, but there was no scenery or background. It was as if, other than blood, humans, and Specters, there was nothing else that was able to be registered in his sight. "I have now seen the moment of your death."

The painter and the man in the fog formed a consensus on the way to deal with Chen Ge. The monsters in the fog and the blindfolded man attacked Chen Ge's group at the same time. The difference was, the blindfolded man and Lin Sisi only went after the Red Specters, but the monsters in the blood fog attacked indiscriminately. This naturally placed Chen Ge's group in a desperate situation.

"Stop it! Please stop it!" The old headmaster cried at the top of the lung. He saw with his own eyes the students being dragged into the blood fog and their spirits dispersing just like that. It was just too cruel. Being killed behind the door meant that they would be left with nothing, and it was no different from being wiped out from the world.

No trace of them would be left anymore, and that was such a cruel punishment for the students who had basically done nothing wrong. For most of them, they were not at the School of the Afterlife of their own volition, so what had they done to deserve such an unsightly ending?

The battle between the painter, Chang Wenyu, and the man who controlled the fog reached its climax. This was a matter of life and death; their underlings did not dare dawdle. They tried their best to accomplish their boss' orders. Even if it was going to add just a fraction of the chance to victory, it would be worth it. Therefore, for the battle on Chen Ge's side, there were no tests or trials; the battle started with the bloodiest massacre.

The power of the blindfolded man and Lin Sisi was far beyond Chen Ge's expectations. There was no surprise that they could become the painter's left- and right-hand men. Both could make use of the school's consciousness, and each of them possessed extremely scary special powers. The blindfolded man could see the image of the person before they died, so he could recreate that process of death and turn himself into pure fear and pain.

Lin Sisi's power was even more unique. His body could morph into a ball of gray smog. No one could see through the smog. The monsters that were dragged away by the fog, be it Red Specters or normal Specters, when they reappeared, would lose their combat ability, and their bodies would be covered in wounds.

Chen Ge had a feeling that the people being dragged into the gray fog were still able to walk out of it alive because Lin Sisi never wanted to kill in the first place. Lin Sisi and the blinded man had unique special powers and completely undid the numerical advantage that Chen Ge's group had. Thus, the situation was getting worse.

Destroy the leader and the gang will collapse. That was logic that everyone would understand. There was a fatal flaw in Chen Ge's group, and that was Chen Ge himself. He was just a living person. Even with the close protection of the many Red Specters, it was hard for him to survive in the chaos behind the door. The blindfolded man and Lin Sisi both attempted to approach Chen Ge. As one Half Red Specter after another collapsed in their path, it was finally the Red Specters' turn.

Most of the Red Specters who followed Chen Ge were already wounded, and the key problem was that other than Xu Yin, there were no other Red Specters who would risk their own lives to protect Chen Ge. There were two enemies but only one Xu Yin.

With the approach of the strong enemy and the collapse of his friends one after another, as well as the continuous red wave that came from the red city that was not far away, the situation was getting steadily worse.

The fight of the three Top Red Specter had not reached its conclusion, but they were already at their limit. The final victor would literally consume everything. Han Song and Yin Hong tried their best to save as many students as they could and protect the students who had been following Chen Ge, to prevent them from being slaughtered by the monsters in the blood fog. The remaining Red Specters, though, all gathered around Chen Ge to stop the blindfolded man and Lin Sisi.

“People like you will never give up until you’re pushed to the gallows.” Lin Sisi morphed into gray smoke. No one was able to stop him, so they turned their attention to focus on the blindfolded man. He felt the pressure and turned to look at the mouth of the well. The monster that was on the mouth of the well chuckled wildly. With his limbs on the rim of the well, he poked his head into the hole.

Just as people were wondering what he was doing, the sound of water flowing came from inside the old well. The sound grew louder and louder, until it sounded like large and powerful waves hitting against the rocky shore. When the monster with four limbs poked his head out from the well again, everyone who saw him had a frown on their face. The monster’s head and body had inverted.

He charged at Chen Ge with a crazy smile, and after he left, many human heads floated out from the old well. They looked like black bubbles.

“What are those?”

A series of strange cackling echoed over each other, and endless inverted monsters with their heads hanging down crawled out from the old well.

“That well hides the biggest secret of the painter. It is an inverted world inside there. This is how human being look like in the painter’s heart.” After Lin Sisi gave that explanation, he charged toward Xu Yin. He could see how much Chen Ge valued this Red Specter. The gray smog surged forth, and Xu Yin was lost inside the smog.

“Xu Yin!” Chen Ge saw Xu Yin disappear inside the gray fog, and it felt like someone had yanked a piece directly out from his heart. The monsters that crawled out from the water well charged at Chen Ge’s team. Most of the Red Specters had been dragged down, and Chen Ge, who was standing in the middle of the battle, appeared to be surprisingly calm.

The situation had truly gotten out of control. The painter had many trump cards that he had not shown, and he was one enemy whom Chen Ge still could not red.

Chen Ge turned to look at the present box that he was carrying in his arms. He took out a candy from the candy bag that was next to the box. It was milky white candy, and it gave off a sweet, alluring smell. However, the human face that was pleading for mercy on it was quite disturbing to say the least. Calling the name silently in his heart, Chen Ge placed the candy gently on his own shadow. The candy dropped onto the ground, but nothing happened. However, Chen Ge’s strange action did manage to attract the attention of everyone around him.

“What are you doing?” Even though he was being attacked by numerous Red Specters, the blindfolded man still had the luxury to observe Chen Ge. This person should be the scariest Specter at the School of the Afterlife behind Chang Wenyu and the painter. Chen Ge did not reply. He took out another candy and placed it again on his shadow.

This time, something changed with the candy. It slowly dissolved like it was being absorbed by something inside Chen Ge’s shadow.

“What is hiding in your shadow?” The man with the blindfold had a very bad feeling. He unleashed a loud, shrill scream, and many monsters crawled out from the old well, charging madly at Chen Ge.

The Red Specters behind the door were teetering at the edge of life and death, so their senses were sharp and attuned. Even though the three underlings of the painter had been fighting with the other Red Specters from the School of the Afterlife, most of their attention had been placed on Chen Ge alone. Actually, including the painter, everyone was very curious. How did a living person like Chen Ge manage to have so many Red Specters listen to his orders? How did he manage to do that? What kind of power did he possess to accomplish such a feat?

The unknown was always the scariest. The painter and his people did not go after Chen Ge directly because of this reason; they did not know anything about Chen Ge's trump card. They stood there and saw Chen Ge growing stronger and stronger as more and more Red Specters gathered around the man.

"The reason that you can control other Red Specters is inside your shadow?" The man with the blindfold wished to get some information from the change in Chen Ge's facial expression, but to his disappointment, other than the added swiftness to his movement, Chen Ge did not show any unusual reactions, and his face was startlingly calm.

Drops of candies landed on the shadow, and they slowly melted like fresh snow. Not just the man with the blindfold, but all the surrounding Red Specters started to feel a weak presence coming from Chen Ge's shadow. This presence was slowly gathering itself like something was awakening from its dream, but this process of awakening was going to be very long.

"I remember Mr. Bai once said that there is a special someone hiding inside his shadow." Heavily injured, Zhou Tu, who hid at the back, commented on this like he was talking to himself.

"Yes, I do remember Mr. Bai saying something like that as well."

Another student who had been brought over by Chen Ge from the eastern and western campus, Wang Yicheng, concurred. "Before leaving the two campuses, we felt that presence. But after leaving the campuses, the sense of the presence instead became less obvious and weaker."

It was unknown whether they were doing this on purpose or it was a pure coincidence, but the conversation between the two was overheard by the people around him, and that included the man with the blindfold who managed to hear them very clearly.

"Your last trump card is hidden inside your shadow?" The man with the blindfold had basically confirmed that Chen Ge only dared enter the School of the Afterlife in the form of a living human because there was something protecting him inside his shadow. In fact, he could push this speculation further and say that perhaps Chen Ge was just a puppet. Maybe the thing inside his shadow was the real mastermind behind the curtain. No one at the School of the Afterlife really knew what was inside Chen Ge's shadow. Both the man with the blindfold and Lin Sisi had a very bad feeling about this. They did not think that Chen Ge's shadow would be something to deal with.

Coincidentally, at that moment, several teachers ran over from the end of the corridor of the education block. The leading person was Mr. Lei. When the Red Specters who guarded around Chen Ge saw the arrival of Mr. Lei and the rest of the teachers, they were quite relieved and happy. After all, they had interacted with each other before, and they were not actually enemies. However, what Mr. Lei said next completely shattered the hope of those Red Specters around Chen Ge.

"There is a Top Red Specter hiding in his shadow! She is not weaker than the painter and Chang Wenyu. Furthermore, she is deeply related to this school! We have to stop him no matter what!" Mr. Lei and most of the staff at the school were on the same team as the painter. They were helping the painter manage the heaven that was constructed inside a nightmare.

"Top Red Specter?" The three simple words appeared to have some kind of magical power that could shake everyone's heart. Even the three Top Red Specters who were fighting non-stop, like it was the end of the world, temporarily stopped moving.

"Chen Ge, do not disappoint me! You were able to hide until now! I knew I could count on you!" Her back and joined with the door already. Chang Wenyu, who was covered in wounds and had her lips split open, was laughing like maniac. Her blood red eyes were dancing with mockery. "Even if you kill me, neither of you are destined to get this door! The Red Specter who once destroyed this door has returned—the Specter who scares the door itself has returned!"

The situation appeared to have changed in that moment. Chang Wenyu was roaring and yelling like she had lost her mind. The painter's face was dark as the far side of the moon. The man in the patient's outfit who was stuck in the middle controlling the blood fog was as confused as he could be.

"Stop him. We need to stop him no matter what!" When the fourth Top Red Specter appeared, the balance would be definitely shaken. Other than the people who voluntarily followed Chen Ge, all the other monsters and Specters gathered to surround and attack Chen Ge. They ignored the Specters that hung around Chen Ge and placed their target on Chen Ge alone. They wanted to kill Chen Ge before the man had chance to summon the Specter from inside his shadow.

"Stop them! We need to stop them!" Those Red Specters and students who initially followed Chen Ge were slightly shaken when they were cornered, but when he heard from Chang Wenyu that there was another Top Red Specter hidden in Chen Ge's shadow, their confidence in Chen Ge returned practically instantly. They were both Top Red Specters, so Chang Wenyu did not need to lie. They felt like they had placed their bets on the right party, so they started to give it their all and sacrificed everything to protect Chen Ge to buy him as much time as they could.

Blood swam about like sea. The expression of Chen Ge, who stood in the center of it, did not change; he just kept dropping the candies from the bag onto the shadow. His shadow was like a deep pool. No one knew what was hiding underneath. They could only see some trace of shadows. The candies disappeared one after another, and the massacre around Chen Ge reached its bloodiest moment.

A large amount of blood squirted out from Lin Sisi's gray fog, and one could even hear the blood curdling scream from Xu Yin. The Red Specters that surrounded the man with the blindfold all carried fatal wounds on them. They were slowly approaching a state close to death. The man with the blindfold utilized his power on them, but no one really cared; everyone risked the chance of being shattered into pieces to help Chen Ge buy as much time as they could. The inverted and disfigured monsters that came out from Mu Yang High School's old well charged at Chen Ge at the same time. The students from the School of the Afterlife all volunteered to stand guard around Chen Ge, and they used their actions to win the school's approval.

“Painter, I bet you did not expect this, right? My last trump card is not even on me.” Chang Wenyu kept mocking the painter. She was trying to buy them, too. The door of the School of Afterlife had almost been consumed by the three-headed monster, and the cracks on the door had grown so big that it was almost impossible to fix it. The painter was not influenced by Chang Wenyu, but one could capture a trace of hesitation in his eyes. He stared at the shadow behind Chen Ge, and the last piece of ‘canvas’ covered by blood vessels silently appeared in his hand.

The monsters from the old well and the blood fog cut open a path that headed toward Chen Ge, but any monster that tried to charge at Chen Ge would be stopped by the students. There was a low gasping voice that came from the crowd. The saliva that was radiating this horrible stench slid down the corner of his lips. A pair of evil, venomous eyes were staring at Chen Ge's back. The four limbs crawled swiftly on the ground. The humanoid monster who ‘worked’ at the trash collection center was like a praying mantis that was hunting its prey. It borrowed the cover of the surrounding and jumped and weaved its way toward Chen Ge. It aimed for Chen Ge's neck and then opened its mouth wide.

BANG

A woman's skull blocked and landed on the strange monster's face. She used her own head to stop the attacking monster, thus protecting Chen Ge from harm. As someone who was practically ‘forced’ to be there, she had done more than she was supposed to. Her blood dripped down her body, and the headless woman in the red dress half knelt behind Chen Ge. She was covered in wounds, and one of her arms had been pulled off. She was unable to recover on herself, and the other arm was holding her own head. The monsters continued to swarm forward. The headless woman's other arm was pulled off, and the pale arm dropped on Chen Ge's shadow. The black hair that was tied around her wrist slowly melted into Chen Ge's shadow. At that moment, Chen Ge's shadow seemed to become quite different. The few Top Red Specters at the scene all felt something. The three of them all turned to look behind Chen Ge at the same time.

“She... has awakened?”

The smile on Chang Wenyu's face froze, and the man who controlled the fog had a strong sense of alarm rising within him. Of the three of them, the painter was the calmest, and he stopped hesitating and came to a decision. Before anyone could realize what he was going to do, his eyes turned pure black, and he turned to look at Chen Ge's shadow. His bloodied finger fell on the last piece of canvas.

"This is not good!

"Chen Ge! Shield you shadow from view!"

Cries and orders came from the crowd. Chen Ge also subconsciously moved his body about. He lifted his head to look, and the painter was painting Chen Ge's shadow!

"The painter's special power?" The painter was using his last power on Chen Ge's shadow. The School of the Afterlife, which was chaotic and crazy, suddenly experience a temporary lull. The match had been made. The painter could draw a ghost and strip away everything that was possessed by the ghost.

There was a great limitation to this special power, but only the painter himself knew what kind of limitation that was.

"It's all over now..."

Chen Ge and the painter became the focus of the entire school. On the painter's canvas, Chen Ge's shadow gradually became clearer, and the shape of the shadow was having the same change.

"Even without seeing the real person, he can paint by looking at the shadow?" Chen Ge felt like something on his body had slowly been taken away. An existence that was intertwined with his own destiny was disappearing little by little.

"Painting is just one of my powers. This pair of eyes can see the outline of the framework of destiny. I can follow the trail of destiny and paint whatever's related to you."

Chen Ge's shadow on the canvas kept on changing. Everyone's attention was drawn by the painter, and Chen Ge's hands involuntarily moved to his heart. The feeling was hard to describe. He knew very well that he was about to lose something important. He wanted to scream—he wanted to yell out that name at the top of his voice. The color of the shadow behind Chen Ge gradually faded, but the shadow on the painter's canvas was getting clearer and clearer. Unable to breathe, after several long, tedious seconds, the shadow on the painter's canvas finally changed , and it turned into the original shape of the Specter that was hiding inside Chen Ge's shadow!

The painter's breath suddenly weakened, and everyone turned to look at the canvas that the painter was holding!

On the canvas that was made from human skin was the picture of a weak, lanky body. There were many wounds left behind by nails and pins on his body. When the shadow on the canvas stopped changing, the shadow behind Chen Ge looked as if it had been thrown open. A small, shy shadow was standing next to Chen Ge. He hugged the sweet, milky candies in his embrace, and he was still munching happily on them. Only after several seconds did he realize that something was wrong. The candies in his arms dropped and rolled to the ground. The small shadow forgot how to chew. He shared a look with the painter and saw his own reflection on the painter's canvas. The smoke-like body dispersed, as if being blown by heavy wind, and the small shadow disappeared like it had never existed in the world.

“The scapegoat?” When the painter said this like it was an afterthought, the three Top Red Specters and the numerous Red Specters around Chen Ge were baffled. The Specter that was hiding inside Chen Ge's shadow, the Specter that so many people were afraid of, was just a scapegoat that was not even a Half Red Specter?

“We've been tricked?”

The smile on Chang Wenyu's face completely disappeared, and the faces of all three Top Red Specters darkened. At that moment, no one realized that Chen Ge's torn shadow did not disappear fully. Instead, it started to spread to its surroundings like a widening sea of blackness.

Chen Ge knew everything that happened around him. His eye slightly twitched, and that was all the response that he had. The ease of the man formed a direct contrast to the madness of the other Specters at the school. Chang Wenyu's single eye widened like it was going to pop out of the socket. The fourth Top Red Specter did not appear according to plan. She hurried the three headed demon picture behind her and did not put any hope in Chen Ge anymore. She gave it her all to destroy the door.

The man who controlled the fog was still confused, but once Chang Wenyu restarted her action, he also snapped out of it. He turned away from Chen Ge and focused his energy on Chang Wenyu. Of the three, the painter was the last to recover. He looked at the scapegoat on his canvas, and black capillaries pulsed on the back of his hands. His eyes seemed to have black fire burning in them. Every time he used his special power, he would have to sacrifice greatly. Every painting was his trump card.

Such an important power was wasted on a scapegoat due to skillful misdirection. The painter felt an urge to tear Chen Ge apart. This b*stard dared use a mere scapegoat to trick everyone!

His heart was bleeding. The painter looked at the Red Specters around Chen Ge and forced himself to look away. The most urgent task was to stop Chang Wenyu and not waste his energy on unimportant matters.

Once again, Chen Ge became unimportant. Other than the three Top Red Specters, the Red Specters that tackled Chen Ge and those who protected him all felt a certain way. A normal person had managed to trick a whole slew of Red Specters into doing his bidding with the aid of a mere scapegoat—that was unbelievable.

The blindfolded man's expression froze, and the other Red Specters from the campuses had the same expression. Even the students who followed Chen Ge were baffled. Mr. Lei, who had run over to deliver the news, was stunned.

“So, everything is a lie...” Mr. Lei stared at Chen Ge. “You’ve used me! Since you entered the forbidden zones like the female dormitory, you have been tricking us!”

Mr. Lei did not know what to say. He really had sensed a very scary presence from Chen Ge before, but since the painter had already made his move and revealed the truth, he was stumped.

“I’m sorry. I really have lied to you and everyone else. There is no Top Red Specter in my shadow. I did that merely to pull your forces together. No one is willing to be a scapegoat, and one person is too weak. Only by gathering everyone’s strength do we have a chance,” Chen Ge said sincerely. “I do not mean any malice. This could only be counted as a white lie.”

“It does not feel good being lied to,” the weak Wang Yicheng and Zhou Tu who hid in the crowd said. They walked away from Chen Ge and moved to Lin Sisi’s gray fog.

“The two of you are leaving?” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes. “But the supernatural phenomenon observation club has just been formed.”

“We are actually the painter’s friends. We’re just returning to his side.” The wounds on Zhou Tu slowly recovered. “It wasn’t easy to lie to you, but luckily, the result’s not bad.”

“Actually, I noticed the problem with the two of you earlier, but I did not point it out. You acted too exaggeratedly in the drawing room on the eastern campus. Zhu Long and Zhang Ju were intercepted by Red Specters when they crossed the mirror, and combined with the silent hints that you’ve been providing the painter earlier, I knew that the painter had planted his people beside me.” Chen Ge sighed. “I just didn’t point it out because I hoped that you would realize who is in the right and who is really thinking on your behalf.”

Chen Ge said that to Zhou Tu and Wang Yicheng, but it was also meant for all the Red Specters beside him. In the gray fog, Xu Yin had gone mad and roared endlessly. The headless woman had both her arms peeled off, but she stood guardedly behind Chen Ge. The boy who had just found his heart and the stench guarded in front of Chen Ge.

Chen Ge’s ‘scam’ had been exposed, but there were still many ‘people’ who were willing to stay by his side, like the old headmaster and Bai

Qiulin.

“You are so unreliable! And have I told you how much I hate crazy people!” Yin Hong wanted to beat him, but she did not leave. Nor did the large Han Song from the Taekwondo club. They stood by the old headmaster’s side. To attack Chen Ge, one had to pass through them.

“Mr. Bai...” Zhang Ju and Zhu Long watched Zhou Tu and Wang Yicheng leave. They were all members of the same club, and they were faced with a conundrum.

“You have already lost your chance.” The blindfolded man giggled wickedly. Zhu Long and Zhang Ju were being attacked by the blindfolded man. One careless move, and they would die. They were at the forefront of the fray. Even if they gave up, no one would say anything. They shared a look, and in the end, they chose the opposite of Zhou Tu; they approved of Chen Ge. Even though Chen Ge was just a normal person, even if he did not have a Top Red Specter, the many memories that they had at the school were fresh in their mind. It was Chen Ge who had helped them find their memories and themselves. They hated what the painter had done, so they sided with Chen Ge. Chen Ge’s biggest ‘secret’ had been exposed, but not many people left him. Still, many students followed behind him and placed their hope on him.

“The worms in the team have been pulled out and so were the pins. Now, those who remain treat me sincerely. I have no problem leaving the School of the Afterlife in their care.” Chen Ge’s face was startlingly white. His heart had been calling a name, and it was not until the hair around the headless woman’s wrist fell on his shadow did he get a response. “It is not over yet.”

Chen Ge mumbled the same thing like a broken record as if the mental pressure was too high, and it snapped his mind. He reached out and dropped the remaining candies behind him.

“You have lost your shadow. Who are you feeding those candies to?” Mr. Lei had been listening to Chen Ge mumble. This time, he would not be tricked. He summoned the other staff and students. They had decided to help the painter. But as Mr. Lei called for the other teachers, he suddenly saw the candies behind Chen Ge disappear.

“They’re gone?” The candies disappeared. They did not melt; they just vanished. Only a Red Specter could digest these candies made from souls so quickly. Mr. Lei rubbed his eyes to ensure that he did not see incorrectly. He quickly stopped those who were going after Chen Ge. Just as Mr. Lei was panicking, Chen Ge lifted his head, and the pale face smiled at him.

A chill ran up Mr. Lei's spine, and indescribable terror swamped his mind as he pointed at Chen Ge and screamed, "Something is not right! Don't go! There's something hidden on him! He's still lying!"

"This time, I am really not lying." The blood drained from Chen Ge's face, and he had difficulty speaking. "I really do not have a Top Red Specter on me, but a Greater Red Specter has never left me."

Chen Ge's broken shadow joined together and formed a black-red shadow that was larger than the whole field. The scary thing was, no one in the school seemed to realize that the shadow was still expanding.

Chapter 902 - God!

Chapter 902: God!

Chen Ge did not purposely lower his voice ,so everyone heard him clearly, but they had different reactions.

“Greater Red Specter? Always with you?”

...

When these words appeared by the headless woman’s ear, she finally sighed in relief. Tiredness swallowed her like wave, and the wounded woman collapsed behind Chen Ge, her red dress becoming tattered. Zhang Ju and Zhu Long, who were fighting the blindfolded man, heard Chen Ge, but the two only shared a look and smiled. They did not think much of it. Yin Hong, who guarded beside the old headmaster, grumbled, “Again? You can’t just keep on lying. A lie has to have some stuff in it to be believable, you know?”

“It is impossible for a Greater Red Specter to appear?” The old headmaster had a strange confidence in Chen Ge, perhaps because he had seen Chen Ge’s parents before and knew something.

“The painter, Chang Wenyu, and the man from the red city were fighting for the door because they wanted to borrow the moveable door to become a Greater Red Specter. None of them have reached that state. Do you think anyone will believe Chen Ge?” Yin Hong looked like a mother who was disappointed in her child. “This obvious lie is too hard to believe.”

“Is that so?” Neither the blindfolded man nor Lin Sisi who had morphed into smoke cared about what Chen Ge said. They followed the painter blindly, and if the painter thought that Chen Ge was no threat, he was no threat.

“Acting crazy to buy time, is that all you know?” Chen Ge’s reflection was shown in the blindfolded man’s right eye, and the black cloth that covered his eyes disappeared. “Let me see how you will die.”

There was a sacrifice to pay for a Red Specter to use his special power.

The greater the power, the bigger the sacrifice. That was the reason the blindfolded man did not use his power on Chen Ge from the outset. If the man had a Top Red Specter, his power might not be useful, and it would be wasted. If the man did not have any Red Specters, it would be too wasteful to use his special power to kill a normal person. In the man's left eye, Chen Ge slowly changed. His body did not grow old, but wounds appeared on his body.

"Accidentally death? Unable to reach old age? You have too much interaction with the other side, so this death is normal..." Chen Ge in the man's eyes continued to be wounded. The sea of blood in the blindfolded man's left eye slowly became even, and the sea level was dropping. When the man used his power and saw the target's death in his right eye, it would exhaust the collected sea of blood in his left eye. "Wounded body, followed by ghosts, consumed by curses, but why won't a normal person like you die?"

The blood sea in the left eye was rapidly draining. Even a normal Red Specter could tell by now that the blindfolded man still had not seen Chen Ge's death. The pressure on Zhang Ju and Zhu Long dropped conspicuously. Something was limiting the blindfolded man's power. They would not let go of such a good chance. They cooperated and attacked, causing the first injury on the blindfolded man. The blindfolded man did not care; all he cared about was what he was saying. The blood sea in the left eye was receding, and Chen Ge in the right eye was getting clearer. He was wounded, cursed, and tortured; he had a single breath left, but the man was still alive.

"Impossible!" A suction power came from the left eye like it was trying to suck the man's body into it. Pain came from the right eye, a pain that gripped one's soul. "Why won't you die?"

Just as the blood in the man's left eye was about to dry up, Chen Ge in the right eye finally changed again. The wounded Chen Ge was like a lifeless doll as he slowly lifted his head. The other thing that rose alongside his head was his shadow. The shadow screamed and wailed before dispersing in the sea of blood, and then a new shadow appeared behind Chen Ge.

The dress was red as blood, the pale arms circled around Chen Ge's shoulders, her black hair cascaded down like waterfall, and her arresting face was half exposed. The bloody lips slowly opened as the woman whispered something into Chen Ge's ears. Her voice became clearer. The blood sea in the man's left eye had become empty. Even so, the draining power did not stop. Fresh blood was drained from the blindfolded man's body.

"What is that?"

Pa!

The man's left eye shrank into the socket, and half of his cheek was sucked dry. His left eye was consuming his body like a beast whose hunger could not be quenched. With a scream, the blindfolded man dug out his own left eye, and at the same time, all the people in his right eye disappeared.

"Why are a male and female in his shadow? How can he survive after suffering so many fatal curses and injuries?" The blindfolded man rapidly retreated. He had to go warn the painter, but he was blocked by Zhu Long and Zhang Ju. The tables had turned. Now, it was the blindfolded man's turn to struggle. When the blindfolded man used his power on Chen Ge, Chen Ge had been on full alert. He had used his Yin Yang Vision to observe himself in the man's eye.

"Is that the real me?" When Chen Ge left the campuses constructed by the painter, he had seen something similar in the mirror inside the library. He had no idea what it meant, maybe some kind of hint. "Perhaps that is how my reflection in the mirror looks behind the door? Emotionless and like a puppet?"

With no color on his face, Chen Ge's body temperature was low. He touched his body and could only feel a chill. "Why would I feel so cold when Zhang Ya is awakening this time? Is it because she still hasn't gained full control of herself?"

The blood fog around his skin became frosted. The voice in his heart guided him, and he used his last bit of energy to look up. The three Top Red Specters had reached the end of their massacre. Half of the body of the man who controlled the blood fog had disappeared. He had used his own body as a sacrifice to suck out the heavy blood fog from the city. After using his special power for the third time, the painter had become very weak, and he had tried his best to attack the place where Chang Wenyu was joined to the door.

At that moment, the three-headed devil behind Chang Wenyu had been fully branded on the door. Her body was joined to the door with this devil's painting, and it formed a strange coexisting relationship. The cracked door was about to crumble. Facing the joint attack of the painter and the patient, Chang Wenyu knew that she would not win, but the woman did not panic; the madness in her eyes was still burning.

The last bit of red disappeared, and Chang Wenyu's body shattered like glass. The white dress fluttered down with the wind, and memories rode the draft. She had given up everything to exchange for a chance.

"This door shouldn't exist!" Chang Wenyu's voice came from the door. The eyes of the three-headed devil shattered. Only the left eye of the middle head did not explode.

"I've placed the door pusher's left eye in my own eye socket, so guess where have I put my own left eye." The three headed demon gnashed its teeth, and the demon looked rather similar to the crazed Chang Wenyu. The painter and the patient's attacks fell on the door. Combined with Chang Wenyu's destruction from the inside, the door was at its limit. The sound of cracking appeared in every student's ears. It sounded like their heart was breaking.

A crack started from the top and cut down to the bottom of the door. Everyone held their breath and looked at the sky. The cracks fell. Just as the door was about to collapse, a pale hand reached out from behind the door and pressed on it. Black hair rushed out like the sea, and it swamped the School of the Afterlife like a flower. It was covering up the entire school in its bloom.

The hair fell away, and her snowy white skin and black hair formed a great contrast. Crying souls screamed on her dress like caught fish. If one looked closer, they would discover that every screaming soul was a Red Specter!

"Who is she?"

"How many Red Specters has she killed?"

"Her presence is flickering, but it is already far beyond the strength of a Red Specter!"

Neither the painter nor the patient made a move; they had come to a conclusion. In the crowd, Chen Ge also watched the woman by the door. He could not move his eyes away, and for some reason, Doctor Gao's last words suddenly appeared in his mind.

If evil is the opposite of kindness, beauty is the opposite of ugliness, and truth is contrast of falsehood, then what is the opposite of a human?

There is no answer to this question. Some might say ghost—others would say god!

The presence that she had was completely different from other Top Red Specters. It was an extreme evil. When one's eyes fell on her, they would naturally be sucked into her and then slowly descended and lost. She was dangerous; everyone who saw her knew that. But no one chose to run because they had lost control of their bodies the moment they saw her.

"Zhang Ya..." Sitting on the icy ground of the school, with sticky blood on his fingers, Chen Ge had a weird feeling in his heart, like it was not a Red Specter reflected in his eyes but the amalgamation of certain human emotion. In his eyes, she was so real and unapproachable. Not only Chen Ge, the three other Top Red Specters reacted strangely. They reacted subconsciously, not like they had encountered a kindred spirit but like the fish living in the shallows running into the deep-water beasts.

"I am reminded of a legend at the school."

"Here, there is a name that shan't be named, and everything related to her is a secret."

"Some say that she is the door pusher, and some say that she killed the door pusher."

The painter looked at his last painting. The lost small shadow on it was looking about.

"That was my misstep. This painting should have been kept for her." The black arms fell from the painter's back. He voluntarily surrendered the school's consciousness.

"You are giving up?" The man in the fog wanted to cry. Half of his body had morphed into the fog. He had paid a lot but for nothing.

"The school's consciousness is scared. If I didn't remove myself from it, I too would be affected.” The painter’s voice was still even. No one could guess his thoughts.

“Influenced? Even Top Red Specters can feel fear?”

“I don’t know, and I don’t wish to know.” The wounded painter looked at the door of the school. “The red world behind the door is an endless abyss. We live behind the door. I’ve always thought I am part of the abyss, but now I realize, we’re just observers of the abyss.”

Black blood leaked out from his body. To kill Evil and Kindness, the painter had used his special power, and he had suffered the sin that had gathered behind the door for years. He looked at the woman behind the door as his nails dug into his skin. “Why did you have to return?”

The door that had almost broken was pressed on by the woman. The three-headed demon seemed to come alive. The remaining eye was red, and shackles came out from the demon’s body to curl around the woman’s arm.

“This is our chance!” The patient in the fog exploded his body, and only a head remained. He knew that he only had one chance, so he did not hold back anymore. The fog around the school was boiling, and even the fog outside of the school was summoned by him. At the same time, fleeting cries came from inside the red city. The patient had a harsh expression. He gritted his teeth and forced himself not to listen.

Of the three Top Red Specters, two cooperated to attack the woman. Yet, the painter stood alone in the middle of the school. He raised his finger that was covered in blood. He wanted to paint, but he could not move his arm. “Why have you returned?”

The black hair fell to reveal half of the woman’s face. The black-reddish eyes seemed to reflect the stars in the bloody sea. Chang Wenyu and the patient’s attacks arrived, but she kept her eyes on the painter. She did not say a word nor make a move. She just stared at the painter. It was as if the raised arm was petrified; the painter’s blood dripped onto the ground little by little. Even as his precious blood went to waste, the painter did not react, and he did not paint.

When the last blood dropped away, the painter’s face was pale. His dark eyes were filled with cracks like shattered crystal balls. The bloody wind dried the painter’s blood. The woman’s red lips curled into a startling smile. Her hand that pressed on the door slowly moved, and the school’s consciousness and Chang Wenyu screamed at the same time. The woman did not seem to hear them and stepped on the door that represented the School of the Afterlife, pressing it on the ground.

“The door is the channel that connects the blood world and the real world. No one dares insult it like this. You...” The head that was hiding in the fog wanted to say something, but he could not make a sound; something was stuffed in his throat. He lowered his head to look. A strand of black hair flew past his gaze. He turned around and saw endless black hair coming out from his neck. It was as if his own hair was coursing through his body.

“Ignoring the blood fog? How did she find me? This is not something possible for a Red Specter!” The black hair was like an unshakeable curse. It wrapped around the patient and slowly turned him into a doll. He had no idea when he had fallen from the trap.

In just a moment, the patient’s head was split open. His eyes were burning red. Before he was completely covered by the black hair, he turned his head into fog, and only something like a drop of tear remained. The patient was covered in sin, but the tear was clear and crystalline like his most precious memory. Without a body, the patient melted fully into the fog. It started to rain blood, and each drop of rain was carrying the worst curse.

“You can’t stop me!” The tear was hidden in the rain, and it dropped near the door. The black-red dress was soaked by the rain. The woman slowly lifted her other hand. The endless black hair was like a reverse ocean as it covered the whole sky. She moved her eyes away from the painter. Her perfect eyes glanced at a corner of the school. Her five slender fingers slowly tightened, and the black hair pierced through the fog and enveloped the whole school. She never intended to find the tear but instead tear away all the rain!

The black hair fluttered, and the red dress was like blood. Stepping on the door, the woman blasted everything away.

“Painter!” Lin Sisi let go of Xu Yin and risked his life to go to the painter’s side. “Why didn’t you make a move earlier? You should have one more chance...”

“It’s useless.” The painter dropped his arms weakly. He looked at the woman with a complicated expression. “I can only paint Specters, but that woman has already become a Demon God.”

“A Demon God?” Lin Sisi heard this for the first time.

Envy and fear crossed the painter's eyes. "Beyond Red Specters are Demon Gods."

Black hair covered the sky and swallowed the ground. In the heaven and earth, there was only one figure. She was dressed in red, the only red in the world.

Chapter 904 - The Painter's Departure

Chapter 904: The Painter's Departure

The School of the Afterlife was enveloped in the black hair, and it could only be described in despair. No one was able to escape, and even the door was shivering in fear. The only good thing was that the black hair had not gone after the students. Rather, it blocked out the blood rain from the sky. Not one drop of blood was innocent; they were radiating immense curses. The patient who was hiding in the fog was the source of the curses; the purpose of his creation appeared to spread fear and despair.

The whole school was swallowed by black hair. Looking at the nightmarish woman, Lin Sisi and the blindfolded man had given up their struggle. A croaking voice came from the purplish lips. The blindfolded man held his left eye, and this time, he was really blind. "I just took one glance at her. So, this is what's beyond a Red Specter?"

"Her presence is suddenly weak and strong; she seems to have broken through some limitation. I have no idea how much pain one has to go through to turn into something like her. I can't imagine it or even do it." The painter's hands hung by his side. "She is wounded, and her condition is unstable. It's different from the rumors I heard about her from the city; she seems to have problems controlling herself."

His gaze turned to Chen Ge collapsed on the ground, and his expression turned more complicated. "The man has my presence on him. Ever since he entered the school, I have thought of killing him, but whenever I wanted to make a move, there was a voice stopping me, like I would regret it if I killed him. The heart after death is the insistence before death; my heart hasn't spoken for a long time, so perhaps he is good friends with the me outside the door."

"The you outside the door? You mean he has been targeting the school for a long time and found the you outside the door, became close to him, and used that to enter the School of the Afterlife and complete his plan? That is too cunning. If we'd killed him earlier, perhaps this woman wouldn't have appeared." The blindfolded man hated Chen

Ge; his left eye had been blinded because of him.

“It is probably just a beautiful accident. The me outside the door is just a lock. If he approached him with a purpose, he would have been shunned.” The painter shook his head, and his hand held his heart. “The deepest despair will run into the most beautiful accident. I can’t kill him, but he won’t live for too long. The woman in his shadow still can’t control herself. A presence beyond Red Specter represents evil and resentment. Once even a trace of her existence passes into him, he will lose himself.”

“You are not trying to save him, are you?” The blindfolded man had followed the painter the longest, so he knew the painter well.

“It is time for us to go.” The painter did not answer but headed toward Chen Ge.

“We still have chance. To open the door, we have made endless preparation. Snap out of it, painter!” Lin Sisi grabbed the painter’s arm. “Once you brought me behind the door, you told me that you wanted to personally build a heaven for all despairing people. We can’t give up now.”

Slowly lifting his head, the painter looked at the screaming raindrop, and a faded smile appeared on his face. “I never said that I will give up. I am merely changing my canvas.”

He turned to the red city. “Don’t you think the red city suits us better?”

“You really want to leave?” Lin Sisi and the blindfolded man were unwilling, but the painter had made the decision. “Only when the half of the school’s consciousness is helping me can I fight with that woman, but now even the school is afraid, and the other half has approved of Chen Ge. Change Wenyu has sacrificed herself to melt into the door. She will not help us deal with the woman—she will only find chance to destroy the door. With just us and the monster at the outskirts of the city, how can we win?” Lin Sisi and the blindfolded man did not know what to say. In their minds, the painter was all powerful.

“The patient, Chang Wenyu, and I are all heavily injured, but the woman is an unknown. Indeed, now is the best time to kill her—I can sense that she is heavily injured—but we don’t need to take that risk,” the painter said calmly. “We should leave while she is dealing with the patient, or else when she is free, all of us might be consumed by her. Look at the Red Specters printed on her dress; I can't imagine a fate worse than falling into her hands."

He was rational; the painter was not dumb enough to try his luck with Zhang Ya. His black pupils saw through many things. The most powerful presence at the school was Zhang Ya, but it was the painter who knew the school the best. "If we don't leave now, we won't ever leave."

Without turning back, the painter walked toward Mu Yang High School where Chen Ge was, and Lin Sisi and the blindfolded man followed behind him. When the painter came over, all the Red Specters around Chen Ge went on full alert. Xu Yin glared warningly at the painter. Sitting on the ground, Chen Ge felt his body temperature dropping. When he saw the painter, he was shocked. He took out the comic and crawled backward.

The rain had dwindled. As if he could not see the Red Specters around Chen Ge, the painter walked up to Chen Ge. His dark pupils looked at Chen Ge before suddenly pointing at the comic that he was holding. "Don't worry, I won't kill him. If you use that power, not only you, but everyone you have painted will disappear."

Once the painter finished, a nervous-looking middle-aged man appeared beside Chen Ge. He too was shocked that he had been pulled out from the comic. He was afraid after seeing the painter, like an uncle with serious agoraphobia, and he quickly hid behind Chen Ge.

"Yan Danian?" Chen Ge was surprised by his appearance.

"He has a power that he can only use once in his life. He just wanted to use it on me." Due to Yan Danian's sudden appearance, the atmosphere was no longer that tense. "I haven't seen that power before. Once he becomes a Red Specter, he will be scarier than I am."

The painter had been talking to Chen Ge, but it was a one-sided conversation. Still, the painter didn't mind. He did not mention anything related to Chen Ge, like two friends chatting. He mumbled a lot on his own and then took a deep look at Chen Ge before turning to the old well.

Seeing the painter walk away, there were many questions Chen Ge had. He finally shouted, "Painter!"

The Top Red Specter of the school stopped with his back toward Chen Ge.

“Are you really Fan Yu?” That was the biggest question for Chen Ge.

“I am not Fan Yu. I am the painter.” With an even voice, the painter turned to look into Chen Ge’s eyes like he wanted to tell him something. “Everyone’s heart has a deep well. Mine consists of an inverted world. What about yours?”

The rain became smaller and smaller. The painter left with Lin Sisi and the blindfolded man, and following him were the inverted monsters. Chen Ge was still sitting on the ground, digesting the painter’s parting words.

Chapter 905 - Black Phone

Chapter 905: Black Phone

The situation between Fan Yu and the painter was rather similar to that of Chen Ge and the shadow. Chen Ge had noticed that, and the painter seemed to have realized that as well. “What is the meaning of the last words he said? Secrets and memories are buried in the well inside the heart—is he reminding me to be careful of things inside my heart?”

Chen Ge had many things that he wanted to ask the painter, but the painter had his reasons for being cautious, so in the end, he had only given Chen Ge that vague reminder. Perhaps it did not even count as a reminder but an ambiguous hint. The painter had left in a hurry, and this kind of rational opponent gave Chen Ge a headache. If possible, Chen Ge would have wished for the painter to stay. If the painter aided him, be it facing the cursed hospital or the ghost fetus, he would have more confidence. However, he knew that was impossible; it was hard to swindle the painter. He was like Doctor Gao, flawless in his thinking.

“Doctor Gao has escaped into the red city, and the painter and Lin Sisi have now done the same. Perhaps we will meet again in the future.”

After the painter left, Zhang Ya used her full power to deal with the patient, and his screams echoed across the sky.

“Chen Ge, what should we do now?” the old headmaster asked softly. All the red Specters and students turned to Chen Ge; they were glad that they had not done anything stupid earlier.

“The old well at Mu Yang High School is indeed a way to escape the school, but that is a road the painter left for himself. Now that the situation has changed, we don’t need to leave anymore. We should return to the education block.” Chen Ge was carried by Bai Qiulin toward Mr. Lei. “You are the school’s admin on the surface, so you should know how to fix the school and console the students who are unwilling to leave.”

“Students who are unwilling to leave?” Mr. Lei was worried that Chen Ge would start a commotion. After all, he had tattled about him to the painter and punished him at school before.

“The reason Chang Wenyu wants to destroy the door is because she saw that many students have lost their freedom and can’t leave after entering the door. I’ve seen the parents waiting outside the door, too. After everything is settled, I will ask all the students at the school if they want to leave, and if they so choose, they can leave with me.” Chen Ge had been through his rebellious period, and he understood those children. There were many kinds of despair, and some tragedy could be avoided. If not for the door’s entrapment, they would not have entered it. “There is no medicine for regret, but if possible, I wish to give them one more chance to make a choice.”

“Okay.” After the painter left, Mr. Lei seemed to turn into a new person, and his attitude was much better. “I will assist you fully.”

“Don’t assist me—you need to assist him.” Chen Ge pointed at the old headmaster, “In the future, he’ll be the headmaster here, so everyone had better listen to him.”

The battle had not ended, but Chen Ge was already dealing with the aftermath. This was not conceit but his confidence in Zhang Ya.

“A Half Red Specter?” Mr. Lei and the surrounding teachers were confused. The man before him had gone through so much to earn the door—why hand it over to a Half Red Specter?

“If there is possibility to create heaven behind the door, I believe it will be done by him.” Chen Ge pushed old headmaster toward Mr. Lei. Yin Hong and Han Song stood beside the old headmaster, and Zhu Long and Zhang Ju also stood nearby. Zhou Tu and Wang Yicheng had slipped through the old well to follow the painter.

“I’m not questioning your choice, but to become the school’s headmaster, he has to gain the school’s approval. Do you think the school will approve of a Half Red Specter?”

“You will need to change your way of thinking.” Chen Ge looked at Zhang Ya. “The patient is struggling, and the tear with the memory will eventually be found. Chang Wenyu joined herself to the door just to destroy it, so she is no threat to us. Now, with the painter gone, the situation has been decided. It is no longer important to gain the school's approval; it's more important to gain her approval."

From voice to tone, Chen Ge had expressed the meaning of the Chinese idiom 'fox exploiting the tiger's power 1', leaving Mr. Lei speechless. Actually, that was normal. Chen Ge had given him too many 'surprises', so he did not dare go against him anymore. "Summon all the students, and we'll retreat to the education block. We'll work together to clean out the monsters inside the school. This is our place, and we do not welcome uninvited guests."

"But the doors and windows are heavily damage. Even with Red Specters, it'll be hard to fix them." Mr. Lei had his own concerns.

"The school is too big, and there is a lot of unused space. We will have to abandon the outskirts and focus on the center as the base before slowly expanding outward." Chen Ge said all that naturally like he had experience. Then he was startled because, for some reason, he was reminded of his own Haunted House. The situation of the School of the Afterlife was rather similar to his Haunted House. "The Haunted House has been damaged before? The black phone is guiding me to fix it?"

"What Haunted House?" Mr. Lei was confused.

"It's nothing. I meant to say I wish to turn the school into a home for all the students. Those selected by the door have bad memories, and we have to treat them with more patience and care," Chen Ge said randomly and led the students back to the education block. The school was covered in black hair. This kind of scenario was one hundred times scarier than a nightmare, but Chen Ge felt safe inside it.

"The red city has been isolated from the ghosts. Temporarily, no monsters can enter it. Now is the best deal to clean them up."

Perhaps because Chang Wenyu wanted to destroy the door, after the painter left, the school's consciousness that he surrendered did not go to Chang Wenyu. Some went to Chen Ge, and other parts returned to the students. When facing the outside monsters, they were united, and things were turning up. Most students returned to the education block, and with the Red Specters leading, they cleaned up the remaining monsters.

Meanwhile, Chen Ge went to the front gate with his employees and found the dress that Chang Wenyu had dropped. The red had completely faded to become a normal school uniform.

“Xu Yin, Ol’ Bai, look around. Don’t let anyone get closer.” To destroy the door, Chang Wenyu had joined herself to the three headed demon. She had surrendered many things, including her red uniform that represented resentment and her spirit. Chen Ge picked up the uniform and searched the pockets. Moments later, he relaxed. “Found it.”

When his hand came out from the pocket, it was holding a black phone.

The screen had a few extra drops of blood that could not be wiped away. Strangely enough, when Chen Ge touched the phone, the dim screen suddenly lit up and started to vibrate. “It appears like only I can see the contents, and it will only receive message when I am holding it.”

Opening it, Chen Ge saw more than ten unread messages, and he relaxed fully. “Chang Wenyu doesn’t know the black phone’s secret. That’s good news.”

Chapter 906 - Let's Go Home [2 in 1]

Chapter 906: Let's Go Home [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The blood rain from the sky had stopped. Inside the world enveloped in the black hair, the single drop of crystalline tear appeared so special. From beginning to end, Zhang Ya had not said a single word. Compared to words, she preferred to use action to communicate. The hair that covered the sky slowly pulled back, and the tear had no place to run until it was captured in Zhang Ya's palm.

Pleading and scream came from the single tear. Other than the voice of the patient, there were voices of other people. Those seemed to come from his family and friends. This one tear contained many things. Hearing the sounds from the tear, Zhang Ya's pale hands slowly close upon itself. She seemed to wish to squish the tear. When she did that, the crying from the red city became more obvious, like something was hurrying there.

"Do not kill him! The tear belongs to that man. It is part of his memory, a segment of humanity." Chang Wenyu's voice came from the three headed demon's lips, but Zhang Ya did not listen to her at all. When the five fingers opened again, the tear had already disappeared, and the picture of a tear was added to her red and black dress.

The black hair was pulling back. After Zhang Ya dealt with the patient, she turned to look at the door that she was stepping on. She reached out toward the three-headed demon on the door. When she touched the thing, her pale hand felt like it was scorched by fire and looked like a fresh flower that was rapidly wilting.

Zhang Ya had gotten used to the sensation of pain, so she did not mind that at all. Her spirit was so determined that it would prove scarring to others. Soon, the cracks on the door appeared on Zhang Ya's arms. All the specters on her dress started to wail. Trails of black and red blood slid down Zhang Ya's arms and crawled onto the door of the School of the Afterlife. The door appeared to know that Zhang Ya was helping it, so it cooperated fully. Only Zhang Wenyu's unwilling roar could be heard echoing through the entire school.

“The door can move on its own. It has its own will, and it can lure living humans who are lost. It has broken through its limits! If you help it, you will be dragged along by it!”

No matter what Chang Wenyu said, Zhang Ya was not affected. After her own death, she no longer cared about other people’s opinions. With the cooperation between Zhang Ya and the door, the three-headed demon’s picture slowly lost its activity, and the single red eye was plucked out by Zhang Ya!

The picture did not disappear, and Zhang Ya did not appear to have the power to completely remove the picture. She could only make it go into hibernation.

The School of the Afterlife’s door stopped cracking, and it started to heal on its own. Zhang Ya put away Chang Wenyu’s single eye and stood before the door for a long time. Her presence seemed to flicker, strong one moment but weak the next. Controlling a sea of black hair was quite trying for her as well. The sea that was formed by the black hair around the school was slowly closing in, and it now just protected the area close to the education block. The black hair isolated the School of the Afterlife from the red city. The students at the school could hear the harrowing screams that came from outside, but they could not see what was beyond the windows of the school.

The trials and tragedy were over. The door had quieted down a lot. It stopped before Zhang Ya as if waiting for Zhang Ya to push it open. From what the painter had said earlier, Zhang Ya had forced herself out of hibernation this time. She was still heavily wounded and was in a special state. She had the power of something above a Red Specter, but she could not completely control it.

If she could push the door of the School of the Afterlife open and become the school’s new owner, with the aid of the school’s consciousness, she would not only stabilize her own condition, she might even improve her state. After all, the door pusher would have their power doubled when they were inside their own scenario. Staring at the door filled with cracks, Zhang Ya’s hand fell on the door, but she did not apply any strength. Her eyes moved away from the door. Zhang Ya looked into the School of the Afterlife like she was looking for someone.

The door pusher would gain the school’s consciousness’ aid and a lot of power, but one would lose something as well. The door pusher would not be able to leave their own scenario for too long and would suffer the sin behind the door. The pale hand slowly pulled back. The crying now came from the outskirts of the school perimeter. Fresh blood leaked through the gaps in the black hair that wrapped around the door. Zhang Ya ultimately did not push open the door for the School of the Afterlife. Instead, she wrapped her black hair around it and walked out of the school.

“Zhang Ya!” On the field, Chen Ge put away his black phone. He did not have time to look at the messages as he saw Zhang Ya heading out from the School of the Afterlife. The black hair fell to the side to reveal Zhang Ya’s increasingly beautiful face. She looked at Chen Ge with a faded smile hanging on her face. Then she walked through the wall of black hair, out of the School of the Afterlife, and into the red city. “She wishes to face the monsters coming from the red city alone?”

Through the layer of black hair, Chen Ge had no idea what was happening outside the school. Even though Zhang Ya was the Red Specter that had stayed with him the longest, the more time they spent together, the more he realized that he did not really understand her. Placing Chang Wenyu’s uniform on the ground, Chen Ge did not choose to follow the other students back to the education block but waited at the field. There was no outsider around him. Chen Ge activated the black phone and looked at the screen. When Zhang Ya plucked Chang Wenyu’s single eye earlier, the black phone had vibrated, meaning that Chen Ge had gained a new message. Clicking open the new message, the content that appeared shocked Chen Ge somewhat.

A new employee’s special page has been unlocked? Chen Ge was confused. Of all the employees that he had, only Zhang Ya had her own special page. Is it because Xu Yin or the headless woman have broken through some kind of limit?

Clicking on the phone, when Chen Ge saw the new special page, he was beyond shocked. Zhang Ya’s special page was red in color, but the background color of this new special page was gray, and it was crawling with endless black hair. In the middle of the cage formed by the hair was a maddened girl. She ignored all the rules, and her body was covered in wound. In her single eye, there was a desperation that was close to being a sickness.

Single eye? Chang Wenyu? Why would she have a special page in the black phone, and why is it gray?

Clicking on Chang Wenyu's special page, the phone showed him a single line—lingering soul, still remaining.

Is it because Chang Wenyu has come into contact with the black phone in private? This is the revenge of the black phone? All the Specters that have come into contact with the black phone either become one of its people, or it refuses to even let the dead spirit have its peace—is that it?

Chen Ge clicked on the other message on the black phone according to the sequence. After entering the School of the Afterlife, the four-star Trial Mission on the black phone had been activated. Comparing it to the timeline, whenever he was in danger, the black phone would give the corresponding hint. However, the phone had been confiscated by Chang Wenyu, and he did not have the chance to view them. Looking down further, Chen Ge still did not see the alert that the mission had been completed. He was becoming more and more agitated and kept turning to look outside the School of the Afterlife.

In a few short minutes, the black hair that wrapped around the school was like the receding tide, slowly fading away. As the black hair faded away so did the screaming outside the School of the Afterlife. Blood fog floated into the school again, and in the fog, there was the blurry figure of a woman. The black and red dress fluttered in the wind. Demons surrounded her, and screams and wails formed a wall around her.

“Zhang Ya!” The agitation in Chen Ge's heart almost dissipated instantly. He ran to the woman in the fog, but when he was a few meters away from her, a strand of black hair moved to stop him. For some reason, Zhang Ya did not want him to get too close. “Are you alright? Let's go home now.”

Hearing Chen Ge's voice, Zhang Ya's lips moved slightly like she wanted to say something to Chen Ge, but in the end, she did not say anything. Her presence had weakened a lot compared to before. The black hair behind her slowly fell away to reveal the door that had been hidden. Zhang Ya turned to look at Xu Yin as if she was asking the latter to push open the door, but Xu Yin shook his head. No one knew what Zhang Ya and the door of the School of the Afterlife had experienced at the gate of the school. Chen Ge only knew that both Zhang Ya and the door were at their weakest. Other than Xu Yin, Zhang Ya was cautious regarding anyone else at the school.

She let go of the door. The door was at its breaking point. The moment Zhang Ya released it, it disappeared. At the same time, there was a click that came from one of the cubicles at the top of the education block. Everyone turned to look at it. Light red blood vessels started to spread through the entire school, centered around the toilet at the top floor of the education block. The lingering Specters and many half dead monsters slowly disappeared. The blood vessels pierced through their bodies, and the door used them as the foundation to rebuild and reconstruct the School of the Afterlife.

“The door still does not possess a door pusher, but this can be considered the best ending.” Chen Ge pulled his eyes away and turned to look at Zhang Ya when he realized that Zhang Ya was already standing behind him. At that moment, the redness of her dress had faded away, and she looked just like a normal girl. The two locked eyes, and Zhang Ya phased through Chen Ge’s body before disappearing in his shadow.

“That... was an illusion right.” When Zhang Ya phased through him, the chilliness on his body decreased a lot, and the sense of discomfort was taken away by Zhang Ya. Staring dumbly at his shadow, Chen Ge slowly squatted down. He reached out to touch the face of his shadow. One would think that the man had lost his mind, but no one went to disturb Chen Ge.

After a long time, he stood up. “Let’s go. We have wasted too much time here. It’s about time we go home.”

Leading all the employees back to the education block, Chen Ge followed his initial plan and had the old headmaster stay. The students at the School of the Afterlife did not know the exact details between the door and Zhang Ya. They now believed that Zhang Ya was the new owner of the School of the Afterlife and that the old headmaster was the new admin selected by Zhang Ya.

“In the future, you will find that you respect this new headmaster with your actual belief and sincerity.” Chen Ge had confidence in the old headmaster. After confirming the new admin of the school, he started to deal with the students. The school’s consciousness did not receive much damage. The main reason was because the painter had taken most of the suffering and attacks on his own.

“All the lingering spirits that wish to leave the School of the Afterlife can come with me. Those who wish to stay can continue to live your life here. From now on, this will be your home.”

The boy with the stench chose to leave with Chen Ge. Zhu Long, Zhang Ju, Yin Hong, and Han Song though chose to stay. For them, the world behind the door was their home. With the aid of those few Red Specters, the work of the old headmaster would be much easier. Most of the seniors chose to stay. They had gotten used to the life at the School of the Afterlife.

Those who chose to leave were mostly lingering spirits and spiritual essence. Most of their bodies were lying in the hospital, stuck in comas. After their many trials at the School of the Afterlife, the lock in their hearts had been opened, and despair was no longer with him. They wished to face the horrible, scary, unavoidable truth and reality that had light in it once more. There were many students who wished to leave. The door of the School of the Afterlife could move on its own. The range of the students that it had accepted was very wide, so it was far beyond the city of Jiujiang.

“After you leave, if you find out that you are unable to get used to everyday life or you have nowhere else to go, you can come and find me at Western Jiujiang New Century Park. My Haunted House will provide you with another home.”

The term Western Jiujiang New Century Park was deeply seared in the minds of all the students. It was not that Chen Ge was hoping for free labor—he was really worried and put in consideration toward these children.

The School of the Afterlife would require a long time to recover. Chen Ge could not stay there for that long. He hugged the present box that he had taken from Zhang Ya's dormitory and dragged the unconscious Chang Gu. He had the boy with the stench carry the mirror that contained the non smiler and the previous headmaster that had been turned into a doll.

The non-smiler was related to the cursed hospital, and if Chen Ge wanted to gain information about hospital, he had to take him with him. He took the previous headmaster of the School of the Afterlife because he knew too many secrets about Zhang Ya. Chen Ge planned to find an opportunity to return him to Zhang Ya. After dealing with everything, he summoned all the employees and the lingering spirits who wished to leave to the top floor of the education block. No matter the depth of the despair that those students had been through, those children had chosen to leave, and Chen Ge chose to respect their decision.

“After staying too long behind the door, you will be assimilated into this blood red world. It will drag people deeper into the dark abyss. You are lucky to have run into me. Now, the nightmare is about to end.” Chen Ge walked into the toilet at the top of the education block. This was the source of the blood vessels. He stopped before the last cubicle. The door of that cubicle was filled with cracks and pulsing blood vessels, looking quite scary.

“You are the most unique door I have ever met. Since Zhang Ya has let you be, it means that she has her own plans. I won’t interrupt her, but I hope you know how lucky you are.” Chen Ge did not get any reaction from the door. He raised his arm to grab the doorknob. When he pushed, there was a strange and hard to describe connection that was made between him and the door. In that split second, Chen Ge seemed to see three doors standing in his mind. He blinked, and everything returned to normal. Chen Ge did not feel uncomfortable, and he increased his pushing force. The blood vessels slithered away, and the door of the School of the Afterlife slowly opened.

Many different voices rang out behind Chen Ge. The lingering spirits morphed into wind and rushed out into the world. Standing quietly at the door and ensuring that he did not miss anything else, Chen Ge reached out toward the old headmaster.

“Sir, I will leave the School of the Afterlife in your hands. The school’s consciousness is made up of the consciousness of every single student here. After you gain everyone’s approval, you will naturally become the new door pusher. In a way, this door is very fair.”

“I do not dare guarantee anything, but I will try my best.”

“That is more than enough.” Chen Ge turned to look at Xu Yin, and the latter understood what the man wanted to communicate. He left the old headmaster with a drop of his blood. “If you wish to contact me, swallow this drop of blood, and I will come. Other than that, sir, I have one more thing that I need your help with.”

“What is it?”

“If you gain any information about my parents, you have to tell me no matter what.” Chen Ge looked at that red city outside the window. “I have a feeling that I am getting very close to them.”

After saying everything that he had to say, Chen Ge carried the present box, his own backpack, and Chang Gu and walked out from the bleeding door.

Pa!

A crisp sound came from his ear, and Chen Ge slowly opened his eyes. The ground was covered in shattered glass, and all he saw was the white colored bedsheet of the hospital. He slowly sat up in bed and realized that Chang Gu was lying on the ground. Blood came out from every orifice of his body, and he looked like he was already dead. On the clean bed that was not far away, Chang Wenyu lay quietly. She was completely motionless like a body that had lost its will to live.

This was Chang Wenyu's sickroom. After a very long night, Chen Ge had finally returned. The black phone in his pocket kept vibrating, and Chen Ge took it out to see. Clicking on the screen, streams of messages came into view.

"Congratulations, Specter's Favored! Congratulations for completing the four-star trial mission 'School of the Afterlife'!

"Mission Completion Rate is ninety percent!

“Why would Yin Hong and Yin Bai’s names appear in the employees’ tab?” Chen Ge looked at the information on the black phone, and even he was surprised. “Is it because I have completed all the missions at Mu Yang High School? After all, the two of them are related to the school and are the granddaughters of the old headmaster.”

Chen Ge did not think too much of it. Having more employees was a good thing. He looked through the phone and opened the other remaining unread messages.

“Optional Mission ‘Fiery Heart’ completed. Gained Zhang Ju’s blessing.

“Optional Mission ‘Amputated Love’ completed. Gained Zhu Long’s blessing.

“Warning! Red Specter’s blessings might bring bad luck, but at the same time, gaining their friendship means gaining their aid.

“Optional Mission ‘Red Specter Club’ completed. Successfully formed a club at the School of the Afterlife and gained a badge for the lifeless club.

“Badge of the Lifeless Club (Unique Object): Before you arrived, there was literally no life at this club.

“Optional Mission ‘My Name Is Lin Sisi’ completed. Gained mission reward, Lin Sisi’s phone.

“Lin Sisi’s phone: This model is not that common on the market. It recorded his life. Other than that, his phone can capture Specters on its camera!

“Optional Mission ‘Zhang Ya’s choice’ completed. Instead of saying that she has chosen you, it’s more accurate that you have rescued her. Gained mission reward, Zhang Ya’s Bedtime Story.

“Zhang Ya’s Bedtime Story: A Specter will only sleep after consuming a large number of souls and lingering spirits. Believe me, this book is much scarier and more horrifying than any of the literature you have read.

“Main mission completion rate above ninety percent. Completed more than the necessary number of optional missions. Lucky Specters’ Favored, congratulations for obtaining the hidden reward—Graduation Certificate from the School of the Afterlife!

“Graduation Certificate from the School of the Afterlife: You are the best student I’ve ever met. Take this, and you can sense the door’s presence. You will eventually use it because I know that you shall one day return.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored, for unlocking the four-star scary scenario, School of the Afterlife! This scenario will be constructed before tomorrow night. All the mission reward items will appear in the Prop Room. At the same time, uniforms from Mu Yang High School, Western Jiujiang Private Academy, Jiujiang Medical University, and the School of the Afterlife will be added to the Specters’ Changing Room!

“Congratulations Specter’s Favored for unlocking your first four-star scenario. You have gained a random unique building—the Ghost Story Classroom.

“The Ghost Story Classroom (Unique Building): Will randomly appear inside any unlocked scenario. Every night, it will produce a ghost story related to a haunted school. Warning: This ghost story will not cause harm to anyone and will not exhaust the screams collected at the Haunted House. The higher the screams normally gathered at the Haunted House, the scarier the ghost story would be.”

After a long time, Chen Ge finally finished reading all the details on the black phone. This time, he had accidentally accessed the four-star scenario, but he had gained a lot of rewards, far beyond what he had gained from the three-star scenarios.

“With this four-star scenario, it is not impossible to fare better than the futuristic theme park, but my Haunted House will probably take a lot of time to digest so many things.”

The expansion of the Haunted House and gaining new rewards and new building gave Chen Ge a boost of confidence.

For now, I have no idea what the use for the Badge of the Lifeless Club and Zhang Ya's Bedtime Story is. Lin Sisi's phone can capture ghost, but I already have Yin Yang Vision, so I can probably gift this to Zhang Jingjiu. That way, when he manages the Haunted House branch in Xin Hai in the future, he can carry this with him. The graduation certificate will be important to me. It can sense the door's presence, and it'll make returning to the school more convenient.

Chen Ge planned to return to the place to study it closer after the expansion was done. He put the phone away and planned to climb up. He just moved his legs and pain shot through every part of his body. However, on the surface, there were no visible wounds on his body.

This is too strange.

It was fine for pain to gather around his arms, but if there was leg pain, he would not be able to run. So, Chen Ge opened the backpack and looked through the comic. After getting his employee's reply, he relaxed his body.

There is basically no change to the sickroom. There are just extra broken mirrors on the ground.

Chen Ge rubbed his head that felt like exploding.

This mirror should be the one I took out from the School of the Afterlife, the one where the non-smiler is hidden...

After communicating with Ol' Bai inside the comic, Chen Ge realized that the mirror that contained the painter's memory, according to the non-smiler, shattered once they left the door, but strangely enough, the non smiler did not escape. He was still hiding inside the mirror, and no matter how one called him, he did not answer. The one who had a completely different reaction from the non smiler was the old headmaster. Once he left the School of the Afterlife, he thought about escaping and was torn to pieces by Xu Yin and the red high heels.

I can't be too careful.

Chen Ge picked up the broom behind the door and carefully swept all the broken mirror pieces into the corner of the room. Suddenly, hurried footsteps echoed from the outside corridor, and then the door was pushed open. Two doctors and three nurses all stopped beyond the door. The four wore white coats and looked at Chen Ge, who was sweeping.

“Sleep walking?”

“And I thought the patient who has been in a coma for years has woken up...”

“Wait! Who are you!”

Seeing as the doctor was about to call the police, Chen Ge immediately put down the broom and said, “Call Lee Zheng from the city’s investigative team now! Tell them that Chen Ge has captured the murderer!”

“Huh?”

“Just follow what I say! Quick! If it’s convenient, call for an ambulance. The murderer is dying!” Chen Ge then dragged out the bleeding Chang Gu. When Chen Ge entered the sickroom, he had interacted with one of the psychiatrists. At the time, he had used Lee Zheng’s name. Now that he had been caught, he had no choice but to use Lee Zheng’s name again.

This is all for Jiujiang’s safety. Inspector Lee should be able to understand me.

The doctors saw that Chen Ge did not look like a criminal. After all, which criminal would come to a mental hospital to clean at midnight and volunteer to call the police? Once the call was made and the doctor relayed what Chen Ge said, the reaction of the operator only confirmed the doctor’s belief further—the police had heard of Chen Ge before.

After hanging up, the way the doctors looked at Chen Ge turned weird. “Lee Zheng hasn’t arrived at work yet, but they have contacted other people from their station.”

“Okay, I shall wait here and won’t go anywhere.” Chen Ge knew that he would not be allowed to leave anyway.

“This is the room we use to specially treat female patients. How about you go outside for a drink?” one of the female nurses said hesitantly.

“Don’t mind me! You need to go and save the culprit first; he does not look well.”

“Okay.” The female nurse hurried to call for help, and Chen Ge sighed in relief. He worked his tired body, walked to the bedside, and pulled back the curtain. The morning breeze caressed his face, and the light hit his body.

The futuristic theme park will open the day after tomorrow. The life and death of New Century Park depends on these few days, so I can’t waste any more time on Chang Gu.

Chapter 908: Long Time No See!

After about another twenty minutes, another stampede of footsteps came from the corridor. It sounded like more people were running toward the room.

Pa!

...

The closed door was shoved open, and Lee Zheng and two other officers burst into the room with guarded expressions.

“Chen Ge!” Lee Zheng called out Chen Ge’s name with his hands pressed behind his waist. He had prepared for the worst.

“Inspector Lee, I’m here!” Seeing Lee Zheng’s familiar face, Chen Ge ran over to him immediately. He could not help himself but give Lee Zheng a big hug. “Long time no see!”

There was an unmistakable tiredness in Chen Ge’s voice. Lee Zheng patted Chen Ge’s shoulder lightly. “Didn’t we... see each other last night? What’s wrong with you? Did you hit your head?”

“Thankfully, that did not happen.” Chen Ge let go off Lee Zheng. “The culprit has been taken away by the people here. They should be on the way to Jiujiang Central Hospital now.”

“What is his crime? Is this sickroom the first crime scene? Did you stay to protect the scene?” Lee Zheng was familiar with Chen Ge. This familiarity was beyond a normal citizen and police officer. Sometimes, Lee Zheng would mistake Chen Ge for a colleague, a colleague who had great ‘investigative’ experience.

“The guy is extremely dangerous and seems to be related to the comas of many children. Once you release the news that he has been captured by the police, many students’ parents will go and find you.”

Chen Ge was not lying. After the door of the School of the Afterlife lured the souls of the students behind the door, the children who lost their souls became like lifeless puppets. Most of them were lying in the hospital while some were cared for at home. People would learn to appreciate things after they had lost them. The sudden loss of consciousness of their children deepened the regret and self-blame of those parents. If only they had spent more time with their child, if only they had cared more about their children, then they would not have done those stupid things. There were many students who had been lured into the School of the Afterlife, not only from Jiujiang, to search for Chang Wenyu. Chang Gu had once used the strength of those parents, so once the police exposed Chang Gu's location, there would be parents who contacted the police.

But whether the police would believe what they said was another story. Chen Ge was not worried that Chang Gu exposing him—the man had used his living body to go against the school's consciousness and stayed for so long inside the blood fog, so it was unknown whether he could wake up or not.

“Related to a lot of unconscious students? This is a big case.” Once Lee Zheng heard what Chen Ge had to say, the first thing that came to his mind was not suspicion but consideration as to what to do next. He instinctively believed Chen Ge. After all, the man before him had a ‘glorious’ past.

“Hmm, you should hurry up the investigation. I'll return to the Haunted House for now. Tell me if you need anything, and I will cooperate fully!” Chen Ge said that, but he had already moved to the door.

“Don't be in such a hurry to leave. I still have many questions for you.” Lee Zheng grabbed Chen Ge's arm.

The interrogation was much longer than Chen Ge had anticipated. Lee Zheng did not let him go simply because they knew each other. He went through a long list of questions one by one, and when he was done, it had already been almost an hour. The sky outside the window had brightened, and it was about time for the park to start the day of business.

Lee Zheng knew that it was not easy for Chen Ge. He had to manage the Haunted House. In fact, Chen Ge was in a bad condition; he looked like he could faint at any time. “We'll stop here for now.

Before the suspect rouses, you'd better stay put at the theme park, especially don't go wondering around at night."

"Understood." When Lee Zheng and the other officers went to ask the doctors and other witnesses, Chen Ge used this opportunity to wrap up the broken mirror with the bedsheet and stuff the pieces inside his backpack.

"The non-smiler probably purposely broke the mirror with the painter's memory. He is currently inside one of the pieces and plans to leave. This man is much more cunning than the previous headmaster. He knows that he can't run immediately, so he is slowly buying time."

At eight something, Lee Zheng had one of his people to go to the hospital to visit Chang Gu while the other stayed at the mental hospital to continue the investigation. He personally drove Chen Ge back to the New Century Park.

"There's no need to, really."

"Put on your seatbelt. I'll drive you back because I have some questions to ask you in private," Lee Zheng said as he 'invited' Chen Ge into his police car and started the engine. Lee Zheng drove very fast, and when he entered the car, his expression turned serious.

"Inspector Lee, if you have anything to ask, just go ahead. There is no need for hidden words between us." Chen Ge leaned back in the seat. The police car made him feel relaxed—this was a safe place.

"Chen Ge, I know that perhaps you wish to investigate some things, but misusing the name of a police officer, be it for official business or personal business, is a crime. You have a strong sense of justice, but do not let it take control of you. Sometime, justice is not sinless." Lee Zheng told Chen Ge that in private because he was worried about Chen Ge.

"Understood."

"I have a good eye for people. You've lied to me. Although, I don't know what the lie is. Other than that, those mirror pieces should be important to you, right? If they are related to this case, after you've used them, remember to hand them to us. We have a professional team to look..."

Lee Zheng spoke for a long time, but there was no answer. He glanced at the rearview mirror and realized that Chen Ge had fallen asleep, hugging his backpack and the present box. The sleeping Chen Ge looked like a blank piece of paper, a person without any guile, and all his sad past was shown on his face.

“Looks like he is really tired this time.” Lee Zheng shook his head lightly and drove the car to a spot near New Century Park before he shook Chen Ge awake. “What do you think this place is? Get out from my car!”

Carrying the many bags, Chen Ge weaved through the visitors and jogged all the way. His employees were lined up at the entrance to the Haunted House. They had been waiting for him.

“Boss!”

They called after him in unison, and that swiftly snapped Chen Ge to attention.

“There’s no time to waste! We will gather in the dressing room now and prepare to open for business!”

Pushing open the gates, Chen Ge led the employees into the dressing room and started to do their makeup. At 9 am, New Century Park opened its gate, and people rushed into the park. A long queue started to form before the Haunted House. After putting the makeup on the employees, Chen Ge returned the ghost employees to their position. He had Ol’ Bai and Ol’ Zhou watch over the rules, and he entered the staff breakroom to rest. Chen Ge did not set an alarm. He slept until noon and was woken up by knocking on his door.

“Something’s up?” Chen Ge did not have time to put on a shirt and yanked open the door.

“Chen Ge, Director Luo is looking for you! He has something important to talk to you!” Uncle Xu stood outside the door with a strange expression.

“What is it? Give me some hints so I can be prepared.” Chen Ge suddenly became nervous because in two days, the futuristic theme park would open, and they would be under unbearable pressure.

“Take a look at today’s news yourself.” Uncle Xu clicked open a page on his phone, and the title of the article was eye-catching.

“Student in a coma for five years after car accident! Miraculous recovery! The first thing he said after waking up was ‘Western Jiujiang New Century Park’!”

Reading the news on Uncle Xu's phone, Chen Ge's heart shivered with a jolt. As he scrolled down the screen, he saw many similar articles.

"After the children woke up, they didn't say anything else about New Century Park, right?" Chen Ge asked quickly.

...

"That sure is a weird question to focus on." Uncle Xu put the phone away. "You'd better talk with Director Luo about the details. He has already been contacted by the media about this. This is a chance, but if it is not dealt correctly, it might cause a lot of damage to our reputation."

"Okay, I'll go to him now." Chen Ge grabbed a shirt and rushed out of his Haunted House.

The unconscious children's souls and spirits must have been lured behind the School of the Afterlife, but they left with me last night, so that's why they've awoken now! The timing is good, and that explains why the first thing that they said was New Century Park. When they left, I stressed to them that if they ran into any danger outside, they could come to find me at Western Jiujiang New Century Park.

In a way, this was not a medical issue but Chen Ge's doing. He charged to Director Luo's office without stopping. After getting his permission, Chen Ge entered the room.

"Director Luo, were you looking for me?" Chen Ge was breathing heavily, and his shirt was not even properly buttoned.

"Why are you in such a panic? Sit down and have a glass of water."

"I hear that the media has been here?"

"There's no need to worry. I'll give you something to see first."
Director Luo turned the laptop on the table toward Chen Ge and pressed the play button. The screen was showing the promotional video of the futuristic theme park. It combined both virtual and reality, and from every angle, it was better than New Century Park. Just watching it gave them more than enough shock, much less experiencing it in person.

“Xiao Chen, do you think we can produce a video of this caliber?” Director Luo turned to Chen Ge. “Tell me your real thoughts.”

“No, our theme park is just the fourth generation, and we mainly depend on the different machines. We can’t match them in terms of technology, and it is hard for us to create this effect.” Chen Ge felt like he had underestimated the futuristic theme park; their opponent was very cunning. They had prepared five promotional videos, and Chen Ge had only seen two of them before. The last promo was related to a horror movie, a direct taunt toward Chen Ge’s Haunted House. This should be the futuristic theme park’s confidence. They would not just win—they would trample New Century Park in their own territory and steal away all their customers.

“Even if we could produce an effect like that, we do not have the time or money to produce a video like this.” Director Luo took out his phone and clicked on the most popular social media and entertainment platform. The advertisement for the futuristic theme park was everywhere. “They have given everything to promote themselves, and the effect is excellent. Many people want to go to their place to visit, and their online tickets for the opening day have already sold out.”

“This is not good for us.” Chen Ge looked at the endless advertisements and felt envious. When he tried to advertise his Haunted House, through the short videos and livestreams, he had bet his life on it, but in comparison, his efforts looked so futile. “Director Luo, should we produce more advertisements?”

“That is why I’ve called for you.” Director Luo drank from the cup as he walked to the window and looked down at the theme park. “We have limited funds and appear second best to the market. To survive, we have to take a big risk.”

“What are you going to do?” Chen Ge did not ask what Director Luo’s plan was but asked what he would do. He trusted Director Luo fully and had confidence in his business experience, knowing that Director Luo would see further than he could.

"I need to ask you one thing first, and you have to answer me honestly." Director Luo opened the phone and searched for the article that Uncle Xu had shown Chen Ge earlier. "Is this real or fake?"

"Director Luo, I don't quite understand what you mean."

"The first words out of a person who has been in a coma for five years were New Century Park. The site of his car accident was very far from here, and his life had nothing to do with us. Why would he say something like that?" Director Luo personally poured a cup of tea for Chen Ge. "Is this related to you?"

"Me?"

"Don't be in such a hurry to deny it. This morning, many media outlets contacted me at the same time. You can take a look at their interviews and the messages revealed by the victims' family and the police." Director Luo clicked open a folder on his phone. It contained plenty of videos and articles. "Take a look at this first."

The first video was taken at the corridor at some hospital. The image was blurry, and it appeared to have been taken without consent. In the video, a boy in a patient's garb was communicating with his parents. He stumbled over his words, and he gestured with the pencil that he was holding. What he tried to express was that he had seen the world after death during his coma. He could not remember many things, but he knew that it was a scary place, and he had struggled there. In the end, he had been saved by a man.

He had heard the term Western Jiujiang's New Century Park from this man, and other than that, he could not remember anything else. It was clear from the video that as weak as the boy was, his mind was sharp, and his eyes were clear. He did not look like he was lying.

"Director Luo, this video can't prove anything."

"Keep watching." The nurses and doctors were shocked. The world after death was alluring. They went online to search about New Century Park to try to establish a connection to this boy, but by total accident, when the doctor clicked on Chen Ge's picture, the boy suddenly got very excited. The boy still could not speak complete sentences, but he kept pointing at Chen Ge's picture. The doctor communicated with him for a long time before realizing that the boy was saying that the man who had brought him out from the 'world after death' was identical to Chen Ge's picture.

A hospital that was far from Jiujiang and New Century Park, a coma patient from five years ago and Chen Ge, two unrelated places and individuals were somehow linked. The whole incident went directly from science to spirituality. The doctor could not explain this, and another surprising scene happened at the end of the video. Another door was pushed open, and a nurse burst through the crowd. She ran and whispered into the doctor's ear that another girl who had been in coma for three years had woken up, and she too had an impression of the location New Century Park!

The doctor hurried to the room and showed the girl Chen Ge's picture, and the girl cried instantly. Those many strange events proved that this was not a coincidence—this man called Chen Ge appeared to have entered the world after death to rescue those children.

The video then ended, and Director Luo looked at Chen Ge. "Drink your tea."

"Director Luo, you wouldn't happen to believe this drivel, right?" Chen Ge had a bitter expression. "if I possessed that magical power, would I still be stuck at a haunted house?"

"I don't care whether the video is real or not—I only care about the fact that this news might be our lifeline." Director Luo opened the drawer and placed a few documents on the table. "I wish to try a new promotional method that we haven't attempted before."

Chapter 910 - Unlocking a Four-star Scenario

Chapter 910: Unlocking a Four-star Scenario

“You wish to use this news as a promotional point?” Chen Ge caught Director Luo’s meaning instantly. “Will that work?”

“Advertisement needs money to promote because the content is normally boring. Human beings are born with curiosity, so now that we have been given such a great chance, the only thing we need to do is evoke their curiosity. Leave the actual work to me. You only need to pay attention to two things. One, no matter who asks you about the news, say that you don’t know anything to keep up the mystery. Two, do not deny or admit to anything.” Director Luo poured another cup of tea for Chen Ge. “You should know what I mean.”

“Sure.” Chen Ge nodded.

“There is one other thing I have to ask you.” Director Luo flipped through the documents on the table. “The futuristic theme park is opening the day after tomorrow. Will your Haunted House have any new scenarios? It does not need to be perfect, but it has to be difficult. It’d be best if it’s something that can’t be cleared.”

“That’s such a coincidence. My parents left an idea that fits your requirement perfectly. I’ve spent the last few weeks recover it, and it should be able to welcome new visitors the morning after tomorrow.”

“I know that you won’t disappoint me.” Director Luo picked up the first document file. “Give me a brief introduction about the most difficult scenario. We will focus our promotion on that.”

Chen Ge picked up the pen to think about it. “It’s a haunted school scenario. It will contain all the ghost stories that might happen at school, but that is not the most important.”

“Don’t feel too much pressure. Tell me if there’s any problems. Do you have enough people? Or props?”

“It’s not that. The problem is that the scenario...” Chen Ge put down the tea cup to look at Director Luo. “The new scenario is very similar to the ‘world after death’ seen by these fainted students. I’m afraid that might cause a bad influence.”

“That doesn’t matter. In fact, the closer they are, the better.” When Director Luo heard that, his eyes glowed like he had discovered a treasure. “After writing the focus and the intro of the scenario, you should return. Remember what I told you—get a good rest and be prepared for the day after tomorrow when the futuristic theme park opens.”

Chen Ge stood up and hesitantly said, “By the way, there is one thing that I still don’t quite understand.”

“Ask away. I will tell you as long as I know the answer.”

“For the futuristic theme park, be it technically or money-wise, they are far beyond our theme park. Even nationwide, there are not many fifth generation theme parks like theirs. Why would they choose to open in Jiujiang and not the bigger Xin Hai?” Chen Ge had experienced a lot. Now he was very careful. The futuristic theme park was placed on the eastern side of Jiujiang, the place that his parents had warned him against visiting.

“Even though Xin Hai is much bigger than Jiujiang, that also means it will have a bigger competition. Other than that, to unify the city group, the government plans to build Heng Jiang Bridge in Eastern Jiujiang. Then, it’ll be easy to commute from Xin Hai to Jiujiang. The futuristic theme park should have realized that and chosen to build in Eastern Jiujiang. They have never considered us a threat. They plan to use Jiujiang as their base and, with this place as the center, continue to spread.

“Heng Jiang Bridge?” Chen Ge looked at the map of Jiujiang on the office wall. Including the nearby states, Jiujiang was surrounded by nine rivers of differing sizes, like nine dragons. Once the bridge was built, it would look like a lock had been added to the dragons’ neck.

“It’ll be years before the bridge is built, so that has nothing to do with us. The business world is like war—only those who survive will have the chance to see the sun of tomorrow.” Director Luo, who was normally reticent, said a lot around Chen Ge. He shared many things that he wished to teach Chen Ge.

After writing the intro, Chen Ge returned to his Haunted House. He scanned his phone, and the ad for the futuristic theme park was everywhere. “Their promotional effect is epic. Even I want to take my employees to visit them.”

Putting the phone away, Chen Ge rubbed his temples. After all, the people who wanted to challenge themselves were in the minority. The competition between the two theme parks was unfair from the beginning. “We can only plan, and God will decide the result. All I can do is my best.”

The School of the Afterlife would be unlocked that night. Chen Ge took out the black phone to study it many times. He had to come up with a set of special and exciting rules based on the specialty of the school. The theme park closed at six, and Chen Ge ordered all the living employees to gather in the dressing room.

“Boss, is there anything?” Gu Feiyu removed the doctor’s mask. Who would have thought such a sunny and kind boy would be hiding behind the mask?

“The day after tomorrow, the futuristic theme park will open for business. This year’s holiday will be exceptionally important to us. I do not want to put pressure on your shoulders, but I have to tell you certain things.” Chen Ge’s eyes scanned his employees—Xu Wan, who had followed him since the beginning; the security guard, Gu Feiyu, whom he had saved from the ghost stories society; Zhang Jingjiu and Scissors, who had escaped with him from Li Wan City; and the newest employee, Qu Changlin.

“New Century Park has been in business for a decade, and it has been a fine ten years. Every day, visitors have left this place with happy memories, and this place has recorded many people’s good times. For them, this is more than a theme park.” Chen Ge rarely used such a serious tone with his employees. He often gave off the impression of kindness, like he would never get mad. “But recently, the business has been in decline. The few times I met with Director Luo, it was because the theme park faced danger of closing and then later to discuss restructuring New Century Park. They have not given up this thought, and if anything, it has gotten stronger. Do you know why?”

“Why would they close the theme park when we have so many visitors?” Even though Gu Feiyu had not been there for long, he had a connection to the theme park. This place had accepted him, and everyone treated him well.

“Because there can only be one theme park in Jiujiang, and we have taken the best land in Western Jiujiang. This land was gained by Director Luo more than a decade ago with a small investment.”

“Businessmen value income. If the conditions are really good, will Director Luo...” Zhang Jingjiu’s worry was not unfounded—Director Luo was under the most pressure at the theme park.

“He won’t. Yes, he’s a businessman, but he’s also a father.” Chen Ge looked at the doll in the corner of the room and picked it up. “I hope everyone will be on their best behavior over the next few days. We have to give it our all this holiday! If we lose to the futuristic theme park from the beginning, it’ll be harder to turn things around later.”

Chen Ge repeated his instructions for each individual employee before letting them go. At 7.30 pm, there was no one around the theme park anymore. Chen Ge pulled the gate shut and returned to the staff breakroom, beginning to design the rules and background story. He listed the ghost stories that he had experienced and heard before and used his existing scenarios and employees to replicate them—the construction of the scenario, the attention to detail, the power of the Specters, the scare points, and so on. He busied himself until 3 am. Chen Ge only stopped working because the black phone suddenly vibrated.

“Congratulations, Specter’s favored. The four-star scenario ‘School of the Afterlife’ has been unlocked!

“School of the Afterlife (four-star scenario): This scenario consists of twelve sub scenarios! There are three different campuses—west, east, and deep red!

“Warning 1: Doors and mirrors are special items in this scenario! You can control part of them through the phone!

“Warning 2: This scenario can support ten visitors at once. Please be careful of their safety!

“Warning 3: Random surprises can be found hidden in the deep red campus.

“Warning 4: After unlocking a four-star scenario, the chance of special visitors will double. The probability of a special visitor appearing will double again should the theme park operate at night.”

Chapter 911 - Highest Difficulty Mission

Chapter 911: Highest Difficulty Mission

The chance of running into special visitors will multiply at night? The black phone is encouraging me to open for business at night?

In the morning, Specters could only hide in the Haunted House. Even ghosts like Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue were afraid of the sun. They could only appear for a few minutes in the morning and could not be hit directly by the sunlight. If it was night, there would not be such limit, and thus, the Haunted House would be several times scarier than daytime. Not only because the environment had changed but also because most of the employees were actual ghosts, and the closer it was to midnight, the more active they were.

The problem with the door hasn't been resolved, so the visitors might be accidentally injured if a Specter sneaks through the door.

Chen Ge was not ready for a night opening yet. He rejected this idea after giving it some thought. Taking a box of cat food down from the cupboard, Chen Ge tricked the white cat over and held it in his arms. "Come, follow me to go and take a look at the new scenario."

The white cat was very sensitive to spirits and Specters. Bringing it was like bringing an alarm, and it could help detect the uncertain elements of the new scenario. The white cat was too busy munching on the food and rubbing its head on Chen Ge's chest to realize the danger it was in. When it realized that Chen Ge was taking it downstairs, it was already too late to run.

"Looks at how fat you are now. If you don't start moving around, you should change your name from White Tiger to White Pig."

Carrying the backpack, Chen Ge opened the door that led underground. A chill howled at him. With the unlocking of the School of the Afterlife, the underground scenario seemed to have become eerier. The sound of wind could be heard, and in the darkened surrounding, it was hard to tell where the wind came from. The yellowed test papers fluttered in the air, and occasionally, he would catch glimpse of mannequin heads rolling away.

“Still run about so late at night. In the future, I’ll have to invite the old headmaster back and have him watch over you people every day.”

Chen Ge carried the white cat with one hand and held the black phone in the other. He followed the instructions on the phone and walked behind the stairs. The entrance to the school was between the entrance to Mu Yang High School and the Underground Morgue. To enter this scenario, one had to pass through three iron doors. Just pushing them open was pressure enough.

The school looked normal on the surface, but with a closer examination, one would discover several extremely scary details. For example, with the thick curtains that were hung along the sides of the corridor, behind some of them was the cement wall, but some were hiding doors to other rooms. Even with the map on the black phone, Chen Ge was lost. The school was too big—it filled up the entire underground parking lot and even dug down several levels.

“Who would have thought such a school existed down here?” Chen Ge looked at the path that he just had just taken. “Or rather, it’s more appropriate to call it a small town.”

Chen Ge’s four-star scenario perfectly replicated the School of the Afterlife from behind the door. The overlapping of reality and nightmare, many scary memories appeared in Chen Ge’s mind, turning into his inspiration.

“Dormitory walls that are filled with nails, the canteen that only operates at midnight, the little girl that lies to people in the staff dormitory, the skull buried in the tree hole, the elevator that moves on its own, the blinking statue, the blackboard with bloody words, the inverted people that follow you around, the students who return after death, Mr. Bai who is not in the teacher’s record...”

Chen Ge touched his pocket. Mr. Bai’s staff ID and his own student ID were still there, but after leaving the door, those two documents had gained many blood splatters that could not be removed. It looked like they had been soaked in blood for a long time before being removed.

“I have a lot of material but not enough employees. This place is too big.” Chen Ge took out the comic to summon Yan Danian and had him release all the ghosts and spirits who had been ‘educated’.

When Chen Ge visited Li Wan City and the Coffin Village, he had helped many ghosts before—now was the time for them to repay his kindness. After Bai Qiulin became a red Specter, his words carried more weight. Many ghosts decided to put down their hatred after having a talk with Ol' Bai and decided to embrace a new future. Chen Ge felt glad upon hearing that. He promised to help them fulfil their dying wish after this busy holiday was over. He was not just saying that; if the employees treated the Haunted House as their home, it was only natural for him to help them complete their wish.

Chen Ge registered all the spirits' names, and only when the names could be searched in the worker's tab of the black phone, he arranged their roles in the school. In total, Chen Ge designed more than forty ghost stories in the school and more than one hundred scare points, but most of them required employees to control them, and that meant his manpower was stretched thin. Often, a single employee had to handle multiple scare points.

"Temporarily, this will have to do. After this, I must design the story background so that the visitors can see themselves in the story more easily. What kind of identity should I give them, youngsters who came to the abandoned school to test their bravery at night? Students who have lost their memory trapped at the school? Just let them try to find the escape?" Chen Ge rubbed his head. "I have to use this scenario well. A simple escape is such a waste—I need to make this more exciting."

Chen Ge walked around the school with the white cat. "Nurse's office, lab room, music club, sports club... Wait a minute, I don't think I've seen the art club."

He walked for an hour but failed to find the art club. "I also haven't found the unique buildings, the Red Specter Painting Room and the Ghost Story Classroom that were attached to the school. Is there a trigger condition to these two special buildings?"

Opening the black phone, Chen Ge studied the school's control page carefully and realized where the problem was; he had been walking around the two campuses but had not been to the deepest red campus. To enter this hidden campus, one had to go through a hidden tunnel. There were three known paths—the water well near the western campus' field, the movable mirror inside the eastern campus' library, and the last cubicle inside the toilet of the eastern campus.

"The scares are a hidden surprise, and whoever can find the hidden area will be so lucky.” Chen Ge came to the last cubicle of the education block. He pushed open the door, and it revealed a set of stairs that led downward. There was a blinking red light at the bottom, and his ears were filled with crying and laughter.

“Deep red campus?” This was the first time that Chen Ge’s Haunted House had contained a four-star scenario. He hugged the white cat tighter and walked down the stairs. Bloody handprints and scary words started to appear on the walls, and more and more blood surfaced until the whole corridor was red.

“This looks perfectly like the world behind the door, very suffocating and scary. Many people probably haven’t even seen a place like this in their dreams.” Chen Ge nodded with satisfaction. He covered the white cat’s eyes and continued to move forward. The deep red campus was underneath the two campuses. This was the lowest level of the haunted house. This place was empty, with not even a ghost. The cries and laughter appeared to be the visitor’s own imagination.

He walked for ten minutes, and Chen Ge finally founded the plaque for the art club. After entering it, he felt like he had returned to the oil painting room.

There were thirteen easels before thirteen chairs, and the thirteen easels had thirteen inverted bloody oil painting.

“The Red Specters’ Painting Room?” When Chen Ge discovered this place, his black phone vibrated; a new message had come in.

“Red Specter’s Painting Room (Inverted World): Once you enter the room, you will see the Red Specters’ past. If you can face the terror, the Red Specters will consume part of your misfortune, but if you can’t, fainting is not a bad option.”

“It can help the visitors improve their luck?” When Chen Ge saw the message, he tried to stand before one of the paintings, but nothing happened. “A normal person would have a hard time suffering a Red Specter’s past, but if they can discover the hidden path and charge all the way here, then the visitors wouldn’t be a normal person.”

Chen Ge thought about it, took out his phone, and wrote this on his planner. “For now, the mission with the highest difficulty will be to find all thirteen oil paintings in the School of the Afterlife and place them all back into the art club’s painting room.”

From the words alone, the mission sounded normal and even boring, but in reality, one would faint at least thirteen times before completing it.

Chapter 912: Headlines!

“Director Luo needs a highly difficult mission, and this mission that I designed will be able to satisfy him.” Chen Ge stayed at the School of the Afterlife until dawn. To perfect this four-star scenario, he had not slept a wink. “One has to wear the band designed by Director Luo to enter this scenario so that the doctors can rush to save them at first notice.”

After the underground morgue was unlocked, Chen Ge had grown more courageous. As long as Doctor Wei said it was okay, he dared to do it. Hugging the white cat out of the scenario, Chen Ge left tired, but his brain was active. “Am I sick?”

Since the School of the Afterlife was unlocked, the reward that correspond to that scenario should have unlocked as well. Putting the white cat down, Chen Ge entered the dressing room and found Lin Sisi’s phone and Zhang Ya’s bedtime story in an unassuming wooden box in the corner of the room. He had used Lin Sisi’s phone before, so there was nothing to be said. He opened the phone to look at it, and it contained a lot of information related to Lin Sisi and the video of him being bullied.

“This thing belongs to Lin Sisi. I’d better keep it.” Chen Ge did not delete anything on the phone but used the comic to summon Tong Tong. “Can you possess this phone?”

After trying, Tong Tong nodded.

“Okay then, I’ll leave Lin Sisi’s phone in your care. Tomorrow, when visitors enter the school, just follow my instructions.” Chen Ge handed Lin Sisi’s phone to Tong Tong, who looked like he had just gained a new toy. However, Chen Ge was reminded of something else. Once he entered the School of the Afterlife, Chen Ge had been knocked unconscious, and Chang Wenyu had stolen his phone, causing him to be inactive.

“I can’t let that happen again.” Chen Ge went online to order several custom-made phones that matched the appearance of the black phone. He did not need them to have many functions, as long as they could call, send messages, and hide Specters. He had just opened the browser and had not even started his search when he saw the day’s headlines. He glanced at them out of habit, but when he did, he was stunned.

Of the ten headlines, two of them were related to Chen Ge’s Haunted House!

The top five highlights were celebrity gossip, but from the sixth headline, things took a strange turn, like a clear rivulet turning into a swampy ravine.

“The world after death really exists? The real testimonies from several comatose patients who woke up on the same day!”

Then, the seventh highlight that followed it was: “The fainted world is a theme park in the real world!”

Clicking on it, Chen Ge realized that the name New Century Park had entered the top twenty most searched terms of the day, and the number was still climbing.

“Did Director Luo buy these clicks?” Normally, he would read the news, but to have his workplace appear on the news, that was quite uncomfortable for Chen Ge. “Hopefully, Director Luo will be able to handle this.”

Chen Ge refreshed the page and was about to go and find a web store that could custom make a phone when he saw the fiftieth headline and the two familiar words that appeared on the end of it.

“Chen Ge?” The highlight had just two simple words, and it appeared conspicuous among other highlights that had long titles. “Why is my name there?”

Chen Ge was sure that he did not see wrongly. He really did see his name among the daily news headlines.

“What is going on?” Quickly clicking on the link, Chen Ge realized that his ‘glorious’ history of helping the police had all been dug up—the livestream where he encountered the murderer in the haunted house; the livestream where he was chased by mad people in the mental asylum; how he had helped the Jiujiang police capture criminals, solve cases, and unearth the truth behind the case that had been silent for five years during the period when his livestream was banned; and even the news of him receiving the good citizen award had been found by the internet.

Some internet users even created a Chen Ge Wikipedia page, but the more they dug, the more shocked they were. Just what kind of a man was this?

All the information that they had found already existed online, including the award announcement on Jiujiang Law Enforcement's website, Chen Ge's livestreams, and many 'tearful complaints' from the numerous Haunted House visitors. There were rumors flying everywhere, and many people thought that Chen Ge was not a simple Haunted House operator, that it was just a cover.

Some said that he was a Private Investigator, some believed that he was a psychologist, and some guessed that he was a mysticism researcher. There was so much online that Chen Ge felt a headache coming. The comatose patients who woke up pushed him to the center of attention. He could not keep a low profile even if he wanted to. After looking through the article for a while, Chen Ge sighed in relief. The users were just guessing. None of them had any proof, and more importantly, the children had forgotten about the events behind the door; they only had a brief recollection of them.

When their spirits returned to their bodies, their memories became blurry. The experience behind the door would be like a very long nightmare, and Chen Ge was the person who woke them up. They appreciated Chen Ge a lot, but they had no idea why that was.

"Even I was in the headlines. Should I make use of this chance to promote the haunted house?" Chen Ge had never been someone who hesitated for too long. He logged into his video account, and even without having released any videos, he saw the wild growth of his followers and fan. With every new refresh, the number would continue to climb. One should strike the iron while it was hot, so Chen Ge used his account to release a teaser about the new scenario.

Once he logged on, the forum instantly exploded. The activity was so high that it scared even Chen Ge.

"Do I have such a big following?"

Chen Ge replied to about ten private messages, but there were simply too many, so he had to log out. Putting the phone away, Chen Ge turned to the last reward—Zhang Ya's bedtime story. The book had a black cover, and it felt special to the touch like it was weaved from hair. Just touching it caused his body to break out in cold sweat.

"I'll take a look at it when I'm free." Chen Ge placed the book in a drawer in the staff breakroom and lay in bed to take a small rest.

At 8 am, the employees had gathered at the door. Chen Ge's chat the previous night had been quite effective. "Mind your scenarios carefully. Que Changlin, come with me. I have a special mission for you."

Chen Ge called Que Changlin over. Since theme park had not opened, he sent him over to the workshop boss, Qian Guigen. "I need to custom-make fifty student mannequins, and I need to use them tomorrow. So, you'll be here helping me."

"Use them tomorrow? Do we have enough time?"

"It'll be fine." Chen Ge took out the design that he had come up with the previous night. "You can start with this, and I'll come to help you in the afternoon."

Then Chen Ge's phone rang; it was Director Luo telling him to get back to the theme park. After giving the down payment to Boss Qian, Chen Ge hurried back to New Century Park and realized that Director Luo and Uncle Xu were both standing at the resting hall.

"Xiao Chen, the promo for the School of the Afterlife has been completed based on your request. Come and see if there's anything that needs editing." Director Luo summoned Chen Ge.

"It's perfect, matched the world after death perfectly." Chen Ge was satisfied with the promo. "By the way, Director Luo, have you seen the news headlines today? Did you buy those placements? How come even I am among them?"

"If I bought the placements, I would have placed New Century Park at number one." Director Luo shook his head. "Yesterday, there were at least ten children who were reported by the news, but the actual number hasn't been reported. Many media outlets are watching this, and we are right at the center of it all. However, this also means that we must be careful. Be cautious of your words. Say what you need to, but keep the lid on anything that you shouldn't."

“Don’t you worry, I am not the type of person who would cause trouble,” Chen Ge promised Director Luo again.

“The media might come today, and some have been invited by me, but based on how things are going, there will be other reporters, so you’d better keep a low profile.” Director Luo’s initial plan was to borrow this incident to increase New Century Park’s popularity. After all, all the awakened students had mentioned New Century Park, but he did not expect even the name Chen Ge to make the headlines. “Have Ol’ Xu do anything that you need. You stay at the Haunted House and prepare for the opening of the new scenario tomorrow.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge gave his promise. He returned to his Haunted House and crawled into the staff breakroom. “It’s not fun that the whole scenario only has the hardest mission. I should design some easier missions to go with it. The scenario for the School of the Afterlife is so big that I can be more creative.”

With the inspiration brought by the black phone, Chen Ge learned from the way it dispensed mission and designed many hidden and side missions. These missions looked unrelated, but if one completed all the side missions, they would discover the whole truth about the School of the Afterlife.

New Century Park was a lot busier than normal that day. Chen Ge looked out the window and saw many reporters squatting outside the Haunted house. Director Luo did not stop them. As long as they purchased the ticket, no one would stop them. Director Luo and Chen Ge did not show up, and this placed Uncle Xu in a tough position. The reporters and the visitors who had seen the news hounded him with questions, and he was directly swallowed up by the crowd.

Chen Ge stayed at the breakroom until noon. He opened the phone after he dealt with some stuff. There were already four headlines related to New Century Park among the top ten latest news stories, and one of them was the Haunted House's newest promo. Probably due to the fact that the video had obvious advertising purposes, there were many internet users that questioned its authenticity. Many people suspected that this whole thing was just a promotional method, and a few users who thought they had seen the truth jumped out to slander this uncouth advertising method.

That was fairly common; being scolded meant that one was famous. Chen Ge did not mind it, but when he clicked open his own headline, he realized that something was wrong. There were many unknown accounts who were directly inflaming the topic. Some masqueraded as Chen Ge to purposely slander New Century Park, and some of them even casually dropped the discussion about the futuristic theme park.

"The futuristic theme park is on the move?" Chen Ge looked at the account that had used his name post these strange posts, and he was rather mad. Since he was young, he followed the philosophy of arguing with his mouth and not his fists, so he rarely got into fight. Logging into his own account, Chen Ge wanted to expose the fake account, but he realized that the whole discussion forum had been controlled by the other party. Obviously, a whole team was behind this.

From the previous night to that morning, everyone had been concerned about the relationship between the comatose patients and new Century Park. They were curious about the authenticity of the world after death. This topic climbed up to the boiling point, and as the popularity grew, many strange people popped up. Some were analyzing it rationally while others were clearly there to stir the pot. From morning until noon, the wind changed, and many common users who did not know the truth were led astray and believed that this was media hype set up by New Century park. There was no world after death, and the awakening of the students came from heartless reporters to grab attention.

More and more people pointed their fingers at New Century Park, saying how low they had gone to promote themselves. There were quite a number of big online streamers who gave their views. One of them was called Liu Gang. He directly dug out New Century Park's past, saying that this was a theme park that was facing bankruptcy, and at the same time, there was a new futuristic theme park opening in the same city. Before this strong competition, New Century Park was about to be crushed, so they came up with this crude and vulgar plan and planned to use the world after death as some kind of hook to draw in some visitors.

This man acted like he was the only one who had seen through the ploy of New Century Park and appealed to his fans to boycott this kind of heartless businessman. Then, as casually as he could, he slipped in the uniqueness of Jiujiang's futuristic theme park and how it was a rare sixth generation theme park even on an international scale.

"Just how much money has this Liu Gang taken from the people of futuristic theme park?" Chen Ge held the phone, and his heart was feeling uneasy. Futuristic theme park had plenty of money. The weeks before it was open, it would not allow New Century Park to come and disturb them. They would not stop at anything. From the current situation, it was clear that there were advertising experts working for futuristic theme park. Since the popularity could not be suppressed anymore, they rode on this tide and planned to turn it around on New Century Park and use it to promote themselves.

"We have less than twenty-four hours until the opening of futuristic theme park. This period is too sensitive." Chen Ge was thinking about how to react when he got Director Luo's call.

"Chen Ge, the futuristic theme park also pushed forth a new horror themed scenario called Reincarnation. They modified their slogan and started to promote a world after death and started to push it on various platforms."

"They are so shameless, but that is fine. Our scenario is real, and no matter how hard they try, they will not achieve the same authenticity that I have."

"Authenticity?" Director Luo caught the keyword immediately.

"Don't mind that, Director Luo. In terms of the content and the scare factor of the Haunted House, we will steamroll over them."

"I feel much better hearing you say that." Director Luo was about to hang up.

"Wait a minute, Director Luo. I can guarantee you that the quality of our Haunted House will be better than theirs, but the visitors don't know that. Can we do a livestream when we open for business tomorrow?" Chen Ge gave his suggestion.

“What is your plan?”

“This morning, we will have a livestream at our Haunted House, and then this afternoon, I will go and challenge their Haunted House. Through the comparison, the public will see the truth.” Chen Ge was quite angered by the lowly tactics of the other theme park.

“Are you that confident? I heard that their scenario has combined the scenes from several horror movies and is replicated using the latest technology. Can you handle it?” Director Luo was worried about Chen Ge.

“No problem. I can guarantee you, if they come to our Haunted House to play, they will be carried out and, if I go to their Haunted House, it will also be them who end up being carried out.”

“Well, you don’t need to go that far...” Director Luo gave it some thought before saying, “When they come to visit, do not harm them no matter what, but if you want to go to their place, do anything you want. After all, that’s their business.”

“You have a point.” Chen Ge felt like he had learned a lot from Director Luo.

“And Liu Gang and the others who were directing the flow on the internet. If necessary, you should go and challenge them,” Director Luo added. “It’ll be perfect if they can be persuaded to come and visit our Haunted House.”

Director Luo's words inspired Chen Ge. "I have a streamer's account myself with about 400,000 followers. Should I start a livestream or upload a video later to prove that we're not lying?"

"Do whatever you want. Just make sure you do not say anything too incendiary. It is best if they can come, but it's fine if they can't."

...

"I don't care much about the others, but I have to lure that streamer known as Liu Gang here somehow. That guy has released so many unsavory and untrue statement. I believe he has received quite a large sum of money from the futuristic theme park." Chen Ge was not one to hold onto grudges, but this time, the man really had crossed the line.

"Kill the cock to scare the monkey—that is not a bad idea. The streamer himself will be a walking attention generator. If he can come, it will satisfy the curiosity of many internet users, but the problem is... how are you going to make him accept our invitation?" Director Luo still had something else to do. After a few more words, he hung up. Chen Ge reminisced on his conversation with Director Luo. After some contemplation, he logged into his video platform account and decided to go head on against that Liu Gang.

Opening the livestream function of the platform, the moment he switched on the camera, the online viewing number jumped up from zero to over five hundred almost instantly, and with every new refresh, the number of viewers doubled. Ever since his livestream was unbanned, this was the first time that he had used this function. All his previous livestreams had been to promote his Haunted House, and now that the goal had been achieved, livestreaming and making videos were only Chen Ge's hobby.

"Long time no see, guys." Chen Ge bit his lips, feeling like he just said that to someone earlier. After a brief greeting to the public, Chen Ge went straight to the point and named the streamer, Liu Gang. From the start, he laid the truth on the table. Liu Gang himself had not been to Jiujiang, so how did he know the situation at New Century Park? He was a man with no responsibility to his words. Those who followed Chen Ge's accounts were people who liked his videos and visitors of his Haunted House, so there were many comments in support of Chen Ge. But soon, there came another voice in the chatroom. Some unknown accounts slandered Chen Ge by calling him out for being a heartless businessman, a scammer, and for employing the disgusting advertisement method.

"Those coming to Haunted House seek excitement. If my Haunted House is not scary, then you can say I have scammed my visitors, but everyone who has visited my place has left a good comment, so how can you claim that I have scammed my visitors?" Chen Ge fired back with truths, trying to flood out the falsehood that was released by these uncouth internet users. "Has my Haunted House failed to scare you, or is the price of forty per ticket too expensive? My Haunted House has been in Jiujiang for more than a decade, and I have only increased the price once. The word heart and care for the visitors is plainly written on my face, so how am I a heartless businessman?"

Be it from quality or price, Chen Ge's Haunted House was indeed a unique existence on the internet.

"Boss Chen, that Liu Gang also released a video on his account! He has stated a lot, but mainly, it's about how he has seen through your trick and has gone to great lengths to slander your name." Some users liked to watch the world burn and helped release news from both sides.

"There is something like that?" Chen Ge was livestreaming from his phone, so he flipped open the comic to call over Ol' Bai, who was teaching the newbies, and had him summon Zhang Jingjiu. Ten minutes later, Zhang Jingjiu, who had not removed his make up, entered the room. Chen Ge used his phone to watch Liu Gang's video. It was unclear where the man got the information about the Haunted House, and one of the pictures from Night of the Living Dead had been placed by Liu Gang on the front page. There was a sentence underneath it—"This is it? Now I understand why he only dared to raise his ticket price once in the past ten years."

The platform was Liu Gang's territory. He had more than a hundred thousand fans there, and the few who supported Chen Ge were overwhelmed practically instantly. Everywhere, there was mockery and sarcasm, and more and more members of the public were fooled. There were many users who had been to Chen Ge's Haunted House, and there were many who supported Chen Ge, but the man had the power to ban people from commenting, so Chen Ge's supporters were powerless in his territory. Seeing that the man was being proactive, Chen Ge felt reactive. He whispered a few words to Zhang Jingjiu and then spoke to his own livestream.

"I have seen Liu Gang's video. The whole thing is a bunch of nonsense. He used a picture from ten years ago to lie to others, and miraculously, a bunch of idiots still fall for it. Truth speaks louder than words. The visitors who have come to my Haunted House before know the quality of my Haunted House.

"Here, I wish to ask to Liu Gang a question, since you said my Haunted House is trash and not scary, would you dare accept my invitation to come visit?"

Chen Ge knew the man probably still would not come, so he lowered the difficulty.

"Tomorrow, my new scenario will open to the public. I will allow you to bring ten people with you to visit it together! If ten of you are still afraid, that's fine. I will even allow you to livestream the whole process and allow you to interact with your fans throughout. If you still don't feel relaxed enough, how about we make the bet bigger? After eleven of you have visited my Haunted House, as long as one of you can say honestly that my Haunted House is not scary, I will immediately openly apologize to you on my livestream."

Chen Ge's words stunned all the users in his chatroom. Even if they were afraid, surely they could say that they were not afraid. Furthermore, the more people who visited the Haunted House, the less scary it would be. Allowing eleven people to enter at the same time and giving him the chance to interact with his fans on livestream... it looked like Chen Ge was bound to lose.

Those kind users persuaded Chen Ge not to do anything so rash, but those who had challenged the Haunted House before all revealed sneaky smiles. For those who jumped directly to a high difficulty scenario without trying out a low quality ones first were simply seeking death.

"You heard what I said. Liu Gang, don't make me look down on you, and don't disappoint the many fans that you have."

When Chen Ge said those things on his livestream, there was a user called Wine for Moonlight in Liu Gang's comment area who started a thread with many crazy comments that slandered Chen Ge's Haunted House. He claimed that he had visited the Haunted House before, that it was not scary, that it was all a lie, and that he supported Liu Gang to visit the place fully. Seeing that, Chen Ge was not mad at all because that Wine for Moonlight was Zhang Jingjiu. This post was lighting fire under Liu Gang's bottom, forcing him to accept the invitation.

The thread initially did not have much popularity, but soon, another big streamer and blogger appeared in that thread, and that person was the Haunted House reviewer who had reviewed Chen Ge's Haunted House before—Ye Xiaoxin.

When the Third Sick Hall first opened, she had visited and almost fainted, but she was now good friends with Chen Ge. She not only shared this thread but had her followers all go to push it up and leave comments for Liu Gang. They all campaigned for Liu Gang to take a break and visit Chen Ge's Haunted House, using a professional angle to analyze how unscary Chen Ge's Haunted House was. With the help from big name like Ye Xiaoxin, Zhang Jingjiu's thread soon became the top thread in Liu Gang's comment area. As long as someone saw his video, they would see the thread.

"This girl sure is wicked, but I quite like it." Chen Ge's lips curled up into a smile. He realized that more and more people were leaving comments in the thread, and most of them were his allies. They said things like Liu Gang was not a man. If he did not take the challenge, they would unfollow him and so on.

All the comments stated that Chen Ge's Haunted House was not scary. The manager of the comment area did not know who to ban, and honestly, they too were quite confused.

After an hour, Liu Gang finally released a second video. He had a fan in his hand and showed the tickets that he had bought to the camera. "If certain people are too foolish to see the truth, then I will go and help them understand the level that they are at."

Then he handsomely opened the fan, which had on it—'Such buffoonery!'

"We'll see you tomorrow at 9 am. Good night."

The video was short, and there was cheer on Liu Gang's side. Everyone praised Brother Gang for his manliness, and that included Ye Xiaoxin and Zhang Jingjiu and the many other allies of Chen Ge.

Seeing that Liu Gang had purchased the ticket, Chen Ge also laughed gaily.

“Is it too simple for eleven people to find thirteen paintings? Should I add some other missions?”

Chen Ge directly challenged Liu Gang through his livestream, and Liu Gang uploaded a video in response to Chen Ge. The big names that belonged to two different platforms crossed swords on the internet, and that naturally attracted the attention of many internet users. Some of the rowdier bunch had already started a bet to see whether Liu Gang would be able to clear Chen Ge's Haunted House successfully. The winds on the news headlines were blowing every each way. The people behind the futuristic theme park and Director Luo from New Century Park only pushed the waves higher because both parties believed that they already had victory in their hands, and they tried their best to promote this as much as they could.

The platforms that they were on also reacted swiftly. Liu Gang's platform specially opened a topic for Liu Gang while the short video platform that Chen Ge was on pushed his livestream to the front page. While Liu Gang and Chen Ge were shooting daggers at each other, there were calm and collected internet users who had seen through the smoke and mirrors. This challenge regarding a Haunted House on the surface looked like a conflict between Chen Ge and Liu Gang, but actually, it was a competition between New Century Park and the futuristic theme park. Jiujiang was not a big state, and it was a quickly developing city. While it had a lot of potential, with its current population, it was hard for it to cultivate two large theme parks. Therefore, between New Century Park and the futuristic theme park, one would have to be the sacrifice.

Based on the current situation, the futuristic theme park had a bigger chance of winning. All of its presale tickets had been sold out, but in terms of pure popularity and word of mouth, New Century Park was more on people's lips compared to the futuristic theme park. Other than that, Chen Ge, the operator of the haunted house, was an individual who would create topics of interest whenever he went, so it was very hard to say who would end up as the final victor.

There was chaos online as the fans of both parties went back and forth. Everyone had their own pride to maintain, and neither party was willing to back down. Therefore, everyone sat waiting to see the result the following day. Chen Ge maintained his livestream until the afternoon. When he started his livestream, there had been 400,000 fans, and when he logged off the stream, the number of fan had already jumped up to 650,000 people. This could almost be considered a miracle.

Turning off the camera on his phone, Chen Ge picked up the tea cup on the table next to him to quench his thirst. “I said too much. Now, my throat is parched. It is much easier to communicate with ghosts and Specters.”

Pulling open the curtains, Chen Ge stretched his limbs and body. “The new scenario still needs a bunch of mannequins. I wonder how Qu Changlin is doing. How many mannequins has he finished?”

Chen Ge ran out of the Haunted House. Once he saw himself, he heard the cheer from the visitors outside. Many people were staring at his face, which could not be called handsome.

“Boss Chen, we have seen your livestream! You’re awesome! Tomorrow, you have to scare that b*stard until he wets his pants!”

“That Liu Gang truly is seeking death. That is the only reason I can think of to explain why he is so desperate to see the world after death.”

“Brother Chen! We’re on your side!”

The visitors who lined up outside the Haunted House were mostly old customers of the place, and they included the strategy team from Jiujiang Medical University. Initially, coming to the Haunted House was just a hobby and a way to relax for them. Yet, in the end, the bunch of juniors had been tripped there again and again, and later, the seniors did not end up with a better result. Those passionate and inspired youngsters followed the order that came from above and came to challenge the Haunted House almost daily. This had become basically an obsession for them. The only thing left was to drag their professors and teachers along with them.

Strangely, the headmaster of the medical university still had nightmares every few days. He kept dreaming about his former teacher coming into his dreams to lecture him. However, the headmaster could not remember the details of the lecture after he woke up—all he could remember in his hazy memory was the term Haunted House at the New Century Park. The headmaster was not someone who believed in ghosts, but after having the same nightmare again and again, no matter who it was, their conviction would be shaken. Therefore, even the headmaster himself wished that they would clear the Haunted House as soon as possible. A bunch of medical students who would go into the field to face the real criminals of the world in the future. How could they fail to handle even a simple Haunted House?

“Tomorrow, the Haunted House will be opening a new scenario for visitation. Be sure to come again tomorrow to join in the fun.” Chen Ge smiled as he greeted these familiar faces and then waded through the crowd. Chen Ge arrived at the mannequin workshop at around 4 pm. Qu Changlin did not disappoint him. This actor who had been isolated at Xin Hai Haunted House possessed an incredible talent for mannequin production. Mannequins should be all the same, but the ones made by Qu Changlin were extremely scary. It was as if one could see the emotions through the seemingly alive eyes inside the mannequin’s heads.

“All I wanted to do was make a company that consoles the lonely hearts of the world, but it is just my luck that I ran into the both of you.” Qian Guigen looked at the eerie-looking mannequin heads and limbs that filled up his workshop and shook his head with a sigh.

“Don’t listen to the rambling of the boss. Changlin, you have done a splendid job.” There were a lot of things to do, so Chen Ge went to provide help. When he used his Dollmaker’s Talent to work with the mannequins, Qu Changlin, who stood at the side watching, was shocked. The skill was godlike, and he forgot to even catch his breath. He felt like Chen Ge was not making mannequins for a Haunted House but was creating a piece of art of the human body.

“Mannequins also have souls. Only by providing them with souls will the visitors be able to feel their authenticity.” The theme park closed for business at 6 pm, but none of the employees at the Haunted House left. Zhang Jingjiu and Scissors drove the van provided by the theme park and ferried the first batch of mannequins back to the Haunted House. Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu stayed behind to help wherever they could. Every part of the theme park was filled with busy figures. All the personnel were preparing for the battle to come.

At around 8 pm, after everything had generally settled down, the workers got off work one after another. At the same time, Chen Ge received a phone call from Director Luo. "Everything is ready. Tomorrow morning, the designer of the Reincarnation scenario for the futuristic theme park will come to visit your Haunted House, and then in the afternoon, you will go to their theme park to visit their scenario. The whole process will be livestreamed, but..." Director Luo paused for a moment. "The people from the futuristic theme park gave their promise a bit too easily. There must be something malicious about this. You have to be careful when you are there tomorrow."

"Director Luo, you know that I am a very careful person." After hanging up, Chen Ge focused back on his work. The employees from the Haunted House all came to help, and they worked until 11 pm.

"You guys should go home and have a good sleep. Leave the rest to me." Chen Ge took out his phone and glanced at the time.

"Boss, are you sure you can handle it alone?"

"Boss, I normally sleep at two or three. For me, the night life has just begun. I am not in a hurry to leave."

"Boss, why don't you take some rest as well?"

Hearing all that and seeing that none of his employees were quick to abandon him, Chen Ge's heart was warmed. "Listen to me—go home now. If you don't listen to my order, I will dock your pay."

After every employee left, Chen Ge sent each of them a bonus and then continued with his work. At 2 am, all the mannequins were done, and Chen Ge loaded them onto the van. At the Haunted House, with the aid of the ghost employees, the work was much more efficient. They only took half an hour to place all the mannequins at the locations that had previously been decided.

"The fake and the real, the real and the fake. The ghost that you see is only a mannequin, and the thing that you believe is just a mannequin is a real ghost that has been following behind you." Chen Ge made a few more small props to fill up the new scenario. He only returned to the staff breakroom to rest at 4 am. "Every morning, the sun will rise just the same, but the people who see the sun rising will be different."

Chen Ge hugged Xiaoxiao and the white cat in his embrace. He leaned against the bed post and slowly fell asleep. After who knew how long, Chen Ge, who was half asleep, was woken up by the ringtone coming from his phone. When he saw the time on his phone, he instantly jolted out of his sleepiness.

Putting the white cat down, Chen Ge rushed to the toilet to take a quick cold shower and changed into a new set of clothes. He looked at himself in the mirror and showed the most quintessential and kind smile, which was required in the service business.

“All those months of hard work have been for today.”

Wiping away the water vapor from the surface of the mirror, Chen Ge turned to head outside. Putting aside the thick curtain, the sun shone on his face. Chen Ge pulled open the gate of the Haunted House with a smile on his face. The few employees of his Haunted House had already arrived.

“Today, we will have more visitors than usual. We have to be more careful. Come, I will help you guys with your make-up.”

Before it was even 8 am, all the employees at the New Century Park had started to get busy. Chen Ge’s Haunted House’s entrance had two new working stations—one was to check the hand bands, and the other had a use that Director Luo had not informed Chen Ge of. However, there were six medical boxes that could be seen sitting neatly under the station.

At 8.15 am, all the workers assumed their position, and the theme park broadcasted the music all over the place. At 8.30 am, the cars from the media outlets started to arrive at the entrance of the park. At 8.40 am, a large number of visitors had filled up the eastern and western gates of the theme park. There were many who were not locals of Jiujiang. They had purposely come from outside to take part in this momentous day. Seeing this, all the workers inside the theme park had their hearts drop in relief. They had all worried that no one would choose New Century Park during this holiday season.

At 8.45 am, a few workers carried several video cameras into theme park, and it was then that Director Luo made a phone call to Chen Ge.

“Director Luo, do you need me?”

“Go and look at Liu Gang’s front page. Their platform has made a theme park counter app. It can be used to calculate and monitor the number of visitors taken in by a theme park in real time. This should be the idea of the futuristic theme park; they want to make a joke out of us.”

Director Luo's voice was even. He was like a rock in the middle of the sea—no matter how strong the wind, how high the waves, he would not be affected. It was because of Director Luo's steadfast support that New Century Park had been able to survive more than a decade.

"It is too early to tell who will be the laughingstock today." Looking at the visitors who had gathered, Chen Ge had a confidence boost.

"It is not wise to underestimate the futuristic theme park." Director Luo sent a few pictures to Chen Ge's phone. The carpark for the futuristic theme park was filled with cars, and the four entrances that they had were also filled with visitors. "Based on the current situation, the futuristic theme park will be able to accept at least 19,000 visitors today. That number has only been achieved by our theme park once in our years of business, and that was during our first year. Other than that, I am worried about another thing."

"What is it?"

"Managing a theme park is a long and lengthy business. The reason so many people came to our theme park today is because I have made a little hook on our promotional video. Our theme park has been in business in Jiujiang for a decade already. Many people have precious memories here, and I suppose you could say that I have gone with the theme of nostalgia. Look, the visitors who have come to line up so early in the morning, most of them purely want to preserve this memory." Director Luo's voice had a subtle change to it. "I truly appreciate that they have come to support us at this moment, but after taking them out of the equation, we have actually lost half of the battle at the beginning. Our popularity on the internet is very high, but there are not many who would purposely come to Jiujiang to visit us."

"It will be fine. Once our reputation has been made and stabilized, in the future, more and more people will come to visit us. In terms of overall services, we are indeed no competition for the futuristic theme park, but they are too ambitious. They have to be good at everything, so we will use that against them and destroy them little by little."

Chen Ge knew that was going to be very difficult, but that was the only choice. He also went to download the theme park counter app. New Century Park and futuristic theme park were featured on the front page, and according to the number of the online presale tickets, the futuristic theme park had twice the number of New Century Park.

“The situation does not bode well for us at least on the surface, but I will things will change if we all work hard together.”

At 8.50 am, the workers started to welcome the visitors who had been waiting outside the gates. At 9 am, both New Century Park and the futuristic theme park opened for business at the same time!

On the counter app, the number of ticket sales started to rocket. The numbers shot up at about the same time, and there was no clear winner or loser.

“Return to your scenarios! Prepare for business!”

The first bunch that charged into the New Century Park were the media reporters who were after the newsworthiness, and following them were the old customers of Chen Ge’s Haunted House. Then, there were many new visitors who were there out of curiosity, and lastly, there were the normal visitors.

The theme park had been open for three minutes, and a long queue had already formed outside Chen Ge’s Haunted House. The resting hall was also filled with people. The new screens that were installed outside the Haunted House were cycling through the various promotional ads for the different scenarios. Uncle Xu and two other workers were responsible for scanning the tickets. Meanwhile, Chen Ge stood at the entrance of the Haunted House as if waiting for something.

At around 9.20 am, there was a small commotion at the entrance of the New Century Park. After a short and temporary argument, a group of people made a beeline toward Chen Ge’s Haunted House. Some of them were carrying cameras, and others were capturing videos on their phones directly—they pulled a lot of attention.

There were two of them who were leading. One of them was carrying a fan and had a big face. Without the filter of the camera lens, his skin appeared dark. The man appeared to see himself as some kind of cultured individual. Seeing the people that bustled about, a frown started to crease on his head. The other group leader had an ID from the futuristic theme park around his neck. He wore thin-rimmed glasses. He had light brow and very fair skin like he had not been exposed to the sun for a very long time.

With the aid of his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could see them from a far. The one with the fan and big face was Liu Gang, and the other had to be the designer employed by the futuristic theme park. His name was written on the ID badge, and he was called Bai Buhui.

“The people of futuristic theme park came with Liu Gang. Looks like my previous guess was correct after all.” Chen Ge was indeed waiting for them. The visitors were obediently queuing up, but a few of them did not follow the rules and cut to the front of the line immediately.

“Go back there and line up! Didn’t your parents teach you how to respect other people before?” It was about the turn for the students from Jiujiang Medical University. When they realized that someone had cut in line, they yelled to stop them immediately.

“We are not here to visit. Yesterday, the boss of this Haunted House made the taunt so carelessly online, thinking that I would not dare answer his challenge. I cannot wait to see the expression on his face now that I am here.” Liu Gang flapped open the fan. He had a polite tone to his words, but still, he did not go and line up.

“You really think the boss is afraid of you? You think he was just bluffing? Have you come to the right place?” The student from the university thought that he had misheard. He was about to ask for more when Chen Ge walked over.

“Guys, there is no need to argue with them.” Chen Ge had a face full of smiles as he pointed at Liu Gang. “They are here to challenge the four-star scenario.”

“Challenge the new scenario?” The students from the medical university quickly retreated away from them. “Then, we haven’t said anything. Please go ahead!”

“Such a fake performance.” Liu Gang half lifted his head to look at Chen Ge. “You are much more presentable in person. I can’t believe you are the same person who was barking like a crazy on the internet yesterday.”

“Since you are here, you are one of my visitors. I am always kind to my customer.” Chen Ge could not wait any longer. “Please come with me, I will bring you to the new scenario.”

“Wait a moment.” Liu Gang ignored the halt that he had created by standing there. More than ten people squeezed through the door. He had the man who carried the camera aim it at him. “You can start now.”

He took out his phone to open the platform that he was on. After ensuring that there were no issues, he smiled at the camera.

“Good morning, my dear Gang fans. I am Liu Gang. I am currently at the entrance of that Haunted House, and this person next to me is the boss who sent me a challenge yesterday. Now, I will livestream the whole process of my visit as I challenge his latest Haunted House scenario!” Liu Gang was good at setting the atmosphere. He flapped the fan. “Without further ado, please prepare your popcorn and watch me show you the truth today!”

As he spoke, many fans showered him with donations and money. The whole chat was filled with praise for their Brother Gang, their manly Brother Gang, the manliest person there ever was.

The connection was stable. Liu Gang was satisfied with the livestream effect. He closed the fan and glanced at Chen Ge. “Don’t panic. We promised to livestream the whole process yesterday.”

“Is the cameraman part of the ten members who will be following you?” Chen Ge noticed that the cameraman was very muscular and looked quite fierce.

...

“Of course, I am not one to bend the rules. If I am to win, I will win fair and square.” Liu Gang and the person from the futuristic theme park walked at the front. Next to them were the cameraman and someone who seemed to be Liu Gang’s assistant. He carried a phone and had been watching Liu Gang’s streaming platform. Other than those four, there were seven other people in Liu Gang’s team. It was hard to tell from their appearance, but they should come from different backgrounds. Who knew how Liu Gang had gathered them?

“Uncle Xu, give the eleven of them tickets to the School of the Afterlife.” When Uncle Xu gave the tickets, Chen Ge yelled at the queuing visitors, “The new scenario is very big. The more visitors, the less scary it’ll be. Are there any visitors who have challenged three-star scenario wish to challenge it?”

When the strategy team at the resting hall heard this, their interest was rather piqued. The seniors from the medical university discussed among themselves and finally decided to have two new students join them. Those new students often used Boss Chen’s Haunted House to joke about at school. This would be the perfect chance to teach them a lesson.

“Can you move it faster? We have booked an afternoon plane ticket. We need to wrap up here and rush back home,” the man who appeared to be Liu Gang’s assistant urged.

“This is the first time the new scenario has been open. Naturally, there will be more visitors to handle. If you really can't wait, you can go in first." Chen Ge had Uncle Xu handle the second batch of visitors while he led Liu Gang and Bai Buhui into the Haunted House. Pulling back the thick black curtain, it was as if they had entered a different world. "Please sign these disclaimers and then scan the code to obtain your triangulation band."

Chen Ge handed the disclaimers to each of them and enjoyed their scornful looks. After confirming that everyone had signed, Chen Ge placed the documents in the cupboard and locked it with a big padlock.

Among the crowd, a short fella started to complain impatiently. "Can you please move faster? Why waste time on nonsense like this? I've been to so many Haunted Houses, and yours is the draggiest."

Chen Ge smiled, completely unaffected. "The scenario that you're going to visit is called School of the Afterlife. It is filled with ghost stories related to schools and is hidden with endless ghosts. Even though there has been some conflict between us, as a responsible operator, I have to tell you that this new scenario is very dangerous, and if you're not careful, you might not be able to return."

"Yes. Yes. Of course." The shorty groaned.

Liu Gang livestreamed the whole process, so Chen Ge had to go through the motions clearly and precisely. It would not take long for the viewing users to realize how hardworking and honest Chen Ge was and develop a good impression of this Haunted House owner.

"Okay, you have come to accept my challenge, so I will not purposely make this difficult for you. The new scenario consists of five main quests and many side quests. As long as you can complete one of the main quests, I will admit defeat." Chen Ge looked like a fair and honest person. "Since you are livestreaming the whole process, I will not purposely scam you. Of the five quests, there are easier quests, and some are harder. They are all inside this wooden box. Draw one yourself."

Chen Ge took out the box that he had made the previous night from the counter and placed a taped ballpoint pen inside the box. He raised the box and wrote the following on the surface.

"Quest 1: Find thirteen oil paintings in the School of the Afterlife and place all of them in the art club's painting room. Time limit: one hour.

“Quest 2: Discover the secret of the revived soul, locate the phone of the missing Lin Sisi, and help him complete his wish. Time limit: one hour.

“Quest 3: The headmaster of the School of the Afterlife has always been a mystery. His office is hidden at the deepest despair of the school. Time limit: one hour.

“Quest 4: Explore the seven biggest mysteries of the school! Replication of the classic! The past of the seven Specters!

“Quest 5: Blood fog floods the corridors—the inverted mirror is the only exit.”

Just from wording, the first quest seemed the simple. There was no puzzle solving or taking risks—one only needed to search. The other quests were either related to ghosts or had very vague descriptions.

“There are paper notes with numbers inside the box. The number will decide which quest you will take.” Chen Ge then presented the box to Liu Gang. The few looked at each other; the drawing of the mission would directly affect the difficulty of the scenario.

“I’ll do it.” Liu Gang reached into the box and pulled out a note. Scribbled on it was the number one.

“Quest one!” Liu Gang sighed in relief as he stole a look at Chen Ge. He noticed that Chen Ge’s brows were slightly creased. “If not due to the time limit, it would have been nice to complete all the quests. This is such a shame.”

“You drew the quest yourself. That was your choice,” Chen Ge said expressionlessly with a slight tone of regret. In reality, he did not mind the result. The box was full of white paper. No matter which Liu Gang drew, Chen Ge had told the pen spirit to write down one on it. He was worried that other visitors might join the group, so he did not write one on all the notes but used a method like this.

“Now, can we start the visit?”

“There’s a third thing.” Chen Ge placed the box back on the counter and led everyone to the Specter’s Changing Room. “Normally, the visitors are required to change to explore the new scenario, but since this is your first time here, I’m not going to enforce it. However, take your student ID. Remember, no matter what, do not lose it. Only by having your ID will you not get lost.”

After everyone got their IDs, footsteps came from the front counter. Another five visitors entered. Two of them were students from Jiujiang Medical University, and the other three stood at the back to ensure that they would not be caught on the cameras. The five signed the contract and drew the quest. They ‘luckily’ got the fifth quest.

“Come here.” When everyone was ready, Chen Ge led them underground. Yellowed paper fluttered on the ground, and the visitors’ screams echoed in their ears.

“Follow me.” Chen Ge led the sixteen visitors underground and stopped between Mu Yang High School and the underground morgue.

“This is the School of the Afterlife?” Liu Gang silently wiped away the sweat from his forehead.

“That is the two-star scenario, Mu Yang High School. The scenario that you’re going to visit is here.” Chen Ge pushed open the rusted gates, and screams floated out from within. Chilly wind crawled into their clothes, and a feeling of being observed appeared.

Liu Gang retreated subconsciously. His body told him to run. If not for the livestream, he would have escaped already.

“The time limit for the first quest is one hour, but if you wish to leave earlier, just call for help. The time starts now. Enjoy.” From beginning to end, Chen Ge maintained a smile, so no one could find any fault with him.

Bang!

The gates of the School of the Afterlife closed heavily. The chains were tied, and the only exit was sealed. Walking out from the underground, Chen Ge entered the main control room. He switched on Black Friday and Wedding Dress, and the familiar rhythm rang in his ears.

“Did you notice that the background music has changed?” Bai Buhui looked at the rowdy visitors. This was the first time that he had spoken, and his voice was cold and detached like he did not care about anything or anyone.

“This means that the game has started, right? We have limited time. Let’s not waste time at the entrance anymore and go find those oil paintings.” The anxious shorty walked ahead. There was only curiosity in his eyes but no fear.

“Buhui, don’t mind him. This buddy of mine is a straight shooter.” Liu Gang stood in the middle of the group. The many visitors gave him a sense of security. “You can call him Little Ghost. The tall, thin one next to him is called Big Ghost, and the girl in short dress is Sister Ghost. The trio are outdoor livestream experts on our platform. It’s an everyday thing for them to spend a night at graves and morgues.”

“Outdoor livestream?” Bai Buhui glanced at the shorty and nodded. “I seem to have scrolled through their livestream when I was bored. Yes, it was very boring. What about the rest?”

“All the friends that I have with me are very special.” Liu Gang made a simple introduction to Bai Buhui.

“The cameraman is nicknamed Muscle. He used to be a cameraman for a survival series. He’s not afraid of tigers or bears, much less a small Haunted House.

“The one with the phone is my assistant. Even though he’s not that brave, he’s my closest friend—we’re always together.

“The bald one is called Liu Guangming. He is the most courageous one among our company’s security group, and the man is damn lucky. He has brushed past death several times. The people around him were all injured, but he was fine.

“The three students are all supernatural aficionados. They might look young, but they have participated in several courage trials video competitions. They are popular online and know ghost stories about school like the back of their hand. There’s basically nothing that can scare them.”

Liu Gang introduced his team until his brows went flying, but the more Bai Buhui listened, the deeper his frown. In the end, before Liu Gang named the three students, he cut him off. “You only brought the few of them for a livestream challenge?”

“Is that not enough? They are all professionals.” Liu Gang was proud. He kept the smile on his face and ensured that he looked confident before the camera.

“Professionals? These people?” Bai Buhui’s lips twitched. He wished to tell them about when people from the futuristic theme park visited Chen Ge’s Haunted House. Some of them were still lying at the hospital. But considering the whole process was livestreamed and mindful of Liu Gang’s face, Bai Buhui did not say it directly but uttered in a roundabout way, “Just ignore the quest. His haunted house is quite boring. We will just walk around, and the one hour will soon be over.”

Bai Buhui was the representative from the futuristic theme park. The reason they had chosen to accept Chen Ge’s challenge was because Chen Ge had pushed them too far. As long as one of them could function normally at the end of the tour, and even if that person lied, saying that the Haunted House was not scary, they would have won. After all, lying was such people’s second nature; how could Chen Ge control what they said?

Challenging the scenario with eleven people at the same time, the futuristic theme park thought that there was no chance of losing.

“Buddy, are you kidding? We’re here to undermine his business. If we do not complete the quest, the internet users will riot.” Shorty looked down on Bai Buhui. He felt that the man had a less than manly way of speaking.

“You have no idea...”

“Little Ghost is right. If we don’t complete the quest, why are we even here?” The woman in short dress interrupted Bai Buhui. She had a good figure and dressed lightly. She kept consciously and subconsciously walking to stand before the camera, like she was careless about being seen by Liu Gang's viewers.

Little Ghost had an anxious personality, Sister Ghost liked to show off, and Big Ghost did not like to speak, keeping quiet. Bai Buhui had his own plan, but no one was listening to him, so he had to turn to Liu Gang for help. "Liu Gang, we have to be steady. No matter what, we have to survive this one hour as safe as we can."

"Okay, we'll listen to you." Liu Gang's attention was now on the number of viewers. The number of online viewers was close to a hundred thousand—his heart was blossoming with flowers. At his level, it was hard to push for an increase in followers, but this challenge had brought him hope. The endless chant of "Brother Gang is a real man" refreshed the chatroom. He really felt like he was not afraid of anything, and nothing could scare him.

"We're here to challenge, so it's necessary that we do the quest, but we can't be too rash lest we're led away by the boss." The three students from the back of the group walked over. The leader was about 1.8 meters tall and wore black-rimmed glasses. "Let me introduce myself. My name is Lan Dong. I'm a cryptology enthusiastic, and I love to study..."

"No one asked for your input, and I do not wish to know." Bai Buhui was in a bad mood. Looking at his teammates, he felt angry. "I shouldn't have trusted Liu Gang. I should have brought my own team. No, the entire team should be people from our theme park!"

"Fine, then I shan't waste time and explain the plan in simple ways." Lan Dong changed his tone. "We need to find these thirteen oil paintings in one hour. This scenario is gigantic. If we wish to complete the quest, we'd better split up."

"No!" Bai Buhui almost cursed. "The bigger our group, the safer it is. We mustn't split up; we have to stay together!"

"I just gave a suggestion. There's no need for such a big response." Lan Dong felt insulted and gave Liu Gang a side-eye. "Brother Gang, your friend seems to know everything, doesn't he?"

Before the exploration began, Liu Gang's team was already arguing. They did not give off a reliable feeling. The five visitors who walked at the back came over after a long discussion.

"We heard that this Haunted House is very scary. Can we join you? There are five of us," the senior from Jiujiang Medical University said softly. He was also a student like Lan Dong, and the youths could communicate easier among themselves.

“Of course, there is no problem. But honestly, you’re just scaring yourself. This Haunted House...”

Liu Gang acted like a gentleman before the camera, but before he could finish, Bai Buhui cut him off again. “No, we need to lose them!”

“Didn’t you say, the more the better?”

“There might be Haunted House workers mixed among them. It’s not safe to go with them.” Bai Buhui was one of the designers from the futuristic theme park. With the information from his colleagues, he knew about the tricks at Chen Ge’s Haunted House.

“There’s no need to have such attitude even if you don’t want to bring us.” One of the middle-aged men grabbed the hand of the woman next to him. “Yue, let’s go. Do they think we want to follow them?”

The middle-aged man led his girlfriend away. As unwilling as the two medical students were, they did not stay with Liu Gang but left with the middle-aged man. Of the five, now only one remained. The man wore a thick jacket and long pants even in the summer. He had his hands in his pockets. He did not follow anyone and walked away on his own.

“Buhui, relax. So what if they are the worker here?” Liu Gang acted carefree before the camera, but there was dissatisfaction toward Bai Buhui in his tone. After saying that, he turned to the camera. “This buddy of mine is easily scared, and this is an online livestream, so he’s nervous. Please forgive him, everyone.”

“Stop wasting time, we’ll start the exploration now. There are only a few ways a Haunted House can scare its visitors. As long as you trust that nothing is real, nothing can scare you. When you see the workers, you won’t feel scared but think they’re acting funny.”

Liu Gang ignored Bai Buhui and moved ahead. The team of eleven officially entered the School of the Afterlife. Semi-present crying came from around the corner, and the whispering of children floated on the wind. This used to be a heaven, but now it was only an empty corridor. The half-open wooden doors creaked, and there were small prints left on the wall. They carved down the good memories that the students had once had.

“This feels so real. Last year, we entered the biggest abandoned school in Xin Hai for a courage contest, and this place gives off the same feeling.” Lan Dong took out his phone to snap some pictures. “The place doesn’t look like it’s purposely made old; it’s as if the scenario is designed like this. Look at the dust in the windowsill and the burn marks on the wall.”

His fingers peeled on the wall, and the dusty white paint hide a layer of burnt cement. “To create this effect, one has to burn the wall once before painting on a new layer. The boss has considered even details like that?”

There were two students next to Lan Dong. One was called Ah Li, slightly overweight. He looked honest. The other was a girl, very quiet and did not like to speak.

“Perhaps the boss moved some burnt walls from outside underground and redesigned them.” Liu Gang did not wish for his audience to see any good things about this Haunted House, so he tried to lighten the mood to decrease the sense of fear. “By the way, we have been in here for five minutes already, but we haven’t seen even an actor. The workers here are so unprofessional.”

“Perhaps they’re waiting for a chance.” The male assistant laughed in relief. He was about to walk forward when Big Ghost and Small Ghost, who led the way, suddenly stopped.

“Did you hear that weird noise?” Big Ghost, who had been silent thus far, asked. He looked left and right before turning to look behind them. “It seems to come from behind.”

“What noise? How come I didn’t hear anything?”

“It sounds like a faucet hasn’t been tightened, and water is dripping.” Big Ghost took several steps back and pushed open the door next to Liu Gang. It looked like a normal toilet, and there were five cubicles inside.

“Be careful. The workers might be hiding inside a cubicle.” The spine-tingling background music crawled into their ears, and Big Ghost and Small Ghost entered the toilet while the rest stood at the door.

“What are you so afraid of? There are so many of us. Watch me pull the actor out for everyone to see.” Small Ghost burst into the room. He noticed that the camera was on him, and he acted proudly. He pushed the first cubicle open with much ceremony. There was nothing inside the small space, so he continued to open all the other cubicles before stopping at the fifth cubicle.

“Wasted so much energy to build an abandoned toilet. There must be a scare point here. The water sound came from the toilet. Something must be wrong with this last cubicle.” Big Ghost and Small Ghost stood at both sides of the door and pushed the door open.

The door slammed into the wall. There was no one hiding in the last cubicle, but there was a broken diary.

“Looks like we scared ourselves for no reason.”

The others entered the toilet while Big Ghost and Small Ghost picked up the book from the ground. It had some sentences written on it.

“Do not enter the dripping toilet alone. The four corners might be hiding scary spirits.

“Do not walk with your head lowered. Cold hands will press down on your head.

“Do not stay too long in the room with all the posters. They can’t get out, so they will make you stay.

“Do not bite your fingers. Your fingernails will be taken away.

“Do not stare at shattered mirrors, or you might see a different you in it.

“Do not pick up and read this diary. You have read his past and will become the next him.”

Small Ghost closed the tattered diary and scoffed. “If I trusted these things, I wouldn’t have gone to sleep at a graveyard. Boring...”

He tossed the diary into the dirty toilet, and when the diary touched the water, the door of the first cubicle suddenly slammed shut. With a shiver, Small Ghost glared at the other people in the room. “Who shut the door? Are you mad?”

“No one touched it.” Bai Buhui stood at the back of the group. After some hesitation, his palm fell on the door of the first cubicle, and the camera turned to him. Pushing it open, there was still nothing inside the first cubicle.

“The axle doesn’t have any mechanism installed on it. Why would it close then? Was it the wind?”

“Something’s wrong!” The male assistant suddenly screamed, and that gave Liu Gang a jolt.

“Don’t do that. What did you discover?”

“Perhaps I saw wrongly.” The male assistant forced a smile. He silently whispered into Liu Gang’s ear, “I have been watching your livestream. Earlier, the camera was on Bai Buhui. When he opened the door, there seemed to be a child on the image, and he was squatting inside the first cubicle.”

“If you weren’t mistaken, the chatroom would have exploded.” Liu Gang glanced at the chatroom. It was normal, so it was clear that the assistant was mistaken. “I knew I shouldn’t have brought you. Don’t scare yourself. We’re livestreaming. If you continue to do this, we’ll lose face.”

After Liu Gang had the camera on him, he put his calm demeanor back on. “Alright, there is nothing to be seen inside this toilet. Let’s go looking for the oil paintings and try to finish the quest in less than half an hour.”

“Ok.” Bai Buhui felt that something was wrong, but he could not pinpoint it. The group walked out of the toilet. Only the male assistant was confused. He lowered his head to look at the livestream on his phone and shook his head. “Perhaps I was really mistaken.”

As he was about to move outside, he felt a chill on his neck like a small hand was pressing down on him.

“Who is it?” Whipping his head around, the male assistant saw a pair of gray legs run past the fifth cubicle.

“What was that?” He did not have the courage to check it alone. He rushed after the rest and did not stay in the toilet alone.

Drip, drip...

Red liquid dripped out from the tap, and faded stains that looked like human faces started to appear from four corners of the toilets. The male assistant held the phone tightly. He squeezed next to Liu Gang, wondering whether he should tell him what he had seen earlier. He was very anxious, and the anxiety could not be dispersed even if he was in a crowd.

He kept turning to look at the toilet. The strange background music crawled into his ears, and the footsteps had a strange echo to them like there was something following them.

“Let’s move on. Stop looking around.” Sister Ghost leaned close to the male assistant, much closer than necessary. “Did Brother Gang inform you of the real purpose of this visit? Why is your heart beating so fast, and why are you sweating so much? Are you not feeling well?”

“I’m fine, I’m fine.” The male assistant pulled back his gaze. Holding his phone, his face was extraordinarily pale, and he softly grumbled, “The footsteps are uneven, but the numbers are correct, thank goodness...”

“You are a strange man.” Sister Ghost wanted to ask him something, but seeing his state, she cancelled that thought.

“Little Sister, you and Little Ghost had better be more careful. This Haunted House is very uniquely designed.” Big Ghost silently moved to Sister Ghost’s side.

“Did you hear something?” Sister Ghost was curious.

“Someone is calling for help. It comes from beyond the wall. I closed my eyes, trying to pinpoint the source, but it seems to come from all sides like the loudspeakers are placed everywhere.” Big Ghost was not good with words.

“Big Ghost, this is just a Haunted House, stop scaring yourself. Also, you’d better go for a check with the doctor. If you ignore it, I’m afraid the illness will become more serious.” Sister Ghost’s voice would only turn normal when she was talking to Big and Small Ghost.

“Ok.”

The group reached the end of the corridor and came to the first split in the road.

“There are markers on the wall. The club activity room, the data filing room, gymnasium, library, and swimming pool are on the left; the right has the education block, lab building, and staff office.” Small Ghost was at the front. He looked at the words on the wall and reached out to touch them. “They are carved with a knife, and there is some paint left in the grooves.”

A faded red color lingered on his fingers. If he smelt it, he would have smelt a light scent of blood.

“Our goal is to take thirteen oil paintings back to the art club. That is related to club activities, so I suggest we go to the left. We might be able to find some clues.” Lan Dong’s black-rimmed glass hid his excited eyes. This child seemed to treat this visit as an exploration game.

“The oil paintings are related to the art club. That is common knowledge, so the Haunted House boss will use that to place various traps on the left corridor.” Small Ghost pointed at the right corridor. “Therefore, we should apply reverse psychology and take his path. We will fluster him that way.”

“My little brother has a point. If we sink into the other person’s tempo when we’re inside a Haunted House, we’ll end up being the passive party.” Sister Ghost supported Small Ghost no matter what, and then he nudged Big Ghost.

Big Ghost seemed to be spacing out; he was not paying attention. With a nudge from Sister Ghost, he said as if on autopilot, “The crying is getting closer. They are just around us.”

This sudden declaration caused the atmosphere to turn weird.

“The Haunted House’s workers might be coming. The best solution is to retrace our step. No matter what we see, do not turn back. We will all wait at the entrance for time to run out,” Bai Buhui proposed to them again.

“Cough.” Liu Gang coughed drily. “Why are the two of you helping the Haunted House raise its atmosphere? This livestream is to show the viewers how fake this place is. If we retreat, how am I going to answer to my viewers?”

“Ignore them,” Lan Dong said with a smile. “I’ve seen Big and Small Ghost’s supernatural show before. Going to sleep in a graveyard is not that impressive. Many so-called supernatural effects in the show are their own doing.”

Lan Dong was young and had no filter. He said all that while the livestream was rolling. Even though the camera was not on him, his voice was heard by the viewers.

“F*ck you!” Small Ghost had an explosive temper. He rolled up his sleeves and prepared to argue it out with Lan Dong.

“The three of us have played many supernatural games before and have been to many places to test our bravery, to search for the presence of ghosts. Unfortunately, we have not yet run into anything too scary. All supernatural phenomena can be explained away by science.” Lan Dong was a studious person. He looked down on Small Ghost’s belief in ghosts and walked directly to Liu Gang. “Brother Gang, look closely this time. The three of us will explain everything about this Haunted House to you from a scientific perspective.”

“Brother Gang...” The male assistant wished for Lan Dong to explain the presence of those gray legs that he saw, but Liu Gang did not give him the chance.

“I understand that you wish to make the livestream as exciting as possible, but that is not necessary.” Liu Gang told the camera confidently, “We’re here to expose the truth. We do not rely on these tricks to attract attention.”

“You have a point. No wonder Brother Gang is a streamer with several million followers. This attitude is worth learning.”

Since Liu Gang had made the decision, even if the others were not satisfied, they had to keep their comments to themselves. The light dimmed, and the people at the front of the group had trouble even seeing the faces of the people at the back.

“Try to keep up!” The corridors were convoluted. Even though there were maps on the wall, the legends were muddled by red paint like they had been ruined by ghostly hands. They entered a few rooms, and they did not find any oil paintings, but they did find a lot of torn homework and diaries. They were filled with spine-tingling words. This school seemed to be filled with taboos. Once you did something bad, misfortune would befall you.

Bang!

Lan Dong pushed open the door at the corner. The wooden plaque that named it as the club activity center dropped to the ground. It appeared like the room had been vacated for a long time. There was a mildew-like scent, and the tables had a layer of dust on it.

“Club Activity Records?” The bald security guard, Liu Guangming, found a yellowed book on the table. It was filled with information from various clubs, but there was no art club. “Why isn’t there a record of the art club?”

“We’ve been in here for ten minutes. Theoretically, speaking we should have found some clues already.” Lan Dong grabbed the book without permission. Before each club, there would be a black and white picture of the club members. When he reached the end, he frowned.

The last page was for a supernatural observation club. For the picture of this club, all the members wore red clothes.

“Of all the pictures, only this club picture is different. The art club should be related to this club! If we wish to complete the mission. We’d better actively go and find the club members. They should give us some clues.” Lan Dong memorized the information about the Supernatural Observation Club. “The club doesn’t have an activity room, but the responsible teacher is Mr. Bai, and all the information about him will be in the staff dormitory.”

“Brother Dong, more than ten minutes has passed, and we haven’t found even one painting. This makes the quest impossibly hard,” Ah Li whispered. “I suggest we split up. One group can look for the paintings while the other focuses on solving the art club’s mystery. That is the most efficient way to complete the quest.”

“Looks like that is the only solution.” Lan Dong turned to Liu Gang. “Brother Gang, you’re the leader—make the choice.”

“Don’t even think about it.” Bai Buhui blocked the door. “I’ve seen many horror movies. We’ll be fine if we stay together, but people insist on splitting up due to various reason. I’ve always wondered why those people insist on searching for death!”

“The information for the supernatural observation club is in Mr. Bai’s room, and the room and the office are down the same path. The design is purposely for us to split up.” Bai Buhui was very calm. “When all of us stay together, even if we run into the actors, we won’t be afraid, but once we are separated, we will be taken down one by one.”

“Taken down one by one? This is just a Haunted House. All of us have phones. If there’s anything wrong, we can just call each other.” Lan Dong thought that Bai Buhui was being too careful. He looked more like he was betting his life with Death than visiting a Haunted House.

He’s too into this. Lan Dong silently labelled Bai Buhui. He did not know about the man’s identity; Liu Gang did not tell them about the futuristic theme park.

“When a person is shocked, the brain will be temporarily flustered. We will set each other’s numbers as speed dial. That way, when we run into trouble, we’ll be able to contact the others immediately.” Ah Li took out his phone to make the example. “We often do this when we are out exploring. There are many other self-protective skills. If you want to learn, I can teach you.”

“Professional.” Liu Gang was satisfied with Lan Dong and Ah Li. “We’ll follow Xiao Dong’s suggestion. The three of them plus me, the cameraman, and my assistant will go to the other path, and the rest of you can continue exploring this place.”

Since Liu Gang had spoken, the others did not voice dissenting opinions, and Bai Buhui had trouble countering him before the viewers.

“Let’s not waste time. The boss gave us sixty minutes, but we will try to clear his quest in under forty minutes. I have to see the look on that man’s face at the exit.” Liu Gang then led Lan Dong’s trio and retraced their path. “We’ve been here for so long, and we haven’t seen anything. Even if the viewers aren’t bored, I am.”

The cameraman followed Liu Gang closely, and they soon disappeared around the corner.

“That Lan Dong may be young, but he is a cunning little thing. The chance to expose ourselves before millions of people was taken away just like that.” Sister Ghost rolled her eyes. She pointed at Big and Small Ghosts, “You two, say something! The reason we’re here is to borrow the popularity of Liu Gang to promote our own livestream, but welp, look at us now.”

Without the camera, they did not need to act like they were walking on eggshells anymore, and they spoke what was on their minds.

“Then should we continue the exploration?” The bald security guard, Liu Guangming, was an honest man. He was the most innocent of the group. He listened to the orders closely and did not think much when he was called to come visit this place.

“Of course. If we locate more oil paintings than Lan Dong, the viewers will give us more approval.” Sister Ghost smoothed down her clothes. “Sigh, wasted the time I have spent dressing up for the occasion.”

“Don’t worry.” Bai Buhui stopped Sister Ghost. “We will return the way we came and follow behind Liu Gang. If they run into anything scary, we can jump out to rescue them immediately.”

“That’s a bit too...” Even Sister and Small Ghost thought that was inappropriate.

“Liu Gang is livestreaming the whole process, and the camera is now on them. You are dressed so sexily today. Don’t tell me you plan to show yourself to the ghosts?” Bai Buhui’s words cut into Sister Ghost’s heart. “The three of you are after popularity, so the best choice is to follow Liu Gang. It’ll be fine if we’re not discovered.”

Bai Buhui was a clever man and he knew how to toy with people’s desires. “Furthermore, those three kids aren’t reliable. When they are scared to the point they pee their pants, don’t you think our appearance will be very much welcomed?”

“That’s right. We’ll turn back now and hurry, or else we might lose them.” The trio was convinced, and Liu Guangming had to follow. The five exited the club activity center. The outside corridor was empty, and Liu Gang's group was gone.

"Don't let them discover us and pay attention to your surroundings. The boss has been waiting for us to split up. Looking at the time, it's about time for him to make the move." Bai Buhui and the four retraced their steps, but after turning the corner, they still did not see Liu Gang. However, they could hear footsteps not far away.

"We'll maintain this distance."

In the dim light, footsteps echoed down the corridor. With those footsteps leading the way, Bai Buhui's group was slowly led down the corridor.

"Achoo!" The male assistant sneezed. He clenched his phone and kept turning back. "Brother Gang, Muscle, did you hear the footsteps coming from behind us? It sounds like someone's following us."

"Then let them follow. We're just at a Haunted House. What's the worst that can happen?" Liu Gang was focused on his livestream to pay attention to his assistant. They returned to the split, and when they planned to head right, the assistant suddenly stopped.

"What now?"

"When we were here earlier, I remember that the doors on the corridors were all open, and we went inside the toilet. I was the last to come out, and I remember clearly that I didn't close the door..." The assistant's eyes moved, and his face paled. "Brother Gang, look at the ground."

The dusted ground had hand and footprints and trails of balls being rolled across it.

"There are things following us. They are following us!"

"Stop panicking! We are inside a Haunted House. Isn't it normal for the actors to follow us? This is all fake. There are no real ghosts." Liu Gang used his feet to step on the rolling trail. "This is a clear prop. Do you think a real ghost would use his head to roll on the ground? Is there a ghost as dumb as that?"

"Perhaps something was wrong with the prop. It's expected for a small Haunted House like this one." Lan Dong smiled. "The size of the footprints and handprints are all different. They should come from models. If they are from actual humans, the Haunted House's accounts will be in the red."

With the comfort given by Lan Dong, the group ended the left corridor. After passing a few empty classrooms, with the guide from the signs, they found the male dormitory.

"Why is there a staircase? There's a basement?" The doors of the first sub-level were all closed. They went down to the second-floor basement and found a torn diary inside the first room around the corner.

"X Year, X Month, X Day, I lost a bet with my friend, so I came to this school to test my courage. The three of us had to play three mini games. Guess the Person Behind the Door, Sitting in the Row, and Flipping Over.

"My two friends played the previous two games, and they were fine. Finally, it was my turn. But halfway through the last game, I bent over and looked around the room in an inverted manner. I then realized that the faces of my two friends were weird, just like, just like they are dead."

Chapter 921 - Inverted

Chapter 921: Inverted

“Even though I was afraid, I insisted on finishing the game. When I stood upright again, my friend saw that there was some paper stuck to my back. On it was the method to leave the western and eastern campuses.”

The diary did not end there. Attached were the detailed instructions of the three games and the warnings. It was as if the diary was luring the readers into playing the games.

“Successfully playing these three games will get us the way to leave the abandoned school. Looks like we are quite lucky to have found one of the main quests.” Lan Dong flipped the diary to the last page and carefully read how to play the three games.

“Isn’t our quest to find the oil paintings?” The male assistant was afraid that Lan Dong might do something crazy, so he spoke to warn him, but it was still too late.

“Even if we find the paintings, we might not be able to leave. What if the boss becomes desperate, doesn’t keep his word, and forcibly increase the difficulty?” Lan Dong had considered this well.

“This Haunted House has five main quests, and we drew the easiest quest—another quest had a description related to escape. In other words, the diary that we’ve found is an important clue for another quest. If we can find the way out, we will have nothing to be afraid of. Then, we can mock the boss, pointing at the camera imaging how angry and helpless he is behind it.”

Lan Dong’s words were music to Liu Gang’s ears. He agreed immediately. “It’s just three mini games; it’s perfect for the livestream. We’ll be done with them in five minutes. After we get the clue, we’ll continue the search for the art club.”

“Don’t worry, we’ve played many similar games before. Nothing will happen.” Lan Dong held the dairy. “The rule for the first game, Guess the Person Behind the Door, is very simple. Someone has to standing inside a dark room alone while the others retreat outside. No one can speak, and the people outside will pace before the door twice and knock on the door thrice. The person inside the room will call out the name of the person who knocks, and if the guess is correct, the knocker will replace the person in the room, and it will continue.”

“It’s a simple game with no difficulty.” Liu Gang had thought that it would be some scary game, but it was just a normal kid’s game. “We can discuss the order beforehand, and we’ll just follow that order.”

“Yes, that’s what I think.” Lan Dong looked at the dormitory behind him. “This room will do. I’ll be the first. Ah Li and Xiao Chun, you’ll follow. Then it’ll be Brother Gang and finally the cameraman and the assistant.”

“Okay, we’ll finish this in a minute.” Liu Gang nodded, and the rest did not say anything. The game started, and Lan Dong entered the room and closed the door. The male dormitory was dark, and there were things placed on the bed as if there were people lying there.

“I’m ready.” When Lan Dong said that, footsteps echoed outside the door. They were light. After two paces, the door was knocked on.

“Xiao Chun, is that you?” The door was pushed open, and the quiet girl entered the room. “What kind of stupid game is this? Any of the games we’ve played before are scarier than this.”

The footsteps began again. The people followed the predetermined order and entered the room one by one. A chill crawled into their collars, and fewer and fewer people stayed outside the door. The male assistant gripped the phone and kept looking around. In the quiet corridor, the knocking sounded harrowing, and the pacing footsteps became more unsettling. The male assistant was flustered. For some reason, he was reminded of old stories that he had been told when he was a child.

Staying out late at night, pacing up and down the corridor will attract their attention, and when you open the door, they will follow you home.

“Why are we playing a game like this?” He was very afraid, and his palms were sweaty, to the point they drenched the phone. Xiao Chun, Ah Li, and Liu Gang successfully entered the door. Only the cameraman Muscle and the assistant remained outside the door. Carrying the camera, Muscle followed the rules and walked toward the other end of the corridor, leaving the assistant alone at the door.

Isolated, the fear in his heart was exacerbated, and his legs were shaking.

“Just hold on, this is just a game.” When the male assistant’s mind was wandering, Muscle was walking back. Footsteps echoed in the assistant’s ears. One in front, the other behind, there were two distinct footsteps. He whipped his head around. He stared down the corridor hard. There seemed to be something approaching from the darkness.

“It’s your turn.” Someone tapped him on his shoulder, and the male assistant jolted awake. He saw Muscle, who was one meter away.

“What are you doing? I’m going in now.” Muscle knocked on the door and looked at the male assistant strangely. “Why do you look so pale?”

The door opened, and the cameraman entered the room. The assistant was the only one left. Something seemed to come from the dark. The male assistant took some deep breaths. After the cameraman entered the dormitory, the footsteps disappeared. “It should be my imagination or the workers of this Haunted House.”

He kept encouraging himself and moved his shaky legs. Following the rules, he headed to the end of the corridor, but once he moved, he heard two footsteps.

“It came from me?” He tried two more steps, and the two footsteps seemed to overlap, but he was sure that they did not come from the same person. “Muscle was standing here when he called after me earlier, and the footsteps began here... Wait!”

The male assistant suddenly realized something.

“When Muscle greeted me, I felt a pat on my shoulder, but he was one meter away from me, and he should be carrying the camera!

“He’s not the one who touched me!”

A chill rushed down his spine. He was about to scream when the same spot on his shoulder was patted.

“Who is it?” He turned back, holding his phone. His action was so big, and due to the sweat on his palm, the phone slipped out from his hand. “There is no one...”

Bending over, the male assistant went to grab his phone. Through the weak light from the screen, he seemed to see something. Widening his eyes, while his body was leaned over, he saw many ‘carcasses’ dangling from the ceiling behind him. They seemed to be walking in an inverted world, and they had been following him!

The black hair lowered to his face, scratching his nose. The male assistant forgot how to breath. He slowly lifted his head, and many upside-down faces were there to greet him.

“Ah!” He lost the ability to speak. He dropped his phone and ran away from the human faces while screaming his head off. Hearing the scream outside the door, Liu Gang’s group quickly opened the door, but the male assistant had already disappeared, and only the echo of his scream could be heard.

Chapter 922: Ball of Paper

“Where is he?”

“What happened?”

...

The door was half open. Liu Gang looked out at the empty corridor and sucked in a cold breath. The male assistant was not that brave, but he was no coward.

What did he see when he was outside alone?

The same question appeared in everyone’s mind. None of them knew why the assistant had lost his composure. If this was not something planned beforehand, they were in big trouble.

“Brother Gang, your friend sure is a bit of a coward.” Lan Dong stood next to Liu Gang, his eyes filled with confusion. They had all been standing inside the dormitory. The assistant could have easily knocked on the door for help, so why did he run down the corridor? Was it because his brain was overwhelmed by fear until he lost his basic common sense, or was the thing that scared him standing by the door?

The hair on the back of Lan Dong’s neck stood on end. He looked around but did not notice anything scary.

“His phone is still here.” Ah Li was about to pick up the male assistant’s phone when he noticed a bloody note next to it. “Look!”

He picked up the note, and the following was hastily written on it.

‘There is a hidden path behind a mirror on the eastern and western campus that we used to escape the school, but after we left, we realized...’

“We didn’t finish the game, so why were we given the hint?” Ah Li held the note. “Is this purposely here to misdirect us? Mirrors are something that we need to pay attention to, especially after dark. It’s best not to walk around them at night.”

“The sacrifice of Brother Gang’s assistant is not without value. At least it has revealed something important.” Lan Dong took the note. “The boss has been watching us and is ready to come after us at any moment. The message on the note should be real. We’re livestreaming this whole process, so the boss wouldn’t do something to the hint. After all, he still needs to be in business. If he does something as malicious as purposely misdirecting his visitors, he will only earn the people’s ire.”

Before the camera, Lan Dong tried his best to analyze the situation. He was trying to distract people’s attention, but he had underestimated the impact from the assistant’s disappearance. Even Liu Gang’s livestream was filled with question marks.

“Hold onto the note. During the later exploration, whenever we see a mirror, we’ll go and give it a push.” Liu Gang tried to make himself calm down. This was the first time that he had heard such a scream from his assistant; it was as if his life was threatened.

“Since we’ve received the hint, we can skip the other two games. We’ll go look for information related to Mr. Bai and hurry to meet up with Bai Buhui and find the art club.” Lan Dong did not dare act carelessly anymore. After all, in just seconds, a living human had disappeared, and that was quite scary. They did not know how or why he had disappeared, and the unknown added to the anxiety.

“Let’s go.” The team of six thus turned to a team of five. With the camera watching, Liu Gang still had to act at ease. Going down the dark corridor, strange noises came from the abandoned male dormitory. They sounded like scurrying rats or something brushing against the peeling walls. The weak light from above shone down on the doors around them. There were names that could be seen occasionally on the wall.

“This appears to be the student dormitory; I doubt Mr. Bai lives here.” Lan Dong and Ah Li walked ahead. When they reached the end of the corridor, they realized that there was another staircase leading down. “There appears to be another floor below...”

The light was not strong enough to pierce into the darkness. The five of them stood at the corner of the stairs, and no one dared go first. The rusted banister creaked noisily like someone was climbing up the stairs while holding it. Lan Dong shone his phone downward, and something seemed to reflect the light in the thick darkness.

“Is it a mirror?”

“Don’t forget, eyes can reflect light, too.”

“How about we stay up here?” the only girl in Lan Dong’s team said. She pulled on Lan Dong’s shirt. “Do you remember the last exploration we had? Brother Four said that he saw a pair of red eyes in the dark before the accident...”

“Don’t remind me of that coward. After he left, our livestream release rate increased so much. We were dragged down by him earlier.” Lan Dong’s team had previously had four members, but the fourth had chosen to leave due to certain reasons.

“Certain people have that natural quality to attract those things. Brother Four was only being cautious.” The girl halted. She knew that Liu Gang was streaming, so she left Lan Dong some face.

“Girl, there are no ghosts in this world, only people who act like ghosts.” Liu Gang patted the girl’s shoulder. “I do not believe in ghosts because I have seen people more malicious than ghosts like this Haunted House boss.”

The girl pulled back her arm and stopped talking.

“This place didn’t even have a sign. How about we just ignore it?” Ah Li suggested softly, and Liu Gang grabbed this opportunity.

“That’s right, the lower basement level doesn’t even have lights. Perhaps it’s the Haunted House’s unfinished area. It’s not that I’m afraid, but the areas are probably not fit for visitation yet.” Liu Gang explained that to the viewers, but to his consternation, the winds in his chatroom had changed. Many viewers wanted to see what was in the basement, and many viewers had clear tags that they were Ye Xiaoxin’s fans.

The disappearance of his assistant had indeed flustered Liu Gang, but he reminded himself endlessly that this was just a Haunted House. Other than scaring people, what else could happen? He was livestreaming this, so the other party would not physically assault him. If that happened, the Haunted House would go out of business. He would not be injured, and being scared would not kill him. With that in mind, Liu Gang felt better. “If you guys want to see it, then I’ll bring you down to see it. How troublesome can that be?”

He switched on the flashlight on his phone. Lan Dong and Ah Li walked ahead, he and Xiao Chun were in the middle, and the cameraman followed at the back.

“Many ghost stories are related to stairs. The corners of the stairs are places where Yin energy gathers and the hiding place for many dirty things.” Lan Dong could maintain his calmness as he moved down step by step. When the light swept the corner of the wall, a child’s face appeared.

“Do—don’t panic!” he yelled, and his shaky hand pushed on his glasses. He aimed his camera at the corner of the stairs. There was a child squatting at the corner of the stairs. His head was tilted on his shoulders like his neck was snapped.

“It’s fine. It’s just a mannequin, but the handicraft is impressive.” Lan Dong approached the mannequin carefully and realized that there were many dirty balls of paper littered around the child. He picked up a random one and opened it to read.

“That day, it was my turn to do cleaning duty. When I was going to throw the rubbish out, I saw a child squatting at the corner of the stairs. His neck was twisted at a crazy angle. At the time, just like you, I walked to his side and picked up the paper ball that he dropped.”

Standing in the dark corner of the stairs, Lan Dong held the dirty ball of paper, and the more he studied it, the more unsettling he felt.

“Lan Dong, what does the paper say?” Liu Gang asked behind him. Lan Dong kept his head lowered and did not answer.

...

“Brother Dong?” Ah Li was worried about him, so he jogged over.

“It’s fine, just a ghost story.” Lan Dong tossed the ball of paper next to the mannequin’s feet. He used the phone, bent over, and aimed the screen’s light at the face. The mannequin looked about five years old. It wore clothes with red and white stripes. There were brown stains on its shoes, and the collar and wrists had red thread tied around them, as if afraid that something might escape from inside its clothes.

“Ghost baby?” Xiao Chun also walked over. She stared at the child in the corner, and her voice changed.

“What’s a ghost baby? Have you seen similar mannequin somewhere else?” Liu Gang was feeling afraid.

“The ghost baby is a school ghost story. According to legend, if you stay in the school compound after school, you will meet a child playing ball on the staircase. He will ask you to join him. If you refuse, his head will roll off to chase after you. If you agree, the child will disappear.” Xiao Chun’s voice was low.

“Then what are we waiting for? We should agree!” Muscle urged.

“If you agree, something worse will happen. The boy will follow you home, and after you fall asleep, he will twist off your head.” Lan Dong heard this story before. “Regardless of whether you agree or refuse, the endings are horrible. This is a ghost story with no solution.”

“No solution? I personally think it is quite meaningless.” Liu Gang stood where he was and did not move.

“If I ran into such a child in real life, I would definitely avoid him, but we are inside a Haunted House.” Lan Dong did not see anything weird about the child, and he reached out to grab its head. “Actually, I’ve been curious, why is the mannequin’s head so strange?”

He yanked upward and pulled the whole mannequin up. The mannequin’s head was joined to his body and could not be separated.

“Looks like this is just a decoration. There’s no trap.” Lan Dong held the mannequin’s head and swung it about. “It’s very sturdy; the head can’t be removed. The hint should be in the paper notes then.”

Lan Dong opened all the paper notes, and he realized that all the handwriting was different. However, scarily, all the notes ended with with the same line.

‘At the time, just like you, I walked to his side and picked up the paper ball that he dropped.’

“This feels like an endless curse. Those who pick up the paper notes will have a bad ending.” When Ah Li said that, he obviously had not considering Lan Dong’s feeling.

“Compared to a curse, I have more confidence in psychological influences.” Lan Dong undid the red thread on the mannequin. With a few shakes, a ring of keys fell out from the clothes.

“Have we found a hidden clue? What are the keys for?”

“I think I get it now.” Lan Dong held the keys and matched them to the paper notes. “Look, the note states that today is my duty day. When I prepared to throw the rubbish, I saw a child squatting in the corner of the stairs. The second note said that when I went to male dormitory Room 413 to borrow hot water to cook some instant noodles, I saw a child squatting in the corner of the stairs. The main clue is on this third note—it says, when I was carrying the homework to Mr. Bai’s office, I saw a child squatting in the corner of the stairs.”

“Mr. Bai? Isn’t that the person we’re looking for?” Lan Dong realized that.

“Many clues we found point to this Mr. Bai. He must be an important character here. Obtaining the key to his office will be crucial to us.” Lan Dong frowned and kept the keys.

"I don't think we should mess with the ghost baby's things," Xiao Chun reminded him out of kindness.

After knowing the mannequin was just a normal one, he sighed in relief and returned to normal. "The ring of keys should be a normal prop. Let's not scare ourselves."

"I suggest we stop here. I've heard the ghost story about ghost baby before. Whenever it appears, there are many dirty things to follow. The ghost baby is just the beginning." Xiao Chun suggested for them to leave, but Liu Gang was forced by his fans. After all, he had said that if he retreated, he would have no face to see his fans anymore.

"Girls are always more cautious, but don't worry, we're all here. As long as we're not separated, I guarantee you'll be fine." Liu Gang patted his chest, and everyone praised him for his bravery. Even some of the Haunted House's old fans created new accounts to cheer Liu Gang on. Perhaps, from Liu Gang's perspective, it was his own sincerity and charisma that had won over his enemy's fans, but in reality, he did not capture the real intention of these fans at all. After those fans had been tortured so badly, there was someone noble who was willing to use his own life to tell others about their struggles. How could one not give support and cheer for someone like that?

The five did not realize the seriousness of the male assistant's disappearance. After all, normally, when one visited a Haunted House, they would not think so far. After turning the corner, they came to the lowest floor. The lights in the corridor were all broken, and it was dark, but strangely, there was some faded red light that was flickering at the other end of the corridor. The lights were dancing like ghostly flames.

"Brother Dong, something doesn't seem right." Ah Li patted Lan Dong's shoulder lightly. "The ghost baby's neck was twisted to the side earlier, wasn't it?"

"Yes, what's wrong with that?"

"Take a look again." Ah Li shone the light behind them. The mannequin's head sat straight on its shoulders like the head was about to fall off.

"That's probably because I was gripping its head and pulling it up earlier." When Lan Dong spoke, he felt a chill coming from his neck like a pair of hands was pulling on his head.

“Careful! Something is coming down the corridor!” Muscle suddenly screamed, and everyone turned to look down the corridor. The red light slowly approached. When they were few meters away, it suddenly slithered into one of the rooms.

“Is it one of the Haunted House’s actors?”

Lan Dong shone the light at the door. The room number was 413.

"413? This number is familiar. I think I saw it on the paper notes around the ghost baby." Lan Dong took out the ring of keys from his pocket. "A student saw the ghost baby in the corner of the stairs when he was going to Room 413, so if one of these keys can open the door, then it can indirectly prove that my analysis so far is correct."

"The red light that just entered the room hasn't come out. If you go in now, you might run into it." Muscle had been the first to discover the red light, and he advised the man softly.

"We've been here for so long, but we haven't seen any Haunted House workers. It's about time for us to meet." Lan Dong pushed on his black-rimmed glasses. His dark eyes were hidden under the thick glasses; no one could tell what he was thinking. "There are four of us and one of them. We can block them inside the room and give the viewers a chance to see what a worker here looks like."

"Aren't you afraid?" Muscle was large, but in the dark corridor, even he was panicking.

"Isn't there such a statement online? The best solution to deal with your fears is to face them. I am helping you face your fears now." Lan Dong laughed joyfully. He seemed satisfied with his performance. With the keys, they stopped at the door to Room 413. "Muscle, are you sure the thing ran into this room?"

"It was caught on camera. If you don't believe me, you can ask the viewers." Many people in Liu Gang's livestream had seen the red light. They were given quite a fright in broad daylight.

"It's not that I don't trust you. Relax, we're here to visit a Haunted House, to play." Lan Dong tried the keys one by one. "This place is a bit scary, but it's far less scary than the places we've been to test our bravery. After all, this is just lackluster mimicry of the real thing."

Creak...

With a crisp sound, the door unlocked.

"I was right." Lan Dong held the doorknob. "Where do you think the worker will hide to scare us? Behind the door? Under the bed? Or around the corner?"

Lan Dong sounded like he purposely said those things to the person in the room. His lips were curled up. He turned to look at the rest of the group. "Why aren't any of you speaking?"

"Brother Dong, I think we'd better not stay in the basement for too long. Xiao Chun has always had accurate instincts..." Ah Li was the more cautious one.

"You really don't understand the joy of exploring a Haunted House at all. Running into a scare that you didn't expect in an unknown location is such an exciting thing!" Obtaining the key item from the ghost baby and solving any puzzle had caused Lan Dong to become a bit bloated with pride. "This is how you clear a Haunted House. Try to enjoy the rush of solving puzzles and release your everyday stress."

Pushing the door open, Lan Dong scanned his phone around. The room looked normal at first glance, but upon closer inspection, one would realize that there were many extremely harrowing things hidden in the room. There were bloody pajamas hanging by the door, and a blade poked out under the pillow. It was a male dormitory, but there were female shoes next to the bed, but none of them matched, which proved that they were not for walking. Textbooks and exercise books littered the ground, and most of them had the same name—Lin Sisi. The cupboard had signs of being carved, and the frame of the innermost bed was dyed red by blood. Of the whole dormitory room, only that bed was piled high with trash and rubbish.

"Stop hiding, come out now!" Lan Dong yelled into the room, but he got no response. He looked behind the door, pulled open the door, and opened all the cupboards, but he could not find the red light.

"Cameraman, are you sure that thing came into this room?"

"I saw it with my own eyes. I'm not mistaken."

Lan Dong nodded, and his pupils darted away. When he walked into the deepest part of the room, he suddenly bent over to look under the bed. "The underside of the bed is normally where the dirty things hide.”

Lan Dong was not afraid that his clothes might be dirtied. He wanted to find the actor and see for himself how scary they could be to scare the male assistant like that.

“Why isn’t he here?” Lan Dong touched his nose. “I know, there is a hidden path in this room, and the actor uses it to move through the different scenes.” He looked around and saw that there were human shadows on the walls. Every shadow was pinned to the wall by many nails.

“Why are there so many nails on the wall? Is this a hint for the hidden path?” Lan Dong’s attention was attracted by the nails on the wall. He crawled onto the bed to look at them from a closer distance. The others also started to wander about the room. Ah Li picked up the tattered exercise book and found the name on the book. “Who is Lin Sisi?”

After more searching, Ah Li realized that many things in the room were related to Lin Sisi. The dirtiest bed had Lin Sisi’s name, and the most broken cupboard had Lin Sisi’s name.

“School bullying? The design of this haunted house even reflect actual societal problems?” Ah Li checked Lin Sisi’s bed and found a phone underneath a water-stained pillow. “What the... A phone is used as a prop? Is the boss not afraid that his visitors might steal the phone?”

“I’ve never heard of a Haunted House using a phone as a prop, probably because the actor escaped in too much of a hurry and left it behind,” Liu Gang said to the camera with a smile.

“It doesn’t look that way.” Ah Li tried to switch it on, and the screen soon lit up. “It works fine?”

“I told you, it belongs to the Haunted House actor. The workers here are too unprofessional.” Liu Gang held the fan, but there was curiosity in his eyes. “The phone probably has the conversation between the worker and the boss. They must be communicating with each other on how to scare us.”

“It doesn’t have that,” Ah Li answered honestly. “The phone only has four functions: messages, making calls, camera, and photo album. There is no password, and...” Ah Li pressed on the screen and scanned the phone. “There is a message in the phone that says that this phone can capture things that normal people cannot see... Ah!”

He was just giving it a try, but when the phone turned to the bed where Lan Dong was, his suddenly screamed. His hands shivered, and the phone dropped.

Lan Dong, who was kneeling on the bed, was scared by Ah Li. He whipped his head back to yell, “Why did you do that?”

“Brother Dong!” Ah Li’s face was pale, and he stuttered, “When I used the phone to look at you, I saw a doll crawling on your neck. She grabbed you by your neck like she was trying to yank your head off.”

Room 413 sank into silence. Lan Dong’s Adam’s apple shivered, and he subconsciously touched his neck.

The atmosphere in the Room 413 turned curious. Ah Li was Lan Dong's best friend, so he naturally would not help the Haunted House scare Lan Dong. Therefore, he probably really did see a real ghost earlier.

However, were there actual ghosts in the world? Liu Gang shook his head to chase this unrealistic thought out of his mind. He did not believe Ah Li's words and picked the phone up from the ground.

...

"A few years ago, I saw a similar app on the app store. It can add scary pictures into normal photographs. Many people used it to prank their friends and families." The camera was still on, and Liu Gang aimed it at Lan Dong. There was nothing on Lan Dong's neck, but instead, the wall behind him was a bit strange. The human-shaped stain pinned to the wall seemed to be moving.

"There is nothing around your neck." Liu Gang showed everyone. "It's all a lie."

"Brother Gang, I've used that app you mentioned, but it has been taken off most app store. Do you know why that is the case?" For some reason, Xiao Chun had a bad impression of Liu Gang. Perhaps she disliked this kind of slippery old man who liked to act and postulate.

"Why?"

"Because someone really saw an actual ghost through that app. Those kinds of reason naturally wouldn't be broadcasted by the app store, but a personal friend of mine experienced it." Xiao Chun glanced at the camera. "Brother Gang, I know that you do not believe in ghosts. That is your freedom. But you have to respect them, especially... in a place like this."

"Girly, you're quite young, but you sure have a tongue on you." Liu

Gang did not think much of this.

“Our relationship is not close enough for you to call me girly.” Xiao Chun was a sensitive person. She did not like to speak, but someone like her would sense the smallest change around her. Ever since they entered this Haunted House, she had noticed that everyone’s emotions had been purposely led a certain way; the darker side of their personality had been elicited. The Haunted House was like a maze that made them sink deeper and deeper. “When we were outside the Haunted House, everyone was fine. How come it changed when we came in here? Is it due to the background music, or is the scenario itself too suffocating?”

Xiao Chun did not know how to comment on a Haunted House like this. It was good that those who were suppressed for too long in real life could go to the Haunted House to release themselves and return to their most original self in this scary underground place. Then, they could pick up their masks and continue working hard at life after they left this place. The bad part was that the process of transmutation would definitely be filled with screams and terror.

“Supernatural app?” The people in the room were arguing. Lan Dong touched his neck and knelt on the bed. “Based on what Ah Li said, I did feel some chilling pain around my neck like a pair of invisible hands were trying to pull out my head, but when Brother Gang shone the phone at me, the feeling disappeared.”

“There aren’t real ghosts, right?” Muscle whispered. He was a professional cameraman. Under normal circumstances, he would not comment during shooting unless he could not help it.

“I don’t know whether there are actual ghosts in this world, but I am sure that there is someone acting as a ghost here. Perhaps he is laughing behind the camera at this moment.” Lan Dong looked at the corner of the room. “He is waiting for us to make a fool of ourselves, but I will not allow that to happen.”

Lan Dong jumped down from the bed. “Let’s go, we’ve obtained the key to most rooms in this Haunted House. We only need to open the rooms one by one, and eventually, we will find the exit.”

“We’re stopping the investigation? I’ve looked at the phone, and there seems to be a case of school bullying in this dormitory. The bullied boy is called Lin Sisi, and he should be the owner of the phone.”

“Ah Li, we’re looking for the art club. Don’t get disturbed by unrelated things.” Lan Dong’s face was stern.

“But I just looked at the phone. There were a few messages inside that were related to the art club.” Ah Li activated Lin Sisi’s phone and opened the messages.

“Sender, Mr. Bai—Lin Sisi, from today onward, you will stay in Room 413. Befriend your classmates and do not disappoint your parents.”

“Sender, The Painter—Lin Sisi, why do you hide a knife under your pillow? Do you know you have the habit of sleepwalking?”

“Sender, The Painter—Lin Sisi, what is your favorite color? Deep red? Or dark red?”

Ah Li showed everyone the messages. “This Lin Sisi is a member of the art club. We can find several clues from their messages. The president of the art club should be the Painter, and this club is not a simple hobby club. They are probably a group of madmen. I have a feeling that the quest that we drew is not as simple as it seemed.”

“You’re overthinking things.” Before hearing what Ah Li had to say, Lan Dong cut him off. “The mission has been drawn, and that is a fact. The most imminent task now is to find the art club within the time limit.”

“Wait a minute!” Ah Li did not follow Lan Dong out the room. He pulled off Lin Sisi’s bedsheet and opened Lin Sisi’s armoire. He finally found a handmade, wooden box in the bottom drawer. “Lin Sisi is a member of the art club, so there might be an oil painting hidden in his room.”

The wooden box that Ah Li found was similar to the wooden box from which they had drawn their quest, so they should have been made by the same person. Opening the lid, a scent of blood drifted into their nostrils. A folded oil painting had been brusquely shoved into the box.

“Such folds damage a painting a lot. Never mind, the boss probably doesn’t know how to appreciate art. This painting is probably just a prop that is completely replaceable.” Liu Gang opened the painting to take a look. Even though they had no sense of art, they were stunned by the painting. In the inverted painting, the red and white formed a great contrast and pulled at their hearts. It was unclear what the material of the canvas was, but it was cold to the touch. When the canvas was fully spread out, the folds on it slowly recovered on their own like human skin that would close up and heal after it had been cut.

“Ah Li, well done.” Liu Gang’s group had been in the Haunted House for ten minutes, and they had finally found their first painting.

“Let’s go. We still need to find twelve oil paintings.” Lan Dong left the room without turning around.

Ah Li carefully placed the painting back into the box. When he closed the lid, the image of Lin Sisi being beaten up appeared in his mind. The thin boy pleaded for help, but no one answered him. With a shiver, Ah Li looked around. “Please don’t come for me. I’m just an errand boy.”

His eyes moved around, and when he saw the wall, Ah Li was startled again. “How come one of the stains has gone missing? I remember Brother Dong sitting there earlier.”

He had a bad feeling, so he took out Lin Sisi’s phone to aim at Lan Dong. Everything about the man looked normal, but his shadow was conspicuously tilted to the side. “Nothing is following him. Looks like I’ve been overthinking things like he said.”

Chapter 926 - The Moment of Collapse (2 in 1)

Chapter 926: The Moment of Collapse (2 in 1)

Ah Li hugged the wooden box and walked at the back of the group. He was honest and loyal. Unlike Xiao Chun, who was more sensitive, he merely felt that something was not quite right. “How come my brain is surfeited with the name Lin Sisi. Is it because I have taken his painting? That should not be. This is probably just my mind playing tricks on me, a psychological effect of sorts.”

Walking down the darkened corridor, Ah Li could not help his brain from wandering about. His memory appeared to be covered up by something, and in the corner of his mind, he kept seeing a thin, weak boy standing there. The face was not that clear, and he did not have visible wounds on his body. But his clothes were torn, the zipper of his school bag was broken, his hair was wet and stuck to his face, and his face was dirtied with mud. Compared to the dirtied physical body, the numbness of the boy to the bullying that had befallen him was more heart wrenching.

“You...”

“What? Did you call me?” The cameraman, Muscle, was given a jolt by Ah Li. “Did you see something?”

“No, no, it is nothing. I’m so sorry.” Ah Li quickly apologized. He looked around him, and there was no boy in sight. However, strangely enough, this place that supposed to be dark and eerie gave him a sense of familiarity, like he had been to this place before. “Have I been to this place when I was small? Have I dreamed about this place in one of my nightmares?”

He had gone to a supposedly new place, but there was a sense of déjà vu that arose in his heart. Many people had experienced that feeling before. If it was a normal location out in the open, perhaps it would not have mattered, but they were three floor underground in a Haunted House. This was supposedly an ‘unfinished area’ that did not even have light fittings. The moment he tried to sort his mind out, Ah

Li's brain was overwhelmed by many different scary clips and images. The poor boy was forced into the corner of the room, being pushed into the cubicle of the toilet. Many twisted, eerie faces smiled and laughed at him while they splashed the poor boy with ink and dirty water.

"Enough!" Ah Li yelled at the top of his voice, and it was more than enough to give the other people in his group the scare of their lives.

"Lan Dong, what is going on with your friend? If he keeps going on like this, he's going to scare me to the point the camera slips from my grasp." Muscle was very annoyed.

"Brother, are you okay?" Liu Gang frowned as he turned to look at Ah Li. Since the livestream was still going on, he had to maintain his image. He could not just start going around scolding people.

"I don't know what's wrong. It just feels like I have been to this place before," Ah Li mumbled, but it was clear that there was something on his mind. "Perhaps I have dreamed about this place before. Earlier, wasn't there a news article that said that many comatose patients dreamed about this Haunted House? I have a feeling the articles aren't lying."

"Cough cough!" Liu Gang interrupted Ah Li. He swiftly gave the cameraman a hand signal. Muscle understood what Liu Gang meant and quickly turned the camera away. Putting his hand over the microphone attached to the lapel of his collar, Liu Gang whispered urgently at Ah Li, "We are here to destroy the myths surrounding this Haunted House. Do you understand? Even if you are acting, there has to be a limit to it!"

Liu Gang's attitude turned as quickly as possible. Earlier, in the dormitory, he had been praising Ah Li, but now, his tone had changed completely.

"But I am not lying!"

Ah Li wanted to say more, but Liu Gang was not going to give him the chance. He signaled for Lan Dong to come over. "Watch over your friends carefully. If they do not know how to play this game, teach them."

Replacing the microphone, Liu Gang returned to normal. He walked to stand before the camera and very calmly explained to the viewers that what happened earlier was just an interlude. The camera purposely turned away, and the lowering of the voice along with the strange behavior had started a discussion among the viewers. Seeing the viewers in his livestream talking about the news and Chen Ge's Haunted House, it only deepened Liu Gang's ire.

"Just now, my friend was joking. There's no reason for you to treat it seriously. We have been taking our time and playing around while visiting this Haunted House, but from this moment on, we are going to be serious."

Whether Chen Ge's Haunted House was scary or not, Liu Gang did not have to say much. The atmosphere that was shown through the camera had proven everything. Even if Liu Gang had been trying to lighten the mood and disperse the sense of eeriness, it did not work as well as he hoped.

"A Haunted House that depends on buying popularity on search engines, tricking its visitors, and confusing the viewers also wishes to become popular?" Regardless of whether the accusation was real or not, Liu Gang first added a few defamatory labels to Chen Ge's Haunted House. This way, he would be placed on the moral high ground, and what he was doing would have a sense of duty and vindication to it, so he would feel less afraid.

"We are going to stop wasting time. Today, I will expose its true face for everyone to see!" Liu Gang was highly passionate, and the moment he finished saying that sentence, the phone in his pocket suddenly rang. This was his personal phone, and not many who knew his personal number. Liu Gang hesitated for a moment before pressing the accept button. Before he could react in any way, the male assistant's maddened voice came through the phone.

"Brother Gang! This Haunted House is really haunted! Look above you! All the ghost are crawling above our heads!" The male assistant sounded like he was running for his life, and his breath came unevenly.

"Where have you run off to, and whose phone are you calling from?" Liu Gang's heart cracked a bit. He had just put the microphone back on, which meant that everyone in the livestream could hear the voice of his male assistant.

"I was rescued by the other visitors! You have to turn back! There is no exit in this Haunted House! It will be too late if you do not turn back now! Do not go any further! Help! There are ghosts everywhere!

There are ghosts everywhere!” The male assistant’s harrowing and desperate cries for help were practically slaps on Liu Gang’s face. The corners of his eyes were twitching, and he immediately ended the call. He was there to destroy the name of Chen Ge’s Haunted House, but it felt like he was helping Chen Ge promote his Haunted House before the entirety of his online viewers.

“This assistant of mine has a very over the top reaction to the smallest things. This is such a shameful thing to show...” Before Liu Gang finished, the cameraman’s phone started to vibrate. Someone had been sending him voice messages. Muscle did not think much of it and instantly clicked on them. Then the male assistant’s voice appeared again.

“Liu Gang! Run! Believe me! The ghosts are just beside you! They have always been around you!” The corridor was very quiet, so the voice of the male assistant travelled very far. The man was pushed to the brink of his sanity already, so in his desperation, he called Liu Gang by his full name.

“Switch off your phone. We are going to focus on exploring this Haunted House.” Liu Gang’s face was darkening. If not for the camera still running, he would have exploded already.

“Of course, Brother Gang.” Muscle promised verbally to switch off the phone, but in reality, he did not do so. This muscular man was large, but he had a careful heart. He knew this male assistant well, so he understood that he was not acting; he was really scared out of his wits. After silently replying with a message to the male assistant, Muscle turned the phone to silent mode and shoved it into his pocket.

“Liu Gang! You know I would not purposely harm you! Please answer me!” Holding a female model phone in his hand, the male assistant raced down the narrow corridor. His hair was tussled, and there were tear stains on both of his eyes. His throat was raw from all the yelling.

“Can you please stop yelling? Are you trying to draw all the attention to our group?” Walking with the male assistant were a couple of students, a middle-aged man, and a very graceful female visitor. It was the middle-aged man who spoke. The shadows lulled and moved behind them, and they could hear the sound of footsteps approaching!

“This way!” The middle-aged man found a classroom with the door open. Without thinking much of it, he pulled the woman who was behind him and dragged her into the classroom to hide. The pair of students also prepared to run into the classroom, but at that moment, the male assistant had a sudden burst of speed and brushed past the couple, shooting into the classroom before them. After he entered the classroom, with a grit of his teeth, he grabbed the doorknob and slammed the door shut!

“What the f*ck! Open the door! We lent you our phone, and this is how you repay us?” The students banged on the classroom heavily, but the male assistant moved to lock the door instead. The scary footsteps came closer and closer. Cornered, the pair of students had no choice but to escape, and the sound of footsteps was led away by them.

“Thankfully, I acted in time. If we were all hiding here, we would all be trapped, and none of us would be able to escape.” The male assistant’s action was determined by his subconscious. In this four-star scenario, he seemed to have pull away his normal disguise, and his real self had started to surface. Gasping greedily for air, the male assistant gripped the phone that he borrowed from the students tightly. He leaned against the door to give himself a rest. “I did that for the good of everyone. By the way, I still have not gotten the chance to thank you. What are your names?”

“You can call me Ol’ Zhou, and this is my girlfriend, Duan Yue.” The middle-aged man very excitedly introduced his girlfriend to the male assistant. He seemed to enjoy doing something like that, but the annoyance was plainly written on the face of the female visitor.

“Brother Zhou, when I was chased by the ghost earlier, it was you who volunteered to help me and allowed me to follow you.” The male assistant seemed to have forgotten the heartless thing that he had just done. He knew that it would be dangerous for him to be stranded alone, so he wished to make a bond with Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue.

“We just did what we were supposed to. One more person means one more pair of hands to help. I also did not realize that this Haunted House would be so scary. Turns out that all the ghosts are walking above us, and you will only be able to see them by bending over and looking upside down.” Ol’ Zhou sucked in a deep breath.

“One more person means one more pair of hands to help? But this man just slammed the door shut to block the entry for the two other visitors from coming in,” Duan Yue added snidely. “This kind of person...”

“If he did not do that, all of us would be trapped in here. I am sure he had a reason to do what he did.” What Ol’ Zhou said was like music to the male assistant’s ears. “I can understand you. I have experienced a lot and have seen through a lot. The adult world is not that simple. If given a choice, who would not want to be a pure and innocent child forever?”

“Brother Zhou, I knew you would understand me!” After experiencing so much desperation, despair, and tiredness, the male assistant finally got a sense of warmth from Ol’ Zhou.

“Of course.” Ol’ Zhou patted the male assistant on his shoulders to give him a boost of encouragement. “Earlier, I saw you making the call. I wish to know whether the person on the other side received your message or not. We need to meet up with the rest of the group as soon as possible. It is too dangerous to stay alone inside this Haunted House.”

“Don’t you worry about that. Brother Gang probably did not answer the phone because he was broadcasting the livestream, but I managed to gain contact with the cameraman. He even gave me a reply.” The male assistant opened the inbox, and there was a message that came from Muscle.

“I also feel like there is something strange about this haunted house. We will talk about this in detail later!”

“In other words, they already believe that you are using this phone to communicate with them.” Ol’ Zhou’s words had a deeper meaning to them. Before the male assistant realized what was happening, Ol’ Zhou moved to block the door.

“Brother Zhou, what are you doing?” The male assistant had a bad feeling about that.

“I understand you, and I hope you will understand me.” Blood leaked out from his shirt, and ghastly wounds appeared before his eyes. Ol’ Zhou’s face turned as pale as paper. “You need to understand that the adult world is not that simple. If given a choice, who would not want to be a pure and innocent child forever?”

The dried, withered hands reached for the male assistant. At that moment, the male assistant’s eyes were about to fall out from their sockets. His knees buckled underneath him, and he dropped to the ground. At that moment, he bounced into something. Slowly turning his head around, a female carcass that was chopped into pieces was floating behind him.

Not a single sound was able to escape from his throat. The male assistant was shivering all over until his pupils rolled back in his eye sockets, and he slumped heavily to the ground. Ol' Zhou picked up the phone that the male assistant was holding. He memorized Liu Gang and the cameraman's phone number and then used this phone to send another message to the cameraman. "Come and meet up with me now! I think I've found the exit!"

Liu Gang's group continued to move through the basement. When they turned the corner, the cameraman stealthily took out his phone to look. There was a new message on it. "Come and meet up with me now! I think I have found the exit!"

"The assistant has found the exit?" The cameraman did not share this with Liu Gang but quietly sent a message back. "Where are you now? Where am I supposed to meet you?"

...

Muscle did not plan to share this message with others because he knew Liu Gang too well. The man had made such a big promise before millions of viewers on the livestream. Due to his pride, Liu Gang would never choose to escape, but Muscle was different. He had only been dragged there by Liu Gang to man the camera, so why should he suffer alongside Liu Gang?

"This Haunted House is too dark. If anything else happens, I will leave with the male assistant." Muscle had a general plan. He held the camera with one hand and had his other hand in his pocket. On the surface, he looked unaffected, but he made sure that the contact with the 'male assistant' was maintained. Moments later, the message came from the 'male assistant'.

"There is a hidden path inside the school. I saw one of the workers push open the mirror in the library. There is a path hidden behind it!"

Seeing the message sent by 'the male assistant', Muscle was quickly reminded of the paper notes that littered the ground after the male assistant disappeared. They had said the same thing; the school had hidden pathways that could lead them out of the two campuses.

He isn't lying to me!

Muscle typed on one hand, "Are you at the library?"

“Yes, where are you now?”

“Brother Gang wants to go to the staff dormitory. He is now completely bewitched by that Lan Dong. He refuses to listen to anyone else.”

“This Haunted House is too dangerous. I don’t dare go and find you. Please try to advise him! We will meet up on the ground floor of the library! Remember, the ground floor! There will be scare points around the corridor! Be careful!” the male assistant advised and repeated many key words. This convinced Muscle that the messages did come from the male assistant.

“Okay.” Muscle remembered the messages, but he did not share them with Liu Gang. After they left the male dormitory, none of them were in high spirits. In this Haunted House, time seemed to halt, and every second was tormenting. Without an ending, hope was slowly ground away, and despair grew in their hearts like a poisonous plant. The color of the corridor changed, and a fork in the road appeared. The left was the office block, and the right was the staff dormitory.

“We’ll go to the staff dormitory first. Mr. Bai’s room should have information related to the art club.” Ah Li supported himself by the wall. His eyes fluttered, and a child’s shadow seemed to stand in his pupils.

“Okay, after that, we’ll go and explore the office.” Lan Dong took out the keys. “I’m very curious about what secrets Mr. Bai is hiding.”

“I still think we shouldn’t wander about aimlessly.” Ah Li used to be Lan Dong’s follower. He had never gone against Lan Dong, but since entering the Haunted House, Ah Li had slowly begun changing. Lan Dong gave Ah Li a side-eye, ignored him, and entered the staff dormitory. The dormitory was separated into two basement levels. They did not know where Mr. Bai’s room was, so they could only explore it one by one. Gradually, footsteps emerged in the originally quiet corridor. The sound was strange, like it came from above them.

“Something’s coming! We’d better move faster! Do not stay too long on the same floor! Mr. Bai’s room should be on the second floor!” Ah Li suddenly yelped. He pressed his temples, and his memory seemed to overlap. For some reason, he could remember where Mr. Bai’s room was. “He lives in the room in the middle of the second level’s corridor!”

Liu Gang was livestreaming, so he could not say anything to Ah Li. He just smiled. “You don’t work here, so how would you know where Mr. Bai stays?”

Lan Dong also frowned. “Did you find some clue that you didn’t share with us?”

“I suddenly remembered it. This place gave me a sense of familiarity, really! I’ve been here in my dreams before!” Ah Li did not care about the livestream anymore. He was very afraid; that déjà vu feeling was about to push him over the edge.

“You...”

“They’re coming! There’s no time to waste! We’re heading down now!” Ah Li was agitated. He appeared to see things that others could not. Without giving the others a chance to react, he turned to run down the stairs.

“Xiao Dong, is there something mentally wrong with your brother?” Muscle flinched. He could not stand Ah Li, who was acting like a madman.

“He was normal when we were outside.” Lan Dong and Xiao Chun followed behind Ah Li and entered the second basement level. They pushed open the door in the middle of the corridor and found many things related to Mr. Bai, including the copy of Mr. Bai’s teacher’s classroom document and many letters that the students had written to him.

“This really is Mr. Bai’s room! How did Ah Li know that?” With the truth placed before their eyes, everyone turned to Ah Li. Even those who had been making fun of Ah Li shut up.

“Have you hidden some clues by yourself!” Lan Dong was angry and pulled on Ah Li’s collar. “Why would you do that?”

“Brother Dong, I really suddenly remembered these details. I remember this Mr. Bai! I feel like I have been here before! The rumor about this world after death might be real!” Ah Li wanted to cry, but there were no tears. He was telling the truth.

“You liar!”

“Stop arguing!” Xiao Chun found a document on the living room table. The cover stated it as the seventh report for the supernatural phenomenon observation club. “This was left behind by Mr. Bai. Come and take a look!”

The handwriting was like chicken scrawl, and it was cut halfway through. “As the teacher responsible for the club, I noticed something strange during the club activities. The members of the art club have disappeared one by one. Where have they gone? After some investigation, I realized, in their last messages, there is a constant repetition of the word, ‘heaven’...”

“The art students have all gone to heaven? What is the meaning of this? We’re supposed to go to heaven to find the art club? The quest is to be completed in heaven?” Muscle grumbled.

“Heaven is the world after death. Is this term referring to a place at school perhaps, or have the members of the art club all been killed?” Lan Dong frowned deeper. “We’ve found the seventh report. To recover the whole truth, we need to find reports one to six. In any case, the general direction has been confirmed. We need to find ‘heaven’ at this school.”

“Heaven...” Ah Li appeared to be traumatized. He rushed into the camera and blocked Liu Gang. “Brother Gang, we mustn’t go there. We have to leave now.”

“Leave?” Liu Gang resisted the urge to slap Ah Li but pushed him aside. “There is no reason to leave. We have found the clue. Now, we’ll go and check the office.”

Just as they prepared to leave, a dog’s barking suddenly came in their ears.

“Why is there a dog in the Haunted House?” Before they recovered, the door to the room suddenly closed. The footsteps walked away. The man who closed the door wore Mr. Bai’s teacher identification. He had an old phone model, and his voice was soft and kind.

“Twenty minutes have passed; it is time to kick the difficulty up a notch. Tong Tong, help me contact the big sister in the tree hole. It’s time for her to shine.”

At the same time, in the green garden in the middle of the school, a headless female body without a head slowly moved to the tree hole and pulled out her own head. Blood dripped, and a smile appeared on the woman’s beautiful face.

The exit was blocked, and the barking became clearer. Liu Gang's group was completely flustered.

"We've been tricked! Be careful!"

...

"Where did the barking come from?"

"Don't panic! There are five of us! Even if the actor comes out now, there is nothing to be afraid of!"

"The Haunted House wouldn't set a puzzle that can't be solved! There must be some clues hidden around here! Go and search!"

When the group was fumbling around, it was the only female in the group who stepped forth to say, "There are two pairs of slippers in the shoe rack with different sizes, two water cups on the dining table with two sizes, and look at the greeting card on the sofa!"

Xiao Chun held the card that she had just found, and the ink on it was still drying—"Happy birthday to my daughter! You've always wanted a pet, so today, daddy will gift you a big dog!"

"The big dog is Mr. Bai's present for his daughter! The barking should come from one of the rooms! We can't stay here for too long! We have to figure out a way to leave!" Xiao Chun rushed to the door and pulled on it. With a click, the door slid open. Everyone in the room was stunned.

"The door... isn't locked?" This small prank made the panicking people flushed with embarrassment. Liu Gang coughed drily. "Let's leave this place first."

The barking grew louder, and the weak light in the room started to flicker as a large shadow appeared on the wall.

Muscle was the first to run out of the room, but he did not get far before he stopped.

“What’s wrong?”

“Brother Gang, look! In the middle of the corridor!” There was a child’s mannequin sitting in the middle of the corridor. They had seen this mannequin on the stairs of the male dormitory earlier!

“The ghost baby?” The scary head sat on the shoulders, and the round eyes stared behind Muscle and Liu Gang. “Why is it following us? Was it him who closed the door?”

The more Muscle thought about it, the more scared he became. Even the camera was shaking. The livestream chatroom had exploded, but Liu Gang had no time to care about it. He realized that the mannequin’s eyes were like human eyes, capable of expressing emotion.

“Look at the mannequin’s eyes, they seem to be following someone!” Liu Gang turned around, following the mannequin’s gaze, and saw Lan Dong, who was the last to exit the room. “The mannequin is after vengeance! Lan Dong took its key and tried to pull its head off!”

“Why are you all looking at me like that?” Lan Dong wore thick, black-rimmed glasses. He walked toward Liu Gang and Muscle, but the two stepped swiftly away from him.

“Xiao Dong, I think the mannequin is here for you.” Muscle immediately tossed the responsibility to Lan Dong.

“For me?” When Lan Dong saw the mannequin, the hair on his body stood on end, but he maintained his cool. “You’ve all been manipulated by the Haunted House. It’s clear that it was the worker who moved the mannequin here, and it was also the worker who closed the door.”

“Brother Dong, listen to me, I think you should return the keys to the ghost baby. Certain things shouldn’t be taken without permission.” Xiao Chun tried her best to persuade her friend, but Lan Dong was stubborn.

“The appearance of the ghost baby has to be the doing of a worker. The fact that they did this only confirms the importance of the ring of keys!” Lan Dong held the keys and looked down on the mannequin. “If he is really a ghost, why doesn’t he come after me and get the keys from me!”

As he finished, Lan Dong felt a pull on his neck like something had curled around his neck and was trying to yank his head off!

With shaking hands, the keys dropped to the ground. Lan Dong held his neck with both of his hands, and his face was turning purple.

“Brother Dong?” Liu Gang and Muscle were stunned into motionlessness. It was Ah Li who reacted the fastest. He took out Lin Sisi’s phone and aimed it at Lan Dong. “Above your head!”

In the screen, there was a girl stepping on Lan Dong’s shoulders, using both of her hands to pull on Lan Dong’s head!

“The ghost baby is real!” The camaraderie between brothers seemed to shatter in that moment. While holding the phone, Ah Li swiftly retreated, and then he saw the shadow behind Lan Dong starting to twist and transform! In that desperate situation, when everyone was panicking, something worse happened!

From the end of the corner came the crawling of blood vines, and an indescribable pressure overwhelmed them. Their hearts beat like they were about to jump out of their chests. With approaching footsteps, a blood red figure turned the corner. She was hugging her own head, walking at an even speed.

“What is that?”

Instinctive human fear kicked in, and the terror that they had collected since entering the Haunted House exploded in that moment.

“Run!” Xiao Chun had superhuman sensitivity. She was the first to run away from the headless woman, and she did not hesitate. Following her was Ah Li. The poor brother Li had not recovered from the terror that he had seen on the screen, and now he was surprised by this visit from a headless woman. He pushed Lin Sisi’s phone into his pocket, carried the wooden box with the oil painting, and ran.

“Stand your ground! Don’t panic! Muscle, go and stop it! We’re livestreaming. Millions of users are watching this!” Liu Gang still thought that he was managing the situation, but no one was listening to him. Before Liu Gang finished, he saw Muscle put down the camera and leap away to safety.

“Come back here!” Liu Gang was so angry that his face was twisted. He turned back to look, and the headless woman had gotten closer. Liu Gang said that he was not afraid, but his body had started to move on its own. The last thing the camera captured was Liu Gang running away.

“F*ck! Wait for me!” Lan Dong wanted to run too, but he could not move his feet like there was a pair of hands inside his shadow gripping his legs. The headless woman was approaching. With a grit of his teeth, Lan Dong turned to hide inside Mr. Bai’s room.

BANG!

He closed the door, but before he could relax, he saw something terrifying—the ghost baby was standing in the middle of the living room!

“When did you get in here?” He sat down to the ground. Lan Dong’s mind was muddled, and the barking resumed. He turned subconsciously around and saw the bedroom door being pushed open, and a broken and bloody mannequin fell into his arms. Before he could scream, he saw a big black dog staring at him from inside the bedroom, and the next second, it lunged at him!

“AH!” Lan Dong used the last vestige of his energy to grab the door and pull it open!

When the door opened, a woman’s face appeared before him. There was a sick beauty to the face, but Lan Dong soon realized something—he was lying on the ground. He slowly raised his head, and the last thing he remembered was a red dress.

“He... he... help me...”

The Red Specter at the door did not leave. The head that she was holding scanned the room seriously. She strode into the room and grabbed the ghost baby in the living room. The cold hands reached into the mannequin. She wiggled her fingers. The mannequin split in two, and the exquisitely-made doll that was hiding inside fell out. It was Xiaoxiao, who had been given free reign to wander around the Haunted House.

After seeing the headless woman, Xiaoxiao did not say anything. She tried to quietly crawl away but was stopped by the headless woman. The headless woman pointed at the marks around Lan Dong’s neck. She then searched inside her dress and took out a few pages that were stuck together. The title was the Haunted House worker handbook. Turning the pages, the headless woman’s finger moved to the eighth clause.

‘Physical interaction between workers and visitors is strictly forbidden!’

Xiaoxiao leaned on top of the black dog’s head and hid behind its ears. The fluffy ears covered her eyes, and that way, she could not see anything. Looking at the rascally Xiaoxiao, the headless woman turned the handbook again and pointed at the twelfth clause.

‘The violation of any rules will lead to the corresponding punishment.’

Now, Xiaoxiao was panicking. She pointed at Lan Dong, and her hands closed around her own neck as if saying that he started it first.

Seeing this, the headless woman shook her head helplessly. She nuzzled Xiaoxiao’s head. Then she dragged Lan Dong out of the room and disappeared down the corridor.

“Stop! Wait for me!” Liu Gang pressed his hands against his waist. He really could not run anymore. “The ghost didn’t come after us! There’s no need to keep running!”

Hearing that, the few racing young people finally stopped.

...

“Eh? Where is Brother Dong?” Ah Li turned and only then realized that Lan Dong was not with them. The group of five had turned into a group of four.

“Has Lan Dong been captured by the ghost? When I ran earlier, I believe I heard him scream.” Muscle gasped for air.

“That’s not important. Where is your camera?” Liu Gang pointed at Muscle and started to curse. “Motherf*cker! Why are you guys so afraid? There are five of us!”

“Brother Gang, you can’t possibly blame me for that. It was not me who ran first.” Muscle pointed at Xiao Chun. “The girl was the first to run. If I didn’t follow, I might’ve ended up like Lan Dong.”

“Listen to me.” Xiao Chun’s face was pale. “I’ve been sensitive to this kind of thing since I was young. Sometimes, I feel chills that come from nowhere. When I was small, my father took me to see the elder at the village, and the elder told him that I have the body that would attract haunted things. Whenever I feel chills, it means that those things are coming.”

Xiao Chun’s voice was stammering. “Do you know? When that headless woman appeared, my whole body was frozen like I was dropped in ice.”

“You mean to say that headless actor was an actual ghost?” Liu Gang’s frown was creased. He did not believe in such superstition.

"It might not necessarily be a ghost. Perhaps the actor is wearing an outfit of the dead, or something is possessing it. In any case, we need to stay away from that headless woman!" Xiao Chun said firmly.

"Avoiding her is no problem, but the camera is still back there." Liu Gang glared at Muscle. "We're here for the livestream, and now you've lost the camera. What will the viewers think? You're making me out to be such a big coward."

The more he thought about it, the madder he became. Liu Gang flipped open the fan. "Before we came, each of you gloated about how good you are, but when there's real trouble, every one of you runs faster than the rest!"

"Brother Gang, calm down. We did panic earlier. How about we turn back now?" Ah Li hugged the wooden box. He still had good stamina. "Brother Dong is still behind us. We'll go back to help him."

"If you want to go back, go ahead. I'm not going." Muscle shook his head. "We originally had six people, and in less than ten minutes, we lost two. If we continued to move alone, we'll only be eliminated by the Haunted House. Honestly, if not for Brother Gang, I would have surrendered already."

"Then what do you think we should do now?" Ah Li was worried about Lan Dong's safety.

"We should contact Bai Buhui first and gather. It won't be so scary when they are so many of us." Muscle was being rational. "We'll ignore Lan Dong for now. If he didn't suggest for us to split up, we wouldn't end up in this situation."

Muscle was quick to push the blame, but since the others did not say anything, they approved of what he said silently.

"Okay, I'll call Bai Buhui now." Liu Gang took out his phone to call Bai Buhui. "Bai Buhui, where are you guys?"

"What's wrong?" On the other end, Bai Buhui's voice sounded normal. They did not seem to have run into anything too scary.

"Come and meet up with us now. We are..." Liu Gang looked around to see where they were. They had been running like crazy, so they had lost their way. "Never mind, we'll meet up at the junction between the staff dormitory and the office block."

“The staff dormitory? Aren’t you currently in the lab building?” Bai Buhui’s voice had a chilly undercurrent. When he heard that, Liu Gang was shocked.

“Are you dreaming? We just ran out from the staff dormitory!”

“That’s impossible! We were worried about you, so we’ve been following you. We have been following your footsteps. Just now, the footsteps entered the lab building, and Small Ghost even said that he saw you guys.” After that was revealed, both sides had an uncanny feeling.

“They are Haunted House actors! Get back here now! We’ll go to the staff dormitory together!” Liu Gang pulled at his head of hair that was not that thick to begin with.

“Wait, why should we head to the staff dormitory?” Bai Buhui was highly suspicious. “I hear the actors here are very good at mimicking people’s voices...”

“Mimic your head! Get over here now!” Liu Gang was going to blow his top.

“Fine, stay where you are. We’ll be there in ten minutes.” Bai Buhui could sense the breakdown from Liu Gang, so he made to move. After hanging up, Liu Gang’s eyes were red. “The four of us cannot be separated anymore. No matter what happens, there is no need to be afraid!”

“Yes, Brother Gang is right.” Muscle and Ah Li nodded.

“We’ll retrace our path. The female ghost should be distracted by Lan Dong at the moment. Our main aim is to take back the camera!” When the group were giving each other a pep talk, there came the sound of blood dripping from the corridor. The sound echoed in their mind, and they could hear it clearly even if they put their hands over their ears. Xiao Chun’s face paled instantly. She subconsciously wanted to run, but her slender arm was pulled back by Liu Gang. “Stop running. You are just scaring yourself. When you face her in reality, you’ll realize it’s nothing!”

Liu Gang gripped Xiao Chun in one hand and Ah Li in another. “Let her come! We’ll stand right here and see what she can do to us!”

“Don’t! Let go!” Xiao Chun’s scalp was numb, and a chill pierced through her bones. The three stood at the front, but Muscle quietly took a step back. He took out his phone to see the messages from the male assistant.

“Why aren’t any of you here yet? I’ll wait three more minutes.”

“Found the hidden path!”

“The hidden path is on the second floor of the library, behind the last row of mirrors. I’ll go in to take a look first.”

“Phew, that was not easy! Oh, sunlight, I’ve missed you!”

The last message was a picture of sunlight filtering through a boarded-up window. Seeing that picture, Muscle stopped hesitating. He slowed down but continued to retreat. To maintain his image before his viewers, Liu Gang would never run, so he could only abandon him. Even though it was shameful to abandon Liu Gang, the male assistant had already abandoned him, so the most shameful person should be that assistant. With that in mind, the pressure on Muscle lessened. He walked faster and faster and accidentally kicked a small pebble. The sound from behind caused Xiao Chun, Ah Li, and Liu Gang to turn their heads. They looked at Muscle, who was several meters away, and tried to process this information.

“I know where the exit is! Follow me!” Ignoring the awkwardness, Muscle picked up his pace. Ah Li swiftly abandoned Liu Gang and chased after Muscle.

“You guys!” Xiao Chun’s body was frozen. The chill caused her to shiver. She was sure that the woman who was coming was haunted or cursed, and it was not just a normal chill—she was an existence that was harder to describe. Due to their previous experience, she was more afraid than before. The Red Specter slowly approached, with the sound of blood dripping leading the way. When Xiao Chun saw the head in her embrace, her mind collapsed. The piercing scream echoed down the corridor. Bai Buhui’s group, who were heading toward staff dormitory, heard it as well.

“That’s the girl who doesn’t like to speak! This is not good!” The five rushed to the staff dormitory and saw two figures standing at the corridor from afar.

“Liu Gang!” Bai Buhui rushed over, but when he got closer, he realized that they were not Liu Gang but the other visitors. One of them was the middle-aged man and the other appeared to be his wife.

“Have you seen Liu Gang? The man who had the folding fan?” Bai Buhui was not worried about Liu Gang’s safety; he was worried that Chen Ge’s Haunted House might use Liu Gang to turn the tables on them.

“I have no clue.” The middle-aged man looked confounded. “We came here after hearing the scream, but when we arrived, we only saw this camera lying on the ground.”

The middle-aged man looked honest and kind, and his wife did not look like a deceitful person either. The few stood in the corridor for a while. Bai Buhui did not notice that the middle-aged man and the woman had been standing outside the camera's shot.

"Small Ghost, go and take the camera." Bai Buhui felt like there was a problem there, and he needed to get to the bottom of it.

"Why should I?" Small Ghost did not know about Bai Buhui's identity and was not going to let him order him around.

"Stop arguing. Peace is to be valued." The bad guard Liu Guangming picked up the camera. "It's not broken. This thing has been functioning fine. See, the light is still on."

"It has been filming?" Bai Buhui took out his phone to enter Liu Gang's livestream. The chat was endless, to the point that the page was lagging. He needed to refresh several times before he could read the comments. The zeitgeist had changed, and Bai Buhui was anxious. He signaled for the guard to move the camera to the side and then called Liu Gang. "Do you still remember the contract? You promised us that there will be no problems, and because of that, we only agreed for you to livestream the whole visitation!"

There was no answer from the other side except the sound of running and breathing.

"Liu Gang, answer me!" Bai Buhui was agitated. He wanted to use Liu Gang's livestream to expose the Haunted House's interior design and lower its playability as much as he could. He knew how much effort went into the design of a good scenario. After it was exposed online, the number of people curious enough to visit would drastically drop. This way, even if Liu Gang was scared, it would indirectly decrease the number of potential visitors. The plan was not bad, but he did not expect Liu Gang to drop the camera and run away on his own. He also did not expect the scenario to be so big. They could not finish exploring it in one hour! This kind of livestream, which only captured parts of the scenario, might elicit some curiosity in the viewers, and that was the opposite of his intention.

After a long time, Liu Gang's stuttering voice came from the phone. "You're afraid I'll lose the bet? I won't. The mouth is mine. No matter how scary it is, I can say that it isn't scary."

"If it's not scary, why the hell did you drop the camera?"

"We can push the blame onto the cameraman. He was a coward. What does that have to do with me, Liu Gang?"

"As long as you know how to wrap this up." At this point, Bai Buhui did not know what to say. "We've found the camera. Where are you guys? Didn't you say we are to meet up at the staff dormitory?"

"There's a female ghost chasing us. We can't get to the staff dormitory. Keep the camera, and we'll meet up at the library." Liu Gang's voice slowly returned to normal. It sounded like they had lost the ghost.

"Why are we going to the library?" Bai Buhui felt like he had become Liu Gang's babysitter, wasting effort to look after this useless piece of junk.

"My assistant found a hidden path in the library. It appears to be a hidden exit."

"How come it sounds like you're not with your assistant? You're separated again?"

"He ran into an actor and got separated from us. He told us these things through phone messages. Stop wasting time! Get the camera over here. I've disappeared too long from the stream. The viewers will have comments." Liu Gang was impatient.

"Did your assistant tell you anything else other than the hidden path?" Bai Buhui was naturally suspicious. A separated person stumbled upon a hidden exit? The chance of that was so low that he felt that the male assistant had been replaced and the person messaging Liu Gang was not the actual male assistant but an actor!

Ever since he went to the hospital to visit his colleagues, Bai Buhui knew how dangerous this haunted house was. The owner was crazy and would do anything.

“Now that you mention it, my male assistant also realized one thing. Of the visitors that followed behind us, only the student couple are normal! The other visitors are probably Haunted House workers!” Liu Gang kept his voice low, but since the corridor was so quiet, everyone nearby heard it. They all turned around to look at the two visitors standing some distance away.

The ghosts are right before us?

The guard and Sister Ghost silently moved backward. Only Bai Buhui stood where he was. He held the phone with a confused look on his face. “Your assistant told you that as well?”

“Of course. It was the couple who lent my assistant their phone. The three of them are together now being chased by the fake visitors.” Liu Gang sounded confident, like he had seen this with his own eyes.

“Being chased by the fake visitors?”

“Yes, the middle-aged man and his wife, they are both actors!” Liu Gang sounded so confident, and they all heard it. They turned to look at the middle-aged man and the woman like they were the enemy. The middle-aged man looked confused; his legs were shaking. Even though he was afraid, he guarded his wife behind him. Hiding behind Ol’ Zhou, Bai Buhui’s group could not see that Duan Yue had been holding a phone and sending messages that she had typed earlier out to a phone number.

“Okay, I understand.” Bai Buhui was about to hang up when Liu Gang’s voice came again.

“Wait! I got another message!” Liu Gang paused before continuing. “Damn! You have to hurry to the library! My assistant and the two students are cornered by the two fake visitors!”

The phone call ended. Bai Buhui’s group had been cautious of the middle-aged man and the woman, but after hearing the last sentence by Liu Gang, they suddenly realized that something was off.

“If Liu Gang’s assistant and the students are cornered by the fake visitors, who are these two in front of us?” Big Ghost pointed out the flaw directly. “They have been standing there all this time, so how could they be cornering the assistant?”

“That’s right!” Liu Guangming was stunned. “What’s going on?”

“Obviously, someone is lying!” Bai Buhui narrowed his eyes and scanned the middle-aged man. “What are your names?”

“What do you plan to do?”

The middle-aged man was more cautious than Bai Buhui. Considering that they were livestreaming, he refused to give even his name. Seeing how scared the man was, Bai Buhui smiled. “It’s fine, I believe I already know who is lying.”

He pushed on his glasses. “This is a very simple plot. The male assistant told Liu Gang that he and the two students were being chased, but in reality, the two visitors are standing before us.”

“So, the liar is the male assistant?” Small Ghost scratched his head.

“The male assistant wouldn’t lie to Liu Gang; he was probably scared out of his mind. The liars are the two students he’s with! They should be the ones who are messaging Liu Gang. They pushed the blame onto the husband and wife to wash away their blame, but they didn’t expect the couple to be standing before us at this moment!”

Bai Buhui’s mind was sharp. His words caused everyone to nod. “The real actors are the two students!”

Hearing that, even Sister Ghost felt a chill. “That is so cunning! They are still so young; no one would expect that!”

“Actually, I should have noticed that sooner. This Haunted House has a close relationship with Jiujiang Medical University, and the boss is familiar with the students! The opening of a new scenario but stuffing in two students for no reason, there has to be some problem there!” Bai Buhui said confidently.

“We should call Brother Gang and tell him that!” Liu Guangming took out his phone.

“There’s no need to hurry. If they want to act like visitors to scare us, we will play with them. Since the livestream is still going, we’ll help Liu Gang reclaim the face he’s lost.” Bai Buhui then turned to the middle-aged man. “I’m so sorry. There was a misunderstanding. How about you join us? There’s strength in numbers.”

The middle-aged man hesitated. “Let me think about it.”

At the same time, the woman who hid behind him was quietly deleting the messages.

Chapter 931 - Ghost Story Classroom

Chapter 931: Ghost Story Classroom

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“You guys don’t know how cunning the boss of this Haunted House is. Only by staying together do we have a chance of clearing the scenario.” Bai Buhui had confirmed that the two students were played by actors, so he let his guard down around the middle-aged man and his wife. “You wouldn’t want your wife to go through such torment, right? We’re here to play in a Haunted House, not to be played by the Haunted House.”

“Okay, we will follow you for now.” The middle-aged still did not quite believe Bai Buhui. “But we’ll warn you first. If anything serious happens, the two of us will not follow you guys anymore.”

...

The more cautious the middle-aged man was, the more Bai Buhui believed that he was a normal visitor. “Don’t worry.”

The camera focused on Bai Buhui. The host had changed, but the chatroom was still happily rumbling. There was even a user called Wine for Moonlight that opened a bet to see how long this new host could last.

“Ol’ Liu, you’ll man the camera; Sister Ghost, you’ll be responsible for contacting Liu Gang and follow their movement; Small Ghost and I will lead the way, and the rest will follow behind.” Bai Buhui was obviously more organized than Liu Gang. He issued tasks for everyone within a short period of time based on his understanding of everyone’s personality and ability.

“We’re going to find Liu Gang now? But we don’t even know where the library is.” When Small Ghost heard that he was assigned to lead the way, he was a bit stung.

“Listen to my arrangements,” Bai Buhui replied coldly. “We will start to search around the area where the camera was dropped. I will give everyone three minutes. After that, whether we find anything useful or not, we will have to move after that.”

“What can we achieve in three minutes?”

“Less talking, more working.” Considering that there were other visitors, Bai Buhui added some explanation. “My colleagues once visited this Haunted House and gained some valuable experience after paying a huge price. Do not stay at one place for too long; if you do, the ghosts will come and get you.”

As brash as Bai Buhui’s attitude was, he had the ability to back it up, so no one argued with him, and they followed his orders. Opening the nearby rooms, it did not take long for them to get results. Small Ghost found the birthday greeting card that Mr. Bai had given his daughter and the seventh report of the supernatural phenomenon observation club. Big Ghost found the thirteenth report of the club inside Mr. Bai’s bedroom.

“The seventh report recorded the location of the art club. It appears to be situated in heaven. But the thirteenth report is even more curious. It says that there is a wishing well at the school. You make your wish in the morning and only by jumping into it at midnight will your come true.” Big Ghost reported his findings to Bai Buhui. The more they investigated, the deeper they sank. The complexity of this scenario was far larger than he had anticipated; the many side quests overlapped, so sixty minutes was not enough time to explore all of them.

“Heaven? Wishing Well?” Bai Buhui memorized these two key words and had Sister Ghost call Liu Gang as the group started the search for the library. Passing through the staff dormitory and office block, Bai Buhui’s group took a long detour before they arrived at the center of the school. After passing an eerie garden, they finally found a tattered map of the school taped to a sign.

“The library is behind the education block!” With his sharp eye, Small Ghost found the library’s location immediately. Bai Buhui nodded lightly, but his gaze moved to the corner of the map. At the edge of the field, there was the symbol for a well.

“Inside this school filled with ghost stories, the supernatural observation club should be on the same side as the visitors. Their investigation reports should be the most important clues.” Bai Buhui considered it quietly. “The seventh report says that the art club is inside heaven, and the thirteenth report mentions the wishing well. Since these two reports were placed in the same room, there has to be a connection between them!”

A brilliant light crossed his eyes, and Bai Buhui pushed on his glasses.

“Could the well be the entrance to heaven? Only by jumping into the well can one enter the art club?”

“Which normal person would consider the well as an exit? The hidden path behind the library should be fake. That is a trap laid down by the actor. This path that I discovered should be the real one.”

Bai Buhui sighed in relief.

“This Liu Gang is impossibly dumb. The clues were right before them, but they couldn’t even see it.”

Memorizing the location of the well, Bai Buhui had Sister Ghost call Liu Gang, but for some reason, no one answered.

“Looks like he’s really in trouble.” Bai Buhui was helpless. He had everyone follow him to enter the education block in the middle of the school. Inside the deadly quiet corridor, the dim lights kept flickering. The visitors walking down the corridor could see the empty classrooms on both sides. The classrooms that were once filled with reading and laughter had only broken tables and chairs left in them. But the words that were carved into the tables proved how boisterous this place used to be.

“What the f*ck!” After turning the corner, the Small Ghost in front suddenly cursed.

“What did you see?” Bai Buhui hurried over.

“There was something standing in that classroom.” Small Ghost pointed at the classroom at the side. Looking from outside, this classroom was no different from the others; nothing stood out about it. But when the visitors planned to pass it, they suddenly discovered there was something standing inside the room. He was wearing a strange uniform, with his head lowered, keeping silent.

“Is he a Haunted House actor?” Small Ghost’s expression turned from the initial fear to excitement. “I’ve been here for almost half an hour already, and finally, we’ve found the actor. I thought they’d continue to be cowardly and hide from us.”

“Our current mission is to find Liu Gang. Let’s not waste time here,” Bai Buhui and Big Ghost advised him.

“Until now, they’ve been creating this mysterious atmosphere to terrify others. Now that they’ve shown themselves, what is there to be afraid of?” Small Ghost seemed to like pranking others. “Let me go pull off his mask and see what this actor looks like.”

Liu Guangming astutely turned the camera to focus on Small Ghost. He did not use the front door but slunk toward the back of the room. He probably planned to ambush the actor from the back to scare him. The livestream continued. Bai Buhui probably wanted to see the actor being exposed, so he did not stop Small Ghost. Small Ghost silently pushed open the backdoor, but as he prepared to enter, his body seemed to freeze. “Where is the man?”

The classroom was empty. The male student that he had seen earlier disappeared.

“He ran into the hidden path?” Sister Ghost and Big Ghost were confused. Liu Guangming moved to Small Ghost’s side. He was not a professional, so the camera had been shaking, and the quality was not good.

“Get out now! There is something wrong with this classroom!” Bai Buhui shouted from behind them. Ol’ Zhou shared a look with Duan Yue. They saw confusion in each other’s eyes. This was not part of the script! Who was that student?

With the signal from Ol’ Zhou, Duan Yue silently messaged Chen Ge, and soon, she got the reply.

“They’re allies. There is a very special building in the four-star scenario called the Ghost Story Classroom. It will randomly appear inside the School of the Afterlife and generate a ghost story related to a haunted school every night. This ghost story will not harm anyone, but the higher the collected screams at the Haunted House, the scarier the generated ghost story will be, so I suggest the two of you avoid it.”

Chapter 932 - Let's Be Friends

Chapter 932: Let's Be Friends

After reading Chen Ge's reply, Duan Yue deleted all the messages instantly, and then she and Ol' Zhou retreated more than five meters away together. The curious visitors still gathered at the backdoor. The bravest Small Ghost slowly entered the classroom. "The student was standing in the middle of the room. All of you saw that, right?"

Sister Ghost nodded.

"There has to be a hidden path. The classroom is so dark, and there is such much trash here. there are many places one can use to hide." Then she looked around. "Didn't you realize this classroom is different from the rest? There are many extra things; it's like a storeroom."

...

The classroom was indeed strange. There were red symbols on the blackboard, and every table was covered in carved words. The drawers were stuffed with bulging schoolbags. Some of the bags had black and red stains, and some had something that looked suspiciously like hair pushed out from the zipper.

Next to the tables, the deep blue curtains covered the windows thickly, but there was a human shape protruding out from under the curtain. Strange paintings hung on the walls. It was unclear whom the painted characters were, but the more one studied them, the more one would feel the eyes of the painted person were following them. The old fan above their heads twirled lazily. The blades of the fan were wrapped in white cloth, and it creaked noisily like it would fall at any moment.

A lot of paper littered the ground, and upon closer inspection, one would realize it was mixed with death money. Everything mentioned so far was considered normal; the most eye-catching thing about this classroom was the front few rows. There was an old-fashioned box television next to the podium. It was not connected to anything, but the signal light for it was on. On the other side of the podium, there was a mirror the size of an adult, and the mirror was reflecting this creepy classroom.

"I've read a similar ghost story before. It says that each old school will have a classroom that is not open for students. It will be filled with trash. The school will say that the classroom has been transformed into a storeroom, but in reality, someone has died in the classroom before," Big Ghost said evenly. He looked around and added, "Or perhaps more than one person has died."

"Yes, I feel like everything in here has a story behind it."

When the few were discussing, the television next to the podium suddenly activated on its own. The screen that was filled with static gave off this shrill sound. It sounded like many people chatting over each other. Due to the old device, the sound was heavily distorted.

"Is the worker controlling it?" The screen flickered several times before it returned to normal. Black and white pictures appeared on the screen.

"Something seems to be written on it."

"What does it say?"

"Let's go to take a look. Remember to bring the camera."

Other than Bai Buhui, the rest carefully moved closer to the television.

"Have you found the actor? Don't waste time. Come out now!" Bai Buhui stood alone outside. When he spoke, he did not forget to glance at Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue. When he realized that they had retreated far away from him, he was even more assured that they were normal visitors. If they were actors, that would have been the time to strike.

"Don't rush us. This classroom is very unique. It might have things we are looking for." Small Ghost looked at the screen where the following was written—"Tonight something strange happened at this school. The student who is supposed to be dead has returned."

The words floated on the screen. There was no additional explanation, but it had a chilling effect on the viewers. As the viewers' attention was pulled to the screen, the image suddenly flickered, and it changed to show this classroom, and their figures appeared on screen inside the television.

"Is there a surveillance camera in here?" Small Ghost reacted quickly. But even though he followed the angle, he could not see the camera. "How is this achieved?"

Just as they were confused by this, the fans at the back of the classroom started to turn on, seemingly on their own. The white cloth that dangled from them was strapped tight like there was someone dangling from the white cloth.

“Look at the television!” Sister Ghost screamed, and they all turned to the screen. Inside the black and white image, there was someone hanging from the spinning fan at the back of the classroom!

The fan was too old to support the weight of a dead body. The fan in the screen turned several times before it dropped from its hinges!

Boom!

A loud crash came from the back of the classroom in real life. The fan at the back of the classroom had crashed to the ground!

“How is this possible? Someone has to be controlling everything behind the scenes! That has to be it!”

They were panicking, but something scarier happened. The student in a strange uniform stood up inside the television. He looked at Small Ghost and Big Ghost, who were gathered together, and slowly moved toward them. The student was not visible in real life, but they could see the tables and chairs being moved apart like someone was really heading their way!

The temperature in the classroom dropped. On the TV, the male student had already walked to stand before Small Ghost and Big Ghost. Small Ghost was so nervous he forgot how to breathe; the arrogance on his face had long disappeared. He gritted his teeth and slowly grabbed the chair behind him and used it to swing at the air before him.

“Go to hell!” The chair landed on the table but not on a person.

“So, it was fake.” Small Ghost dropped the chair and turned back to the television. The male student had disappeared from the screen as well.

“How come he also disappeared from the screen? Has he gone into hiding?” The few leaned closer to the screen to look for the male student when a male crawled out from underneath the television!

“Let’s be friends! Let’s be friends! Let’s be friends!” An urgent and shrill voice came from the television. The student’s face kept rearranging itself, and a strange phenomenon appeared in the classroom.

“Go! Leave!” No one cared about clues at that moment. They rushed toward the classroom exit. They did not even switch the television off.

“Let’s be friends! Let’s be friends! There’s no way for you to escape!”

The male student disappeared from the screen. The tables and chairs turned like someone was following behind them closely.

“Run!” Sister Ghost’s voice was sharp. She was the first to escape the classroom and shouted at Bai Buhui.

Bai Buhui did not know what had happened, but based on Sister Ghost’s reaction, it could not be anything good. Without asking, he turned and ran. Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue, who stood far away, reacted even faster. Before Sister Ghost left the classroom, they were already several meters down the corridor.

“Slow down, you two! We need to be together to be safe!”

Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue ignored the people behind them. They ran and led their teammates deeper into the education block.

“Wait for me!” Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue, who led the group, charged ahead, and Bai Buhui was close behind. To not get abandoned, everyone started to run.

“Let’s be friends! Why don’t you be my friend!” The sharp male voice had not disappeared, and the student in the strange uniform ran out from the classroom!

...

“Wait for me!” Liu Guangming was the oldest of the group, and he was carrying the camera. He could not run that fast with such a heavy equipment. Slowly, Liu Guangming was separated from the rest of the group. He was panicking and wished to drop the camera, but considering how much it was worth and how they would demand compensation from him if it was broken, he carried the machine and ran about twenty meters. No one in the team waited for him. They were about to reach a fork. The teammates were about to disappear from his sight, and Liu Guangming finally came to a decision.

“Money is not as important as my life!”

To minimize the degree of damage, he slowed down and bent over to place the camera as gently as he could on the ground. But when he lifted his head again, the student in the strange uniform had almost caught up to him. “Let’s be friends!”

The sharp voice echoed in his mind. Liu Guangming had never been so scared in his life. At that moment, he was like a hapless child, too afraid to even open his eyes. His lips were trembling. He wanted to say something, but once he opened his mouth, the only sound he could hear was the sound of teeth chattering.

“I... I... I’m sorry!” Liu Guangming had no idea why he was apologizing, but he shouted loudly as he rushed into the left corridor on his own. “Please don’t come for me! There are six good friends on the other side; I am the only one here! Please don’t come for me!”

After realizing that the group had split up, the male student paused for a moment at the split before deciding to chase after the bigger group. After the sharp sound slowly disappeared, Liu Guangming sighed in relief. "Thankfully, luck is on my side. I can't stay here anymore; I need to go outside. Brother Gang said that if I can hold on for the full sixty minutes, he will give me a bonus of two thousand. Counting the time, if I find an inconspicuous location to hide, there should be no problem."

Wiping the cold sweat with his sleeve, Liu Guangming leaned against the wall and prepared to retrace his steps. "It's too inconvenient to hide with a camera, and what if I ruin Brother Gang's livestream?"

Therefore, Liu Guangming decided to walk around the camera and left in a jog. He returned to the initial corridor. Both of doors of the strange classroom were open. There were strange sounds coming from inside.

"This is my first time at a Haunted House. Please forgive my mistake. I am a coward, so please don't come out to scare me anymore. I beg of you!"

He moved his shivering body to the classroom. As he was about to pass by it, the screen in the classroom suddenly lit up. Liu Guangming's heart skipped a beat, and he raised his hands over his head. "I don't know anything. I'm just a security guard. This is all Liu Gang's responsibility. I'm sorry! I'm sorry!"

He rambled as he rushed past the classroom. He did not dare stop. Liu Guangming shouted his apologies and ran out from the education block. He gasped for air. Liu Guangming was covered in sweat, but it was unclear whether it was from the running or the fear.

"I need to find a place to hide." Liu Guangming looked at the surrounding building, and each one was eerier than the last. Every corridor felt haunted. "Where shall I hide? This place is crowded with ghosts."

He looked around before his eyes landed on the green garden in the middle of the school. Instead of saying it was a garden, it was more like an abandoned patch of land. The shrubbery was uncared for and grew wildly. There were some half-dead trees poking through.

"No one cares even if the trees are dying. This garden appears to be a blind spot!" Liu Guangming's eyes lit up. He looked around. No one was around, so he hurried into the bush. "Such a perfect hiding place!"

The actors won't guess that someone is hiding here.”

Liu Guangming was feeling rather proud of himself. He leaned on the ground and was about to pick some leaves to hide his shining bald head when he found a tree hole in front of him, and there was something sitting inside it.

“What is that?” Liu Guangming crawled toward it. He reached into the hole and took out a wooden box. Lying on the ground, Liu Guangming opened the box. He was shocked to find a bloody oil painting inside!

“Isn't this what we've been looking for? Just how lucky am I? I practically stumbled into this!”

Liu Guangming was excited, and he was thinking about how to ask for a bigger bonus from Liu Gang when he smelt a faded scent of blood. A chill came from his bald head like water was dripping on the top of his scalp. He reached out to touch it and saw that his palm was dyed red.

“Blood!”

Pushing his hands against the ground, Liu Guangming bounced up. He turned back to look, and his soul almost left his body. A woman in red was standing behind him, and viscous blood slid down her dress. Liu Guangming wanted to say something, but he found his facial muscles frozen. As a visitor at the Haunted House for the first time, this was indeed too much. The woman did not scare Liu Guangming; she looked at the wooden box that Liu Guangming was holding. Then her pale hands reached into her dress, and she took out a bloody booklet. The slender fingers flipped through the pages, and the woman started to read it seriously.

Liu Guangming was shaking. He had no idea what the woman was up to. He instinctively moved his eyes to follow the words on the paper that the woman was holding. The words were printed in block black letters, and it had many pictures as explanation.

“Plot: In this scenario, you don't need to act. You only need to play yourself.

“Responsibility: Your mission is to guard the wooden box in the tree hole.

“Suggestion: I'll give you several methods to scare people, but they are just suggestions.

“First: You can place your head inside the tree hole, and when the visitors lean closer to look, your body will show up behind them. With your feet floating aboveground, you’ll look at them from a forty-five-degree angle. When the visitors find the head in the tree hole, they will turn and be greeted by a headless body.

“Second: Assuming that the visitors are holding a flashlight and see the head in the tree hole from a distance, you need to widen your eyes when the light hits you! This is key; you will use your head to chase after them and use your body to block their escape route!

“Third: If there is a chance encounter between you and the visitors, do not panic. You can drop your head suddenly when the visitors let their guard down!

“Fourth...”

Liu Guangming only saw a few sentences, and he was already covered in cold sweat. What kind of satanic manual was that?

The woman studied it for a while before she appeared to get it. She put the booklet away and took the wooden box from the frozen Liu Guangming. She walked to the tree hole. With shaking legs, Liu Guangming kept his eyes glued to the woman. He was so scared, but he did not dare move. The woman first placed the wooden box inside the deep part of the tree hole, and then her hands held her chin.

“What is she doing?” This was Liu Guangming’s first visit to the Haunted House. While he was confused, he suddenly saw the woman push hard and then remove her own head!

Liu Guangming saw it all very clearly! The woman was standing just meters away from him, and her head became detached from her neck!

His heart stopped for a second. This image was equivalent of someone using a hammer to whack his head. His pupils started to lose focus, and his face was still twitching when he collapsed to the ground.

Hearing that, the Red Specter who was placing her head into the tree hole turned around. She looked at the unconscious Liu Guangming with a confused frown.

I haven’t started the act yet—how come you’ve fainted already?

Hugging her head, the woman stood dumbly next to Liu Guangming. After some time, she used the tip of her toe to kick at Liu Guangming as if saying, Hey, wake up!

Chapter 934 - I Will Take Over

Chapter 934: I Will Take Over

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Footsteps came from down the corridor, and the grass that grew to one's waist was pushed away. Chen Ge, wearing Mr. Bai's teacher's ID, walked over.

"Well done, you've surpassed my expectations." Chen Ge was never stingy with his praise. He was good at encouraging others, which probably had tons to do with his warm nature. "Stay guard over here for a while. After he wakes up, you can use him to practice scaring others, but if he doesn't wake up, there's no need to force it."

...

Seeing the nod from the Red Specter, Chen Ge left with satisfaction. He hurried over because he had received a message from Duan Yue that the Ghost Story Classroom had appeared. As the special building attached to the four-star scenario, Chen Ge wished to experience it in person. Even though the black phone promised that it would not harm the visitors physically, he would feel much better seeing it for himself.

"The Ghost Story Classroom sounds like a good project. Alas, Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue didn't give me immediate feedback." After entering the education block, Chen Ge soon arrived at that strange classroom. "I've been here when I was setting scare points last night. It did not look like this."

He entered the classroom and looked around. Everything was normal; nothing was out of place.

"If the class generates a ghost story every night, what was the ghost story that was generated last night?"

He sat on the first row inside the classroom. He waited for a long time, but nothing happened. His patience was wearing thin. He messaged the phone that Ol' Zhou was using. After knowing that they were being chased by the student that came from inside the classroom, he walked out.

Bang!

The door of the classroom closed behind him. When Chen Ge turned around, the classroom had returned to normal. The television, mirror, and all the other trash had disappeared like they were never there in the first place.

“What is the meaning of this? Once the owner of the black phone enters it, the location of the classroom will change? Or will it only be in effect for a certain period?”

The classroom had disappeared, but the male student who chased after Ol' Zhou had not. This gave Chen Ge a sight of the shortcut to reach his 'goal'. He picked up his pace, and suddenly, he saw the camera that had been abandoned in the middle of the road. This poor camera had been abandoned several times. Everyone thought it a burden.

“If the camera has been dropped, how is Liu Gang conducting the livestream?” This was like a soldier dropping his weapon during war; Chen Ge did not understand it. “If you do not livestream the whole process, how are people going to know how exciting my Haunted House is?”

Chen Ge walked to the camera and sighed in relief when he saw that the shooting light was on.

“Since none of you are willing to do the livestream, I will lend you a hand.”

The lips curled upward, and several plans flooded his mind. When Liu Gang did the livestream, he would do his best to slander the Haunted House and used various methods to lower the terror factor, but now, Chen Ge was the one handling the camera. The power was with him; he was the one who would decide what the viewers saw. They did not have a choice. “I can make use of this chance to promote my Haunted House and have everyone experience the charm of this place.”

Holding the camera with one hand, Chen Ge pulled out his phone with another to log into Liu Gang's livestream room. The camera panned up, and once that happened, the number of messages instantly shot up.

“The camera is moving! Brother Gang finally remembered us in the livestream!”

“Something’s not right! Brother Gang has already escaped, as did the second batch of people, so who is manning the camera now?”

“What the f*ck! This is harrowing! I’m out! The camera is moving on its own!”

“Put it down! Who are you?”

Chen Ge did not interact with the people online. He held the camera and planned to record the truest faces of the visitors before millions of users and, at the same time, use it as a small promo for his Haunted House. With Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue providing the location, Chen Ge silently moved toward the group of visitors.

...

“Let’s be friends!” The shrill voice came closer and closer. Not only Big Ghost and Small Ghost, even Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue were feeling a bit panicked. The education block was the biggest sub scenario in the School of the Afterlife. The corridors were intertwining, and there was nothing they could use as reference, so getting lost was common. With Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue leading the way, they had reached the innermost part of the education block. Corridors spread around them, but none of them seemed to lead to hope.

“What the hell was that?”

“I don’t know!”

“Why does it have such good stamina?”

The screams did not stop, and the source was still chasing after them like he was running a marathon. The more the visitors thought about it, the more scared they became.

“We can’t keep running like this! Since he’s looking for a friend, perhaps if we agree to that, he will leave!” Sister Ghost could not run anymore. She was so tired that she felt like vomiting bile. Before going there, she did not realize that visiting a Haunted House could be so physically taxing.

“Let’s try it. I’ve heard similar ghost stories before. Ostracized student died in the classroom and returned to school for class—he would only leave peacefully after finally making a friend.”

Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue ran ahead. They looked rather weathered and haggard. Ol' Zhou even hacked drily with his hand over his chest like he was about to die from heart failure.

“Okay, we’ll give it a try! When the ghost student asks, we’ll count to three, and we will answer at the same time—we’ll be your friend!” Bai Buhui had much better leadership than Liu Gang. He had become the center of this small group.

“No problem!” Everyone gave their word. Their eyes were determined, and they resisted their fear and stood together.

The ghost student saw them slow down, but he did not do the same. He came after them with this strange smile on his face. “Let’s be friends!”

“Ready!” Bai Buhui’s palms were sweaty. He started to count down. “Three, two, one!”

When it ended, the corridor was startlingly quiet. None of the six spoke. The atmosphere was quite awkward. This silence lasted for half a second, then as if they had agreed to it, they all started to run down the corridor.

The group cooperation collapsed due to the desire to scam the others. Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue were at their limit already, but they kept on running, not slowing down at all. It was Sister Ghost who failed; she was the first to get caught up by the ghost student. The scary face stuck to her own and then passed through her. The ghost generated by the ghost story classroom appeared to be a lingering spirit with limited time. Whenever he found a friend, his body would fade by a degree.

Shrill screams carried down the corridor. The threshold was reached; the double torment of her soul and body knocked Sister Ghost out. The camera slowly moved to the side. Then two doctors with white coats floated over and carried the girl away while grumbling some complaints. The ghost student’s voice appeared in the corridor again. After he left, a man carrying a camera appeared from the darkness.

“Sister Ghost!” When Small Ghost heard the scream from Sister Ghost, he was worried, but he did not slow down.

“Hey! The one in front! You haven’t finished your story!” Small Ghost ran as fast as he could, but he could not catch up to Ol’ Zhou, so he shouted, “As long as someone becomes friends with the ghost student, he will leave, but what will happen to the person who befriended him?”

...

Even though Small Ghost was too afraid to rescue Sister Ghost, it showed that he cared about her.

“The ghost student will only appear on the day of the death. After he finds his friend, naturally, he will take his new friend away with him.”

“What the f*ck! Doesn’t that mean that you’ll die if you befriend him?” Small Ghost slowed down, thinking about saving Sister Ghost.

“Think of it this way, perhaps your friend will become the new ghost student. It doesn’t sound that scary when it’s put that way, right?”

“Right your head!”

“Either way, it’s not my problem.” Ol’ Zhou held his chest but ran so fast and could even converse normally. The original team of seven soon turned into a team of five. The screaming of the ghost student had not stopped, but they could sense that his speed had greatly slowed.

“We can’t wander about aimlessly like this!” At this crucial moment, Bai Buhui gained control. He had been led away by emotions earlier and followed Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue deeper into the education block. “Even if we are trying to escape, we should head toward the library to meet up with Liu Gang!”

“But do you know where the library is?” Ol’ Zhou leaned against the wall to catch his breath.

“I don’t, but we can ask.” Bai Buhui took out his phone, activated the flashlight, and aimed it at the corridor behind him. “I’ve seen many horror movies and played many horror games. In fact, I’m a haunted house designer myself. The situation earlier wasn’t created by 3D imaging. There was certainly a real person behind it!”

“What are you trying to say?”

“Since there’s a real person behind us, no matter how scary it might appear to be, there is no need for us to be afraid!” Bai Buhui’s hand that held his glasses was shaking. His heart was not as calm as he appeared. “We’re just visiting a Haunted House. As long as we trust that everything is fake, there is nothing to fear!”

His repetition was more like a pep talk for himself. By then, the ghost student had arrived from the other end of the corridor. The boy was wearing a strange uniform, and there was a falsehood about him.

“Let’s be friends!”

“I refuse to believe this!” Bai Buhui gritted his teeth. He held the phone and purposely aimed the bright light at the ghost student. In the dim corridor, the flashlight appeared particularly blinding. Being shot by the light, the ghost student picked up speed as his body flickered out of view.

“Ah!” Bai Buhui shouted at the ghost student as the latter resisted the bright light to charge at Bai Buhui. The scary face expanded in Bai Buhui’s pupils before the boy phased through his body. After finding two friends, the ghost student’s spirit had weakened a lot. It used its last energy to pass through Small Ghost and then disappeared.

“It was a fake? A projection?” Bai Buhui’s legs were frozen, and he was covered in cold sweat. He had almost fainted from that scene earlier. Thankfully, he was more determined than others and managed to hold onto his consciousness.

“Brother Bai, are you okay?” Small Ghost did not realize that his term of reference toward Bai Buhui had changed. “What was that? It was so real. How did this Haunted House manage that?”

“Using some simple visual technology, we can achieve similar effects. Our futuristic theme park has scenarios scarier than this.” Bai Buhui scoffed with condescension as he tried to move his feet that were petrified from fear.

“Today’s technology sure is impressive.” Small Ghost and Big Ghost wandered over. “But since that thing is fake, let’s go get Sister Ghost. She must be so frightened.”

“Yes, we can’t just leave her behind.” Bai Buhui turned to look at Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue. “The two of you had better come with us. We can’t get separated.”

After realizing the Haunted House’s secret and knowing that all the ghosts were fake, they instantly felt less afraid. They retraced their steps, but they failed to find Sister Ghost. It was as if she had disappeared into thin air.

“Where is she? How come we didn’t hear anything? Technically speaking, after Sister Ghost discovered that the ghost was just a projection, she should have told us, unless...” Bai Buhui looked around. “There are other actors here. They have linked this whole thing together! The projection was just part of the plan!” Read the next chapter on our vipnovel.com

The group was discussing the issue when urgent footsteps came from the other end of the corridor. A young couple was running their way.

“They look so familiar...”

“These two probably don’t know that they’ve been exposed.”

Bai Buhui, Small Ghost, and Big Ghost shared a look. This was perfect because they were finding a place to vent their anger.

“Finally, there are actual humans! This Haunted House is too scary!” The couple was haggard, their faces were pale, and it looked like they had been through a lot as well.

“How did you two manage to find us?” There was a sharp rudeness in Bai Buhui’s question. As the designer of the futuristic theme park’s Haunted House, he was hostile toward anyone affiliated with Chen Ge’s Haunted House.

“We heard the scream, so we ran here,” the male student answered politely. “Are you guys okay?”

“We’re fine, of course. We are fine.” Small Ghost and Big Ghost surrounded the duo with darkened faces.

“That’s good news. By the way, when we were coming here, we saw someone following you guys from behind with a camera. That’s very suspicious. You have to be careful!”

“A camera?” Bai Buhui narrowed his eyes. “Your acting is not bad, but you’d better use your brain before you speak. The guard who carried the camera has already disappeared. So, what you said is basically admitting that you are responsible for his disappearance.”

“Us?” The male student was confused.

“Stop acting!” Small Ghost was agitated. He pulled on the student’s collar. “Where is Sister Ghost? Where is she? Where have you hidden her?”

“Sister Ghost?” The male student heard this unusual name and wondered if he had triggered some kind of hidden scenario.

“We know everything. Stop resisting.” Bai Buhui had lost his patience. “Tell us the location of Sister Ghost and the library!”

“How am I supposed to know that!”

The male student panicked. He flung Small Ghost’s hand away and grabbed his girlfriend as they slowly retreated. He had heard from his peers how scary this Haunted House was; now, he finally understood it. Not only was the scenario scary, even the other visitors were scary. Small Ghost and Big Ghost had unfriendly countenances, and the rest did not look pleasant either. The male student slightly pulled on his girlfriend’s hand before they turned to run down the other end of the corridor!

“Stop!”

“Don’t think you can run away!”

After the couple escaped, Bai Buhui, Small Ghost, and Big Ghost chased after them. Ol’ Zhou looked at the rampaging group and sighed lightly. “This is so tiring...”

His hand was pulled. Duan Yue dragged Ol’ Zhou, and they continued another chase. This time, they raced out from the education block and followed the corridor to enter the lab building.

Chapter 936: Strangers Inside the Elevator

The layout of the lab building was not as complicated as the education block; there was only one narrow corridor leading through it with various kinds of labs along both sides. At the end of the it was an elevator used to transport large equipment. The student couple had no idea why such a device existed in the lab, but they were not given much time to think. The visitors chasing after them appeared to be crazy. They had almost reached the end of the corridor, and they would need to take the elevator to leave.

“Stop right there!” Big Ghost and Small Ghost screamed, and that only shook the couple further. They had not done anything to anger the other party. In fact, they had only shared a few words, but for some reason, the other party wanted to claim their lives. The corridor was a straight path. There was nothing in the way to block the view. They would be found out if they ran into one of the labs, so the couple rushed to the end of the corridor and pressed urgently for the elevator button.

“Open the door please!” Due to the panic, the male student missed the warning sign next to the elevator—‘Pathway for ‘stock’ only. Usage by visitors is strictly forbidden!’

He pressed the button repeatedly, and the gray, metallic door finally opened. “We’ll go and hide on the other floor for now. The other visitors are not in their right minds!”

There were four buttons inside the elevator. They corresponded to the first to fourth basement floors. The first three numbers were normal, but the number that represented the fourth basement floor was painted red. The male student helped his girlfriend into the elevator and pressed a random button. The elevator door slowly closed as the footsteps in the corridor approached.

“I’ve heard from the senior how scary the boss of this place is. He often has his worker act as visitors. Who knew that we would be so unlucky to run into them during our first visit?” the female student said. Her face was pale from the scare.

“Shush! Do not say anything bad about the boss. I remember the other students reminding me that the boss is a person who holds grudges.” The footsteps came closer and closer. The couple hugged together as they stared at the door, and their heads were covered in sweat. “Quick! Close! Why are you closing so slowly?”

Pa!

The footsteps stopped, and a small man squeezed into the elevator at the last moment. “Still trying to run?”

Small Ghost looked angry. Right after he entered the elevator, the doors closed, and the elevator started to move down. When he was doing the chasing, he did not feel fear, but when he was inside the elevator, Small Ghost realized that something was not right. He was facing two actors alone.

“Humph, you guys sure can run.” Small Ghost’s presence dwindled, but he soon realized that the two students were more frightened than he was. They were tightly squeezed together, their eyes bulging with confusion and terror. They’re still acting? Trying to get my pity?

No one spoke in the elevator, and silence slowly descended. A light stench could be smelt inside the elevator. It was unclear what kind of stench it was; it was like someone had sprayed perfume onto decaying flesh. The intention was to cover up the smell of decay, but the decay was too strong. After mixing with the perfume, it created this new horrible stench.

With a ding, the elevator stopped, and they all turned to look at the screen above the elevator door. In his panic, the male student had pressed for the third floor. On the control panel, the button for the third floor was still lit up, but the screen showed that the elevator had stopped at the second floor.

“Why would the elevator stop at this floor? Someone else wishes to enter the elevator?” Other than that possibility, Small Ghost could not think of any other explanation. He was on high alert as he stared at the door that slowly opened. A light stench floated into his nostrils. Outside the door was a darkened corridor, and there was no one there.

“Is this your doing?” Small Ghost glared at the couple. Since he did not have the numerical advantage, his tone was not that brash.

“How could we have anything to do with this?” The male student felt afraid and wronged.

“I’ll be honest with you—Brother Bai has found conclusive proof that you two are actors hired by this Haunted House!” Small Ghost put on a furious expression, but he maintained a safe distance from the male student. He was concerned that the male student would turn to violence once he was exposed and do something irrational.

“We’re actors? We were about to say the same thing about you!” The couple were confused.

“You were with the male assistant when he disappeared, and he used your phone to message Liu Gang, right?” Small Ghost slowly calmed down.

“The male assistant? The man who stole our phone and blocked the two of us outside the door?” The mention of the man assistant incensed the male student. “If he’s your partner, you still owe me an apology! We were kind enough to lend him our phone, but he blocked us outside the door and used us as bait to lure the ghost away!”

“He stole your phone? Wait, that means the three of you weren’t together?” Small Ghost had no idea who was lying, but he slowly discovered that something was off. When the three were arguing, the elevator door closed on its own, and it started to move down again. Several seconds later, the elevator reached the third floor, and the door slowly opened.

“Stay here, and don’t go anywhere.” Small Ghost took out his phone. “First, I am definitely not an actor. You can google me online. I came here with Liu Gang to expose this Haunted House.”

“What are you trying to say?” The student couple still had trouble believing Small Ghost.

“We are not actors, and you’re not actors, so who is the actor?” As rash as Small Ghost was, he was not dumb. “Follow me up to the first floor, we’ll lay everything out in the open. There seems to be a misunderstanding.”

When the couple were conflicted, the fourth button on the control panel suddenly lit up on its own. The door slowly closed, and the bloody red number four was reflected in everyone’s eyes.

“Why did the elevator move on its own?”

“Did you press the button for the fourth floor?”

“No! Haven’t I been talking to you!”

“Could there be someone else in the elevator?”

The old freight elevator was covered in stains. As the elevator descended, blood seeped out from behind some of the stains. The stench thickened, and the three visitors were assaulted by anxiety.

“No, this is not right! The elevator only took several seconds to move from the second to third floor. We’ve been moving down for so long already, so why hasn’t it stopped?”

Blood leaked out from the stains, and blood vessels crawled all over the walls. The strange stench thickened.

Ding!

Just as the three visitors were about to collapse, the number on the screen finally turned to four. The door slowly opened. There was a reinforced steel door beyond it, and through the gap, they saw something they would never forget. Beyond the locked steel door, there was a corridor that was painted red, and the paint looked like blood that would not stop dripping.

“What... what is this place?”

Terror caught their tongues. Their voices were shaking, and they could not finish a complete sentence. The three visitors were squeezed at the innermost part of the elevator, and no one dared move.

“What do we do? What do we do?” Small Ghost’s teeth were clattering. The stench inside the elevator thickened, and a rhythmic sound came from down the red corridor. It sounded like a boy slowly approaching them while bouncing a basketball.

“We have to leave! We can’t let that thing enter the elevator!” This was a matter of life or death. Small Ghost gritted his teeth and climbed up from the ground to press the button for one on the control panel. He wished for the door to close, but the elevator did not respond. He lifted his head to look at the screen above the door, and a chill rushed up Small Ghost’s mind. The screen said that the elevator was overloaded!

There were only three people inside the elevator. How could it be overloaded?

Cold sweat slid down his forehead. Small Ghost looked around the elevator, and he realized that the blood that came out from the stains had formed human faces. Left and right, up and down, there were human faces staring back at them!

At the same time, the reinforced iron door shook like there were things beyond it that wanted to get into the elevator.

The faces slowly peeled themselves out from the walls, and shadows started to fill up the spaces inside the elevator.

Chapter 937 - Your Ghost Story and My Ghost Story

Chapter 937: Your Ghost Story and My Ghost Story

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Screams filtered up from underground. Even though the soundproofing was well done inside the Haunted House, Big Ghost and Ol' Zhou heard it clearly.

"Small Ghost!" Big Ghost pressed the button crazily, but the elevator was stuck on the fourth floor. The elevator only started to move when the screaming stopped.

...

"I heard the screams from the two students as well. That doesn't sound like they're acting..." Ol' Zhou's voice was filled with fear and concern. "Could we have misunderstood them?"

"Shush, they probably purposely led us here." Big Ghost was anxious. Sister Ghost was missing, and now Small Ghost was in trouble. Of the trio, he was the only one left. "When the elevator arrives, if they are not inside the elevator, we'll go down together! This place is not that complicated. If they are leading Small Ghost, they won't be too far ahead of us!"

"I think we should leave Small Ghost behind. Have either of you noticed this?" Bai Buhui pointed at the warning sign next to the elevator. "When the elevator was going down, it stopped at every floor. The two students are very cunning. They are clearly playing with us, hoping that we'll explore each floor."

The elevator came up slowly. When Bai Buhui was explaining his theory, the door opened, but the three visitors inside had disappeared.

"Don't go in there. The elevator is a completely enclosed space. This kind of space is the most dangerous in a Haunted House," Bai Buhui reminded them, but the stubborn Big Ghost still entered the elevator.

"If you want to come along, then be quick. If not, I'll go down alone." After hearing that, Bai Buhui stood where he was and shook his head.

Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue were conflicted. They knew full well how the four-star scenario would strip people of their disguises and have them explore their truest nature. Therefore, Big Ghost's personality and attitude aside, at least his concern for Small Ghost was sincere.

"Sigh, I guess we will accompany you. It'll be safer in numbers." Ol' Zhou hesitated for a long time before making the decision. He and Duan Yue also entered the elevator.

"Thank you." Big Ghost nodded at Ol' Zhou and shot him an appreciative gaze.

"The three of you have lost your minds." Bai Buhui pushed on his glasses, and his expression was cold. "I'll wait for you here. Good luck."

The door closed. Big Ghost looked at the number on the screen, and his expression was stern.

"Don't worry, we're just visiting a Haunted House. Nothing is going to happen to Small Ghost and Sister Ghost." Out of kindness, Ol' Zhou tried to console Big Ghost.

"You wouldn't get it." Big Ghost turned to look at Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue, and his eyes were starting to get a bit maddened. He pointed at his ear. "I'll tell you a story. If you don't believe me, just forget about it.

"I was in a car accident when I was nine. When I was unconscious, there was a voice in my ears. I think it was apologizing to me. I didn't care about it initially, but after I was rescued, the family of the culprit wanted to get my forgiveness. They came from a less than fortunate background, and the driver died in the car crash. The person supporting the household collapsed, and the mother and daughter had trouble even surviving daily life.

"I forgave them. Then, when the police came to me with the phone recording of the driver, I realized that his voice was the one I heard when I was unconscious!

"Since then, I've been able to occasionally hear things that others couldn't. It's difficult to make out, but it's there.

"It's because of this ability that I dare take Small Ghost and Sister Ghost to places like cemeteries and crematoriums to do our challenges because I know those places are relatively safe."

The elevator soon arrived at the second floor. Big Ghost looked down the dark corridor, and his expression deepened with concern.

“That story made me feel some chills, but what does that have to do with this visit?” Ol’ Zhou was confused.

“Ever since I entered this scenario, many different voices have echoed in my ears. I don’t know whether it’s because I’ve lost my mind or because there are too many haunted things hiding here.” Big Ghost looked down the long corridor. He took a deep breath and took out his phone to look at the time. “I have a bad feeling.”

“People are kind enough to give you reminders. How can you label them as haunted things?” Ol’ Zhou moved his body to look at Big Ghost’s phone. “What time is it?”

“9:44. Why did you suddenly ask about that?” Big Ghost was still looking outside the elevator.

“Whether you believe me or not, actually, something scary happened to me too.”

“What?” Big Ghost turned back to look, and he saw Ol’ Zhou’s expression, which had never been so severe before.

“One night, I took the elevator alone, and I saw a couple who had their faces lowered inside the elevator.” Ol’ Zhou’s face slowly turned place. “I was so afraid, I stood as close to the door as I could. When the door closed, the guy suddenly asked me this question—what time is it?”

“How did you answer him?” Big Ghost turned his whole body around to face Ol’ Zhou. He suddenly felt a sense of déjà vu.

“I told him it was 9:44.” Ol’ Zhou slowly lowered his face.

“And... and then?”

The air in the elevator froze. Ol’ Zhou slowly lifted his face, and a nasty gash appeared on his pale face!

“And that time became my time of death!”

The door slowly closed, and Duan Yue stood at the door to block his exit...

Ding!

When the elevator opened again, Big Ghost was already unconscious. Ol' Zhou dragged him out from the elevator and had Duan Yue message Chen Ge and remind him that Big Ghost could hear ghost whispers. Moments later, Chen Ge called. "Ignore the remaining person. Take Big Ghost to the school's nurse office as fast as you can. Doctor Wei and the other doctors are there. Let them take over."

"We don't have much time. Can Doctor Wei make it?"

"The few patients that Doctor Wei cured have all forgotten their painful past. Do you still have doubts about his ability?"

Bai Buhui guarded the door, and soon, he heard the screams of Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue. It was harrowing, hard to imagine what they had been through.

"Looks like they have been tricked by the actors. This is really a man-eating elevator. I can't stay here anymore. Now that I am alone, they will surely come to get me." Bai Buhui was calm. "Combining the document from Mr. Bai's supernatural phenomenon observation club's reports, the reports about heaven and wishing well were inside the same room, so there has to be a connection between the two. The wishing well is probably the real way out."

The map that he had seen at the door to the education block appeared in his mind. Bai Buhui took out his phone to call Liu Gang, but it went unanswered.

"What is this idiot doing?" He messaged Liu Gang and told him that the library was a trap and that the real exit was the well.

After doing all that, Bai Buhui ignored his previous teammates and ran all the way to the western campus, the location where he remembered the well was.

Chapter 938 - Pushing Open the Door of Hope! [2 in 1]

Chapter 938: Pushing Open the Door of Hope!

[2 in 1]

Bai Buhui was someone with a sharp and firm determination. The experience from his childhood had turned him into someone who was selfish and aloof. Many who had worked with him in the past commented that they sensed a lack of human sociability from the man. But such a person had mist in his eyes when he saw the edge of the abandoned school's field.

In less than ten minutes, Bai Buhui had experienced more than ten ghost stories. The nurse's office that was filled with whispering and crying, the music room that had music floating out of it even though it was definitely unoccupied, the staircase that had an extra step, the statue that would cry, the cafeteria that was empty but somehow drifting with the delicious smell of meat, the human face that was hiding underneath the toilet cubicle, and the consistent footsteps that had been following behind him.

There were simply too many of them to count. He had been to other Haunted Houses where there were plenty of scare points, but at this Haunted House, a single ghost story alone contained multiple scare points. The scariest thing was that once he triggered one of the ghost stories, the ghosts in the story would continue to haunt him. They would not let him go until the end of the world. Bai Buhui had no idea many 'things' were following behind him. His brain had stopped working long ago; he had been operating on pure determination.

"The wishing well!" As the Haunted House designer from the futuristic theme park, he did not want to admit defeat. He would rather find the exit himself than accept the humiliation of being sent out by their business competition. "I'm almost there!"

Using the last ounce of energy in his body, Bai Buhui charged down the field. At that moment, his brain was even filling up with images from classic movies like The Shawshank Redemption.

Freedom is within my grasp. At this moment, I am my own hero.

He had never run so fast in his life. Crossing the field, he collapsed by the edge of the well. This was a well that was slightly slanted. There was a safety rope that was tied to the side of the well, and the end of the rope was attached to a water bucket. Bai Buhui looked down into the well, and he could see a faded red light at the bottom of the well.

“It should be... yes, this should be the place.” Putting his hands together in prayer, Bai Buhui sincerely wished, “I want to leave this haunted House.”

Then he took out a coin and tossed it into the well. Soon, he heard the coin hit the bottom of the well. The well was not as deep as he thought.

“This is it! My way to victory!” This was his bet for glory. Bai Buhui grabbed the safety rope and slowly descended into the well.

“Why hasn’t Bai Buhui answered any of his calls? What is that man up to?” Liu Gang’s voice came from underneath the table.

“Is it possible that they have already escaped from the Haunted House? From the first time I saw him, I knew that he cannot be relied on. He has this strange way of talking and refuses to acknowledge those who are talking to him.” The cameraman Muscle’s voice came from another table.

“I am here purposely to help the futuristic theme. If that b*stard dares to abandon me and run off alone, I’ll have many things to say to him once this is over.” Liu Gang was very mad. “But you aren’t much better than him. You have been quietly communicating with my assistant, but you did not even consider telling me about that! And as a cameraman, you lost the most important equipment, the camera.”

“But I was forced to do that! I didn’t do it on purpose!”

Creak...

The wooden door was pushed open, and hearing that, both Liu Gang and Muscle shut up at the same time.

“Brother Gang, you can come out now. That headless woman didn’t come after us.” Ah Li ran to the door. “We’d better make use of this time to get to the library.”

“Suddenly, everyone’s phone is not working. I really have no idea what they are doing.” Liu Gang took out his phone and sent a message to the group chat. “The hidden path the exit is behind the mirror on the second floor of the library. If you see this message, head over there immediately!”

“I have done everything I could. If they still refuse to come, I can’t do anything about that.” Liu Gang patted the dust away from his clothes as he crawled out from underneath the table. “We are not going to wait for him. Let’s go there now.”

The three were gathered close together, but once they pushed the door open, Muscle let out a shrill yelp.

“What’s wrong?”

“The mannequin is following us again!”

Muscle pointed outside the door. There was a child mannequin standing at the corner. His head was standing on his shoulders, and his pair of dark eyes were staring at Liu Gang’s group.

“For some reason, I feel like he’s staring at us, and his eyes have been following our movement.”

“Why is this ghost baby following us even though Lan Dong has already gone missing?” Muscle took in a cold breath.

“Just ignore it. We need to head to the library now!” Ah Li was not that afraid of the Ghost Baby. After all, as scary as it could be, at least it was something physical that everyone could see.

In his peripheral vision, there would occasionally appear a thin male student, and only he was the one who could catch glimpses of this student. Following the appearance of the ghost baby was the dog barking and fleeing crying. The actors at this Haunted House did not seem to be confined to a single scenario; they could move around freely. This was the thing that worried Liu Gang the most. After all, with the number of visitors dwindling, it meant that more actors would gather and close in around the remaining visitors.

“Why am I having this sudden headache?” Many unfamiliar images appeared in Ah Li’s memory as if he had lived at this place before. After slowly getting used to this feeling, Liu Gang and Muscle, who were next to him, turned more and more into strangers. However, neither of them pointed this out. They all believed that as long as they could escape from this place, all the problems would be solved.

They raced down the corner, and occasionally, there were shadows that floated out from the corner that would squeeze their hearts. Scarier still were the strands of hair that would fall from the ceiling, but when they lifted their heads to look, there was nothing there. The three ran for their lives, and they ignored all these details. They had planted their hope on the hidden path that was mentioned by the male assistant.

“We’re here! That’s the library in front of us!” Even though they were quite far away from the door, Muscle managed to read the sign with his exceptional eyesight. That gave them the boost to run down the last stretch with all their strength.

“Close the door! Close the door!” To help them buy some more time, Liu Gang and Muscle slammed the wooden door of the library shut after they got into it and used chairs to block the entrance. “We’ll go to the second floor together! My assistant and the two students should be waiting for us there!”

Liu Gang shouted the name of his assistant, but there was no answer. They ran to find the staircase inside the library, and when they found it, they realized that the stairs were heading down, not up.

“The second floor that my assistant mentioned was the second underground floor?” Looking at the dark staircase, Liu Gang had some hesitation, but at that moment, the sound of banging came from the library door like someone was using their head to knock against the door.

“Those things have caught up to us! Is it the ghost baby or the headless woman?” The group was thrown into a panic. They could clearly see the blood that was leaking through the gap at the bottom of the door. The banging became louder and louder. The door and the chairs that blocked the door were shaking.

“Quick! We mustn’t stay here any longer!” After saying that, Muscle was the first to charge down the stairs. In the eerie underground, there were rows of bookshelves, but there was no so-called mirror.

“Brother Gang, could it be that we have been tricked? Why would there be a mirror in the library?”

“What’s the point of saying that now? Go and search for it!” Liu Gang was freaking out, too. That mirror was their only hope. The three scrambled around the lower floor, and the banging that came above their heads became louder and louder.

“Has the boss of this place lost his mind? To make the scenario, he has created such a big underground library?” Muscle grabbed a random book from the bookshelf. There were blood stains left on the corner, and the inside pages were dirtied with blood and stuck together. “This is madness.”

He was about to push the book back when he suddenly saw something in the gap where the book was originally placed. Muscle bent over to take a better look and saw a red pupil flash past the back of the bookshelf.

“What the f*ck!” His body lost its balance, and he leaned backward. When his head was about knock into the bookshelf behind him, he felt something holding him, giving him support. His soul had not returned to his body. Muscle turned his head instinctively around, and he saw a pale arm reach out from the gap in the bookshelf. There were five bony fingers pressing around his neck. Chills crawled down his body. Muscle could hear the sound that cracked down his spine, like it was about to snap.

“Ah!” Muscle screamed loudly for help and tossed the book away as he crawled away from the mystery hand. He made such a loud commotion and forgot about the one rule when one was inside the library. One should always remain quiet inside the library. He violated the rule, and many gray hands reached out from the bookshelves. Some of them were wearing the uniform of Mu Yang High School.

“What’s going on?” Liu Gang abandoned his image. He collapsed onto the ground and searched for a place to hide.

Bang!

A loud boom echoed through the library. It should be the door of the library being banged open. A few seconds later, a face appeared at the stairs. It was the ghost baby, and trailing behind it was a large black dog.

“Run!” Muscle screamed, but the library was only so big; there was nowhere for them to run. The few hid behind the last row of the bookshelves. The stars seemed to have aligned for them at that moment. They managed to spot a mirror that they had missed that whole time.

“This is it!”

A miracle! That kind of joy was something that could not be described with words! It was as if they had run into the most beautiful incident when they were in the deepest despair!

“Quick!” Ah Li pushed the mirror to the side to reveal a path that led downward. At the end of the path was a heavily ruined iron door.

“The hidden path!” Excited tears overwhelmed the trio’s eyes. Only they knew what they had been through to reach this point. They raced down the stairs. As they got closer and closer to the door of hope, the sound of crying and barking faded away. Liu Gang, who ran at the front, finally had his grip around the door knob.

He pushed the iron door open.

A stinky smell of blood rushed into his nostrils, and a thick blood fog enveloped his body!

When Liu Gang opened his eyes, he saw a world that was completely blood red in color!

Viscous drops of blood dripped down from the ceiling, and the whole corridor was painted the brightest of red. The air was damp, and every breath appeared to soak their lungs in blood water. Liu Gang stopped moving. The stark contrast in color caused him to doubt his own eyes. Just as he was about to turn around, a giant force ran into him from behind. His knees buckled, and Liu Gang dropped to the ground. He turned to look behind him.

Muscle and Ah Li raced out from the corridor. They did not expect Liu Gang to suddenly stop. They did not have a chance to slow down, so they rammed right into Liu Gang. The three rolled into a ball, and as they collected their wits, they saw the ghost baby and the black dog also following down into the hidden path. The scary faces slowly approached, and the pale hands followed closely behind the ghost baby. However, when they were about to reach Liu Gang, something that no one expected happened.

The scary monsters did not continue to move forward. They stopped inside the hidden path. With fear and uncertainty radiating off them, they pulled back the iron door and slammed it shut. Then came the sound of iron cogs and chains moving. The rusted door seemed to have been locked.

“This... means that we’re saved, right?”

The three visitors were lying on the ground with complicated expressions. They only dared look at each other, afraid of letting their eyes wander around.

“This is the exit?” Ah Li whispered, but no one was there to give an answer.

“This may be the exit, even though it might not look like it. Perhaps the Haunted House wishes to give us a surprise before we leave?” Muscle sounded raspy. He slowly crawled up from the ground with his heart beating rapidly.

“You might have a point.” Liu Gang also picked up himself up from the ground. His body was shaking. Everything around him was too intense for his senses. This was a blood red world; every surface was painted with blood, the walls were climbing with blood vessels, and thick bloody liquid was flowing on the ceiling above them.

“This is madness, pure madness.” Liu Gang stuttered when he spoke. He had thought that there was hope behind the door, but when he saw that the scene before him had nothing to do with hope, the disappointment was enough to break him. The three visitors were busy consoling themselves, but the excuses that they could come up with sounded so weak when compared to the bloody reality that they had been thrown into.

“We...” Before Liu Gang finished, footsteps came from the corridor. The sound was crisp, like stilettos on tiles.

“It’s not easy to move around with heels. Could it be the worker coming to direct us to the exit?”

“No matter what, let’s hide for now.” Ah Li pushed open a random classroom door, but before he got in, he sucked in a cold breath. The classroom was filled with students, and everyone was wearing a strange school uniform. The uniform unsettled Ah Li, but at the same time, it felt familiar to him. “The boy that I’ve been seeing appears to be wearing this uniform. His name is Lin Sisi?”

He had been hugging the wooden box, but due to his nervousness, Ah Li had forgotten to place the box with the oil painting on the ground. The footsteps were approaching. The only places to hide were the two classrooms on the side. However, both classrooms were filled with students.

“Let’s go in first. The students are just mannequins.” As if to prove him wrong, when Liu Gang saw that, all the heads of the students in the classroom turned, and the pairs of eyes looked at him.

Pa!

About one second later, the students stood up one by one. They appeared to have not gotten used to their new bodies. They left their seats awkwardly before charging at Liu Gang!

“Out! Out! Run!” Their bodies reacted instinctively. Liu Gang’s group pushed each other as they tried to escape from the classrooms, and at that moment, the strange footsteps stopped before them. A pair of blood red heels were placed in the middle of the corridor. The color camouflaged them against the corridor.

“Why is there a pair of heels standing here?” Blood dripped from above. Liu Gang lifted his head to look, and a woman covered in bandages had her upper body stuck to the ceiling. She seemed to be made from blood. Screams escaped from Liu Gang’s mouth. The man himself did not know that he could reach such a high octave. His body was dragged by Ah Li and Muscle. The three ran down the corridor. Right then, a familiar scream came from the other end of the corridor.

“Bai Buhui?” The last shred of rationality pushed this name into Ah Li’s brain. He looked down the corridor, and at a fork in the road, he saw two harried figures. One of them was the unapproachable and detached Bai Buhui, but at that moment, he had lost a shoe, his shirt was torn, and his glasses were missing.

“Buhui!” Liu Gang shouted his name from afar. Even though he had complained about Bai Buhui earlier, at that moment, he felt such closeness to the man when he saw him.

“Don’t come over here!” Bai Buhui warned. Even though he was missing a shoe, he could run very fast. Moments later, Liu Gang saw the other person who was following Bai Buhui. The man was also a visitor. They had met each other when they entered the Haunted House. He wore many layers, and he seemed to be sick. His face was very pale, and he kept gasping for air.

“Don’t come over here! Run!” Bai Buhui gestured madly. When they met at the split, both parties saw what they had been running away from. Behind Liu Gang was a pair of red heels that could move on their own, a strange woman that stuck to the ceiling, and a group of students who all had the same expression. Bai Buhui and the other visitor were being followed by a strange boy with a normal-sized head but a stomach that was about ten times larger than an adult's. The boy was holding the broken leg of a mannequin. His body was splattered with blood and covered in this horrible stench!

There was nowhere to run!

One side was terror, and the other side was greater terror!

"Into the room!" Liu Gang screamed.

"No! We'll be trapped that way!" Bai Buhui stopped. He looked around before hissing through his teeth. "This way!"

Liu Gang was followed by a bunch of things, but there was only one thing behind him. After gauging the pros and cons, Bai Buhui made the correct choice. "We'll charge our way through!"

The negative emotions in his heart were unleashed. When the strange boy was approaching, Bai Buhui suddenly rammed into the visitor wearing many layers! He personally pushed the visitor toward the monster!

"How could you!" Just as the visitor was about to fall, his arm was caught by the boy with the stench.

"This is our opportunity! Run!" The boy was holding the mannequin's leg with one hand and the strange visitor with another, so he did not have any free hands to stop them. Being reminded by Bai Buhui, the group ran past the boy, but at that moment, they suddenly heard a blood-curdling scream!

Turning back to look, they saw an arm being torn brusquely off its shoulder by the boy. The arm flew through the air and landed before the group of visitors. The blood was still bleeding, and the fingers were flinching!

"AH!" Ah Li and Muscle's knees buckled; they did not expect this to happen. The screaming continued, and the boy's large body blocked Liu Gang and Bai Buhui's sight. What they saw was squirting blood exploding out from what they assumed to be the strange visitor's body.

That was a living human. The visitor was with them moments ago. But this was real! Every terror turned into reality at that moment! It was like they had seen the murderer with the knife standing by their bedside after waking up from a nightmare!

Ah Li and Muscle broke down, and they could not stop screaming.

Bai Buhui also lost the ability to run. He saw the blood drain from the visitor's body, and his energy left him. The world around him started to spin. Everything turned black like night was falling. His eyes closed, and he fell backward. Even at his last conscious moment, his mouth was repeating the same word.

"Impossible."

Of the group, only Liu Gang continued to crawl on the ground. He crawled into the nearby classroom, but as he was about to close the door, a broken arm struck the door. Then, more and more arms reached out to grab the door.

"Don't come in here! Go away!" Liu Gang looked up, and more and more human faces appeared at the window outside the classroom. They were all curiously looking in.

If the threshold of terror that a human being could support was to be split into ten levels, Liu Gang felt like he was in a level one hundred scare. He did not know when he fainted; he just knew that there was a sense of bliss that he did not expect when he fainted. “If possible, I just want to sleep forever and not open my eyes again...”

Bang!

The room door was pushed open, and numerous ghosts rushed into the room. Then they separated and stood on both sides of the room. Footsteps came from afar, and Chen Ge, still wearing Mr. Bai's ID card, walked over. He had left the camera outside the red campus, and now he was only holding a phone in his hand.

“One minute and three seconds, you guys have to try harder to reduce the time you need to cause people to faint to under one minute.” Chen Ge walked to stand before Liu Gang. “The red campus is very similar to the world behind the door. It is best used as the last trump card, so it is for the best that the visitors do not stay here for too long.”

Even though they were from different camps, even though they were supposed to be competitors, Chen Ge still cared about Liu Gang. “The visitation time is sixty minutes. There is still time left. Help me bring them to the nurse's office, and let Dr. Wei take a look at them.”

Moving his broken arm, Ol' Bai dragged Liu Gang out of the classroom. After giving some more advice to his new employees, Chen Ge turned to the red high heels. “The resentment and hatred in the visitors' hearts are the nutrients that you need. This is the most efficient method to drain the negative emotions from their hearts, and it can be repeated many times. I am not advising you to stay—I am just telling you these things so that even if you do not wish to stay here any longer, you will be able to take good care of yourself.”

Seeing the lack of response from the red high heels, Chen Ge turned and left.

When he reached the nurse's office, Chen Ge heard the complaint from Dr. Wei before he even entered the door. He astutely stood outside the door and waited awhile before entering it.

"Dr. Wei, how are they doing?"

"I have been wondering, are you the owner of a Haunted House or a hospital? The visitors came to play, and you have to send them for a full physical checkup before allowing them to leave?"

"I can't help it if they are that unlucky," Chen Ge said.

"Never mind that. The guy called Big Ghost could hear our voices because there was a shred of lingering spirit that was hiding inside his ear. When the spirit came to our Haunted House to visit, he was almost scared out of his wits. Under the persuasion of our group of doctors, the lingering spirit has finally departed to a better place."

"I knew I could count on you to make things right, Dr. Wei. You only need to talk to him to cure him of his illness."

"Move it and get them out of here as fast as you can!"

With the help from the employees, all twelve visitors were sent to the entrance to the School of Afterlife. Then Chen Ge mobilized a few carts from the underground morgue and carted them out from the underground scenario. Seeing the row of fainted visitors, Chen Ge felt a bit headache as well. If this scene was witnessed by the other visitors, it would probably give them quite a scare. Taking out his phone, Chen Ge called Zhang Jingjiu. "Ol' Zhang, have you recorded Liu Gang's livestream?"

"Don't worry, boss. From the beginning to the end, I have all of it recorded." Zhang Jingjiu was very professional.

"Okay, send me the part where Liu Gang dropped the camera to save his own life, and by the way, I also want the part where they had the argument with the students from the medical university and later chased after them angrily. I need that part as well."

"No problem."

Ten seconds later, Zhang Jingjiu sent all the clipped videos to Chen Ge. After confirming them, Chen Ge put the phone away, hauled the visitors onto the carts, hummed a tune, pushed the carts, and headed out of the Haunted House. The wheels of the body carts rolled across the floor, making this creaking sound. Chen Ge pulled open the thick back curtains of the Haunted House. The sun shone down, and the sunlight gilded the rims of the carts. They were like pairs of hands that caressed the sleeping faces gently and warmly.

“They’re out! Boss Chen is out!”

“He’s out! He’s out! He’s pushing the carts out of the Haunted House!”

“He’s carrying the visitors who visited the four-star scenario earlier? My God! Three of them have fainted!”

The visitors who were still lining up exploded. The visitors who had bought their tickets and were ready to enter the Haunted House abandoned their queue and all rushed over to look.

“Move aside please! Please do not block the path! Give them some air!”

When he heard the sound of wheels, Uncle Xu felt a bad feeling growing in his heart. He rushed over through the crowd as fast as he could, but he was too late. The reporters who were waiting had already gotten to their news before he did.

“Is the four-star scenario so scary?”

“What happened to three visitors when they were inside your Haunted House?”

“Boss Chen, please stay for an interview!”

Chen Ge ignored them and waved at Uncle Xu. “Uncle, help me find some workers to carry these three to the resting hall.”

“Can’t you just hand me the whole cart?”

“I still have the use for the cart.”

Three visitors were moved by the theme park workers to the resting hall. The commotion around Chen Ge’s Haunted House only grew bigger. There were layers upon layers of visitors trying to see what was up. This scene had certainly satisfied the curiosity of countless visitors. The creaking sound returned as Chen Ge pushed the cart back into the Haunted House. Half a minute later, he returned with another cart of visitors.

“There are three more of them?”

“The four-star scenario wouldn’t have wiped them all out, right? More than ten people visited the scenario at the same time!”

Seeing Chen Ge walk out, the corner of Uncle Xu’s eyes were twitching. He whispered, “Now... you still can’t give me the use of the cart, can you?”

“Indeed.” Chen Ge nodded. “I need to use it two more times.”

Chen Ge answered calmly like he was talking about the weather, but the visitors who heard him had shock travel through them like ripples.

“All the visitors that entered the four-star scenario have been knocked unconscious! This is madness!”

“When I heard that the boss split the difficulty into levels, I thought that was just for him to scam more money out of us, but now I realize how ignorant I was. Er... Can I exchange this ticket for Mu Yang High School? I think I will just visit a one-star scenario today.”

The visitors were happily discussing among themselves while Chen Ge silently pushed the cart back into the Haunted House. With the creaking and cracking of the wheels, he took two more trips to remove the rest of the visitors from the haunted house. Other than Chen Ge, the other party who was busiest at the scene were the doctors. Initially, many visitors did not understand why a first aid corner was stationed next to the Haunted House, but they all got it now. Handing the cart over to the doctors, Chen Ge held Liu Gang’s camera and stood before the Haunted House. Until that moment, the camera was still operating.

“Would everyone please quiet down for a moment!” Chen Ge aimed the camera right at himself and then connected his phone to the large screen that was playing the promotional video for the Haunted House outside at the resting hall.

“Yesterday, a famous streamer called Liu Gang did everything he could to slander my Haunted House.” Chen Ge pressed the play button on his phone, and the big screen started to show the short video that had been uploaded by Liu Gang yesterday on the internet. Liu Gang, who held the folding fan, showed pictures of Night of the Living Dead on the screen and berated the Haunted House with a face filled with condescension. “A backward scenario like this can be called a Haunted House? Really?”

“He used the pictures of this Haunted House taken from years ago to mislead his audience, and then I reached out to him on the internet to make a bet, challenging him to come visit my Haunted House. If, after his visit, he still manages to say that my Haunted House is not scary, then I will livestream my personal apology to him through the internet. However, if he thinks the visit is scary, then he will need to officially apologize to New Century Park for his defamation and place the apology statement at the front page of his account.”

After saying that, Chen Ge stopped the doctors, who were moving past him, and turned the camera to Liu Gang, who was lying on the stretcher. The man’s pale face appeared on the big screen.

“Action speaks louder than words. In Liu Gang’s current condition, I doubt he will be able to give an official apology. Actually, I did not expect him to be so fragile. Hearing what he had to say about my Haunted House on the internet, I increased the difficulty slightly because I thought he was going to be someone hard to scare.” Chen Ge moved the camera angle backward so that Liu Gang on the video from yesterday and Liu Gang who was unconscious on the stretcher could both fit in the same frame.

Right at that moment, the video on the screen was reaching its end. Liu Gang was excitedly showing the camera the tickets that he had purchased for his viewers, and his voice came out from the speakers at the New Century Park. “If certain people are too foolish to see the truth, I will go and help them understand the level that they are at.”

After saying that on the big screen, Liu Gang handsome flipped open the folding fan, and the front of it had ‘Such buffoonery!’ written on it.

“We’ll see you tomorrow at 9 am. Good night.”

The video ended there. Chen Ge took the camera and walked to Liu Gang, who was unconscious with white foam around his mouth. He took out his phone to take a look.

“It is about 10:10 am. Brother Gang is about to be sent to the hospital. If there is anything you guys from the livestream wish to tell him, I will be the first to help you relay your messages.”

Seeing the comments that filled up the screen, Chen Ge’s lips was turning up. He stood under the sun and felt the warmth on his skin.

After Liu Gang was carried away by the doctor, Chen Ge did not switch off the camera. He turned the camera to the big screen outside the haunted House.

“Now that the issue with Liu Gang is over, it is time to talk about another person.” He clicked on his phone and clicked open the video that Zhang Jingjiu had sent him. “I was curious why Liu Gang would suddenly come after New Century Park while promoting the futuristic theme park so much in his video. Honestly, I was confused until I saw this person.” Chen Ge pointed at Bai Buhui on the screen. “This gentleman here is the designer for the Haunted House at the futuristic theme park. He even carries the employee ID from the futuristic theme park with him. He came alongside Liu Gang, so they should be sent to the same hospital.”

The video continued to play, and it soon reached the part where Bai Buhui’s group was cornering the student couple. Small Ghost was agitated and grabbed the male student by his collar, and the students looked so afraid.

“I do not care how they slander or mock my Haunted House on the internet, but I will not allow them to injure my visitors at my Haunted House.” Chen Ge pointed at the pair of students on the screen. “Thanks to the support from everyone, my Haunted House has survived to this day. The fact that they have purposely gone after other visitors has crossed the line. Tomorrow, I will personally go to the futuristic theme park to demand an explanation. It just so happens to that I heard they have also built a Haunted House. Tomorrow, I will go and visit it alone and livestream the whole process. Those who wish to know what happens, please follow my account.”

Liu Gang’s livestream’s popularity went through the roof. After all, this was the streamer being face-slapped by himself, and it was extremely rare that one would livestream until the stream ended up at the hospital. Chen Ge was going to ride this wave to help build hype for his visit tomorrow. His real target was the futuristic theme park. The Haunted House was the specialty of New Century Park. If this specialty was taken away, New Century Park had no chance of surviving. Therefore, Chen Ge decided to nip it at the bud, not giving the enemy any chance. New Century Park had been in business for more than a decade; not many were in favor of it. To save this theme park, Chen Ge had to give it his all.

Liu Gang’s livestream ended then. Chen Ge looked around, but everyone had already fainted, so he did not know who to hand the camera to. In the end, he decided to place it inside the staff breakroom. After Chang Gu woke up, perhaps he could use it in his movie making. All the visitors were scared unconscious; the Haunted House's four-star scenario turned into an urban legend. Everyone was curious about what the inside of a four-star scenario looked like, but the problem was that everyone who visited it had fainted, so there was no one to ask. The main problem was, for other Haunted Houses on the market, one could send people inside it to know their secrets, but no one dared challenge Chen Ge's four-star scenario. Even those who had survived three-star scenarios had second thoughts. They were old fans of the Haunted House, and they did not believe Chen Ge when he said that the difficulty had only been hiked up a little bit.

The crowd at the Haunted House only dispersed around noon. Seeing that no one dared to challenge four-star scenario, Chen Ge had parts of the ghost employees return to their own scenarios. As more and more scenarios unlocked at the Haunted House, there was a clear problem; Chen Ge did not have enough employees.

“I need living employees that are reliable and ghost employees that I can reason with.” Chen Ge sat in the staff breakroom and toyed with the black phone. He looked at the spinning wheel that operated based on the visitors’ scream, and his fingers wandered over it. “I’ve spun out four baleful specters. If I get one more, my title will upgrade. I desperately need employees now, but what change will happen after my title is given an upgrade?”

His fingers tapped on the table, and Chen Ge narrowed his eyes. “The Haunted House has collected an exorbitant number of screams already. Should I throw caution to the wind? After all, the title will eventually upgrade. If I use all the screams now and spin as many times as I can, I might get something other than a baleful Specter.”

That would be a good thing, but Chen Ge was worried that he might get all Specters, which would be big trouble!

“Never mind, I’ll wait for the visit to futuristic theme park to be over before I try anything else. These things can’t be forced.”

Chen Ge abandoned this dangerous idea and lay down in bed. He was about to rest when he got a call from Director Luo.

“Xiao Chen, are you sure you can handle the visitation to the futuristic theme park tomorrow alone? I thought you would take some employees with you.” Director Luo was worried about Chen Ge’s safety.

“Don’t worry, even though I am alone, I have many people who will lend me their support.” Chen Ge was not worried. “Director Luo, how was business today? How was it compared to the futuristic theme park’s?”

“The visitor number and turnover were not as high as theirs, but we’re not that far behind.” Director Luo sounded confident. “The next few days will be key! As long as we can successfully survive this holiday period, we will have enough assets to upgrade our equipment and do something else.”

“That would be wonderful.”

“But you have to be careful. The success rate of the futuristic theme park is not as high as they expected, and they lost face today; they might come after you tomorrow.”

“It’s fine. I’m not worried about them. If anything, I’m worried they won’t come after me.” Chen Ge smiled into the phone.

“As long as you have confidence. Other than that, I must remind you of something. The theme park is important, but you have to care about your health. Don’t think that you can do anything you want because you are still young.” After that, Director Luo hung up.

“Director Luo has always been kind to me. Is it because of the Haunted House or Luo Ruoyu?”

Chen Ge put down the phone and stopped thinking. He ignored the chaos that was happening on the internet. He hugged the white cat and fell into a slumber inside the staff breakroom. At 6:30 pm, New Century Park ended the day’s work. Everyone had worked their asses off for the day, but they did not feel tired or bogged down. The previous New Century Park was like an old man who was entering his twilight years, but that day, it was given a second breath of life. Everyone who treated that place as their home finally saw hope.

The employees at the Haunted House were tired to their bones. Chen Ge gave them an early break. He took the broom and mop as he cleaned around the Haunted House quietly. This was something that he had to do every day. Cleaning this old place would give him some semblance of stability and order. At around 9 pm, Chen Ge had a simple dinner. He was about to leave New Century Park to head to the mannequin workshop when he saw a student standing at the bus stop across from the road.

The child had been watching New Century Park. She stood alone in the shadows, and she wore a crumpled school uniform.

“Is that the uniform from the School of the Afterlife?”

After recognizing the outfit, Chen Ge immediately jogged over, but when he crossed the street, the girl disappeared. “Where did she go?”

Narrowing his eyes, Chen Ge soon discovered an old exercise book left where the girl had been standing earlier.

Turning it open, there was only one sentence written inside the book. ‘Now that the home is destroyed, I have nowhere else to go.’

A small part of the students who left the ghost school managed to wake up from their coma, but most of them had nowhere else to go. Chen Ge held the exercise book and looked around. He said with sincerity, “If you don’t mind it, why don’t you follow me!”

The pedestrians thought that he was mad and walked away from him. Chen Ge did not think much of them; he held the exercise book and continued to scream. A few seconds later, the girl in the crumpled school uniform walked out from the shadows. Her hands were gripped together, and she looked nervous.

“It’s okay. I promised that if you guys have nowhere else to go, you can come and find me anytime.” Chen Ge extended his hand at the bus stop that was empty. “You can call me Chen Ge or boss, whichever you prefer. We have a big family, and everyone is very nice.”

“Er...”

“Would you like a glass of milk tea? There’s a new store that just opened near here. Come, I’ll treat you.”

Under the streetlights, the city flickered by. Cars rushed up and down the road. Chen Ge approached the pedestrian crossing, talking to himself, occasionally laughing like a child.

Chapter 942 - New Nightmare Mission

Chapter 942: New Nightmare Mission

Looking at the passing cars, Chen Ge held two cups of milk tea and walked down the secluded path. From the conversation with the girl, he found out that she was a student from the School of the Afterlife, and other than herself, there were many lost students who were wandering around the city because they had nowhere else to go.

“Do you know their location? We’ll bring them back.” The girl did not reject Chen Ge’s suggestion. They first returned to New Century Park to grab Yan Danian’s comic and then went searching for the other homeless children. They busied themselves until midnight, and by then, there were about sixty lingering spirits of homeless students in the comic. They were mostly from the same class as the girl. Most of the students had already given up, waiting for the sunlight to disperse them, but Chen Ge had shown up before then.

“Do you have any friends who might need help?” Chen Ge patiently confirmed with every student. After making sure that he had not missed anyone, he returned to New Century Park. He summoned Ol’ Zhou, Duan Yue, and Ol’ Bai and had them introduce the Haunted House to the children, settling them into the School of the Afterlife scenario. This four-star scenario had a serious lack of employee, so the arrival of these students helped Chen Ge solve a big problem.

“If only you guys had come a day earlier... oh well, this is Liu Gang’s loss for his inability to experience the true terror of this four-star scenario.”

After settling the students in, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. “I’m going to the futuristic theme park tomorrow. I’d better get to sleep early today.”

After switching off the light, Chen Ge hugged the white cat in bed and took out the black phone to look out of habit. It was already midnight, and the daily quests had been refreshed. As he scrolled through the black phone, Chen Ge suddenly sat up in bed.

The three new quests were...

“Recruitment (Normal Difficulty): As the scenarios expand, you need more employees. Please recruit three new employees before dusk tomorrow.

“Safety Precautions (Medium Difficulty): Please install at least twenty surveillance cameras inside the new scenario, the School of the Afterlife.

“Neighbor (Nightmare Difficulty): You wouldn’t have expected this since you rarely return home. The day before your parents disappeared, something terrible happened at your home. I know you are curious about what happened. Perhaps you can ask your neighbor about it.”

Chen Ge’s eyes focused on the nightmare daily mission. He had not seen one in a long time. The normal daily mission exhausted time and effort while providing average rewards, but Nightmare Missions were different. This type of mission was very dangerous, but it was a mission that would reward Chen Ge with a supernatural power. In the previous nightmare missions, Chen Ge had obtained the Mortician Skill, Yin Yang Vision, Living Doll, and Ghost Ear. Every single one of these abilities had helped him greatly. Other than that, Chen Ge realized something about the nightmare missions; all of them were related to his parents, and they all seemed to contain hints to his parents’ disappearance.

“If I do not accept it, the daily mission will refresh at midnight tomorrow.” Chen Ge looked at the time; it was 00:44.

“Such perfect timing.” After giving it some thought, Chen Ge pointed at the Nightmare Mission.

“Lucky Specter’s Favored, are you going to accept the Nightmare Difficulty Daily Mission? The mission is extremely dangerous!”

“Yes.”

After confirming it, the details of the mission appeared on the black phone.

“Neighbor (Nightmare Mission): Please search for an apartment with more than fifteen floors in Eastern Jiujiang. Said building should also satisfy these two conditions: possess a basement and lack the fourteenth floor.

“After finding the location, please enter the staircase at 2 am. The moment you step onto the stairs, you must close both eyes. Successfully climb from the first floor to the top floor, and when the mission is completed and your eyes are opened, you will see the thing you wish to see.

“Warning: Nightmare Missions have to be completed alone. Accompaniment of any Specters, spirits, or items related to the Haunted House are forbidden!

“Hint: Before you reach the top floor, no matter what you hear, smell, or touch, do not open your eyes! That is the only way for you to survive!”

Chen Ge memorized the details. He repeated it many times, but he did not get it. Why would such a mission be called Neighbor?

“Does it mean that when I close my eyes and climb from the ground floor to the top floor, I will run into neighbors?”

It sounded easy, but it would be hard to put into action. Under those circumstances, a normal person would habitually open their eyes if there was any commotion around them.

“The Nightmare Missions that I have accepted before did not have a specific location. Only this mission needs me to go to Eastern Jiujiang, but that place is where my parents strictly forbade me from going before.”

The mission had been accepted; it was too late to regret it. Chen Ge took out his phone to look for the building that might match the conditions. He typed in the keywords, and the search result soon arrived.

“Jiang Yuan Apartments?”

Looking at the name of the residential area, Chen Ge’s brows were screwed together. He was familiar with this place. When he was small, when his parents first arrived in Jiujiang, they had rented a home there. Only after he started primary school did they moved from Eastern Jiujiang to Western Jiujiang. In other words, until he was six, he lived in Jiang Yuan Apartments in Eastern Jiujiang,

Honestly, he could not recall the reason for their move. Chen Ge tried to remember it, but all he could recollect was a hazy rain. All the other memories that Chen Ge had of Jiang Yuan Apartments came from newspapers and the television. Many horrible things had happened in that area after they moved away. What kind of incident, he had already forgotten. He could only remember that whenever he tried to bring up Jiang Yuan Apartments, his parents would try their best to change the subject.

Twenty years had passed since then. The original Jiang Yuan Apartments had been levelled. The new Jiang Yuan Apartments no longer had the old small apartments but two seventeen-floor service apartments. The two buildings faced each other, but strangely enough, only one of them had been occupied. The other building had not finished work due to various reasons.

The current Jiang Yuan Apartments was far more famous than its previous iteration, but it was all due to negative news. According to the internet, there had been many tenants who committed suicide there. Ever since the apartments were built, the number of tenants had only decreased. When one passed it at night, only a few lights were on.

“The building has seventeen floors and a basement. To avoid any taboos, the developer skipped over the fourteenth floor, so the next floor after thirteen is the fifteenth floor.” Chen Ge looked at the information that he had found. “This building fits the black phone’s requirements perfectly. I suspect it purposely directed me to this place.

“The place that I used to stay at has been demolished, and now that I have grown up, I have to return there to find my old neighbor through this kind of method?”

Chen Ge had a feeling the neighbor that he was looking for would not be alive anymore.

“This mission is related to my parents’ disappearance, so there is no reason to give it up. According to the mission details, as long as I don’t open my eyes, everything will be fine.” Chen Ge put the black phone away. “I can only go alone. I can’t bring any Specters, spirits, or anything related to the Haunted House. Will the ghost fetus discover that I have broken the rules?”

But since that was the black phone’s request, Chen Ge had to follow it. He put on his jacket and found a secure rope in the drawer. He tied one end to himself and the other end to the white cat.

“Other people tie a rope to their pet because they are afraid that they might lose the pet; I’m tying the rope to the cat because I’m afraid I will go to the wrong place and the cat might fail to find me. White Tiger, I’ve been so nice to you. This is finally your time to shine.”

The white cat, which had been snuggling in comfort on the bed, looked at Chen Ge in alarm. Its ears were standing up, and its eyes moved between Chen Ge and the rope.

“Come, let’s go visit somewhere interesting.” Chen Ge was about to grab the white cat, but the cat sank its claws into the bed and refused to let go.

“Aren’t you cats nocturnal animals? What are you doing lazying all night in bed?

“If you don’t take this chance to exercise, you’ll get so overweight that you won’t be able to move!

“Don’t worry! I promise I won’t abandon you no matter what. See this rope? This will be the bond that keeps us together!”

...

“Sir, I’m going to the lightning equipment factory opposite from Jiang Yuan Apartments in Eastern Jiujiang.” Chen Ge sat in the back of the taxi while hugging the white cat. With his previous experience, he knew not to give the name of the dangerous location directly just in case the driver refused to drive him there.

“The place is quite secluded. Plus, why are you going to a factory at night?” The driver studied Chen Ge through the rearview mirror. It was not that he was being too suspicious, but a customer like Chen Ge was too unique. It was 1 am, and he wanted to go to Eastern Jiujiang while carrying a cat.

“My family owns that factory. Something happened, and I have to go check.”

“Hasn’t the factory closed down?” The suspicion increased.

“Yes, that’s why I’m going there. Do you think no one needs to care about it since it’s closed down?” There was annoyance in Chen Ge’s tone like he was not in a good mood.

“I hope you don’t mind me being a busybody, but it’s not that safe in Eastern Jiujiang. Something just happened at the place that you wish to go several days ago.”

“What happened?”

“The residential area across from the factory, I believe it was a drunken husband who accidentally fell from the roof. The scary thing is that it was my colleague who drove him home that night. In any case, the place is just strange.” The driver started the car.

“I don’t believe in all that.” Chen Ge chuckled evenly. “My parents always tell me that with money, even ghosts will do your bidding. If you’re afraid of ghosts, it only means you’re not rich enough.”

The driver was speechless. He stopped trying to persuade Chen Ge, and Chen Ge used this downtime to do more investigation. Half an hour later, the taxi dropped Chen Ge off in Eastern Jiujiang. After paying the fare, Chen Ge hugged the white cat and headed straight for Jiang Yuan Apartments. That definitely gave the driver quite a shock.

“The mission requires me to be here before 2 am.” Chen Ge crossed the road and reached the gates to the residential area. Two apartments stood before him. The surroundings were dark, and it looked isolated. Since moving away, this was Chen Ge’s first time returning there. The place had changed so much from his memory. “Such a big residential area can’t afford a guard?”

The gate was half open, and the guardhouse next to it was sealed and locked. Walking in further, the path was littered with various pamphlets. Only two streetlights were on, and one was flickering nonstop. Chen Ge tilted his head up. There was no light coming from one of the apartment building; it looked deserted. The other building had several lights on the ground floor, and there were clothes hanging on the clotheslines outside the building.

“There’s someone staying here, so there shouldn’t be a problem, but why are all the lights gathered at the ground floor?”

Both of the buildings at Jiang Yuan Apartments fitted the requirement. For safety’s sake, Chen Ge chose the one with people. He hugged the white cat and approached the building. Various notices were stuck to the outside walls. There were some from the owners urging for payment of rent, there were tenants complaining about the condition of the apartment, and there were missing person reports and many other paraphernalia.

“The management is a mess. Has the developer run off with the money?” Chen Ge entered the lobby. The stairs were on the left hand side, and on the right was the elevator. He pressed the button for the elevator, and he could not find the fourteenth floor on the control panel. After confirming that, Chen Ge entered the stairwell. He looked at the steps before him. “Each floor has twenty-six steps, and every thirteen steps, there is a landing for a turn. The height of each step is about...”

He repeated the movement several times for his legs to get used to the climbing.

“The mission needs the building to have a basement and no fourteenth floor. I have to consider these two elements.” Chen Ge leaned on the banister and looked down. “There is a basement floor, but it should be deserted. All the doors are locked. I wonder what it’s for.”

Then he looked up the stairs. The layer overlapped upon layers, like a staircase going up to heaven.

“Only the ground floor and fourth floor have lights. They are not sound activated because they are still on even though it is now deadily quiet.” Chen Ge closed his eyes before opening them again. “Even with my eyes closed, I can sense the change in the light.”

Climbing all the way up with one's eyes closed was difficult; it not only required bravery but also great determination.

"The Nightmare Missions are getting more and more difficult. Is it because I'm getting closer to the truth?"

Since he could not take any ghosts with him, Chen Ge could only make preparation from other perspective. He looked at the time and took out a black cloth from his pocket. "The mission requests for me to close my eyes but it didn't say I can't blindfold myself. This should lower the difficulty slightly."

The black cloth would lower his eyes' sensitivity to light, but even if he was blindfolded, Chen Ge would not sneakily open his eyes during the process because the scary things might crawl through the blindfold. Scratching the white cat's head, Chen Ge placed it on his shoulder. "In a bit, you'll be my eyes. Do not run away from me. If anything particularly scary appears, do not remind me unless the thing is hostile and wants to kill us. Then you can claw or bite me, understood?"

With little time left, Chen Ge did not care whether the white cat understood his order or not. He left it on his shoulder and took out his phone. There were still ten seconds to 2 am. He closed his eyes and then tied the black cloth around his eyes.

"Time to begin."

After closing his eyes, the darkness surrounded him. Chen Ge placed his hands on the wall and took his first step.

After closing his eyes, there was nothing but darkness. The darkness did not represent despair and loneliness; rather, it appeared to be a giant bubble that could envelop all of one's imagination. The line between memory and reality blurred. As he moved step by step up the stairs, the hard shell of reality was slowly being pulled back. Chen Ge understood why all the Nightmare Missions required him to close his eyes to complete them. He was walking into another world; he was going to see the lingering spirits hiding in the background of the real world.

Counting the number of steps in his heart, Chen Ge soon reached the second floor. His fingertips could sense the dust on the wall, and his nose could sniff out the faded smell of mold. The sound of his footsteps echoed in his ears. At that moment, the important sense of sight had been removed, and the world became so different.

White Tiger hasn't reacted strangely so it means that I am in no danger for now. Both ground floor and fourth floor have light, so the real trouble should begin after the fourth floor.

Being blindfolded was not that difficult for Chen Ge. He could picture everything in his brain, and his body had gotten used to the height of the steps. All he needed to do was focus and not let himself be influenced by other things.

I should be on the second floor now.

Moving his feet, Chen Ge was moving up to the third floor when he suddenly heard the sound of an agitated argument coming from one of the families on the second floor.

"All you do is drink! Does your family even care about me and the children? Since the pregnancy, I've never heard a word of concern from any of you. I've paid for every single one of my checkups, and I've suffered more than enough under your mother's attitude!"

“If you feel so badly treated here, leave! If not for the fact that you forgot to lock the front door, Da Bao wouldn’t have gone out and gotten lost!”

“So it’s my fault now? You insisted on leaving at midnight. I am still pregnant with Er Bao. Has your heart been eaten by the dogs?”

“Don’t you dare turn this on me. Let me repeat myself, I was going to work that day!”

The soundproofing of the building was actually not that bad, but the argument was so heated that some physical altercation was involved. About ten seconds later, Chen Ge heard the door open. Someone walked out, and from the sound of footsteps, the person was wearing leather shoes, so it should be the husband. The argument was still in full swing. The man cursed as he slammed the door shut. Footsteps echoed down the corridor, and a heavy cloud of alcohol surrounded Chen Ge. Once the man entered the stairwell, he stopped yelling like he was surprised by Chen Ge, who stood in the stairwell. The footsteps halted before they started to head down and disappear.

How much has the man drunk?

Silence returned, but the alcohol smell did not dissipate. Chen Ge continued to move up. He counted the steps silently, and when he got to the third floor, he noticed that something was off.

How come the smell of alcohol is lingering? Since the man has already left, the smell of alcohol shouldn’t be around anymore... unless he is following behind me!

An image appeared in Chen Ge’s mind. He was walking ahead blindfolded while a drunkard with a befuddled mind and malicious face was following behind him.

When a person is under great pressure, they will bully the weaker party to vent their frustration.

Chen Ge did not turn around. If the man was just a drunkard, it would not be so troublesome, but Chen Ge was afraid that it was something else.

When I was on the way here, the driver said that someone lost their life here not too long ago. The victim was drunk when he died, so the thing following behind me now is probably not a human.

His nose could smell the alcohol, but his ears could not hear any sound.

I've gone up to the third floor, and I've already run into trouble. I still have more than ten floors to go...

Fear could be overcome. What could not be overcome was the unknown. Chen Ge was in this conflicting emotion. This Nightmare Mission was more difficult than he had expected. He was only on the third floor; it should be no problem if he gave up the mission now and ran away. However, if he continued up, the risk of giving up the mission would become greater and greater.

The chance of getting new Nightmare Mission is very low. If I give up now, who knows when I will next get one?

After stopping for a while on the third floor, Chen Ge started moving to the fourth floor. After getting closer to the light, even with his eyes closed, Chen Ge could feel the change in the brightness. He was sure that he was on the fourth floor.

I've gone through one quarter of the mission, and so far, there have been no problems.

Holding the wall, Chen Ge carefully moved toward the fifth floor. When he lifted his feet, his shoes knocked into something. The sound as it toppled over was crisp. It sounded like a china bowl. He bent over slowly and searched on the ground. His fingertips touched an apple, cooked rice, and two wooden chopsticks. The chopsticks were stuck inside the rice, and one end of it was sticky.

Someone laid out this ritualistic food on the stairwell? Has something happened on this floor as well?

Only the ground floor and fourth floor had lights on, so one's mind could not help but wonder. After replacing the bowl and chopsticks, Chen Ge bowed at the location of the temporary shrine.

"Please forgive me. If you need compensation, you can follow me home when I leave. Feel free to take anything that you like."

Then, Chen Ge left the fourth floor and went up to the fifth floor. The last shred of light disappeared, and Chen Ge felt the light coming from behind him as he slowly moved up. The fifth floor and sixth floor went by. When he reached the seventh floor, the smell of alcohol disappeared.

He left? If it was the man who died days ago, this sudden departure can only mean that there is something scarier on the seventh floor and above, and he doesn't dare follow me further. The other possibility is that there is something scary standing before him, and this new thing has scared the man away.

Knowing that something was before him but being unable to see it placed Chen Ge in a helpless situation.

Since the white cat gave no warning, it should be fine.

Chen Ge slightly bent over to lower his center of gravity to prevent himself from tripping. Slowing down, Chen Ge nudged slowly upward. When he raised his arms to the walls again, he was stumped. The sensation that came from his fingertips was not the coldness of the wall, but it had a buoyancy to it like human skin. He stood there for about several seconds before Chen Ge slowly moved his fingers, and through the sense of touch, he confirmed that he was touching a human face!

His Adam's apple quivered as his body petrified. If this was any other person, they would be screaming, but Chen Ge did not do that; he tried to maintain his calm. His fingers pinched slightly, and through that, Chen Ge understood two things. One, this was a child's face; two, the face had no warmth like it had been taken out from the fridge, so it was not a living human.

The face has a sharp nose. I think I have an impression of this face.

Chen Ge remembered that when he entered the lobby, there was a missing person notice on the wall. The kid in the notice had such a face.

Chapter 945 - Who's Pulling on Me?

Chapter 945: Who's Pulling on Me?

With the mortician and dollmaker talents and the experience of making hundreds of mannequins, he had faith in his prediction.

This face is eighty percent similar to the face of the child in the notices, but the question is, why is his face here on the wall? Has the child been killed and the body is somehow related to the wall?

Pulling his arms back, Chen Ge stood where he was. The surroundings were quiet; there was no sound and no special smell.

The husband and wife argued that they had lost a son. The child's name was Da Bao, so the missing person notice might be theirs. They've lost their child, but I felt the child's face when going up the stairs. Did the child return to this building after turning into a ghost, or was he killed inside this building? Could the killer be one of the tenants?

The more Chen Ge considered it, the more likely it became. The husband left at midnight, and the wife who was pregnant with the second child chased after him without locking the door. Under normal circumstances, the child who was left alone at home would not sneak out alone unless he saw something or someone familiar calling him.

Could the killer be the neighbor?

The word 'neighbor' was a common term, but it carried a different meaning for Chen Ge now because the Nightmare Mission that he was conducting now was named 'Neighbor'. Taking another step forward, Chen Ge still felt it safer to move by the wall, but when his palm was about to touch the wall, he halted. His experience earlier left a trauma in his heart. He was afraid that he might touch something unsightly again. His fingers dropped on the wall, and after touching the cold, hard wall, Chen Ge sighed in relief. If not necessary, he did not want to touch any more 'people'.

I'm only here to complete my mission. There is no need to unravel the mystery that happened here. I only need to keep my eyes closed and head to the top floor. Everything else has nothing to do with me.

Chen Ge convinced himself as he continued to move forward. When he moved his body, he felt something pull on his shirt.

Is it the child?

He froze on the steps. His eyes were blindfolded, so he could not see anything; he could only wait for the other person to let go.

After five seconds, Chen Ge took another step forward, and he could clearly feel a force pulling from behind him. The person did not plan to let him go, and Chen Ge was not going to force his way through this. He took one step back and felt that the force had weakened greatly.

It appears like something doesn't want him to leave?

A scary thought appeared in his mind. Chen Ge slowly squatted down and whispered behind him, "Da Bao?"

The pulling force disappeared for a moment, but it soon returned.

"Is it really you?" Chen Ge tried to speak as slow as he could. "Your parents are looking for you. You'd better go home."

Perhaps the sentence triggered the boy because the force started to pull heavily like the boy was trying to drag Chen Ge into the wall.

"Wait, if you don't like your parents and don't want to go home, I can stay to accompany you!" Chen Ge instantly changed tact. "Actually, my childhood was not that memorable either. My parents always argued due to some small issues. Seeing them in that state, I only wanted to curl up in a corner. Other families were so happy and joyful, but my family was always so lonely and cold. Even if the three of us occasionally got together, it always ended up in an argument."

What Chen Ge said seemed to work; he could feel the force weakening.

"Arguing, throwing things around the room, they would sometimes vent their anger on me. The constant arguing made me live my life very carefully; I didn't dare cry too loudly." Chen Ge sighed with regret. "Even though I am much older now, I'll never forget that experience. The wounds haven't been healed by time, but as time moved on, I have slowly learned to coexist with the pain.”

Chen Ge squatted on the stairs and turned around to face the darkness, mumbling, “Isn’t it sad? I am just a child. I cannot get an adult’s love, but I have to force myself to be a responsible adult.”

The force slowly weakened; the words seemed to find resonance in the child.

“I’ve experienced that loneliness before, so I became very sensitive and cautious to everything. I know how bad that feels, but if you don’t mind, I can be your friend. I do not wish for you to experience the things that I’ve had to go through.”

The force completely disappeared. Chen Ge maintained his posture. The adult’s response was a mirror for a child. A good response could help the child see the good in themselves, but a bad response would be like a concave mirror, leaving a contorted impression on the child’s growing mind.

Even though Chen Ge was childless, he had interacted with children many times, and he knew how to form a bond with them. Da Bao came from a sad family background. If it was within his power, Chen Ge was willing to help the child. There was no more sound, and there was no pull on his shirt. The child seemed to have left. Chen Ge could not see anything. His hands pressed against the wall, and he did not feel anything weird.

“Don’t worry, I’m not leaving you behind. I’m just going to the roof. After I’m done, I’ll be back.”

After saying that to the darkness, Chen Ge slowly stood up. He was about to continue climbing the stairs when his hand near the banister felt a chill like someone had stuffed a piece of ice into his palm. His fingers trembled. Chen Ge was sure that someone had grabbed his hand. Goosebumps appeared on his neck, and Chen Ge stopped for two seconds before gripping the small hand tighter. “We can go together. You have to promise me one thing. If there’s danger, you have to run and ignore me, okay?”

With that hand holding him, Chen Ge continued to move up. He successfully moved from the seventh floor to the eleventh floor without any accidents. But when he reached the eleventh floor, the elevator down the corridor rang with a ding as the doors opened. Someone had used the elevator to come to the eleventh floor at midnight. It was unclear whether it was a person or a ghost. To prevent any unnecessary misunderstandings, Chen Ge stopped moving.

Footsteps appeared in the eleventh-floor corridor. Then came the sound of keys brushing against one another, followed by the key entering the lock. The spring loosened, and the door opened. Just as Chen Ge thought that the person was entering the room, a giant force came from the corridor. Someone was pulling him by his left arm like they were trying to drag Chen Ge into the door that had just opened!

His body lost its balance. Chen Ge would have fallen if not for the force that pulled on his right hand trying its darnedest to stop Chen Ge from being dragged away.

Chapter 946 - So Cold

Chapter 946: So Cold

Even though Chen Ge had no idea what was in the corridor, he knew that he could not allow himself to be dragged into the room. His arms were pulled, and his eyes were blindfolded. Chen Ge could only kick at what believed to be the direction of the corridor. His feet made contact with something, and the pain jolted Chen Ge awake. “White Tiger! Bite it!”

All that Chen Ge could trust now was the white cat, but the strange thing was, the cat that laid on his shoulders did not move at all. He could feel the cat’s weight on his shoulder not shifting.

His body was dragged on both sides, and this held on for almost half a minute when Chen Ge heard a man say, “Don’t you want to live? I am trying to save you! There is a ghost in the stairwell!”

Following the voice, the pull on Chen Ge’s arm increased. Now Chen Ge was given a choice, to follow the man’s voice into the corridor or continue up the stairs. In less than a second, he made the choice and shouted, “It was human beings who pushed them to their death, so why should I be afraid of ghosts? If you really want to save me, let go!”

At that crucial moment, Chen Ge chose to stay in the stairwell. He was willing to stay with the ghost whose identity he had confirmed over leaving with a random ‘human’ stranger. The pull on his arm dwindled until the door clicked. The man who wanted to drag Chen Ge into the room appeared to have left.

Is he that desperate to find a scapegoat? The last one who had that intention is still trapped inside a painting.

Chen Ge slowly stood up.

The sound of the door closing was very, close so it means the man’s room is very close to the stairwell. I’ll be sure to return tomorrow with my employees to pay a visit.

He waved his arms about. He touched the bannister and wall to confirm his location.

“Thank you for your help earlier,” Chen Ge said to the space next to him. No one was pulling on his hand anymore, so he was not sure whether the boy was still there or not. “Da Bao?”

There was no reply. Chen Ge waited for a while before moving up again.

The situation is worse than I thought. I thought this place would have at most three Specters and some lingering spirits, but it looks like I was being overly optimistic.

Lingering spirits would have a hard time interacting physically with human beings, so both the man who grabbed Chen Ge’s arm and the boy were Specters. He had only gone up to the eleventh floor, and he had already run into two Specters; this would only get worse. When Chen Ge came to the space between eleventh and twelfth floors, he felt something under his feet. It felt wet.

Puddles? There is no light in the upper part of the building, so why would there be a puddle on the stairs? Could it be a broken pipe?

Chen Ge could confirm that he was not stepping on blood because blood dried very quickly. The blood used at his own Haunted House was all diluted with thinner.

This should be water.

When that thought crossed his mind, he felt chill on his cheeks, like water was dripping on his face. Before he reached out to touch his face, the chill moved to his ankles like a snake had just slithered up his leg.

What is going on?

The air turned damp, and moisture stuck to his skin. When Chen Ge was contemplating this change, a woman’s voice suddenly came from above.

“So cold...” The voice was light and shaking.

There’s something before me?

Chen Ge slowed down, and his brain spun. The air around him filled with vapor. Did the person feel cold because her death was related to water, or was her body stored inside a freezer? Chen Ge thought about a lot in a few minutes. He continued to move forward. Just as he was about to pass the source of the voice, he felt both of his legs freeze. The chill spread along his spine like something was crawling up his back.

“So cold, so cold...” The shivering voice now echoed behind Chen Ge, like she was following him, just one step behind him. Standing with his eyes closed in the staircase, he could not see anything, but he could sense someone standing behind him. With each step, the person behind him also took one step forward. The chilling feeling did not dissipate and only grew stronger. Chen Ge did not act rashly; he slowly raised his hand to undo the button of his jacket. He undid the buttons one by one and removed his jacket before turning to cover the person behind him. “Put this on, stranger. I can’t help you change what’s already happened, but I hope this jacket can bring you some warmth.”

The jacket landed on something. Perhaps Chen Ge’s action was so sudden that the thing could not react.

“Other than this stupid cat, I have nothing. I see death very lightly, but that doesn’t influence my love for life.” Chen Ge held the wall and slowly squatted down until he sat on the steps. “This night is long and boring; would you like to chat?”

With his eyes blindfolded, Chen Ge could not see anything. Without any employees or tools, he could not do anything. However, he did not feel helpless. He leaned against the wall. In the damp, eerie stairwell, his smile appeared so bright and unusual.

“If you don’t mind, please sit next to me.” Chen Ge tapped the spot next to him lightly. “I know how loneliness feels, and I envy those who can joke with their friends and have endless topics to chat about. Seeing their joy, I will always find a secluded corner to be by myself. That is how I like it. Eventually, people got used to it. To be honest, you’re the first one who I have chatted so closely with for so long.”

His lips moved, and Chen Ge turned to look next to him. “Can you stay for a chat?”

Some shuffling entered his ears, and Chen Ge’s finger brushed against his own jacket. The ‘stranger’ who had been following him sat down next to him on the step.

“Thank you for accompanying me. I am not a people person, but do you mind telling me your story?”

His tone was sincere with an undercurrent of pleading.

“My body is pressed together. It’s very cold. I cannot even hug myself...”

“Where are you? Can I go find you? How can I help you?” Chen Ge sincerely wished to help. There was at least another murder case hidden in this building.

“My head is placed behind my back, my arms are folded together, and my legs are on the second floor. He used to hate me. It was not until he raised the cleaver that he smiled. He said that he finally found the upside to an anorexic girl. That was a rare compliment. He said, since I am so small and thin, I will be easy to hide.”

“That day, he told me many things that he normally wouldn’t.”

“Is this man you mention still living here?” Chen Ge could hear the quiver in the voice.

“He has already moved away and hasn’t returned for a long time.”

“Then, would you like to meet him?” Chen Ge pulled on the jacket. “I believe you have many things you wish to say to him. After all, he’s the one who put you in this situation where you can’t even feel warmth.”

“I...”

“It’s okay. I will help. Trust me.” Chen Ge held the wall and slowly stood up. “If he hasn’t left Jiujiang, within one week, I will bring him back. After you reunite with him, I will bring you to someplace warmer.”

The woman did not answer, but Chen Ge was in no hurry. “Now I have one more reason to be alive. Keep the jacket. I will be back.”

Chen Ge was about to move up when the woman said, “Don’t go up anymore. You won’t be able to return.”

“Won’t be able to return? Why?”

“Because above the thirteenth floor is the fourteenth floor.” A jacket was stuffed into Chen Ge’s hand, and the chilling feeling slowly disappeared.

What is she trying to tell me? Chen Ge gripped the jacket tightly. Jiang Yuan Apartments doesn’t have the fourteenth floor. It should be the fifteenth floor after thirteenth floor, but she said that fourteenth floor follows the thirteenth floor. So, does the fourteenth floor really exist?

Chen Ge would not surrender at this point; he knew that he was very close to the truth. Counting the steps, Chen Ge came to the thirteenth floor. This level was quiet, like a normal apartment building with nothing extraordinary. He moved up to the fourteenth floor. When he was halfway up the steps, his nostrils twitched because he smelt the scent of food. It was unknown what dish it was, but his brain was able to tell this was a lavish dinner, impressed upon his memory.

This wafted down from the fourteenth floor. Is someone cooking?

Moving up step by step, perhaps due to physical or mental exhaustion, Chen Ge felt like there were so many steps between the thirteenth and fourteenth floor. The number of steps was similar to other floors, but for some reason, it took him much longer. Under his fingertips, the smooth surface of the wall started to crack. There appeared to be changes in the corridor. Everything gave Chen Ge a familiar yet strange feeling.

He mechanically lifted his leg, and with the smell of dinner on his nose, he finally reached the fourteenth floor. When he found footing, the doorknob in the corridor turned noisily. An iron door was opened, and then a male voice came from the deeper part of the corridor.

“Chen Ge, welcome home.”

When he heard that voice, Chen Ge’s voice blanked out. He whipped his body around to face the corridor. He had heard that man’s voice for about twenty years. This sentence... he had heard it so many times when he was young. He had memorized his voice inside his heart and carved it onto his bones.

“Dinner is ready. When you were coming up the stairs, your mom heard you.” His nails cut into his palm, and Chen Ge slowly raised his arms to grab at that black cloth. He just wanted to take a look. He had never been so desperate to see something. The hands on the cloth tightened until the veins burst on the back of his hands.

“How was your first day at school?”

“We’re sorry we couldn’t pick you up.”

“You weren’t bullied, right?”

“Have you made some new friends? You’re so much like me, so you should be so popular in class!”

“Go and wash your hands. Don’t run around...”

The words drifted out from the corridor until the doorknob turned, and the door closed. The man's voice disappeared, and other people's voices appeared in the corridor. There was a male and a female, young and old.

"What is wrong with that new family who just moved in? They leave after their child goes to sleep every midnight. No wonder the child suffers from nightmares."

"Haven't you heard? During the day, the house is filled with laughter, but at night, it's just crying. Won't the child be afraid to be left at home alone at night?"

"This is strange. I saw all three of them leave in the morning. Why would there be crying at night?"

"Bros! I found something. It's not the adults that are problematic with the new family; it's the child! I saw the doctor from some Xin Hai hospital who came to treat the child! You mustn't let your children play with him!"

"How come, after the doctor's visit, the child has been even sicker? Do you know? The child tells his parents about his nightmares, and when his parents are not at home at night, he repeats the nightmare to his own shadow. How scary is that?"

"Something's not right, if he doesn't sleep in the day or night, when does he have the time to experience nightmares? Is the child really talking about his dream?"

"Don't scare me like that. Never mind, they are moving away in a few days anyway."

"They're moving?"

"Yes, I hear they're going to Western Jiujiang, the parents are going to work for a theme park."

The voices slowly drifted into the background. Chen Ge stood where he was with his hands still on the black cloth. After a while, Chen Ge took a deep breath.

I only remember the good things. I've blocked out most of the things the neighbor said about me. But there are a few key points I should consider.

When I was small, I interacted with a doctor from Xin Hai Hospital. It was after his treatment that I started talking with my own shadow. It should be then that my shadow turned strange. The key to everything is that doctor. The doctor came from Xin Hai, and the cursed hospital is between Xin Hai and Jiujiang. Could this be a coincidence?

Standing on the fourteenth floor, Chen Ge slowly turned around to face away from the corridors with many voices. His hands that grabbed the black cloth tightened, and then he removed the slightly wet cloth. But his eyes were still closed.

“I really wish to open my eyes and see you, but I know that is impossible.” Chen Ge did not turn back. With his hand on the wall, he continued to move up. “You once gave up everything for me, so now I will use everything I have to find you.”

In the dark corridor, Chen Ge looked different from usual. Fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth...

Counting the number of steps in his heart, Chen Ge knew that he was now on the seventeenth floor. Theoretically, this was the top floor of this building, but he did not hurry to open his eyes.

The fourteenth doesn't exist, but the girl with the cold told me above the thirteenth floor is the fourteenth floor. This building originally had seventeen floors, but if one includes the additional fourteenth floor, there should be eighteen floors like eighteen layers of hell.

Chen Ge nudged his feet. Soon, his toe found the steps that led upward.

So, there is an eighteenth floor.

His raised leg lowered. It was a simple action, but that was quite taxing for Chen Ge. He felt lightheaded, like many things were pressed on his body, and there was this force that was trying to pull him back. Chen Ge did not know what was hiding in the dark, and he had no idea whether there were any ghosts around him. But sometimes, not seeing was better because that would not affect his emotions. It took him several minutes to move from the seventeenth floor to the eighteenth floor. When Chen Ge successfully reached the eighteenth floor, he almost tripped.

I feel so cold and dizzy.

Chen Ge was very tired, and it was a mental exhaustion like he had been working at a stressful job for more than ten hours.

I should be on the top floor already.

Chen Ge's fingers held the wall. He had not opened his eyes. For the sake of security, he bent over and used his hands to seek out the wall and floor, leaving no stone unturned. After experiencing so much, he would not fail at the final hurdle. When Chen Ge was searching around, there came a sudden door opening sound from downstairs, and it rang out quite clearly in the quiet stairwell. The iron door was slowly opened, and two footsteps appeared in the stairwell.

Is someone coming up? Chen Ge instantly became nervous. The sound of the door probably came from the fourteenth or fifteenth floors. Could it be the neighbors?

The footsteps sounded urgent as they approached the stairwell. It was as if they were forcing Chen Ge to open his eyes to end the mission.

The sound has reached the sixteenth floor.

Chen Ge's forehead was breaking out in cold sweat. He leaned against the wall and was panicking slightly.

Should I open my eyes? Theoretically, I've reached the top floor, and I can't find any stairs to take me further up.

While he hesitated, the footsteps already reached the seventeenth floor. Chen Ge stood at the corner, facing the stairwell, and his eyes were closed. The footsteps were coming quickly. They appeared at the landing between seventeenth and eighteenth floor, so they should have seen Chen Ge already.

I've been discovered, but the footsteps didn't stop, so I'm probably not that their target.

A familiar laughter appeared in his ears, and soon, those footsteps walked past Chen Ge, and one of the doors on eighteenth floor was opened!

Wind caressed Chen Ge's face, and the tiredness that he felt slowly disappeared, like the things that had been hanging on to him had left.

Is it over?

He wanted to open his eyes, but the sound of footsteps and children laughing were still there. The laughter gave him an indescribable feeling. He could not sense any joy from the laughter. It was very hollow. He sought his way to the open door blindly. Chen Ge stood at the door, and a child's voice came from the other side of the door.

"Uncle, I just had a dream. In the dream, there is a red city floating in a black sea. Everyone in the city is walking around with blades to cut their own bodies and bury their memories."

"Uncle, human beings exist due to their memories, but if human beings have forgotten them, will the memories get angry?"

"Uncle, are you listening to me?"

The child's voice was near Chen Ge. Chen Ge even felt that the child was talking to him. He was about to speak when an unfamiliar male voice answered.

"I am." The man's voice did not carry any emotion. It was detached and cold like a machine. "The memories will not be angry. When they appear, they are destined to be forgotten. That is their ending."

“Destined to be forgotten?”

“Yes, just like you.” After the man saying that, the child laughed again.

“Why do you like to laugh so much?” There was annoyance in the man’s voice.

“Because I’m happy. My father told me everything I saw is a nightmare, and those scary things are all in my dreams. They will disappear when I wake up. Shouldn’t I be happy about that?” The child’s voice had an innocence to it.

“A nightmare?” The man’s tone turned icier. “One day, if you realize that it’s not a nightmare and is all real, will you still laugh like this?”

“I don’t know, perhaps.”

“If you one day realize that you have been abandoned in that red city and have no way of return, will you still laugh?”

“I...”

“You will never laugh again. You will curse the world madly, like the memories that have been abandoned by their owner, enveloped by negative emotion, sinking deeper and deeper into that dark ocean.” There was an excitement in the man’s voice. Beneath his detached tone hid a twisted soul.

“No, I won’t.” The child’s innocent voice belied a maturity beyond his years. He took a long time to consider before saying, “If I am really forgotten in my nightmare one day, I will paint a window on that black sea and open all the doors in the red city so that all the eyes that have gotten used to the darkness will get the chance to see the light.”

When the child ended the sentence, Chen Ge was struck by a sense of déjà vu, like he had personally said that before. His eyelids twitched. Chen Ge took one involuntarily step forward. He instinctively wanted to reach out to grab that voice.

“With light comes darkness. If you wish for darkness to see the light, the light will turn into darkness.” The man appeared to have grabbed hold of the child.

“Let me go!”

“You’re the one who should let go. Do not come back again!”

“Let go! Help! Help!”

“You will ultimately be forgotten, so don’t worry and die!”

When the man said that, Chen Ge’s body froze. A voice was calling from the bottom of his heart. “Help!”

His eyes flew open, and Chen Ge saw at the edge of the roof, a doctor in white coat was pushing his young self off the edge of the building!

He rushed to the edge, but when he reached out, everything disappeared. His energy deserted him, and Chen Ge crumbled to the ground. His clothes were soaked in cold sweat.

“When I did the nightmare mission at the tunnel, I also saw my young self being killed. This is the second time already. The killer has the same appearance from the back, so they should be the same person. He wore a doctor’s garb, so he should be the doctor from Xin Hai. But why would he kill me? What is the meaning of their conversation?”

A headache was killing him. After closing his eyes for so long, Chen Ge was still getting used to the light.

He was curled up at the wall, and he rubbed his eyes. When his vision returned to normal, he turned and tried to grab the white cat. But his head was only half turned when his body froze. Two dried hands touched his face, and a blood red shirt almost brushed past the tip of Chen Ge’s nose. A Red Specter was holding onto Chen Ge’s shoulder, hanging by his back!

“It was you who left the half open door at Jiang Yuan Apartments, wasn’t it?” A child’s voice appeared from behind Chen Ge.

“I can’t remember.” Only then did Chen Ge see the white cat almost crying on his shoulder. The cat did not dare budge; those who did not know would think it was a science specimen. The white cat had always been there, but it did not warn him. That could only mean that the Red Specter had shown up when he first closed his eyes.

The white cat was lying on his left shoulder, so the Red Specter was hanging on his right shoulder?

Chapter 949: When You're Feeling Down, Visit Someone Else's Theme Park

His scalp was going numb, and his brain was fuzzy. Chen Ge did not dare to turn around; he was afraid of saying something wrong and getting killed immediately. "I am not sure what you're talking about."

"Twenty years ago, there was a door that was about to open in Jiang Yuan Apartments, but no one knew about its location. The only known info is that it is within this area. The area has been rebuilt, but the door still hasn't closed. Negative emotions kept coming out from behind the door and attracting the ghosts and Specters that pass by. The poor 'people' that you met are gathered here because of that door, and it was because of that door that I was lucky enough to become a Red Specter."

"Now that you put it that way, perhaps that door is really related to me," Chen Ge answered carefully. "But I have forgotten many things, so I cannot be sure of it. If you can give me more hints, perhaps I can be reminded of something."

"It was a door that was half open, this is the first time I've seen a door like that. It was like when someone was about to push the door open, salvation suddenly came for him." The dried hands tightened their grip, and the Red Specter's voice appeared in Chen Ge's ears. "Only when one is in deepest despair can a door be pushed open. That kind of despair shall never be saved."

Chen Ge memorized the Red Specters' every word. He might not understand everything now, but with some investigation, he might understand more of its meaning.

"I really can't remember anything now. Have you entered the door? What is inside the door?" Chen Ge started to ask questions. It was mainly because he had seen too many Red Specters, and the fear in his heart was slowly replaced by a feeling like he was chatting with an old friend.

“You want to know what’s inside the door?” The dried hands pressed on Chen Ge’s neck. “Haven’t you just seen it?”

“Me? Seen it?” Chen Ge widened his eyes. “Fourteenth floor? The world behind the door is my home?”

“Yes, that was your home, but now it is my home now.” The malnourished fingers were like knives slowly piercing into Chen Ge’s neck. “I helped you push the door open, but I failed to become the door pusher. I’ve been thinking about it, and now I get it. Perhaps that’s because the real door pusher is still alive. Only by killing him can I officially take over the door.”

“Calm down. Let me think about this. Perhaps I have no relation to that door at all! Really! How could a person like me who is so bright and sunny be in such despair to push open a door?”

“But when you showed up, the door opened on its own, and voices that I haven’t heard before came out from behind it.” The hands of the Red Specter had a tighter strangle.

“Fine, I cannot deny the relationship between me and the door, but it wasn’t me who pushed the door open. If you want to look for the real door-pusher, I can help you.” Chen Ge pointed at the edge of the roof. “You saw it yourself. The child who was pushed down the building should be the real door pusher. I am looking for him as well.”

“Your lies will not fool me. The scenario behind the door is weaved from the memory of the door pusher. The voices that you heard on the fourteenth floor and the scene you saw on the roof were memories from the deepest part of your heart. Those are all your memories; that’s why you saw yourself in them.”

The Red Specter’s statement accidentally reminded Chen Ge. A light shone through his mind. “Memories?”

The things that he should have forgotten were retained in the door. Even though the scenario was despairing, it was his memory.

“I think I get it now.” Chen Ge’s eyes narrowed. “The red city contains many different scenarios, and each scenario is created by the door pusher. The scenarios are created from the door pushers’ despairing memories. The younger version of myself said one thing on the roof earlier—human beings exist due to their memories, but if human beings have forgotten them, will the memories get angry? Human, ghost, memory, lingering spirit...”

“Are those your final words?”

“Wait!” Hearing the Red Specter’s voice, Chen Ge snapped into focus. “You saw the scenario earlier; the memory wouldn’t lie. The real door pusher has been pushed off the building by the doctor. He is already dead. The real reason you haven’t taken over the door is because his lingering spirit is still around.”

Chen Ge’s words made sense, but that was not enough to convince the Red Specter.

“I know, it’s pointless for me to say any more. I will not give you any fake promises, but I hope you can give me several days to go and find the real door pusher.”

The Red Specter behind him did not speak, so Chen Ge quickly added, “If you think several days is too long, how about we make it twenty-four hours? I really need to go home to confirm some things. If you are that worried, you can come with me. You can hide in my shadow to watch over me. My life will be in your hands.”

The pain around his neck lessened. The Red Specter was slowly persuaded even though he still had not said anything. The silence continued for several minutes. Then Chen Ge appeared to give up. He slowly raised his hands. “Fine, looks like you’re not going to let me go. Then, can I ask for one last little favor?”

“Speak.”

“Give me a few minutes to call the police. In the stairwell, I promised to help find the girl’s killer. Since I can’t do that, I at least have to leave her with some hope. I can’t allow her to stay in that frozen condition.” Chen Ge took out his phone. The Red Specter did not object to it. After some time, the dried hands moved away, “Three days. In three days, at 2 am, I will wait for you on the fourteenth floor.”

The pressure slowly disappeared. The iron door that headed to the roof was slammed shut, and everything returned to normal.

Chen Ge was standing where he was, but the white cat on his shoulder could not suffer it anymore. Probably because it had held the same posture for so long, the white cat unnaturally jumped onto the ground. Its body appeared to be frozen. It was limping while it walked.

Seeing the white cat starting to move around, Chen Ge sighed in relief. He slid down the wall.

“You’re really useless! The Specter was lying on my shoulder. Shouldn’t you at least warn me about something that serious?”

“Meow?”

The white cat was angry when it saw Chen Ge. It circled around him and howled angrily as if saying, “How about you try lying next to a Red Specter for once?”

The man and the cat argued for a while, and Chen Ge recovered somewhat. He put on the jacket and reached out to hug the white cat. Going back down was impossible, and he did not think taking the elevator was a good idea, so Chen Ge decided to wait for dawn to arrive.

“This was such a scary night. After the sun comes up, I’ll have to go to the futuristic theme park for some necessary relaxation...”

Dawn started to arrive for the day, and the first ray of sunlight appeared on the horizon.

...

Hugging the cat, Chen Ge re-entered the stairwell. The stairwell was empty, and it felt scary.

“It’s hard to imagine I was walking up here with my eyes blindfolded yesterday.”

With a few sighs, Chen Ge took the elevator and left Jiang Yuan Apartments. At the same time, he received the notification of the mission’s completion on the black phone.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored, for completing the Daily Nightmare Mission. You have gained a new talent—Spirit Sniff!

“Yin Yang Vision allows you to see the color of dreams, Ghost Ears allow you to hear the voices of memories, and Spirit Sniff allows you to smell the scent of emotions. Mortician’s Make Up allows you to disguise yourself or others as withering ghosts, and Living Dolls allows you to create the shell for homeless spirit. Currently, you are lacking one last ability. Be quick and unlock the last mission. Hopefully, you will know the answer before death catches up to you.”

After completing the Nightmare Mission, the black phone awarded Chen Ge with another power, and from the name, it was related to his sense of smell. Chen Ge touched his nose and did not sense any difference from before. Perhaps his ability to discern between different smells had gotten stronger.

“Different emotions will have different scents?” Chen Ge sniffed at the white cat but was pushed away by the annoyed creature. He did not mind it; he put away the black phone and took out his own phone.

“Hello? Is it the Eastern Jiujiang Police Station? I wish to make a report. There’s been a murder at Jiang Yuan Apartments.”

“Yes, and it should be a female victim. The hiding spot should be inside a fridge. I suggest you investigate rooms that are supposed to be empty but have to pay exorbitant electrical fees.”

“How do I know all this? Even if I tell you the truth and say that it was the victim herself who told me, I don’t think you’d believe me.”

...

He hailed a taxi to get back to New Century Park. Chen Ge had not gotten a wink for the night, but he did not feel sleepy at all. He looked at the time and started to prepare for work.

My Haunted House needs to operate like normal, so I can’t take too many employees with me. I need to leave behind Ol’ Bai and the rest to maintain order.

Pushing open the door that headed underground, Chen Ge entered it with the backpack.

Other than Ol’ Bai, I will have to bring all the other Red Specters with me, or else if they go on a rampage, the remaining Specters won’t be able to stop them.

With the help of Tong Tong, Chen Ge placed the pair of red high heels and the recorder into the backpack, and then he had the boy with the stench and the headless woman enter Yan Danian’s comic.

The headless woman has improved a lot, but she is a bit too by the books. She was probably scarred by her experience with Zhang Ya. This can’t continue. I will have to teach her how to be more rounded around the visitors. Red Specters have personality issues, but I can borrow this perfect chance for them to learn how to relax. We will all go for a stroll. Hopefully, through this kind of activity, it will help build a correct team vision. If that’s the case, I won’t worry leaving them behind at the Haunted House anymore.

When he flipped through the comic, Chen Ge's eyes shone. He saw a person whom he had almost forgotten—Qiu Mei.

Before entering the School of the Afterlife, Chen Ge once received a mission related to a Dead Man's Theatre. It was at that scenario that he had been introduced to Chang Gu, and during the showing of the movies, he was privy to the presence of Qiu Mei. This Half Red Specter could be considered a sacrifice in Chang Wenyu's plan. Tragedy had befallen her, and her left eye had been dug out. Worst of all, she still did not know the truth.

When Chang Gu wakes up, I'll have to take Qiu Mei to have a good conversation with him.

Qiu Mei was just a Half Red Specter, but her ability was very unique. That time, she had been in possession of Chang Gu's movies, and she had shown off skills that could rival a Red Specter.

Oh well, I will bring her with me. Her power should be able to come into good use at the futuristic theme park.

Chen Ge handed the management responsibility over to Doctor Wei and had Ol' Bai remain to quiet down the restless spirits. After ensuring that there would be no more problems, Chen Ge walked out from the underground scenario. He carried the backpack into the staff breakroom. Chen Ge lay on the bed to rest for a while. When all the employees arrived, he briefed them on his plan.

"Today, I will be going to the futuristic theme park for an educational exchange, so the rest of you will stay back to help me watch over the Haunted House. If there are no accidents, I should be back by noon."

After putting make-up on all the employees, Chen Ge was about to leave the Haunted House when he was stopped by Director Luo. "Chen Ge! Wait a moment!"

"Director Luo, what's wrong?"

"I just got the news that the futuristic theme park plans to use some underhanded tricks for your visit. Moreover, their Haunted House does not employ conventional methods. They combine it with new technology, so you must be careful." Director Luo was still very worried. "How about I ask several people to go with you? I really don't feel good letting you do this alone."

“Don’t worry, I have done plenty of preparation. Furthermore, the theme park is lacking manpower now. There is no need to ruin the arrangement because of me.” Chen Ge swung the backpack on his back. “I’ll be going.”

After dealing with everything, Chen Ge called a taxi to head to Eastern Jiujiang’s futuristic theme park. He had just crossed the path that connected Eastern and Western Jiujiang the previous night, so he had a familiar feeling as he travelled down the same path. The futuristic theme park was built at the busiest part of Eastern Jiujiang. It was adjacent to two large rivers. Across the river was Xin Hai City, and once the bridge crossing the river was built, the location of the futuristic theme park would be the prime location that sat right in the middle of all the cities.

I’ll give this to them—they do know how to pick their location.

The futuristic theme park’s current location might not be as good as New Century Park’s now, but that would quickly change in the future. Narrowing his eyes, the outline of the futuristic theme park appeared in Chen Ge’s sight, it looked like a city from the future that was incredibly artistic. Even from the distance, he could hear the sounds coming from theme park. That showed how popular the theme park was.

The theme park is quite impressive. It will be incredibly hard to resist the pressure that they bring.

Only when he arrived at the futuristic theme park did Chen Ge realize how powerful their adversary was.

No wonder they haven’t been treating New Century Park seriously.

The parking lot was full, and there were people everywhere. There were many tourist buses that herded visiting groups to this place. The futuristic theme park had their own system. Their customer pool was not limited to Jiujiang and the neighboring cities.

Walking to the entrance alone, Chen Ge was not as cocky as Liu Gang. But sometimes, even if one wanted to stay low profile, it was impossible. He used his ID to purchase the ticket at the auto seller machine. All the tickets there were sold by machines, and everyone was queueing up. But when he pressed his ID on a machine that had been working normally, the machine suddenly lit up with a red light. Three workers from the theme park then ran toward him.

“Is the machine broken?”

“What’s the meaning of this? Do we have a criminal among us?”

Chen Ge himself was as confused. When the three arrived, they surrounded Chen Ge. One of them said with a professional fake smile, “Mr. Chen Ge, we have been waiting so long for you. The Reincarnation scenario is already ready. Please follow us.”

“Okay then.” Chen Ge saved the ticket money. He looked at the price information and then only realized that the selling price for the ticket at the futuristic theme park was at least 1.5 times the price of a ticket for New Century Park. He was led down the staff pathway to the interior of the theme park. Many strange themed plazas appeared before his eyes, and together, they formed this futuristic city.

“The building for the reincarnation theme attraction is at the deepest part of theme park. Our people have already finished designing it.” The three workers led Chen Ge through the crowd and came to the Haunted House at the futuristic theme park, a themed building that was named Reincarnation. When Chen Ge arrived, there was already a bustling crowd outside the building, but most of them were workers from the park. They all looked like they were ready to jump and attack Chen Ge. However, they probably did not expect that Chen Ge would come alone, so all the workers had this feeling that perhaps they had overestimated their enemy.

A man in his thirties walked over from the building's entrance to introduce himself. "Nice to meet you, I am one of the designers of this Reincarnation themed building. You can call me Qing Ming."

"Just how many designers does this scenario has? I believe one of those currently lying in the hospital is also one of your designers." The first thing that Chen Ge said made the workers at the futuristic theme park feel fairly awkward.

"Yes, Bai Buhui is one of our designers. Our scenario is themed with the concept of reincarnation. It combines elements from various urban legends and horror movies to create a unique and isolated world on its own, but through the concept of reincarnation, they all cleverly and expertly join together." Qing Ming sounded proud of their accomplishment.

"I haven't even started my livestream. There's no need to start your sale pitch just yet." Chen Ge patted Qing Ming on his shoulder. "Brother, I am going to queue up here. You should go and do whatever you are supposed to do. There is no need to mind me."

"My work for the day is to accompany you during your visit. By the way, have your friends not arrived?" Qing Ming asked with some hesitation. From the bottom of his heart, he did not believe that Chen Ge would come alone to take on the challenge.

"Oh, don't worry about that, I came alone." Chen Ge took out his phone and clicked into his livestream services. Ever since his livestream was banned by the police, he had not used this service for quite some time. Once he started the livestream, before Chen Ge even said anything, the chatroom was already exploding with activity. The most annoying was the bunch of users who were spamming the chat feed with "Brother Gang is a Real Man". In a few short minutes, the number of online viewers had shot through 50,000, and the number was still rapidly climbing.

"Good afternoon, everyone! Yesterday, I promised everyone that I would come to challenge the futuristic theme park's Haunted House alone, and I am here already." Chen Ge panned the camera to capture the themed building. "Honestly, I am quite scared that I will have to challenge this Haunted House alone. Liu Gang's group challenged my Haunted House with eleven people in total, but all of them are now inside the hospital. But I am just one person, and I have to face this challenge all on my own.”

When Chen Ge said that, Qing Ming, who stood next to him, felt that something was not quite right. Liu Gang’s group of eleven all fainted during their visit, and Chen Ge came to visit on his own, so even if he fainted during the process, in the end, it would feel like Chen Ge was the more impressive party of the two.

This is too cunning!

Qing Ming gritted his teeth in anger, but he could not do anything to Chen Ge but smile and wave at the camera to show the kindness and openness of the futuristic theme park.

“The person standing right next to me is a worker at the futuristic theme park. He is also one of the designers for their Haunted House. Speaking of which, I am quite concerned about his colleague. At the end of the day, he fainted at New Century Park. I wonder if he has woken up at the hospital yet. I do not wish to have other people say that we are trying to shirk the responsibility...”

Before Chen Ge could finish, Qing Ming quickly jumped in to cut him off. “Mr. Chen, we are all ready, you can start the visit any time.”

Qing Ming was very afraid of that gab of Chen Ge’s. The man was highly sarcastic, and if he was allowed to continue, the futuristic theme park would end up the brunt of the joke.

“We’re starting so soon?” Chen Ge followed Qing Ming as they cut through the crowd and came to the entrance of the building. There was a super large screen hanging outside the Reincarnation scenario. The videos showing on the two sides of the screen were slightly different.

Chen Ge was studying the videos when the sound of an argument came from the visitors who were lining up. A few young men were making loud noises and complaining, “Why is it that he does not need to line up? We have even purchased the special VIP tickets. This is too much! We are going to make complaints about this! Just you wait and see!”

“Excuse me, I will go and deal with this.” Qing Ming ran over and discussed with the few young men before he came back. “Mr. Chen, I am so sorry. Initially, we wished to follow your intention of completing the visitation alone, but the few visitors refused to allow that. Do you mind if you let them enter the scenario and accept the challenge with you? Well, with the addition of more people, it should help lower the difficulty of the challenge and the terrifying factor.”

“Lower the difficulty of the challenge and terrifying factor?” Chen Ge stared at the faces of the few young men, and the corner of his lips curled up. The timing of their ruckus was too perfect, almost as if it was planned. This should be part of the futuristic theme park’s plan, and those so-called visitors should be park workers in disguise.

“They need to be trained to be better actors, but never mind, the more the merrier.” Chen Ge pointed that out directly to show that he had seen through their plan. Qing Ming’s expression froze, but there was nothing he could do but to continue to act dumb. “Then I will go and tell them to be ready.”

Chen Ge ignored Qing Ming. He turned to his own livestream. Many people on the internet saw through the futuristic theme park’s plan as well, and they were all trying to remind Chen Ge.

“It will be fine. This way, there will be a fair comparison.”

About ten seconds later, three men and three women walked out from the crowd.

“Alright, the whole group is ready. So, I will now explain briefly the rules of the game for everyone.” Qing Ming pointed at the super large screen outside the building. “Our reincarnation Haunted House combines the many latest 3D technology to highly recreate the scenes from various ghost stories and horror movies. This a world dominated by ghosts and a recurring nightmare created by man.

“You will encounter many classic scenes from various horror movies inside the haunted house, and you will be able to experience the most intense sense of terror.

“There are ghosts inside the scenario that are portrayed by our workers, but some are projections, and there are others that you will have to be careful about. To recreate the terrifying effect to its maximum originality, we have placed some of the ancient paraphernalia from the original ghost stories inside the scenario. If you feel that something is wrong, please do cry for help; I’m not kidding with you.” Qing Ming’s tone was serious, and when he was done, he even purposely turned to look at Chen Ge. “Do not push yourself. Safety first.”

Patting his own backpack, Chen Ge said with an equally severe tone,

“You have successfully made me excited.”

“Our scenario is controlled by the central computer. The difficulty is split into easy, normal, difficult, and hellish—four different categories. Clearing the simple scenario will earn you one point, the normal scenario will earn you five points, the difficult scenario twenty points, and if you can clear the hellish scenario with one go, you will be able to get one hundred points. This big screen here will show the point ranking. Currently, the visitor who is placed first at our theme park is a Haunted House aficionado. He has managed to clear two difficult scenarios and several normal scenarios, so in total, he has gained 105 points.”

The higher the point, the higher the ranking. It was as if Qing Ming was purposely luring Chen Ge to pick the hellish difficulty.

“Is the most difficult category the hellish difficulty?” Chen Ge asked Qing Ming.

“Since we opened this scenario, there hasn’t been anyone who has been able to clear the hellish difficulty. Theoretically, that should be the hardest difficulty, but...” Qing Ming paused for dramatic effect before continuing. “There is a method where you can increase the difficulty level, and that is to challenge two hellish scenarios at the same time. Since the scenarios are controlled by the central computer, if you choose to challenge two scenarios at the same time, you will encounter the ghosts from two different ghost stories.”

“You can do something like that?” Read more chapter on our vipnovel.com

“Theoretically, yes, we can. For example, if you combine the scenarios for Ju-on and The Ring, while you receive a call from the cursed spirit, you might be ambushed from the back by the ghost from Ju-on. In other words, your encounters with ghosts will increase.”

Qing Ming was just showing off his own Haunted House. He did not think Chen Ge would be dumb enough to challenge the hellish scenario.

“First, all visitors need to sign the disclaimer and then set up their own account before finally selecting the difficulty. Then, I will bring you into the scenario.” Qing Ming signaled for Chen Ge to come over to the control panel.

The disclaimer at the futuristic theme park was ‘signed’ using fingerprints and facial recognition technology. It was more official than Chen Ge's Haunted House, which still relied on pens.

After signing the disclaimer, Chen Ge set up his personal account. Considering that the name would appear on the ranking on the big screen outside the Haunted House, he did not hesitate and set up his new account with the name 'New Century Park'.

I suppose this can be counted as a chance for promotion.

Once he had keyed in those few words, the system showed that there were sensitive terms in the account name. Chen Ge was speechless; the futuristic theme park had even considered something as little as this.

He gave it several more tries before going with his real name—Chen Ge. Then it was time to pick the difficulty. The other visitors and Qing Ming all turned to look at Chen Ge.

"You guys want me to pick?" Chen Ge pointed at the other scenarios. "Are they going to enter the same scenario as me?"

"Yes, the same batch of visitors will enter the same scenario," Qing Ming explained patiently. Hearing that, Chen Ge turned to the other visitors. "Are you guys sure you want to follow me? How about you wait for the next batch?"

"Are you looking down on us?"

"Acting tough, is it? Laughable!"

"This man is so funny."

Since the other 'visitors' insisted on following him, Chen Ge had no choice. He clicked open the panel for the choice of difficulty and very smoothly moved to the choices for hellish scenarios.

"What should I do if I want to combine two scenarios?" This was the first time that Chen Ge had dealt with such a high-tech control panel.

"First, you click the tab at the bottom of the page for the hellish difficulty, and then you tick the scenarios that you wish to combine among the available hellish scenarios. After you are done, you can click confirm." A smile finally appeared on Qing Ming's face when he saw that Chen Ge was about to take the hellish scenario.

“Got it.” Chen Ge followed the given instruction and then put his phone away. His ten fingers were like those of a pianist, and he ticked almost more than forty hellish scenarios that were available for him to choose.

“Wait, wait a moment!” Qing Ming wanted to stop him, but he was too late. Chen Ge had already pressed the confirm button. At that moment, the control panel lagged slightly. It was probably because the central computer had to deal with too much data at one time. Even the lights inside the building flickered for a moment.

“Have you lost your mind?” Qing Ming quickly rushed to the side of the control panel.

“Why would you say that? You did not tell me that I cannot combine forty scenarios at the same time.” After saying that, Chen Ge lightly nudged the ‘visitor’ next to him. “You guys are on my side, right? He didn’t say that, did he?”

Seeing more than forty horror movies, ghost stories, and scary scenarios that were being combined on the screen, the few visitors’ faces were as gray as ash, but Chen Ge looked perfectly fine. In fact, he took out his phone again to resume the live stream.

“Honestly, I did not expect your system here to suddenly go down. Don’t tell me your designers here have not considered a situation like this happening? How unprofessional is that?”

Chapter 952: Giving a Class to the Young Boss

The overloading of the data by the central computer caused the system to lag. This was something that no one had expected.

“When your people came to challenge my Haunted House, I provided the perfect service and served them to the best of my ability. Now that I’ve come here to challenge your Haunted House, before it’s even started, the machine broke, and your designer even shoved me out of the way earlier.” Chen Ge pointed at Qing Ming. “I’m not the kind to hold on to grudges, so I shall forgive that slight. I only have one question to ask—when will this be ready?”

...

As Chen Ge dropped these cynical remarks, he walked around with the camera like this was his own home, and that naturally caused the workers at the futuristic theme park to get angry.

“Isn’t it your fault that this has happened?” one of the visitors who was supposed to challenge the Haunted House with Chen Ge growled darkly.

“How is this my fault?” Chen Ge fetched one of the workers and pointed the camera at him. “Bro, you can represent the futuristic theme park. Tell the viewers, is this my fault? Don’t feel pressured. Just say what you believe is the truth before millions of viewers.”

“This... this is indeed not your fault. It is because our theme park failed to foresee this possibility. Sorry, Mr. Chen, you’ll have to wait a moment longer.” The worker then hurried away as if worried that he would fail to control his expression anymore. Chen Ge wanted to say something else when he noticed that the workers at the theme park all used random excuses to stay away from him, and no one dared to even meet his gaze. The lights at the entrance kept flickering. The control panel could not be used, and it showed that it was loading. Visitors were escorted out from the three exits of the Haunted House, and the workers kept apologizing to them.

“The system is still combining the scenarios; you’ll need to wait for a while.” Qing Ming’s face was dark. He took seven black wrist bands from the counter. “We might as well use this time to explain the rules to all of you.”

He gave each visitor one wrist band.

“This wrist band will show your body temperature and heartbeat. When your heartbeat goes over a certain limit, our people will come and lead you out, so no matter what happens, do not remove the band. The account that you registered earlier can be used to activate the wrist band, and each activation will employ you in a random occupation. Each occupation has different abilities, and using them reasonably will help complete the mission much faster.”

After the explanation, the visitors activated the wrist band.

“So, my occupation is a detective?” A man with glasses looked at the band. “Whenever I enter a new scenario, the band will send me a message, telling me a clue hidden inside the scenario.”

“I am a doctor. If my teammate’s heartbeat goes over the limit, I can use my power to stop the workers from forcibly taking them away. This ability can only be used once. It will be important to clear the scenario, but it might be dangerous,” a woman with long black hair who stood behind glasses said. She looked more like an office worker. When this lady spoke, the other visitors naturally lowered their eyes like they were afraid of her.

“I’m also a doctor.”

“This is such a coincidence, me too.”

All three female visitors were doctors. At this point, Chen Ge realized that the supposed randomization was fake like everything else. The doctor’s ability could only be used on their teammates. When one was scared until they fainted, with the presence of a doctor, the workers would not come.

So, they wish to scare me over the limit three times. Chen Ge looked at the band, and his action was noticed by all the other visitors.

“Hey, what’s your occupation?” The man with the glasses was curious.

“Me?” Chen Ge did not keep it a secret and showed them his band.

“My occupation is volunteer worker. I have no power. It only says, ‘likes to help those in need, is spontaneous and casual’.”

“Volunteer worker... is there an occupation like that?” A very fashionable man laughed. “My occupation is police officer. When the murderer comes near, my wrist band will receive a warning message.”

“Friend, you should be careful. I’ve seen many similar scenes in horror movies where volunteer workers go into an abandoned home to help others but end up being killed by the ghost hidden inside the old house. Normally, the volunteer worker is the first to die,” the young man who stood at the back said. He looked like he was still in school, but the man was cunning and did not reveal his occupation.

“Thank you for your concern.” Most main characters of horror movies were detectives, police officers, and doctors. Volunteer workers were among the many extras, but Chen Ge did not mind that. He was not one to care about the rules. If he was ostracized by the visitors, he would not hesitate to join the enemy camp. Then, the people of the futuristic theme park would realize who would be scaring whom.

“You don’t seem to be worried at all.” The woman with long hair appeared to dislike Chen Ge. “I’ve followed your bet with Liu Gang on the internet. I know you’ve already prepared to get scared until you faint, so you came alone and challenged the highest difficulty. That way, even if you lose, you won’t lose that much face. That’s your plan, isn’t it?”

“I’m shocked that you see through my so cleverly-devised plan. Yes, I am so scared,” Chen Ge replied snidely. He was too lazy to deal with these people and walked up Qing Ming. “I am livestreaming, so before millions of viewers, I just want to confirm with you, what do I need to do to clear the scenario?”

“The normal scenario will have a main mission. Since more than forty scenarios have been combined together, the preset missions will be a mess, so you will only need to find the hidden exit within sixty minutes to clear the scenario.” With so many viewers watching, Qing Ming did not dare to make any false claims.

“So, I only need to find the exit? No matter what kind of strategy I use?” Chen Ge lowered his head to arrange his backpack.

“Of course. Our theme park utilizes the latest technology, combining the real and the fake seamlessly to create a horror world. As long as you do not harm the workers and other visitors, you can do anything you want.” Qing Ming wished to do more promotion for his Haunted House on Chen Ge’s livestream, so he did not notice the scary glow that passed by Chen Ge’s eyes.

“Remember what you said.”

Hearing the difference in Chen Ge’s tone, Qing Ming wanted to add something else when the control panel made a sound, and eighty percent of the lights inside the Reincarnation Haunted House went off.

“The generation of the scenario is completed!” Qing Ming signaled for everyone to gather around him. “One last check of your wrist band, and I will bring you into the Haunted House!”

He opened a door, and there was a row of seats. “Please take your seat and put on the safety belt.”

There was no light. It was almost complete darkness.

“You’re livestreaming, so hold onto your phone.” After inspecting the safety belt, Qing Ming walked out and closed the door. Darkness resumed, and one could not see anything. Crying slowly appeared from the darkness. As they tried to determine the source of the crying, the row of chairs started to turn.

Wish to confuse my sense of direction? The chairs turned downward and stopped after ten seconds. The scenario is underground?

His feet stepped on the ground, and Chen Ge felt much better. Moments later, some light appeared before his eyes.

Then he observed his surroundings. They appeared to be sitting inside a mini movie theater, facing a big screen.

Chapter 953 - Very Interesting

Chapter 953: Very Interesting

“Are you guys okay?”

“Can we remove the safety belt now?”

“Do any of you smell that strange scent in the air?”

...

When the visitors conversed, the screen in theater started to play a movie. There were seven characters like the seven visitors, and they were seated at the first row of theater. The seven characters in the screen were facing away from the visitors, and the seven inside the screen were also watching a movie. The screen inside the screen started to play a recording.

“On the day of the Soul’s Return, the seven best friends came to the cinema to watch a movie. They did this in memory of their teacher. This respected teacher’s favorite movie was showing on this day of Soul’s Return.

“At the start of the movie, no one realized anything, but slowly, they noticed that something was wrong.

“There were shadows moving across the screen, and occasionally, there was this crying sound. A student went to use the toilet in the middle of the movie, but he didn’t return for a long time. When one of the others said that he was going to get the missing student, he realized that there were still seven people sitting in theater. Everyone panicked. They removed their safety belts and got up from their seats, hurrying outside, but they did not realize that what waited them outside would be far more despairing...”

The recording stopped there. The seven visitors inside the screen started to whisper among themselves. They seemed to think that the recording was quite interesting.

“Have you seen this scene somewhere? Is it from some famous scary movie?” the man with the glasses whispered.

"I can't figure it out." The youngest man shook his head. "Even if there is some similarity in the setting, you can't solve this according to the movie. Don't forget that thanks to a certain someone, we are facing a melting pot of forty different scenarios."

"So, what should we do now?"

"We should wait. Perhaps there'll be another hint."

The other visitors started to discuss the scenario, but Chen Ge kept quiet. He listened to the discussion as he stared at the big screen. He realized that the scene in the screen was reflecting real life. The visitors were discussing the movie after it was over.

Since this is the combination of forty scary scenarios, the scare points should be more intensive and collected. Chen Ge thought back to the recording. It seemed to mention that everyone removed their safety belt and rushed outside. That should be the hint for the next step, right? We can't stay here for too long; we need to leave.

Removing the safety belt, Chen Ge was the first to stand up. "Guys, it's time to go."

"Why are you in such a hurry? The first scenario should be the simplest. We should try to get more information now because it'll only get harder from here." The fashionable man looked to the other visitors. "We have limited use of our ability, so I suggest we stick together and help one another. How about this? We'll go around and introduce ourselves so that we can make some plans and arrangements."

Before the man finished, Chen Ge had already started looking for the exit inside the cinema.

"Hey! What are you doing? Everyone is introducing themselves. Don't forget, you are part of this group."

"I am not interested in a dead man's name." With his Yin Yang Vision, the darkness of the scenario did not affect him. When he looked around, he noticed that the characters on-screen had stopped talking, and crying came out from the speakers.

"What do you mean by that? Who are calling..."

"Shut up! Look at the screen!" Chen Ge pointed at the screen. The characters inside the screen became agitated. Then, they slowly turned their heads around like they had discovered something very scary. The visitors inside theater followed Chen Ge's order and turned to the screen. They stared at the characters until their heads were fully turned around.

The seven characters on-screen had holes on their faces. Their facial features were dug out, and blood was pouring out from them. One of the female visitors clamped her hand over her lips. This had happened way too suddenly. Before they could react, the seven monsters inside the screen suddenly stood up and jumped out through the screen!

“AH!”

Visitors' screams echoed inside theater. Even Chen Ge's eyes widened. With the aid of various technology, the scene was very authentic. The seven projections appeared like real ghost.

“This is interesting.” The other visitors were given quite a fright. Even they did not expect this to happen.

The Haunted House at the futuristic theme park is controlled by the central computer. While inside, their workers might be given various aids, but they have no idea what will happen next. After all, this is a combination of forty scenarios. The designers probably didn't expect this to happen.

Chen Ge studied the other visitors. They were not wearing any earbuds, so they could not be communicating with the people outside.

They wanted to scam me, but now they've been dragged down into hell with me.

Chen Ge smiled wickedly. He had already decided to make good use of these six 'visitors'.

With a dry cough, Chen Ge turned to the rest. “I told you to leave in a hurry, but you all refused to listen. These seven projections are just the beginning. If you paid attention to the story, you would realize that there are at least two more ghosts in this theater.”

“Two more ghosts?”

“One is the teacher who likes to watch movies. He is probably the extra person that replaced the student who left. The other one is the ghost who has been following us since we sat in the chairs. She likes to cry. As long as the crying is around, it proves that she has not left us.” Chen Ge’s analysis stunned the visitors. They had experienced the same things, and they had only been in the scenario for less than three minutes—how did he manage to come up with so many observations?

“Stop wasting time. Let’s find the exit.” As Chen Ge turned around, he saw an additional figure sitting on the chair behind him. He was curled on the seat, as if preparing something. The light in theater was dark, if not for his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge would not have noticed this person.

At the same time, the crying became more obvious until it sounded like it was ringing in their ears. The few visitors were panicking as they hurried to find the exit.

As long as they can help me find the exit, that’s fine. That will save me some time so that I can explore the scenario further.

Chen Ge purposely walked around the hiding spot of the person before heading to down the other direction, making the person feel lucky that they had not been discovered.

The combination of forty scenarios means that no one knows what will happen next. I can make use of this in two ways—I can have my own employees to assume the role of a projection to follow the Haunted House workers, or I can take the roles of the actors myself to chase after the visitors.

Chen Ge scanned the walls of theater. It was covered in posters from many classic horror movies, like Saw, Doctor Skull-cracker, and Jack the Ripper.

“I agree that the occupation of volunteer worker matches me, but everyone knows that will only serve as a pastime...”

Chapter 954 - It's Ruined at the Start

Chapter 954: It's Ruined at the Start

The ghosts on the screen inside the mini theater started to flicker, and the crying moved from inside the screen to outside like it was hiding among the visitors. The already dim lights began to flicker, and the seats were shaking. Even the floor itself started to spin, and a little girl's laughter appeared in the speakers. A woman's crying, a little girl's laughter, and the worker hiding behind the chair—this theoretically simplest scenario had three 'ghosts'.

"We should leave now." Chen Ge's gaze moved away from the movie posters. He had already determined what his future occupation should be.

"No." The man who had the police role denied Chen Ge's suggestion. From the cold sweat on his forehead, it was clear that he was afraid.

...

"The ghosts will come soon. Do you want us to wait and meet them?" It was not that Chen Ge was being kind. He just felt like bringing these people with him during the livestream would make the event more exciting. Other than that, he could use them to lead the way and his scenario completion speed.

"I... I came here yesterday to challenge the Haunted House. I was playing a medium difficulty scenario." The fashionable man ignored the hinting glances from the others and spoke openly. "This theater is just the first level. In the medium difficulty, the theater is used to give the visitors some warnings for during the visitation and introduce the background of the stories. There are two scare points. One is the chair that will shake on its own, and the second is the 'teacher' that is hiding among us."

"Please continue." The man's expression showed that he was not lying, and Chen Ge did wish to know what the man was trying to say.

"But this time, there was not only no introduction and warning, there wasn't even the most basic safety information when exploring the haunted house and not even a hint. Plus, the last time I was here, I didn't run into the seven ghosts that suddenly jumped out from the screen, the crying, and the laughter, so I suggest we stay here for now and get to know everything we can before we move onto the next scenario. After all, this first scenario should be the simplest.”

To be more accurate, the role played by this ‘visitor’ should be the ‘guide’. He knew the locations of all the scare points and traps, but the situation that they were in had completely strayed away from his expectations.

“This is all his fault for challenging forty scenarios at the same time! The danger level has basically increased by forty times.” A smaller girl pointed her finger at Chen Ge.

“I wanted to do this alone. It was you guys who insisted on following me. So, how is this my fault?” Chen Ge did not turn around to answer. He had already found the exit. There were two curtains of black cloth next to theater, and behind the cloth, one could see a doorknob.

“Now is not the time to discuss that.” The youngest man walked to stand between Chen Ge and the other visitors. “We’ll vote for this.”

When the visitors were conversing, the female office lady with long hair silently took out her phone like she was communicating with someone. The combination of forty scenarios had hiked up the difficulty to an unimaginably level, and they too were afraid. The visitors were discussing hotly among themselves, but Chen Ge ignored them and walked to the curtains of black cloth alone.

If the actor hiding behind the chair wishes to get me, they will have to go through the visitors. The visitors are clearly not on my side, but they will serve as a good meat shield.

Chen Ge ignored the dead body projection that was on the screen and pulled back the black cloth.

“The exit is this way.”

The moment his hand landed on the doorknob, static interrupted the speakers, the girl’s laughter turned shrill, and the whole scenario appeared to be changing.

“There is a second layer to this place?” Chen Ge pulled on the doorknob. He was about to pull the door open when five pale fingers suddenly reached through the gap to grab his wrist. A chill came from the back of his hand. Before the owner of the hand could react, Chen Ge grabbed the hand back.

This should belong to a girl. The fingers are too slender for a man...

Before he could find out more, the five fingers slithered away from his palm like the girl behind the door was given a shock. He pushed the door completely open. Outside the theater was a small path that could only fit two people at a time. The sides of the path were sealed up by wooden boards, and human body parts were pinned on them like some grotesque art.

“This is not good!” The police officer knew something. When he saw Chen Ge open the door, he screamed, “Once the door to the next scenario is opened, all the ghosts in this scenario will make their move! We must leave now! The ghosts are coming!”

The seats shook harder, and the dead people in the screen moved. As the crying and laughter grew louder, a girl hugging a doll poked her head out from the corner, and the four walls around them leaked blood.

Something snapped, and the worker who had been hiding on the back row slowly stood up. He wore the same outfit as the dead teacher inside the video, but there was no blood on his face. “My good children... you’re finally back!”

Then something in his mind seemed to snap as he charged at the visitors.

“Run!” Chen Ge was the first to get out from the room. He had just stepped out when a bleeding cleaver aimed for his neck like it was going to decapitate him. With his senses sharper than most, Chen Ge bent over to evade it.

“They are going so far as to kill me outright?” With a frown, Chen Ge took another glance. The cleaver was also a projection. “That was quite realistic.”

Being attacked like that, anyone would be scared, and Chen Ge had instinctively ducked to evade the danger.

Chen Ge’s reaction was calm, but the visitors behind him were not so lucky. The ‘police officer’ followed behind Chen Ge. When he saw the cleaver come at his neck, he almost fainted.

“Even the police officer didn’t know about the cleaver... Did they not tell him about this?”

With the combination of forty scenarios, even the workers themselves did not know what would happen next.

“Quick! We must go! The wrist band is telling me there are murderers getting close to us!” Before he could calm down, the police officer saw his wrist band glow red. This was the police officer’s ability. Even though he could not sense Specters and monsters, he could sense the approach of murderers and madmen.

The end of the narrow corridor echoed with the sound of whistling and blades hacking on the wall; something was approaching!

Some of the visitors still had not escaped the theater. Considering what had happened earlier, Chen Ge volunteered to bring up the rear of the group. The police officer led the way and took the other visitors hurriedly away. Chen Ge waited for the last visitor to come out before he grabbed hold of the doorknob and closed the door to theater. He was about to leave when something strange happened. A scream came from inside theater, and it sounded like it was elicited by the ‘teacher’.

He was about to leave when something strange happened. A scream came from inside theater, and it sounded like it was elicited by the ‘teacher’.

Chapter 955 - Recurring Midnight

Chapter 955: Recurring Midnight

“Why would the actor scream?” Chen Ge was a Haunted House operator himself, and he had heard multiple screams in his life, so he could be certain that actor was not acting. He had really run into something scary; that scream could not be faked. “This is getting interesting. Even the workers themselves are getting the scare of their lives.”

The door that led out from theater was being knocked on, and the scream grew louder. Chen Ge wanted to open the door to take a look, but he realized that the door was locked. “Combining projection technology and actual actors is a good idea, but there’s bound to be some accidents.”

The scream had not stopped, and the whistle from the other end of the corridor was getting close. The lights went out. With his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge saw a man wearing a chef’s outfit at the end of the corridor. He was fat, and the white outfit was stained with blood. The pocket around his stomach was even stuffed with half of a human head.

A man-eating chef?

The shoes worn by this actor were custom made and softened his footsteps. Now that the lights in the corridor were off, he was walking toward Chen Ge with his laughably huge cleaver. In a few seconds, when the chef was close to him, the lights would come on again to scare him.

That’s not a bad idea, but I can see in the dark.

The chef swiftly approached Chen Ge, and the latter started to run.

No wonder the corridor is so clean; it’s to prevent the actors from tripping when they are chasing after the visitors. After all, there is no light.

Chen Ge glanced at the wooden boards on the wall.

Should I pull one off and place it on the ground? The chef won't expect a surprise like that.

Chen Ge quickly abandoned that thought. What if he injured the actor? Ten seconds later, the lights came on again. The chef waved his cleaver madly with a guffaw, but he soon realized that there was no one before him. Chen Ge had already run down the corridor.

"Ah?" Catching his breath, he laughed like an idiot for so long before he realized he was laughing to air. When the chef saw that Chen Ge was looking at him from the other end, he had no choice but to continue that maddened laughter to keep up his character.

"That is the Butcher from Hell! He will make stew out of his captives! I've seen him in a movie before!" the youngest man shouted as he ran.

"He's coming to get us!" A girl turned back and saw the chef, letting out a shrill scream. Probably due to the awkwardness from before, the chef waved his cleaver and ran faster toward the visitors.

"This way!" As the distance was closing, at the last moment, the police officer found a door.

"Wait! Don't go in there!" The man with the glasses wanted to remind him of something, but it was too late. The police officer pushed the door open. The other visitors did not think too much as they followed him. Chen Ge was the last one to enter. By then, the chef was very close behind. After he got in, he closed the door.

BANG!

The wood chips flew over their heads. A large crack was chopped open by the cleaver at the top of the door. The wooden door shook; someone was crazily banging against the door!

"This door won't hold on much longer! We have to find another way to leave this room!" the police officer shouted. "When I visited this place last time, the difficulty was not this high. We only needed to find a mannequin that represented a dead person before the clock on the wall struck twelve! By the way, the mannequin was needed in a later scenario, so we should carry it with us!"

"I have a question." Chen Ge raised his arm. "Since you have already visited this place and knew what will happen in this room, how many pieces of the carcasses do we need to find to be considered successful?"

“Pieces?” The police officer was startled. “Aren’t dead people normally counted in bodies?”

“Look at the fruit plate on the table.” Chen Ge pointed at the exquisite china bowl on the coffee table. On it sat three plastic apples, a cluster of grapes, and five broken fingers. “Fingers should be a piece of the human body, right?”

“This wasn’t here last time!” The police officer looked at the other visitors in shock. After a temporary exchange of glances, he rushed into the bedroom. “The last time I was here, we found the dead body under the bed!”

Before the rest caught up to him, the police officer pulled back the bedsheets. He was shocked when he saw that the space was empty. “That’s impossible!”

“How is that impossible? When the difficulty increases from medium to hellish, it’s normal that we need to search for more things.” The man with the glasses was calm. “My occupation is a detective, so when I entered this place, I got my first clue.”

He looked at his band. “The skull is inside the freezer on top of the fridge.”

Two of the girls immediately moved away from the fridge. Only the woman with the long hair did not mind it. She personally walked to open the fridge door.

“Now I have good news and bad news. Which would you like to hear first?” The woman’s face was pale.

“What’s the good news?”

“Other than the head, there are the mannequin’s small arm and the other five fingers inside the fridge.”

“Then what’s the bad news?”

“The mannequin is chopped up even further than I expected.” The woman felt her stomach turning. No one had experienced the hellish version of the Reincarnation Haunted House; they would be the first batch. Even though they knew about the general plot, with the central computer controlling everything, the difficulty of the most basic mission had been increased to an impossible level.

“We need to move faster; we still have four minutes.” Chen Ge looked at the clock on the wall. It was 11: 56. “The knocking is still going. The fat chef is outside the door. Other than that, listen up. The crying hasn’t stopped following us. It is merely covered up by the louder knocking.”

Holding his breath, Chen Ge added, “By the way, the girl’s laughter hasn’t disappeared either. So, if we do not hurry, we will be cornered by a cruel chef and two ghosts.”

“This is the hellish difficulty...” The police officer was nervous. “At the beginning, we’re ambushed by three ghosts, and we’re only at the second scenario.”

“You are being too optimistic. Don’t forget, there might be a new ghost hiding in this new scenario. As time goes on, more ghosts will be following us. Even though most of them are actors and projections, there is a small chance that they are things that we cannot explain. After all, it is your designer who told me this Haunted House is filled with authentic haunted objects.”

Chen Ge was still livestreaming. He cleverly let slip a few hints to build up for what he would do later. When he released his own employees, he could push all the blame to the futuristic theme park.

Walking to the fridge to take out the head, Chen Ge realized that the mouth was puffy. There was something stuffed inside. He reached his hand into the mouth and soon found a ball of paper.

“What are you doing?” The woman with the long hair saw what Chen Ge was doing and felt disgusted.

Too lazy to explain, Chen Ge took out the ball of paper and read the message on it.

‘I realize I have sunk into a recurring nightmare. Every night at midnight, I am murdered in different ways, and just as I am about to die, I wake up from my dream. Most despairing of all, the time at which I wake up from the nightmare is always 11:56 pm.’

Chapter 956: Weakness of the Projection [2 in 1]

“Every time the man wakes up, it’s 11:56 pm. When I was glancing at the time, it was exactly this time that was showing on the wall.” Chen Ge turned his head to the wall again. The clock had moved the time to 11:57 pm. “A recurring nightmare does fit the overall theme of the Haunted House quite well, so the perfect way to clear this scenario should be to break through this circle of nightmares.”

Chen Ge moved the fruit plate on the coffee table to the side and placed the pieces of the mannequin that they had found so far on the table, “The first change to this scenario will probably happen in three minutes. You guys had better find the remaining parts of the mannequin before the time runs out.”

“We all belong to the same team. Can you please use a more polite tone when addressing your teammates?” One of the girls wanted to say something else but was stopped by the man with the glasses. The group split into two, and they started to explore the scenario. The scenario was not that big; it only had four rooms in total. With the living room that they first entered as the center, the room on the left-hand side was the bedroom, and the right-hand side led to the kitchen and bathroom. The visitors ransacked the places and overturned all the drawers and cupboards to look for pieces of the dead body while Chen Ge sat on the sofa in the living room studying the mannequin head.

“On medium difficulty, the visitors only need to find the mannequin of the dead body to move on from this scenario, but will the condition of clearing this part of the scenario change now that the difficulty has been upgraded to hellish difficulty?” He held the paper note that he had pulled out from the mannequin’s mouth. “Every day at midnight, he is killed with various methods. Is he in a nightmare that he cannot wake up from, or are the deaths that befall him every night real?”

“Ah!” A scream that came from the bedroom interrupted Chen Ge’s thought. Moments later, a female visitor ran out from the bedroom, and the youngest man followed closely behind him. He was holding a bloody axe in his left hand and the leg of a mannequin that had been chopped into three parts in his right.

“I found this under the dresser, and other than that, I also discovered this.” The man tossed a windbreaker onto the sofa. “There are parts of the mannequin stuffed inside the pockets. I suggest you all come and take a look. I do not think I can manage this alone.”

Chen Ge placed the mannequin on the coffee table and then followed the young man into the bedroom. The dresser’s doors were open. All the clothes inside had traces of blood on it. There was a base of a lamp that was bloodied lying at the corner of the dresser.

“The axe was also found inside the dresser. It is just a prop; the blade is not sharp.” The young man’s expression was calm. It did not appear like he was scared by this discovery.

“The dead body was placed together with the murder weapon.” Chen Ge seemed to understand something as he turned to look at the living room. On the coffee table sat a fruit plate, and on the fruit plate sat five fingers and the blade of fruit knife. The fridge had a human head, and the tray underneath the human head had a dining knife.

He took out all the clothes from the dresser, emptied all the pockets, and placed all the mannequin pieces that he could find on the table. The other visitors all looked at him. Even though they knew that the pieces were fake, it did not stop them from feeling disgusted and affected. The more they studied it, the more they felt fear toward Chen Ge. The man not only did not show any fear, he even placed the pieces of the mannequin back together. Looking at how focused he was, it was as if he was completing a jigsaw puzzle.

“Doesn’t he own a Haunted House? Why would he be so familiar with human anatomy?”

“Perhaps he used to attend Jiujiang Medical University. That would explain why the students often go to visit him. They are there to support their senior.”

An increasingly complete mannequin started to appear on the table. With his two talents of Living Doll and Mortician’s Makeup, Chen Ge had a deep understanding of the human body. After turning out all the pockets, Chen Ge finally found the thing that he had been looking for.

He found a second paper note inside one of the coat pocket—"This is an inescapable nightmare! I have to find a way to end it! I can't sit here idly for it to crush me!"

"What did you discover?" Just as the man with the glasses asked that, the clock on the wall suddenly chimed. It was finally midnight. With a cuckoo sound, the small door under the clock opened, and a cuckoo bird sprang out. Strapped to it was a black-reddish heart.

"Be careful!" the youngest man suddenly screamed. He looked at his wrist band and retreated into the crowd. No one knew what the occupation of this young man was, but from his reaction, his occupation appeared to be one that could sense danger.

A creaking sound echoed in the room, the sound of water came out from the bathroom, and the curtains in the living room moved on their own. Other than a woman's crying and a girl's laughter, there was a third voice. It sounded like someone mumbling in his sleep. It was very incoherent, but it was certainly the sound of a man.

"Something's coming."

The dresser in the bedroom creaked noisily. The visitors turned to look at it. The dresser that Chen Ge had emptied earlier somehow had a piece of clothing hanging in it. It was a blood red jacket. Blood trailed down the clothes, and it swayed lightly inside the dark dresser. The police officer and the other visitors were squeezed in the middle of the living room. This event appeared to be something that was outside their expectation again.

"A Red Specter?" Chen Ge narrowed his eyes and focused his pupils. This was his natural instinct when he saw bloody clothes.

The hanger of the dresser dropped to the floor, but strangely enough, the blood jacket was still floating in the air. When everyone's attention was attracted by the Red Specter, the television in the living room flickered, and it switched on by itself. The sudden light caught everyone's attention, and they turned their heads. The television screen kept flickering, and between the different images, one could make out a blob of something dark. The dim lights above their heads fluttered several times before they went off completely. Now they could only borrow the glow from the television screen to look at their surroundings.

"Wakey wakey..."

“Who is speaking!”

A strange man’s voice came out from one of the rooms. All the visitors turned to look at it.

“Bedroom! Look at the bedroom!” The swaying red jacket had already floated out from the dresser. While everyone’s attention was pulled by the television, the jacket had moved from inside the dresser to hang on the door of the bedroom.

“Don’t be afraid. We’ll go and take a look at it together!” The police officer sounded so nervous that Chen Ge started to suspect that they were not workers at the futuristic theme park but actual innocent visitors. The police officer and the man in the glasses approached the bedroom. Just as they were about to reach the door, the half-open bedroom door was pulled back, and a wounded arm suddenly reached out to drag the red jacket behind the door. Before the police officer and the man with the glasses could react, a decapitated head poked out from behind the door. He held a bloodied axe and swung it right at the police officer’s head. The police officer was so scared that he crumbled to the ground. He screamed as he ran away from the attack. The strange man charged out from the bedroom and waved the axe at everyone in the living room. The harrowing screams of a man could be heard echoing around the living room.

“Go to hell! Go to hell! Go to hell!”

The visitors were busy as they tried to save their lives. Only Chen Ge stood where he was. The waving axe cut through his body. The strange man ran past him and crawled into the bathroom.

“There are Red Specters among their projections.” When Chen Ge saw the man, he knew that it was only a projection. As realistic as the blood on the man was, the blood did not drip to the ground, and the door that the man touched was not stained by blood either.

“Only when the lights dim will the projection be able to appear; that should be the limitation of this technology.”

“That was too scary!” The police officer stood up while holding his chest. “We need to find the rest of the body. We can’t stay here any longer!”

“There is no need to be in such a hurry, I have basically understood what happened inside this room.” Chen Ge picked up the head that was sitting on the table. “The clue was hidden in that projection earlier. If you look closer, you'll realize that the projection had the same face as this human head."

"What does that explain?" The police officer looked at Chen Ge holding the head, and for some reason, he felt like the man had done this exact motion many times before.

"The first paper note says that the owner of this place was killed by someone with various methods at midnight; pay attention to the words that he used here—killed by someone. How could he be sure that his killer is a person and not a ghost?" Chen Ge then showed the rest the second piece of paper note. "The new paper note says that when he prepared to resist, a murder weapon was placed beside each piece of dead body. That can only mean one thing..."

"We do not have the time to listen to your story. You only need to tell us what we should do now!" The door was chopped by the cleaver again. The chef could be coming in at any moment.

"The owner of the room was killed every night, and the killer is himself. That is the recurring nightmare that has trapped him." Chen Ge was quite impressed by the scenario constructed by the futuristic theme park, but probably due to the time constraint, it lacked some polish, so the details were not as perfect as he would have hoped.

"Then how are we supposed to escape? Kill the house owner again?" the man with the glasses asked Chen Ge when a scream came from outside the door. It seemed to be the scream of the chef.

"What is this? Open the door! Open the door! Please let me in!" The chef suddenly banged incessantly and heavily on the door. The frame shook violently before it was followed by a heavy thump, which sounded like the chef collapsing to the ground. Then there was silence.

"What is the meaning of this?"

The visitors inside the room looked at each other. The woman with the long black hair made a silent and quick signal at the police officer. The police shook his head lightly, and his face was getting pale.

"How come the noises stopped?" Chen Ge walked to the door and grabbed the doorknob. He looked through the gash that had been made by the chef's cleaver on the door. The chef was no longer there, and in the eerie corridor stood a little girl who was holding a doll. The girl had appeared in theater earlier. Half of her doll's face was burnt off, and it looked scary. Chen Ge used his Yin Yang Vision, but he got nothing. There was nothing out of place that he could see from this little girl.

“What did you see?” the police officer asked Chen Ge in a whisper. Chen Ge was leaning against the door. His eyes were looking through the hole made by the cleaver. He was worried that the chef might suddenly appear, and the cleaver might land on the same spot again.

“The chef is gone. I believe this is purposely arranged by the Haunted House.” When Chen Ge said that, he made sure to pay attention to the reaction of the people around him. The ‘visitors’ in the room did not seem to anticipate something like this happening.

His grip tightened, and Chen Ge was about to open the door when the police officer next to him stopped him. “Just now, the chef desperately wanted to enter. That means that he ran into something scary outside the door. If you open the door now, the thing that the chef met earlier might just get into the room.”

“But if you do not open the door, you will never know what he ran into.” Chen Ge was on another extreme from the other visitors.

“We are a team. You might not care about your personal safety, but you can’t drag us down with you.” The police officer was so desperate that he grabbed Chen Ge by his arm. He used extreme force to stop Chen Ge from opening the door; he was not acting. Through all these details and other observations, Chen Ge was certain. There really was something hiding in the futuristic theme park’s Haunted House. The police officer knew about it, but he did not share it with his colleagues.

“Fine, then we will continue with the puzzle solving.” Chen Ge lifted his head to look at the wall. When the projection of the Red Specter ran into the bathroom, the time had returned to 11:56 pm. Time had essentially reversed, but the crying and the girl’s laughing did not stop, and the lights did not come back on.

Chapter 957 - Reflect on It

Chapter 957: Reflect on It

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“With every reincarnation, the situation becomes worse. We’d better find the rest of the mannequin as fast as we can. I have no idea what kind of new monster will appear at the next midnight.”

With the experience from before, all the visitors started to become more serious in their search for the body parts. Chen Ge showed incredible promise. He stood from the angle of a Haunted House designer and found a half of the body parts alone. Many body parts were hidden in very secluded corners like underneath cracked tiles, behind the toilet, in the sewage pipes, and so on. His professional technique and acute senses caused the ‘visitors’ around him to feel a strange chill.

At 11:59 pm, the group placed the pieces of body parts on the coffee table. The situation was scary to say the least. The visitors stayed far away from it. Only Chen Ge was sitting alone at the coffee table.

“The five internal organs, spine, four limbs, head, and human skin—the design of this dead body is very detailed, but the feel of the touch is the drawback. It does not feel like the touch of normal human skin at all.”

The difficulty of a hellish scenario was too high. If not for Chen Ge, they would have spent a lot of time trying to find the dead body parts, and then putting the parts back together would take even more time.

In less than a minute, Chen Ge basically had rearranged the body parts to their correct position. The clock on the wall chimed again, and the second midnight had arrived. The television gave off this static noise, and the pots and pans in the kitchen fell to the ground. The dresser door slowly opened, and everyone saw a wounded man curled up inside it. His face was frozen in fear, and he held a sharp knife in his hand. Then the group saw him crawl out from the dresser and charge at Chen Ge at an incredible speed. Sitting on the sofa, Chen Ge did not even budge, and he allowed the man to phase through his body.

“Yet another projection?” Even though this was the second time, they had seen a projection of a dead man, so the group was given quite a fright. The time on the clock returned to 11:56 pm. The second reincarnation was not that scary. It was a mere repetition of the scares from the previous reincarnation.

“There will a projection that appears at midnight. As long as we get used to that, this scenario is not that scary.” The man with the glasses laughed drily.

“Are you glasses fogged? Can’t you see that the flickering frequency of the television has changed? The time that we are left stranded in the dark has gotten longer and longer.” Chen Ge did not raise his head. “The walls around us have started to bloat with blood. The little girl from the previous scenario should have joined us this time. The bedsheets have been replaced on the bed. None of you have reentered the bedroom, so this proves that other people entered the room this time. At the next midnight, a real person might appear, and the first two times are just the system trying to make you lower your guard. ”

Chen Ge said a lot and the man with the glasses was stumped. In the end, he could only mumble, “The room is so dark. Even if my glasses aren’t fogged, no one would notice these details.”

When they conversed, Chen Ge had completed the dead body. He turned to look at the police officer. “How did you get out the last time you came to visit?”

“We found the dead body under the bed, and there was a diary inside its pocket. It recorded the things about the owner and the map of the surroundings as well as the key to open the window.” The police honestly volunteered the guide.

“The key to open the window?”

“Yes, there is a big lock on the key, and by jumping through it, we will reach the third scenario.” The police carefully entered the bedroom. He pulled back the heavy curtains, and behind it was a black window that was embedded into the wall. “Previously, I assumed the key would be inside one of the body parts, but now I realize that things are not that simple.”

“We need to find the key to leave.” Chen Ge looked at the rearranged dead body on the table, and his expression changed.

“What’s wrong?”

Everyone gathered around him, and they saw Chen Ge pick up the phone that had a black screen. He had been too focused on piecing the body parts back together, so he had placed the phone on the table, and it had livestreamed the whole process. When he was done, he finally realized that his livestream had been banned again. He quickly logged out and restarted the stream, but it showed that the service was blocked because the host had violated the streaming rules. The livestream was blocked, but the number of online viewers was still close to a million. The viewers who had been watching laughed their asses off.

“I am a new fan. I’ve seen the host’s streams thrice, and of those three times, the stream was blocked in the middle for the two of them. Now I don’t even know whether it is my problem or the host’s problem.”

“Cao¹!”

“Impressive host, piecing back a dead body online!”

“Hopefully the host will learn from his mistake and reflect on why the platform targets him every time.”

“Brother Gang is a real man!”

Chen Ge did not whether to laugh or cry when he saw the comments in the chatroom. It was not often a stream would get so popular. The donations that he had received from this stream were enough to fill up the School of the Afterlife scenario with security cameras at every corner.

“I also have no idea why my stream is banned every time. Perhaps because it is too gory,” Chen Ge explained as he grabbed the mannequin by its spine and tossed the pieced mannequin to the side. “I just wish for a simple livestreaming experience to provide good content to my fans, but I still get banned.”

Chen Ge reached into his pocket and activated the recorder. Then he walked alone to the living room door. At that moment, the woman’s crying and the girl’s laughter were approaching. The other visitors quickly stopped Chen Ge.

“Do not go out there!”

“We are close to solving the puzzle! We will find the exit soon!”

“Exit?” Chen Ge grabbed the doorknob. “Isn’t this a door?”

“It is a door, but...”

“Since it is a door, then it is an exit. Since it is an exit, we will be able to walk through it.” Holding his backpack with one hand, Chen Ge opened the door and looked down the corridor.

Chapter 958 - Bad Feng Shui

Chapter 958: Bad Feng Shui

The chef could not be seen in the dark corridor. Chen Ge held the wall and stood in the middle of the corridor, his eyes narrowed as he stared down the corridor.

There is a camera in the upper left corner of theater exit and the corner of the corridor. Just how rich is futuristic theme park that they would install two cameras to watch one corridor?

Chen Ge wanted to summon Xu Yin, but he had to avoid the cameras and the other visitors. This was not his own Haunted House, so he had to be more careful.

I need to find the appropriate time. The best solution is to actively attract the attention of the lingering spirits at this place, and when they appear, I will have Xu Yin or other Red Specters replace them.

A Haunted House should be haunted, but the ghosts should have nothing to do with Chen Ge. The static from the recorder travelled into his ears, and Chen Ge's emotions slowly calmed down. The woman's cries and the girl's laughter elicited no response from him.

"Come back! What are you doing?" The police officer and the other visitors crowded at the door. They saw Chen Ge bend down to pick up a doll. "What are you doing?"

His fingers caressing the burnt face, Chen Ge looked at the doll's dark eyes. "Did any of you notice a little girl holding this doll earlier?"

"I did. She seemed to come out from theater." The police tried to remember. "But why would you suddenly ask about that?"

"When I looked out through the gap on the door, the chef was gone, but the girl was walking toward us holding this doll. Yet, when I opened the door, there was no one in the corridor, except for this doll with a burnt face abandoned on the floor."

Chen Ge carried the doll in his embrace, and after some thought, he added, “No, it was not abandoned. It was more like someone had purposely placed it there, like they wanted the doll to follow and study our movements.”

Then, Chen Ge turned to the other visitors. “Do you think the Haunted House would hire a little girl as its actor?”

“First, you need to stay away from me.” The police officer stared at the doll in Chen Ge’s embrace like it was cursed. “I’m not sure whether the haunted house would employ a little girl or not, but the last time I was here, I didn’t see any girl and didn’t hear her laughter. Even the crying that we have been hearing, that only appeared at the end of my previous tour.”

“In other words, the girl is not an actor, and she isn’t a visitor either, so what could she be?” Chen Ge purposely led the ‘visitors’ down a road of no return.

“Perhaps she’s just a projection?” the man with the glasses said softly.

“Have you seen a projection walking around with a doll? And this doll is much heavier than you think.” Chen Ge then tossed the doll toward the man. As the doll flew toward them, the other visitors all moved away from it. They seemed very afraid of the doll. Chen Ge noticed this and remembered it. “Why are none of you willing to take it?”

The doll landed on the ground with its limbs twisted at strange angles. The burnt face looked up at the surrounding visitors, the black eyes staring at everyone.

None of the visitors dared get close to the doll. After a long time, the youngest man took several steps back. “In horror movies, children and dolls are a classic pair. When you run into these two in a Haunted House, it is wise to stay away. Also, there is one thing you need to remember; when we entered the Haunted House, didn’t the worker tell us that to create an authentic feeling, they have placed many ancient objects of unknown origins inside the haunted house?”

“Then, how can you be sure that this doll is one of those things?” Chen Ge picked up the poor doll again and placed it inside his backpack.

“Hey, this belongs to the theme park. Are you sure it’s okay to take it like that?” one of the female visitors asked.

“This could be an important clue, so we might need to carry it with us. If you don't trust me, I can hand it to you to take care of it." Chen Ge's one sentence silenced everyone else.

"You sure are brave. Aren't you afraid that something might be possessing it?" the police officer grumbled softly. He would not get near Chen Ge anymore.

"If you're guilty of something, everything you see could be possessed, but the truly possessed thing is your pair of eyes." Chen Ge held the backpack with one hand and walked toward theater. He wanted to understand how the girl appeared. Turning the corner, Chen Ge tried to push theater door, but something heavy was blocking behind it that it would not budge. He leaned against the door and used Ghost Ear to listen, but he could not hear anything.

The first scenario was seven students bringing the ghost teacher back to theater to watch movie on the day of Soul's Return. It's a reincarnation of the soul. The second scenario is the owner of the house waking up from his nightmares every night, killing himself again and again. It can be considered a physical reincarnation. Connecting the two scenarios is a corridor filled with guts and internal organs, watched over by a 'chef from hell'. Do these three scenarios appear randomly, or is there an internal connection to them?

The camera was above it, so Chen Ge would not just burst through the door.

There's a problem with the girl, but since she's not a Red Specter, she can't leave her item of possession. As long as I have the doll, she will eventually return. The key problem is that this Haunted House doesn't appear to have only one ghost. When I entered this place, I felt a chill. Initially, I thought that it was some kind of new technology, but now that I think about it, the chilliness could only be caused by lingering spirits and baleful Specters. There are no other possibilities.

Chen Ge knew the difference between Eastern and Western Jiujiang. His parents did not dare to build a Haunted House in Eastern Jiujiang, but the futuristic theme park had done exactly that. A Haunted House was a heavy Yin location, and it was an attraction for lost souls. The futuristic even purposely placed some old objects in it. This was not increasing the difficulty but playing with fire. Eastern Jiujiang was not a lucky location; Chen Ge knew that too well. The problem of the ghost fetus had not been resolved, and who knows how many doors were hidden in Eastern Jiujiang? Considering the location of the futuristic theme park, it was squeezed in the middle of Li Wan City and Jiang Yuan Apartments; they would form a straight line across Eastern Jiujiang.

The theme park is situated at a problematic location. Perhaps after the bridge is built, it'll be much better, but can they hold on until then?

The theme park was stuck between two doors, and the Haunted House theme attraction was at the deepest part of the park where the Yin energy gathered. It would attract not only the visitors but also the Specters and ghosts.

The managers sure have business acumen, finding such a strategic location.

Chen Ge did not know Feng Shui, but he knew that his family had to move away from Eastern Jiujiang.

Theme parks are popular, and the crowds in the day should be enough to temper the spirits, but what will happen after theme park closes at night? Even if I didn't come here, eventually, something bad would happen.

Chen Ge felt the heavy responsibility on his shoulders. He found another reason to protect New Century Park, and that was to stop the futuristic theme park from harming more innocent people.

Chapter 959 - Two Cycles

Chapter 959: Two Cycles

The road back had been blocked, and Chen Ge did not think that it was wise to break down the door with the camera there. He was afraid the futuristic theme park might use this against him.

The crying and laughter are still there, so the ghosts haven't wandered off, but I can't see them.

...

Returning to the room, Chen Ge studied the dead body on the table.

For medium difficulty, the key is inside the mannequin, but this is just a passing scenario. For hellish difficulty, we have to solve the puzzle of this room to move on.

Normally, that would not be a problem, but the key was the combination of many scenarios. Various projections and 'supernatural events' might appear in places that they should not, and that greatly increased the difficulty of puzzle-solving. The few visitors wasted their time at the door. The clock on the wall chimed again, and the ugly cuckoo bird crawled out from the box. The heart around it had been removed, but the blood of the heart stained the bird red.

"If the owner's reincarnation is endless suicide, then we will have to stop him to break this nightmarish cycle. There are two ways to do this; one is to protect him from himself, and the second one is to kill him ourselves."

Chen Ge picked up the axe next to the sofa. Before the room changed, he aimed the axe right at the mannequin that had just been reconnected not long ago. The mannequin was chopped into pieces again, and fresh blood prints were left on its body.

It doesn't work? Should we try to use different murder weapons to kill him? But then that would drop us into the same cycle as he did.

Killing the mannequin would not break the cycle; Chen Ge realized that.

The Haunted House has to operate normally, so they wouldn't encourage something illegal like murder. They need to stay on the right side of the law.

While Chen Ge was thinking, the curtains of the living room were pulled open to reveal half a human face. The owner in bloody clothes grimaced at them. He stared at a certain spot before rushing out with a blade in his hand. Unlike the previous two times, other than behind the curtain, two other projections appeared behind the toilet door and under the bed. In the dark, three bloody faces looked at the visitors from different angles and then charged at them like crazy.

The projections would not deal actual damage, but even if they knew they were fake, when the projections got near, they would feel afraid. Adrenaline rose, eyes were clamped shut, and people screamed. The visitors squeezed in the middle of the living room; only Chen Ge stood to study the fleeing projections. "How curious. Why would all the projections charge into the living room? No matter where they were hiding, in the end, they would commit murder, charge into the living room, and disappear. Is it to make sure that all the visitors are gathered inside the living room?"

Chen Ge used his finger to trace the movement of all the projections. To his surprise, he realized that, despite their different hiding spots, if he made a line from their hiding spots to the place that they disappeared to, the trajectories formed by the different projections crossed at a spot inside the living room!

"The target of the projections isn't us but the sofa at the middle of the living room!" Chen Ge nudged the sofa away and knocked on the ground underneath it. "It's hollow?"

His finger slid on the wooden floor and soon found a part that was uneven. He pulled hard to peel that part of the floor up. A light stench filled the air; there was a female carcass stuffed under the ground. The body had many wounds, and she was hugging a black tape in her arms.

"A second body?" All the visitors gathered with their eyes bulging.

Even the police officer was stunned. "Why is there a second body?"

"The answer should be inside the tape." Chen Ge entered the tape into the player under the television, and the flickering screen changed to show the recording.

“Lee’s paranoia is getting worse. I thought love would be able to curse him, but I realize how wrong I was. When he saw me talking with another man, he assumed I cheated on him. I was worried that he might injure the kids in his illness, so I sent all the kids back to my parent’s home. But he thought I was trying to ruin his relationship with the kids. He then started to doubt if the kids were even his, and they were sent away to prevent him from realizing that fact.

“Doctor, now he is starting to suspect you as well. He thinks we are trying to cooperate to kill him. When he’s acting up, it’s so scary! One night, I woke up and saw him kneeling on the bed, staring quietly at me! Imagine how frightened I was!

“I am really afraid. I no longer dare to stay in the same room as him. He sleeps in the bedroom, and I sleep in the living room. If he sleeps in the living room, I lock myself up in the bedroom. Doctor, your medicine is working; Lee’s current condition is very stable. Although we still haven’t moved back together to sleep in the same room, that is probably we’re both so tired. But now, even if we’re sleeping in different rooms, I feel uncomfortable at night. I keep feeling there is a thief hiding inside the house. Tomorrow, I’ll go install a surveillance camera in the house.”

After the narration by the woman, there was a recording from the surveillance camera. It was the quiet of the night, and the woman was sleeping peacefully on the bed. Her bedsheet suddenly moved, and half of a man’s face poked out. The man crawled out from under the bed with a cleaver slowly. Then, the screen flickered, and the image disappeared.

The screen returned to normal. This time, the woman was sleeping on the sofa. Then, the bedroom door was pulled open. A man held a table lamp and slunk to her side.

The image flickered again, and this time, the woman was lying inside the bathroom tub. The man was hiding behind the toilet door with a fruit knife.

It was clear from story-telling that woman was already dead, but the man chose to kill her again and again. He was unwilling to forgive her, and in the end, he cursed himself to end up in his own cycle of nightmares.

“There are two reincarnations in this room. One is the dead victim being killed again and again; the other is the man finally losing his mind after murdering his wife. He couldn't tell whether he was the killer or the victim. His paranoia became so serious that he suspected it was he who killed himself."

Chen Ge found the key to the window inside the female body's pocket. The design of this scenario was interesting. The key to leave was with the wife all along, but the murderer did not know that. He could not escape the nightmares that he had created for himself.

"This plot is well thought out. The designer is a genius." Chen Ge glanced at the police officer next to him. "I hear this place has many designers. Do you know who designed this scenario?"

"The scenarios are auto-generated by the central computer using a large data storage. At least, that's what I heard." When the police officer saw the key that Chen Ge was holding, he was truly impressed.

"The central computer?" Chen Ge asked. "How much does this computer cost?"

"I don't really know that. A whole AI system probably costs more than ten million?" The police scratched his head, as if he did not understand why Chen Ge would ask something like that.

"Come, let's move on." Chen Ge replaced the wooden tile. He held the key and entered the bedroom to personally undo the lock on the window.

The complicated pattern moved on the walls, and the dark window was gently pulled up by Chen Ge. A chilling draft rushed into the room. Chen Ge narrowed his eyes, and the muscles of his back tightened as he continued to push the window up.

“There is something hidden in this scenario!” Chen Ge was very familiar with this feeling. His pupils slowly narrowed as he assessed the new scenario before him. On the other side of the window was a Japanese-style room, with Japanese furniture and décor. However, what caught Chen Ge’s attention was not that but the walls. All four walls were covered with handprints. The light hanging from the ceiling flickered. Underneath the boxed light, there scattered the dead bodies of moths, and around them were traces of wax. It was as if someone had stood under the lamp and used a candle to slowly burn the wings of the moths one by one.

After the new scenario was revealed, the scenario behind Chen Ge changed. Blood dripped from the ceiling, the door to the corridor rattled, and footsteps came from beyond it. Before the visitors could react, the door that led to the corridor was shut, and the girl’s laughter boomed beyond the door like the child was standing beyond it at that moment.

“She’s back to look for her doll?” Even though Chen Ge felt like it was rather inappropriate for an adult to steal from a girl, considering that this might lead her to salvation, it made him feel better.

“Chen Ge, I’ve been to this new scenario before.” The police officer’s initial attitude toward Chen Ge was bad, but without him realizing it, his attitude had changed, perhaps because fear had gotten him without him realizing it.

“Is there anything to pay attention to?”

“The room is cursed, and the curse is planted on three items. We have to find the three items while being attacked by the ghosts, place them on the altar, and use the divine figurines on the altar to cleanse them.” The police officer tried to remember the details. “But since this is hellish difficulty, we might need to find more than ten cursed items.”

“Finding items won’t be too hard. I’m afraid that whole room is wrapped in a curse, and everything and everyone inside it is cursed.” Chen Ge possessed Yin Yang Vision. In his sight, everything in the room was dyed with misfortune, and any visitor that came into contact with them would have their luck affected. This was the difference between Chen Ge’s Haunted House and the futuristic theme park. His Haunted House allowed his workers to feed on the visitors’ negative emotions to balance out their mood, but the Haunted House at the futuristic theme park was in a completely out of control situation. The visitors would be harmed when they visited the place, and they would continue to spread misfortune after they left the place.

Curses are different from actual Specters. Chen Ge was reminded of his experience in Li Wan City. The shadow specialized in curses, and that seemed to be a specialty of the ghosts from Eastern Jiujiang. As he leaped over the window, Chen Ge heard a tingling voice in his ears. The voice appeared suddenly as if announcing the presence of new visitors.

“When you search for stuff, cover your hand with a layer of your clothes. Do not come into direct contact with anything in this room.”

Hearing that, the few visitors were confused. They looked at each other with questioning gazes. To prevent Chen Ge from seeing through their act, they did not communicate much, but with the signal from the police officer and the young man, they all followed Chen Ge’s instructions.

“Empty bottles and trash are collected in the corner, and there are cigarette butts from three different brands in the cigarette bowl. The clothes and shoes that littered the room are of different sizes. It appears like this place once played host to a small party, and the party goers have all been drunk.”

“Yes, when on my last visit, we found relevant information in the bedroom. A group of people came to a friend’s house at the countryside to play, but it rained so heavily that it caused a landslide. They couldn’t return, so they decided to stay at the friend’s house overnight.” The police officer confirmed Chen Ge’s suspicion and was shocked by Chen Ge’s sharp observation.

“The information was found inside the bedroom?” Chen Ge entered the bedroom alone. When he pushed open the door, the singing of a girl appeared in his ear. The voice was airy and light, carrying with it a trace of melancholy. Chen Ge could not capture the exact lyrics, but he heard the terms moth and butterfly. The entire Japanese-style scenario had six rooms, and the bedroom Chen Ge was in was the smallest room.Read more chapter on vipnovel.com

Blankets were placed on the ground, and random objects crowded the already small room. There were male shoes and clothes and many female hairs. But the most eye-catching object had to be the camcorder fixed on top of a suitcase. The device was screwed to the suitcase, probably because the theme park worried that their equipment might be stolen.

“Who would steal a cursed item?” Chen Ge opened the camcorder’s display and saw the image of four men and three women flicker across the screen. In the day, they spent their time touring the countryside, admiring the scenery, and taking in fresh air, but when they planned to leave at night, the skies suddenly opened up. The elders in the village said that the only exit from the village had been blocked by fallen rocks. They had no choice but to stay at the village and leave the next day.

“The elders said the road was blocked? They didn’t confirm that themselves and decided to stay based on other people’s words?”

Chen Ge continued to look, and the other visitors gathered around. Of the seven, one was a local, and he placed his six friends in his ancestral house. The rain kept pouring, but that did not affect the group’s good mood. They drank, played cards, and partied until midnight. At this point, the image turned darker. The seven were gathered in the main living room. The drinks were running out, and a fatty with glasses stood up to use the toilet when he saw an altar built in the darkest corner at the end of the corridor. Normally, altars were placed on a table, and this was the first time he had seen an altar that was built inside a corridor.

In the video, the drunk fatty staggered to the altar. He leaned closer to the altar and appeared to hear some weird noises coming from inside it. Reaching to grab the black cloth that covered the altar, as he was about to pull it back, someone called his name, and the person who screamed was the person who was recording the video. The fatty was given quite a fright and crumbled to the ground. He crawled up, ignored the altar, and went to the toilet. When he returned, he sidled up to the owner and asked him about the altar.

The owner said that he did not know much about it. He went to school in the city alone. One day, he got a phone call from the police that said his parents and grandmother had gotten caught in a landslide when they were coming home, and the whole family got thrown into the river with the car. Now, he was the only survivor of their family.

At that moment, another man put down his glass of wine and told the others in a mysterious tone that an altar placed on a table was for ghosts and divinity, but altars built in dark corners were for rearing of ghosts.

Chapter 961: Cursed House

The video was still playing in the camcorder. It was unclear whether it was lighting or something else, but the image quality started to get blurrier like it was covered in fog. The man's statement in the video aroused the other people's attention. With them pressing, the man revealed something that had happened to him in the past.

When he was young, his house had also had an altar. The altar had been placed opposite the living room door, covered with a thick black cloth. Before the man's grandfather passed away, he had told his family, no matter what happened, to never uncover the altar, and when he was buried, they were to bury the altar right inside his coffin. Due to the issue of inheritance, the family got into a big fight after the grandfather's death. The fight soon escalated into a physical fight, and during the altercation, someone knocked the altar over. The adults were too focused on the fight to notice the overthrown altar. But the youngest grandson looked inside the altar out of curiosity. Then the grandson did something truly unexpected. He called into the altar, "Grandpa."

This voice startled the room of adults. They all turned to stare at the young grandson, and the grandson squatted before the altar, his eyes not leaving the altar like his grandfather was really inside. In the countryside, it was well known that children could see ghosts. The adults thought that their fighting had angered the old man, so they quickly replaced the altar and then followed the will, selling the old house and burying the altar alongside the old man's urn.

Things should have ended there, but the man's voice changed. On the day of the old man's burial, the grandson who saw the thing inside the altar mysteriously disappeared. He seemed to have vanished from the face of the earth. No one knew where he had gone, and no one knew what he had truly seen inside the altar. In the video, after hearing the story, none of the partygoers were afraid. In fact, some of them even challenged the owner to open the altar of his own home to take a look.

Under the influence of alcohol and the rowdiness of his friends, they walked down the corridor. Some of them were holding bottles of wine, some were carrying their phones, and one was taping down the whole experience with a camcorder. It was raining heavily outside the old house, and the group stopped noisily next to the altar. The fatty who had passed by the altar earlier stood at the front. He reached for the black cloth and pulled it away. Then a pair of fatty hands grabbed the door of the altar. As the fatty was about to pull the doors open, lightning flashed outside the window, and the lights in the house suddenly went out.

At the same time, just as the few visitors were focused on the video on the camcorder, the lights in the real scenario also went out!

The timing overlapped. Screams came from the recording and the visitors in real life; it was felt a recurring nightmare. In the darkness, there came the sound of the altar doors being opened. Several seconds later, the lights in both the recording and real life came back on. The seven friends gathered in the corridor were shocked to see the altar doors had already been opened. The seven looked at each other before turning to focus on the fatty. The latter was confused. He said that he did not pull, that he had not opened the altar.

At this point, Chen Ge suddenly shouted at the visitors around him, "Move back a bit!"

He looked down the corridor, and sitting in the dark corner, the isolated altar had its doors opened!

"When did it open?"

"I don't know!" The police officer was helpless. "During my last visit, this did not happen."

The recording was still playing. The camcorder was placed on top of the suitcase, and the suitcase was stuck between the bed and the cupboard, making it hard to remove. Thus, Chen Ge's group temporarily ignored the altar and continued watching the video.

Light returned, and the group of friends realized that there was nothing inside the altar. They groaned about the countryside rumors and returned to the living room. They played for a while before the party spirit left them. They cleaned up a bit, pushed the trash and bottles into the corner, and returned to their rooms to sleep. The camcorder was picked up by one of them. He returned to his room, which was the bedroom Chen Ge's group was in. The man said good night to the camcorder and then switched it off.

The visitors thought that the recording ended there, but after a while, a new recording appeared. The man who had looked calm earlier was now curled inside his bed, holding the camcorder with shaking hands. The visitors had no idea what the man was doing. The man quietly poked the camcorder's lens out of the bedsheets and aimed it at the cupboard facing the bedroom. There was no light inside the bedroom. In the darkness, the cupboard did not look that scary, but the doors were not closed tightly, and there was a gap that was left open.

The image went still, and at that moment, an eye looked out from inside the cupboard!

The image shook, and it showed how scared the man in the bed was. He was forcing himself not to make any noise. The man was sure that something was hiding inside the cupboard. He aimed the camcorder at the cupboard, but the eye did not reappear. After a while, the camcorder began to run out of battery. The man held the camcorder in one hand, and his other hand reached for something, but at that moment, the camera shook because the man seemed to touch something.

Then the man's hand that held the camcorder slowly turned to aim the camera at himself. His face appeared on screen, and behind him, curled in the bed with him, was another face!

The man wanted to scream, but strands of dirty hair curled around his neck and stuffed his mouth. The camcorder fell, aimed at the door. Outside the door, the camcorder captured the image of the altar with its doors open perfectly.

After the video ended, all the visitors were drenched in cold sweat. Knowing that their guide was no longer useful, all the visitors turned to Chen Ge. He had become the uncontested center of the group.

"The most dangerous thing in this scenario is the altar. Normally, visitors wouldn't open it, but in hellish difficulty, someone has helped us open it." Chen Ge turned around and realized that the group was quietly waiting for him to continue. "I am just a volunteer worker; don't you guys have anything to share?"

Of the team of seven, six were theme park workers, and the only actual visitor had become the leader of the group. Chen Ge wanted to draw some information from these 'visitors', so he kept them around and pretended that he did not notice the small gestures they had been making. "The recording did not tell us what is inside the altar, but the change to this scenario has everything to do with that altar. The way to escape should be related to that altar as well. I remember one of you is the detective and gets a new clue when we enter a new scenario."

"I am the detective." The man in glasses looked at his band. "The clue is hidden inside the altar..."

The visitors left the bedroom and walked down the corridor.

The man with the glasses shone the flashlight on his phone into the altar. The group bent to look and realized that inside the walls of the altar, the word 'death' was repeated again and again, gouged out with fingernail marks.

Chapter 962 - Good Blessing

Chapter 962: Good Blessing

“Why has death been scratched into the altar so many times? This does not look like a shrine for the divine at all!” The detective was leaning at the front. When he saw the handwriting inside the altar, his face blanched.

“Didn’t the recording explain it? An altar placed on the table is for divinity, but altars left in the corner are for something else.” A woman gathered her courage and squatted before the altar. She looked carefully inside. It was unknown what kind of material the altar was made of. It looked like wood, but it felt slippery to the touch like one was touching a pool of drying blood. Ever since the altar doors opened, there had been this strange smell that drifted out from it.

“Forgive me for saying this, but I don’t think even a ghost would be willing to stay here.” The police officer stood silently behind Chen Ge. “Other than that, the last time I was here, the bloody words weren’t inside the altar.”

After he said that, he turned to look at the girl squatting before the altar. The girl slowly stood up with confusion in her eyes. She silently shook her head at the police officer and the woman with the black hair. The ‘visitors’ appeared to have different jobs in the Haunted House. The girl appeared to be responsible for the maintenance of props.

Seeing her shake her head, the police officer’s face darkened even further. He told Chen Ge with some hesitation, “How about we stop moving forward? There is no need to challenge the scenarios to rashly. We will accompany you to explore the previous scenarios slowly.”

The police officer was dropping clear hints for Chen Ge. We will stop trying to scare you, so please stop moving forward to make things look ugly for us. We will do this peacefully so that we all finish this safely.

“That won’t work because even if we don’t go looking for them, they will come and find us.” Chen Ge noticed the exchanges between the visitors. He saw the girl shake her head at the police officer, and the police officer suggested that they stop their tour after seeing the message given by the girl.

The ‘visitors’ were afraid, and the reason behind their fear had to do with this altar. Chen Ge grabbed the altar by both hands, trying to study it from a different perspective, but he realized with a shock that the altar was fixed to the ground like it was joined to the house. The recurring Haunted House was designed by the futuristic theme park, so why should they be afraid? Even though the workers were not that courageous, since they had been selected to join Chen Ge, they had to be people who were quick on their feet and good at their jobs. Something serious must have happened to cause them to feel like retreating.

Chen Ge pretended to casually ask a question. “Did the designers of Reincarnation not expect the scenarios to have a change like this?”

“I believe so.” The police officer blurted out, but after that he realized that was not what he was supposed to say, he quickly added, “When I was here last time, I heard the few designers arguing. It appeared to be about the extra changes that appeared for parts of the scenarios during hellish difficulty that were not part of the intended design.”

“As impressive as the AI system is, it will not influence reality. It has to combine manpower and machinery to influence an effect.” Chen Ge stared at the inside of the altar, and his nostrils twitched. He was using his latest skill—Spirit Sniff.

“You are not wrong, but not everything in this world has an answer.” The police officer did not know how to explain it to Chen Ge.

“I think I get it now.” Chen Ge took a deep breath. “All the scenarios are controlled by the central computer. When combining the scenarios, there will be changes and alterations, but these changes are within the acceptable range, so the designers let them be. If anything, they were probably proud of this unexpected surprise. But they forgot about a crucial element. These idiots placed some ancient objects that they had salvaged from Eastern Jiujiang into the Haunted House! The central computer controls the traps and projections, changing the plot development and various expansion. The things that possess the old objects are also quietly changing according to the scenario itself.”

“What... what are you talking about?” The police officer was confused.

“My parents own a Haunted House, and I grew up in a Haunted House, so I know more about this than you do.” Chen Ge signaled for the detective to move over with his phone. “The Haunted House is a place of heavy Yin energy, and if you’re not careful, bad things will happen. This Haunted House purposely stored a lot of objects of misfortune in it, so it is only normal for it to attract spirits and the like.”

“Do you think we will believe something like that?” The woman with black hair still did not agree with Chen Ge. She would not suffer other people critiquing the futuristic theme park; this was similar to Chen Ge’s protection of New Century Park. He could empathize with that, but it did not mean that he would compromise. “Lean closer to look at the carving inside the altar.”

With the light shining, the group resisted the urge to run and followed his instruction.

“The words are carved out one by one using fingernails. Some of the red traces are paint, while others are blood. Look at the words at the innermost part. Do you see some traces of something else lodged within the carvings?”

“Yes.” The group saw clearly with the aid of the flashlight. “What are those?”

“Would you believe me if I told you that is decayed flesh?” Chen Ge’s expression was scary. “There is a stench coming from inside the altar. It’s the smell of rotten flesh. It’s hard to imagine why one would purposely do something like this. If this is not the design of the haunted house, then this is proof that something is seriously wrong here.”

Narrowing his eyes, Chen Ge scanned the room. The whole Japanese house was radiating with misfortune; every object was possessed by something. They were not palpably clear, but they were definitely there.

“Then... should we retreat to the previous scenario?” The police officer wanted to go back. He had toured the place on medium difficulty and knew quite a lot about this Haunted House, but because he knew that much, he felt that much more afraid.

“You guys look like you love this theme park. Does anyone know when they started building this Haunted House?” Chen Ge sensed intense hatred and resentment from the carving inside the altar. This was the sign of a curse.

“More than a month ago.”

“That is about when my Haunted House started to gain popularity online,” Chen Ge said directly. “The futuristic theme park saw the opportunity for money, but they didn’t see the danger behind it. After all, Eastern Jiujiang is different from Western Jiujiang.”

“What’s so different?” The woman with long hair frowned. She wanted to draw information from Chen Ge. She knew that the futuristic theme park was a foreign entity in Jiujiang, but Chen Ge was actual Jiujiang local.

“You’ll see in a bit.” Chen Ge then took out a doll with half a burnt face from inside his backpack.

“What are you planning to do? Isn’t that the little girl’s doll?” The ‘visitors’ were confused by Chen Ge.

“I wish to experiment.” After saying that, Chen Ge tossed the doll into the altar and then slammed the altar doors shut. “The altar is the most dangerous spot of the whole scenario. I will guard beside it. The rest of you should split into groups of two and try to find and explore the other rooms. If you find anything or run into anything scary, scream loudly for help. I will rush over to provide support.

“Are you sure you want to stay here alone by the altar at the end of the corridor?” There was a trace of uncertainty in the police officer’s question.

“Since he has volunteered, let him be.” The man with the glasses dragged the police officer away, and the ‘visitors’ started to focus on their search. When they had wandered away, Chen Ge silently opened the altar and took out the doll to study it. Curiously enough, the half of the face that was not burnt showed a clear expression of fear.

“The doll’s expression can change? This altar seems to possess a certain meaning.” Chen Ge then placed the doll back into it. He opened the backpack and stuffed the pair of red high heels into it as well. “You are the professional when it comes to curses. I will leave this to you. I know that you are very powerful. Placing you inside this altar contains my blessing and hope for you. One day, you will become strong enough to advance to a Demon God as well.”

Chapter 963 - Let Her Follow Us

Chapter 963: Let Her Follow Us

What Chen Ge did not say openly when he told the red high heels that she could also become a Demon God was that there was already a Demon God by his side, so she had better not get any funny ideas. The doors of the altar were closed again. Several seconds later, tiny beads of blood slid down the walls of the altar. Strangely, as the blood slid down the walls, it gathered to form two distinct rivulets of blood.

They are opposing forces? To be able to resist the red high heels, is the owner of the altar also a Red Specter?

Chen Ge jumped up immediately. He was thankful that he had brought all the Red Specters from his own Haunted House other than Ol' Bai.

The problem at the futuristic theme park is far more serious than I anticipated. There are Red Specters hiding in the Haunted House, and there might be more than one of them.

As he stared at the altar, Chen Ge's heart beat very fast. The red high heels' real power was stronger than Xu Yin and the headless woman, and her expertise was curses. But the Red Specter related to the altar was able to resist her, which was something that Chen Ge did not expect.

There should be more than one altar like this inside this Haunted House. Only part of the Specter's spirit is enshrined at this altar. Just what kind of Red Specter is this?

Before the blood on the walls of the altar could converge, a shrill scream came from the room furthest from Chen Ge. The other visitors all ran over to the source of the sound, but Chen Ge stood guard next to the altar. The hurried footsteps rushed down the corridor. In the chaos, Chen Ge felt a fluttery feeling above his ear like a butterfly had landed there. Before he could reach out his hand to scratch the spot, a spirit-like voice suddenly echoed in his ear.

"When a butterfly has its wings torn away, will it feel pain?"

Chen Ge's five senses were sharper than most, but he did not sense anything out of place. The voice appeared to show up out of midair. Maintaining his posture, Chen Ge was about to summon Xu Yin when the voice reappeared and repeated the same question that it had asked earlier. The ghost did not seem like it intended to harm Chen Ge. After a momentary pause, Chen Ge opened his mouth to say, "The butterfly's wings are filled with blood capillaries that are joined to its body, so having the wings torn apart will definitely be painful."

"Blood capillaries? Are they like the red lines on my mother? Why would such beautiful wings have blood red lines in them?" The voice of the child sounded confused and also a little bit afraid.

"When a butterfly breaks out of its cocoon, it hangs upside down. That is to ensure that the blood flows through its wings through the pull of gravity. That way, the wings will have the energy to open and flap, cracking through the cocoon." Chen Ge's voice was soft and gentle. He was like a kindergarten teacher explaining new knowledge to the toddlers patiently and kindly.

"So, it is because of those red lines that the butterfly has such a beautiful wing, isn't it?" The voice of the child was very innocent.

"That is not entirely true. The reason a butterfly can break out of its cocoon has plenty to do with gravity, but you can't really say that Newton has everything to do with the beauty of a butterfly's wings, right?" Chen Ge used scientific knowledge to attract the child's attention while he turned his eyes and tried to look from the corner of his eyes.

"Quick, come over here! Xiao Ling has disappeared!" Before Chen Ge could take a good look at the child's face, the police officer's scream came from the other side of the corridor. Turning his head, Chen Ge realized that there was nothing next to him. The voice of the child earlier was just like a part of his imagination.

"That was close." Chen Ge glanced at the police officer and slowly stood up. "Didn't you guys go off in pairs? One has gone missing, but where is the other one?"

"I was looking for information with Xiao Ling inside the room. She screamed when she opened the closet, and when I turned toward her, she had already disappeared," the young man explained. The Xiao Ling that he talked about was the girl who had leaned to look inside the altar earlier. She was quite young as well.

“The closet was so close to you, and you’re telling me an actual person disappeared before your eyes just like that?” Chen Ge knocked on the side of the closet. “This is not a show to trick me, right? I’ve heard Haunted Houses nowadays purposely disguise their workers as visitors to try to scare the real visitors.”

The young man had a bitter expression on his face. He wanted to scold Chen Ge because it was the latter who started this tradition, but considering the situation that they were in, he decided to act dumb. “At the time, I was rummaging through the pile of trash, and then I heard the closet being opened. It was followed quickly by Xiao Ling’s scream. But when I turned around to look, the closet door was closed, and Xiao Ling had already disappeared.”

“Is it possible that she is just hiding inside the closet?” Chen Ge pulled the closet door open, and to his surprise, there was another room hidden behind the closet. The room was rectangular in shape, there were no windows, and it was completely enclosed. The walls were taped fully with talismans, and there was a line of something that looked like salt at the entrance. The girl called Xiao Ling was sitting in the middle of the room. She looked blankly at one of the corners, and her face was devoid of any expression.

“Xiao Ling!” The woman with the long, black hair rushed into the room and pulled Xiao Ling into a hug. She whispered something into Xiao Ling’s ear, but Xiao Ling did not give her any response. Then she realized the severity of the situation. She shook Xiao Ling’s shoulders with both of her hands. “Why did you run into this room all on your own?”

“There was someone calling for help from inside the closet. I opened the door and tried to get a look but was suddenly dragged inside it.” Xiao Ling pointed at her own hair. There was the bloody handprint of a child left there. “I don’t want to play anymore. I want to leave this place!”

Then, she moved to press a button on the wrist band, but she was quickly stopped by the woman. “Xiao Ling, calm down. We have barely even started our tour. How can you give up so soon?”

The two girls conversed in whispers, but Chen Ge managed to hear everything. When I entered this place, Qing Ming did not tell me that pressing a button on the wrist band means that you will be able to exit the Haunted House.

He looked at the two girls sitting among the talismans with a smile, but he did not pursue them with more questions.

“The room is filled talismans, and there is a line of salt placed by the door. This proves that this room should be the safest place of the whole scenario. The talismans and salt are things that ghosts are most afraid of. This should be a safe zone. If you are afraid, you can consider staying here.”

“Is that true?” The police officer was considering it.

“Of course, there is another possibility.” Chen Ge’s eyes scanned the corners of the room. “Perhaps this room is the scariest place of the entire scenario. All the talismans are to suppress the evil spirit that is trapped inside this room. Well, would anyone like to take this bet?”

“Er... then, I think we’d better leave this place.”Read more chapter on vi pnovel

Hearing what Chen Ge had to say, the woman quickly supported Xiao Ling out of the room.

“Remember to close the closet door just in case something follows us out.” Chen Ge and the policeman walked at the front of the group, and they returned to the altar at the end of the corridor. The policeman with the sharp eye very soon noticed the blood beads that refused to melt together on the walls of the altar. His eyes bulged as he grabbed Chen Ge by his arm. “Why is the altar bleeding now?”

“Am I the owner of this Haunted House? How would I possibly know the answer to that question?” Chen Ge’s expression was severe. “It was not like this earlier! This is because of all the commotion that you guys made. I missed something very important.”

The few visitors gathered around to take a look. They also did not expect the altar to start to leak blood.

“Shall we open it to take a look?” The police officer gritted his teeth as he leaned closer to the altar. He lightly pulled open the doors of the altar. “There appear to be more things inside.”

The visitors used the flashlights on their phones to illuminate the altar. They realized that the doll at the entrance of the altar had already been shredded into pieces. It was covered in black blood stains, and strangely enough, they saw a pair of bright red high heels placed at the center of the altar.

“When did these shoes appear?” The group had no idea how to explain the appearance of the red high heels inside the altar, and they could not explain the reasoning behind the bleeding altar.

“Did you place these heels inside the altar? Just now, you were the only one guarding beside the altar.”

The woman with the long black hair looked at Chen Ge, and Chen Ge responded with a face filled with indignation.

“Do you think a man like myself would carry a pair of female high heels with me for no reason?”

“Then, who could it be?” The police officer did not even dare to reach his hand into the altar; just looking at it was enough to make him shiver in fear.

“Earlier, Xiao Ling’s scream pulled everyone’s attention. Everyone rushed to check up on her, and it was during that period that this happened.” Chen Ge’s eyes scanned every visitor. “We should be more careful. That person or that ghost is just around us, and I believe that they are watching us right at this moment.”

“Then, what should we do now?” The police officer’s hand was dangling in midair, still grabbing the altar’s door.

“Close the altar doors. We have to search this scenario for clues as fast as we can. I do not believe that the thing inside the altar will be able to continue following us.” In a serious and severe tone, Chen Ge arranged a mission for each of the visitors to complete.

Chapter 964: Spider and Butterfly

Even though the old Japanese house only had a few rooms, it gave people the feeling of being trapped inside a maze. Some of the rooms were connected; others appeared like they were separated, but there was actually a panel that could be pushed open between them. The layout was confusing, and the five rooms corresponded to the human body's five major organs. Chen Ge also found the remnants of mantra scrolls in every bedroom.

Even though the building style was Japanese, the scrolls had Chinese characters. Most of them were written in ancient Chinese calligraphy, and Chen Ge could only recognize the Five Elements (Wood, Fire, Earth, Water, Metal).

"Five bedrooms, five organs, five elements..." The sound of a wind chime tingled in his ears. Chen Ge turned back to look. He was curious about where this sound came from. This was the second time that he had heard this.
